It appears, from Northrop's own account of himself, that he did not leave the woods near the house, into which he was seen to escape, but hid himself among the rocks, where he kept concealed until Wednesday. He had made several attempts to destroy himself, but without success.—He had attempted to cut his throat, and also cut a gash upon his left arm above the elbow, from which he had bled profusely, so much so that when he made his appearance, he presented a horrid spectacle, his clothes and person being black with dried and clotted blood. From the loss of blood, he fainted and fell, soon after cutting his throat, when he says he lost his knife.—He also says that he twice attempted to hang himself, but the cord broke and foiled him; and, when arrested, his neck was creased or indented, as from the effects of a cord or small rope.

Three whole days this unhappy wretch lay concealed in the rocks, and frequently saw those in search of him pass within a few yards of where he lay. Weak and faint from the loss of blood, famishing from hunger and thirst, (for he neither ate nor drank during the time,) and with the awful crime of murder preying upon his conscience, did this man lay concealed for three long, three terrible days! What frightful visions must have passed through his mind! What tortures must have wrung his soul! Well could he see, or fancy he saw, when night hovered over his lurking-place, the pale but bloody form of the murdered Mary—that Mary, whom he sought to wed—that Mary, whom he had designed to call his wife! The cry, too, "he is murdering me!"—how it must have rung in his ears!

When he went to the house, Northrop says that he did not design to kill Mrs. Boyce, Mary's sister. But after stabbing Mary, the thought flashed upon him that he would kill her too. He fixed his eye upon her—but turning, he saw her little children, and his heart shrunk from the fatal purpose. Murderer as he was—the murderer of her he would have called his wife—with her warm blood upon his guilty hands—the fatal knife uplifted in his grasp, trembling for the blood of the second victim—the wretch, the monster, the fiend, stood rebuked—appalled—confounded—in the sight of the little, helpless, innocent babes, and his hand fell—his heart yielded, and he spared the sister of the murdered Mary—the mother of the helpless babes!

Attempt to Drown.

An English emigrant, who had just arrived in the ship Matilda, at N. York, attempted to drown his wife by pushing her into the river. She was rescued, however, by one of the police, who took the husband into custody. He stated the reason for attempting to drown his wife was extreme poverty; that he intended to drown his wife and son, a boy fifteen years old, and then drown himself.

It is difficult to account for his being at the trouble and expense of bringing his family all the way to America to drown them, except upon the supposition that he imagined, as this was "a free country," men had a right to dispose of their wives and children as they thought proper. We might, however, make a more melancholy supposition:—That he had looked upon this country as a "land of promise," but found when he arrived here, that here also are the "poor always with us," and, grown desperate at his hard lot, concluded that death was better than life.—Sat. Ev. Post.

Yellow Fever Statistics.

The whole number of deaths by yellow fever for the month, beginning at 9 A. M., on 1st of August, and ending at 9 A. M., on 1st of September, is 1,128.—This is a larger mortality than has ever before occurred in the month of August.

The last severe epidemic that visited our city, was in 1841, the number of deaths then for the month of August (from all diseases) was 562; in 1839, it was 619; in 1837, 483; in 1833, 410; in 1822, 165; in 1820, 289; in 1819, 292; in 1817, 489.

The average daily number of deaths from yellow fever for the last month is a fraction over 36 per day. In 1839, when the mortality was next to this year the greatest, in the month of August the average of deaths per day was a fraction over 20.

In 1837, and 1841, the severest epidemics which have ever aflicted our city, the number of deaths for the month of September more than doubled that for the month of August. Whilst in the years 1839 and 1817, when the fever broke out early, and prevailed most in August, there were fewer deaths in September than in August. From these facts we may draw the consolatory hope that the fever of this season has now spent its force, and will decline during the present month—September. The highest number of deaths by yellow fever on any one day during the last month was 67.

In 1822, when the population of the city was not one-half what it is now, the highest number was 60.

In 1833, largest mortality any one day of yellow fever was 53.

In 1841, the highest number was 43.

The following is the whole number of deaths from all diseases, during the months of August, September, and October, in the following years, when the yellow fever prevailed: 1841, 2,231; 1839, 1,554; 1837, 2,239; 1833, 2,758; 1822, 1,362.

The largest number of deaths occurred in 1833, when the cholera prevailed at the same time that the yellow fever was raging.—New Orleans Delta, 2nd inst

ANOTHER MURDER.—A correspondent of the Reveille, gives the particulars of a horrible murder committed in Charlestown, Mississippi county, Mo., on last Monday week. A difficulty had taken place, in the course of which one Dawson made a pass with a knife at one Edward Hale. Hale flung a tumbler at Dawson, when one Randal interferred, and striking Hale with a brick, laid him senseless. While he was in this condition, Dawson deliberately went to him, and took hold of the hair of his head and thrust his knife in the jugular vein, with as much deliberation as a man would in bleeding a hog.

From the Zanesville Daily Courier, Sept. 18.

Peace! Peace!! Peace!!!

At noon of yesterday the public were electrified with the intelligence that peace had been made, the articles having been signed by Mr. Trist on behalf of the United States, and by the Mexican commissioners. The importance of the news was so great, that some distrust was entertained of its correctness: but, for these doubts, we could discover no reasonable foundation.

We have before us copies of the official documents relating to the armistice, most of which are translations from the Mexican Diario; also of letters and despatches from distinguished officers and prudent, cautious civilians with the army, who agree in stating a confident belief that peace must follow the armistice and its attending negotiations. The conditions of the armistice, itself, furthermore, favor this opinion, everywhere, in each specification, express or implied, reference is had to the same auspicious end.

Why, then, should doubt be entertained of the complete truth of this despatch which announces the conclusion of the expected treaty? The probability, the evidence, afforded by previous advices the accuracy of which cannot be disputed, are too strong to warrant any hasty condemnation of the news of yesterday.

After sixteen months of bloody, expensive and exhausting hostilities, the gates of Janus are once more shut, and War, with the countless multitude of evils that stalk grimly in its train, is chained up, we trust, for a century to come, if not for all future time. Our people have subdued their foe, but, with what sacrifice of life, of treasure, of individual happiness, with what social and individual misery and ruin, the triumph has been achieved! Let all consider the tremendous price we have paid, and they will be prepared for a National Jubilee, not so much over the mode in—which peace has been achieved, at that it has been achieved at all.

We trust that the citizens of Zanesville will give public tokens of their rejoicing, for the blessing which has visited all of us, and that the suitable manifestations of their gratitude, as citizens of the Republic, will be had at an early day.—Let there be a general meeting, let bells ring, cannon roar, and darkness glare as noon-day with a blaze of light! We have cause for thanks, to the Great Ruler of the World! Let these, too, be properly returned; for the smiles of Blessed Peace beam once more on the land!

DISTRESSING OCCURRENCE.—The Pittsburgh Post of Thursday states that the night previous, while the steamboat Beaver was on her return trip to that city. Mrs Ruth Herring, of Fallsion, fell overboard and was drowned. The boat was instantly stopped, and every exertion made to save her, but in vain. According to the statement of her husband, Mrs. Herring complained of feeling rather unwell, and he persuaded her to go up on the hurricane deck and walk awhile; Mrs. H. stooped to tie her shoe-string, and, becoming dizzy, she fell over. This occurrence cast a deep gloom over every one on board, says the Post, and there was no one who did not seem to manifest a greater degree of feeling on the occasion than did Mr. Herring himself.

NOTICES.

BR. CLANCY, you are hereby informed, that at a called meeting on Coshocton circuit, they decided to receive Br. William Ross, as their Superintendent, the present conference year. Your concurrence is respectfully solicited. J. H. HAMILTON.

BR. BASSETT: Please give Br. Clancy, (the President,) and the friends concerned notice, that it will be impossible for me to go to my circuit this year.

T. B. CUSHMAN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT—Buchanon Circuit.—I wish to inform our worthy President, Br. Brown, that we expect to commence a Camp-meeting, three miles west of Buchanon town, on the land of Nathan Reger, on Friday, the 8th day of October; to embrace his visit to this Circuit. And we also invite all our ministerial brethren, without naming them, that can come, to come to our aid. Come, brethren, come over and help us.

R. H. WALKER, Sup't.

Ohio Conference.—Inasmuch as the next Session of the Indiana and Wabash Conferences was appointed to commence at the same time, and being not far distant from each other, it is thought advisable that Indiana Conference change the time of its Session. I believe there is no provision in our Discipline in reference to this matter; and where there is no law there is no transgression. After having consulted about three-fourths of the members of Conference, and the District Committee, I am requested to publish to all, whom it may concern, that our next Session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, will commence the twenty-ninth of September next, at Johnson's meeting-house, 7 miles West of Shelbyville, Shelby county. We earnestly solicit aid from sister Conferences. T. SHIPP.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Fairmont	Circuit,	October	3rd,	"
Buchanon	"	"	10th,	"
Braxton	"	"	17th,	"
Lewis	"	"	24th,	"
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

As our brethren have declined my proposition for Camp Meeting in September and October, on the River and Southern parts of the District, and as the preachers will be somewhat late in making these distant appointments, I have therefore changed my plan, as the above will show. We have had a most pleasant Conference—may we not hope for glorious success this year in our labors? Come, brethren, now for a new start. God send prosperity. I want early information from the Superintendants, when my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, meets (met) at Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, August 15, 1847.

The Illinois Conference met at Bethel, Morgan county, Illinois, August 24, 1847.

The Muskingum Conference at Youngstown, Mahoning county Ohio, September 1, 1847.

The Iowa Conference, at Van Buren county, Iowa, September 8, 1847.

The Ohio Conference, at Cincinnati, Ohio, September 15, 1847.

The Indiana Conference, at Johnson's Meeting House, seven miles West of Shelbyville, c. h., Indiana, September 29 1847.

The Michigan Conference, in Leoni, Jackson county, Michigan, on the 5th, (1st Tuesday,) of October, 1847.

The North Illinois Conference, in Lafayette, Starke county, Illinois, October 6, 1847.

The Wabash Conference, in Frankfort, Clinton county, Indiana, October 13, 1847.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Editor—Cincinnati,	O.	P. M.—Pittsburgh,	Pa.
T. B. Cushman,	"	Theta, 2,	"
Geo. Brown,	"	W. S. S.,	"
J. Burns, Sec. Mus. con.,	"	D. Bagley,	Ill.
S. H. Davis,	"

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

This law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On the 16th instant, by Rev. John Goshen, Mr. WILLIAM PRICE, to Miss LUCINDA F. CROSSLAND; all of this county.

———On the same day, by the same, Mr. ELI BERRY, to Miss SARAH ELLEN BELL; all of this county.

———On the 27th ultimo, by Rev. J. Clarke, Rev. W. A. B. MCCUSTIAN, to Miss ANN TONERAY, all of Rushville, Illinois.

———On the 2nd instant, by Rev. Dr. De Witt, Rev. J. H. RITTENHOUSE, of Columbia county, Pa., to Miss JANE C. SIMONTON, of Dauphin county Pennsylvania.

OBITUARY.

DIED—On the 28th ultimo, at New Orleans, of Yellow Fever, the Rev. Mr. HINTON.

———On the 10th instant, at Elizabethtown, N. J., Miss ELIZABETH BEDELL, aged 71, sister of the late Rev. Dr. G. T. Bedell.

———On the 28th ultimo, in Gardner, Mass., ABIGAIL BACON, aged 74 years.

The Markets.

LATEST DATES.

PUTNAM & ZANESVILLE.—Flour $4,25—Wheat, 75c.—Corn, 25c.,—Oats, 18c.—Zanesville Courier.

CINCINNATI.—Flour $4,35@$4,40,—Wheat 70@75c—Oats, 25,—Corn 30@31. Beef Cattle $4,00@$4,50 ₩ cwt.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PITTSBURGH—Flour $4,81@$5,00,—Wheat 85@90c,—Corn 37,—Oats 25c.—Commercial Journal. No change.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour $5,50@$62,7½—Wheat $1,15—Corn $70c.

BALTIMORE.—Flour $5,27—Wheat $1,15—Corn 68@70c,—Oats, 40.—Prices are on the advance.—Balt. Sun.

NEW YORK.—Flour $5,75@5,81; Wheat $1,12; Corn 65@70c.; Oats 47c.

Advertisements.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

☞NEW GOODS.☜

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,

Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

Sept. 15, 1847. [4t.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN, BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St. Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritual Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

JAMES K. LOGAN,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in FOREIGN & DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

No. 83 Wood St., (One door from Diamond Alley,) Pittsburgh, Pa.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.,

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

A few copies will probably be taken to the Pittsburgh, Muskingum and Ohio Conference.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30.

III.—80 VOLUMES,

With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50.

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 25 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$1 00
20 copies do. do.	-	3 00
40 copies do. do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st, Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FRRDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.

NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Fourth st.—W. H. Bukley, Agent.

Mar. 18, '47

POET'S CORNER.

HOPE.

Fountain of song, it prayer begins and ends;
Hope is the wing by which the soul ascends.
Some may allege I wander from the path,
And give to Hope the proper rights of Faith;
Like Love and Friendship, these, a comely pair,
What's done by one, the other has a share:
When heat is felt, we judge that is near,
Hope's twilight comes---Faith's day will soon appear.
Thus when the Christians's contest doth begin,
Hope fights with doubts, till Faith's reserves come in.
Hope comes desiring and expects relief;
Faith follows, and Peace springs from firm belief.
Hope balances occurrences of time;
Faith will not stop till it has reach'd the prime.
Just like copartners in joint stock of trade,
What one contracts is by the other paid.
Make use of Hope thy laboring soul to cheer,
Faith shall be giv'n, if thou wilt persevere.
We see all things alike with either eye,
So Faith and Hope the self same object spy.
But what is Hope?--- or where, or how begun?
It comes from God, as light comes from the sun.

THOMAS HOGG.

MEDITATION.

FROM JEREMIAH, IV, 19—26.

My heart, O God, melts with dismay,
Dark visions of the judgment day
My soul with terror fill;
Methinks I hear thy trumpet's doom,
Destruction on destruction come;
I see thy standard still.

"My foolish people have not known
Their God; their God will them disown:"
Thus poured the angry threat;
"Only in reckless evil wise,
Truth's living knowledge they despise,
And now I bring their fate."

Uttered the Wo, the earth I view'd:
Instant it void and formless stood;
The heavens their light had lost;
The murky scene onward I trace,
Lo, mountains tremble in their place,
And all the hills are toss'd.

I looked; earth was of men bereft,
Village and field were desert left,
Palace and cot were lone;
I sought throughout the lurid air,
No beauteous, vocal tribes were there—
Their song, their life were gone.

I saw the valley's joyous bloom
Wither'd and blacken'd—verdure's tomb!
Proud cities fell to dust:
Dissolving earth, subdued, confess'd
Th' Omnipotent—His firm behest,
His anger, pure and just.

My heart still melteth with dismay,
The visions of the judgment day
Still o'er my mem'ry flow:—
Savior, when sounds the trumpet's doom,
Unveil thy Cross, thy smile, thy home:
Snatch me from endless wo.

Biographical.

From Scott's Philadelphia Weekly Paper.

JAMES SMITH.

James Smith was a native of Ireland, and came to this country with his father when quite young. According to the only record known of his age—the inscription on his tomb—he was born in 1713. His father was a respectable farmer, and settled on the west side of the Susquehanna river, nearly opposite to Columbia. James acquired a good classical education under Dr. Allison, was very partial to mathematics and became an expert surveyor. After finishing his course under Dr. Allison, he commenced the study of law in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, some say with Thomas Cookson, but more probably with his elder brother who was then practicing at that town. When admitted to the bar he located himself near Shippensburg, in Cumberland county, blending the practice of law and surveying. He soon found himself on the flood tide of prosperity, and not wishing to sail alone, he took for his mate Miss Eleanor Armor.

When British oppression showed its hydra head to the colonists, although advanced in age, James Smith took a dislike to the beast and was for making fight unless it withdrew its visible deformity forthwith. His heart beat high for his adopted country, and he at once came boldly forward in its defence. He was a member of the convention of delegates from each county which recommended the next general assembly of the province to appoint delegates to the next general Congress to be convened at Philadelphia.

So fully convinced was Mr. Smith of the issue between the colonies and mother Britain, that on his return home he immediately raised a company of volunteers, and was elected its captain by acclamation. In January, 1774, he was a member of the convention at Philadelphia. During the year 1775 he took a conspicuous part in public measures, and in the spring of the ensuing year, was appointed upon a committed, with Dr. Rush and Col. Bayard, to organize a camp of four thousand five hundred troops, to be raised in Pennsylvania.

Simultaneous with the preparation of the declaration of independence in Congress, delegates were appointed to raise the arch of a republican constitution and government over the keystone State. The members of the convention for this purpose, among whom was Mr. Smith, met on the 15th of July, and he was placed on the committee to prepare a declaration of rights. His patriotism, worth and zeal were now duly appreciated, and he became one of the most influential men in his State. On the 20th of July he was called to higher duties than those of the convention, by his appointment to the Continental Congress. This was as unexpected to him as it was pleasing to his friends, and he immediately enrolled his name with the apostles of liberty upon the chart of freemen. He assisted in the convention again until the constitution assumed a visible form.

Early in October he assumed fully his Congressional duties, and entered heart and soul into the labors of the house and committee room. On the 23d of November, he was on the committee with Messrs. Clymer, Chase and Stockton, to devise the means for reinforcing the American Army, and for arresting the victorious career of Gen. Howe.

Having suffered severe losses by being absent from his private business, he declined a re-election to Congress for the ensuing year, but was made to understand by his constituents that he was public property and must be used. So devoted was he in the service of his country that when Congress was compelled to fly to York, his place of residence, he closed his office against his clients and gave it up to the board of war.

In November, 1778, he resigned his seat in Congress, and once more enjoyed for a season the comforts of retirement. In 1780, he was induced to take a seat in the legislature of his State. He entered upon his duties with the same activity that had characterised his whole public career.—After completing his term of service he retired finally from political life. He continued to pursue his professional business with great success and profit until 1800, having been an active member of the bar for sixty years. Surrounded by his family and friends, this happy son of Erin, and adopted of America, glided down the stream of life until July 11, 1806, when his frail bark was anchored forever in the bay of death.

PARENTAL.

Rules for Governing Children.

I. Exercise your authority as seldom as possible, and, instead of, employ kind persuasion and deliberate reasoning; but, when you exercise it, make it irresistible.

II. Be careful how you threaten, but never lie. Threaten seldom, but never fail to execute. The parent who is open-mouthed to threaten, and threatens hastily, but is irresolute to punish, and, when the child is not subdued by the first threat, repeats it a half a dozen times with a voice of increased violence, and with as many shakes and twiches of the little culprit, will certainly possess no authority.

III. Avoid tones and gestures expressive of agitation for trivial matters indicative of no depravity and indicating only the heedlessness or forgetfulness of children, or perhaps nothing more than is common to all young animals, a love to use their limbs. In all such cases the tones should be kind and persuasive, rather than authoritative; and the severity and even gravity of authority should be reserved exclusively for cases of disobedience or depravity, or for the prevention of serious evil. A perpetual fretting at children for little things, will inevitably harden their hearts, and totally destroy parental authority and influence. There never was a fretting parent, who often threatened and seldom performed, that had a particle of efficient government.

Family Worship.

"After all, however, that has been said upon this obligation, it may startle some of our readers to hear us remark upon the inconsistency of family worship. We do not hesitate to affirm, that in some cases it is the only inconsistent practice in the family; a practice, we mean, marked by its utter want of conformity to, nay, the absolute contrariety with, the general habits of the house. For what else can be said of the fact, that, apart from the custom of assembling the family, perhaps, even twice in the day, there is nothing in the course of the various individuals of the household, but what indicates the most entire and systematic worldliness; the most complete forgetfulness of God and eternity, the most consistent exhibition of a life according to the fashion of a vain and sinful world? It is somewhat difficult to conceive the inducement to endure the drudgery of this formal service; except it be, as we before hinted, traditionary observance, the recommendation of some influential friend, the standard of decent respectability in the sphere around them, or possibly one of the many ways of propitiating conscience, devised by those who are building upon no better righteousness than their own.

The true influence is, when it forms a part of a consistent whole—when practice illustrates profession—when we live as we pray. This commends our religion, not as a notion of sentimentalism or form, but as reality, privilege, holiness; as something that is not only practicable, but delightful. And most valuable in this influence both on him that conducts the worship, and on those that unite in it. The practical remembrance of family responsibility operates most beneficially on the head, in promoting a recollected and circumspect profession. Suppose him to realize his sacred responsibilities, as the priest of his household, and the mouth of his family to God, surely he cannot walk in the unseemly spirit of lightness or unspiritual tone of intercourse. When about to present the several members of his family, his wife, children, household, before God; will he not be constrained to live before them in the habitual exercise of his practical obligations? His open confession of his own sins before his Father's mercy-seat, will surely operate to check in some measure their gross and lawless influence. For how revolting will be the exhibition of religion, if what has been solemnly expressed in his holy service be not fully carried out in the moulding of the heart and conduct throughout the day! It is indeed well for him to remember how deeply the impressive or barren influence of the worship is connected with the manifest sincerity or hypocrisy of his own profession. 'If,' as Mr. Cecil wisely remarks, 'his children do not see his prayers exemplified in his temper and manners, they will be disgusted with religion.' But let him walk before them, so that they may 'take knowledge of him, that he has been with Jesus;' let him evidently come forth to them from the atmosphere of communion with God; let him manifestly represent God before them in his holiness and love, and how reverential will be the unity of spirit, and how entire the sympathy of heart, with which they will make his prayers their own!"—Rev. Charles Bridges.

The Power of Truth.

How simply and beautifully has Abd-ell-Kadir, of Gihon, impressed us with the love of truth in his childhood! After describing the vision which made him entreat of his mother to go to Bagdad, and devote himself to God, he thus proceeds:—

"I informed her of what I had seen, and she wept; then taking out eighty dinars, she told me I had a brother; half of that was all my inheritance; she made me swear, when she gave it to me, never to tell a lie, and afterwards bade me farewell, exclaiming—

"'Go, my son, I consign thee to God; we shall not meet until the day of judgment.'

"I went on well, till I came near Hamandnai, when our Kafillah was plundered by sixty horsemen. One fellow asked me 'what I had got?'

"'Forty dinars,' said I, 'are sewed under my garments.'

"The fellow laughed, thinking, no doubt, I was joking with him.

"'What have you got?' said another; I gave him the same answer. When they were dividing the spoils, I was called to an eminence, where the chief stood.'

"'What property have you got, my little fellow?' said he.

"'I have told two of your people already,' I replied; 'I have forty dinars sewed in my garments.'

"He ordered them to be ripped open, & found my money.

"'And how came you,' said he, in surprise, 'to declare so openly, what had been so carefully concealed?'

"'Because,' I replied, 'I will not be false to my mother, to whom I have promised I will never tell a lie!'

"'Child,' said the robber, 'hast thou such a sense of duty to thy mother, at thy years, and am I insensible at my age of the duty I owe my God? Give me thy hand, innocent boy,' he continued, 'that I may swear repentance by it!'

"He did so. His followers were all alike struck with the scene.

"'You have been our leader in guilt' said they to their chief; 'be the same in the path of virtue.'—And they instantly, at his order, made restitution of their spoil, and vowed repentance upon his hand."

LOOK AT THIS, PARENTS!—Lucien Hall, who was recently executed in New Haven, Ct., at the early age of 28 years, for a shocking and unprovoked murder, imputes his life of infamy and crime, and his miserable death, to the want of early religious training.

VALUE OF A CHILD'S TIME.—It is sometimes said that a child's time is not worth much; some even say they send their children to school to get them out of the way. But parents often find that they learn some thing very young. Children learn to go astray as soon as they are born, speaking lies: that is they learn to deceive, and utter falsehood at a very early period in their childhood.—And to their joy, too, they sometimes find, that when very young children have the opportunity afforded them they lay a broad foundation for such a superstructure as makes men hold up their heads and wonder. The mother of Baron Cuvier, I remembered to have heard, would have her son recite his Latin to her every morning before going to school, although she did not understand a word of it, because she had an impression that, on the whole, spring was the time to cast in seed. His schoolmates and his teacher wondered how it was, that the little Baron always had so good a lesson; and France has still wondered how Cuvier came to be so great a man; the secret was, he was schooled upon his mother's lap.

Boys should not have their own way, though they may be, apparently, very wise. Any child left to himself will, without some special Providence in his case, come to ruin. Parents, restrain your children in the spirit of love. They will thank you for it when they become old enough to understand their true interests.—Columbian Fountain.

Ladies' Department.

Young Lady,

Why do you spend so much time at your toilet? "To look nice." Go forth into the country.—See yon dairy maid with her hair combed neatly behind her ears, her face unfloured and her dress tidy, and answer me, does she not look "nice?" "Enough so for the country." Ah! there's the fault. You must have your silks and satins, your tinsels and artificial flowers—perhaps your father is deep, aye, to the very lips, in debt the while—and all to keep up appearances, to maintain that demon-god—Fashion. Cast aside such foolish notions; be a lady in the true sense of the word—for this consists not in dress and show, but in that deportment which a cultivated mind and heart must ever produce.—Scott's Weekly.

Sunday.

There are many who drawl and yawn, and wonder how to pass over the Sabbath day. All they seem to consider is the necessity of "getting through" the day; not for one moment supposing that a great moral duty rests with them; that they are called upon to serve their God with all their soul; thus to prepare themselves for a happy entrance into that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns."—Ib.

Read, Lady, Read.

Read, lady, read; and "with such jewels as the exploring mind brings from the caves of knowledge," seek to build for yourself a character, not of literary lore alone, but of such as will serve to heighten you in the estimation of your God, as well as in that of your fellow creatures. Do not, however, receive all that you read thoughtlessly; but ponder over it well; weigh each point nicely; notice the relation that one part of the subject matter bears with another, reserve the good and cast aside the bad, and your labors will meet with that reward that justice ever metes out to praiseworthy perseverance.—Ib.

Health and Beauty.

We often hear young ladies ask—"How can I beautify my skin?" We will answer it. On Monday morning go to the wash-tub and help your aged mother, or if she be not there, do it still; it will not harm you. Lend a hand about the house during the week, and on Saturday commence bright and early to scrub your room, and entry and doorstep until every thing "looks like a new button." Do all this instead of your mother, and our word for it, your skin will not only look clearer, but a rich peach-like coloring will denote the resting-place of Health and Beauty.—Ib.

Preserving Butter.

The farmers in the parish of Udney, in the county of Aberdeen, practice the following method of curing their butter; which gives it a great superiority above that of their neighbors:—

Take two parts of the best common salt, one part of sugar, and one part of saltpetre; head them up together, and blend the whole completely; take one ounce of this composition for sixteen ounces of butter, work it well into the mass, and close it up for use.

The butter cured with this mixture appears of a rich marrowy consistence, and fine color, and never acquires a brittle hardness, nor tastes salt; Dr. Anderson says, "I have ate butter cured with the above composition, that has been kept three years, and it was as sweet as at the first." But it must be noted, that butter thus cured, required to stand three weeks or a month, before it is begun to be used: if it be sooner opened, the salts are not sufficiently blended with it: and sometimes the coolness of the nitre will then be perceived; which totally disappears afterwards."

WOMAN ALPHABETICALLY.—She should be:—Amiable, benevolent, charitable, domestic, economical, forgiving, generous, honest, industrious, judicious, kind, loving, modest, neat, obedient, pleasant, quiet, reflecting, sober, tender, urbane, virtuous, wise, 'xemplary, yielding, and zealous.

She should not be:—Artful, bold, cross, deceitful, envious, fretful, grovelling, hollow-hearted, idle, jadish, knavish, lazy, morose, nonsensical, officious, petulant, quarrelsome, ranting, snappish, talkative, unreasonable, vain, wrangling, 'xtravagant, or yawning.

KEEP TO THE RIGHT.—The utility of this rule at Bridges, &c. is apparent to all who have ever crossed one of these water-spanning edifices. But it has never been dreamed that such a rule would be proper and useful in the streets. It is nevertheless, true, that its adoption would add to the convenience and comfort of all pedestrians. Many an amusing scene is daily witnessed in our street, in consequence of the want of such a rule. Yesterday, as we were passing up Main street, we met a lady, and desiring to be as polite as possible, we turned to the right, intending to give her full room to move on the left; but unfortunately she turned to the left, at the same moment.—Changing, instantly, we turned to the left, and, again of the same mind, the fair one turned likewise. Thus we continued, both using all the politeness imaginable, for nearly three minutes, until "fooled to the top of our bent," we stood perfectly still, and the lady passed around us.—Scenes like this are of common occurrence, and are not a little ennoying. The remedy: Let the street commissioner place a sign board at the corner of each side-walk, enjoining all pedestrians, male and female, young and old, fair and ugly, to "Keep to the right."

Cin. Chron.

An industrious man is a blessing to his country and an ornament to society. A lazy man is a disgrace to himself and a pest to others.

Young Men's Department.

Young Men and the Sabbath.

There is no safety to the young man who does not keep the Sabbath. He has forsaken God, and turned from his ways. He is on the devil's ground, tempting that old murderer to tempt him, provoking God to leave him in his hands to eat the fruits of his own way, and to be filled with his devices. Thus many a youth, before whom was opened the path of life, "that way of pleasantness, that path of peace," has voluntarily turned aside and gone down to death. He had within him an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. He may have uttered or echoed to himself the old serpent's lied, "Thou shalt not surely die;" or flattered himself that it was the part of manly independence to trample on the Sabbath; to look upon the wine when it was red, and giveth its color in the cup; or indulge those propensities which God has implanted in our nature for wise and beneficent purposes, but the gratification of which he has restricted to the limits which his wisdom and goodness has prescribed, and which he has solemnly commanded should be confined to married life. In defiance or forgetfulness of God, the heedless youth may have chosen—foolishly, meanly and wickedly chosen—to follow her "whose mouth is smoother than oil, but whose end is as bitter as wormwood;" whose feet go down to death, and whose steps take hold on hell; "whose house inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead;" whose "house is the way to hell, leading down to the chambers of death." But he will find that as the fishes are caught in an evil net, and as birds are caught in a snare, so he has been taken by the destroyer, and snared with a bait, which "at the last biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder." Her voice was "the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps;" "the adder's poison was under her lips."

"The dead are there, and her guests are in the depths of hell." "None that go in unto her return again, neither take they hold of the path of life."—Sabbath Document.

The Way to Eminence.

That distinguished jurist, Sir William Jones, after having made himself familiar with some twenty different languages, and with the general circle of literature and science, made the following memorandum on the closing leaf of his Bible, in which he was from childhood deeply interested:—

"I have carefully and regularly perused these Holy Scriptures, and am of opinion that the volume, independent of its divine origin, contains more sublimity, purer morality, more important history and finer strains of eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever language they may have been written."

Young readers may be desirous to know something of the early history of this great and good man. After the instructions of a pious mother, the sequel is told in the following extract from "Life in Earnest," a beautiful little volume, to be found at the Union Sunday School Depository:

"Long ago a little boy was entered at Harrow School. He was put into a class beyond his years, and where all the scholars had the advantage of previous instruction, denied to him. His master chid him for his dullness, and all his own efforts could not raise him from the lowest place on the form. But, nothing daunted, he procured the grammars and other elementary books, which his class-fellows had gone through in previous terms. He devoted the hours of play, and not a few of the hours of sleep to the mastering of these, till in a few weeks he gradually began to rise, and it was not long till he shot far ahead of all his companions, and became not only the leader of that division, but the pride of Harrow. You may see the statue of that boy, whose career began with this fit of energetic application, in St. Paul's Cathedral; for he lived to be the greatest oriental scholar of modern Europe—it was Sir William Jones.

When young scholars see the lofty pinnacle of attainment on which that name is now reposing, they feel as if it had been created there, rather than had travelled thither. No such thing. The most illustrious in the annals of philosophy once knew no more than the most illiterate now do.—And how did he arrive at his peerless dignity?—By dint of dilligence; by downright painstaking."

Forwardness in Young Men.

Nothing is more unbecoming. Nothing will so soon repel the attentions of sensible persons. While modesty and diffidence win upon all who come within their influence, the opposite characteristics can not fail to awaken disgust

Many very young men fill prominent places in societies, in Church meetings, in the ministry, who are nevertheless becomingly diffident. It is not the thing done, so much as the manner in which it is done, that offends. We have known a number of youths, of promising abilities, who might have been useful to the Church and to society, who have nevertheless literally killed themselves off, as the saying is, by their officious forwardness.

Young man!—half-grown boy! would you be useful to your fellows? would you be respected by your superiors? would you exert an influence upon those of less pretentions? Avoid forwardness! Do not obtrude your opinions boisterously upon those who are older, but wait until they be asked for. Do not speak with too much positiveness. When you enter a church, do not push your way to the uppermost seat, and struggle to make your voice heard in singing above every one else: your motives may be questioned. At prayer in church join heartily in the devotions, but do not ejaculate so loudly as to disturb those near you, and almost drown the voice of the preacher: persons, whose good opinions you desire, may think you are more noisy than sincere. Consent to be a private in the ranks, before you seek to wear epaulets or flourish a broadsword.

We know it is a much easier thing to find fault, and to recommend methods of improvement, than it is to practice all one preaches. But we cannot forbear noting things of this kind occasionally. They are so common. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.—Methodist Protestant.

Young Men.

The idea is prevalent in some communities, that young men are fit neither for generals or statesmen, and that they must be kept in the back ground, until their physical strength is impaired by age, and their intellectual faculties become blunted by the weight of years. Let us look into the history of the past, and from the long list of heroes and statesmen, select some who have distinguished themselves, and we shall find that they were young men when they performed those acts which have won for them an imperishable meed of fame, and placed their names high on the page of history. Alexander, the conqueror of the then whole civilized world, viz:—Grecce, Egypt and Asia, died at 39. Bonaparte was crowned emperor of France when 33 years of age. Pitt, the younger, was but 20 years of age, when, in Britain's Parliament, he boldly advocated the cause of the American colonies, and but 22 when made Chancellor of the Exchequer. Edmund Burke at the age of 25, was first Lord of the Treasury. Our own Washington was but 27 when he covered the retreat of the British troops at Braddock's defeat, and was appointed to the command-in-chief of all the Virginia forces. Alexander Hamilton, at 20, was a Lieutenant Colonel and Aid to Washington—at 25 a member of Congress—at 32 Secretary of the Treasury. Thomas Jeffersen was but 33 when he drafted the ever memorable Declaration of Independence. At the age of 30 years, Sir Isaac Newton occupied the mathematical Chair at Cambridge College, England, having, by his scientific discoveries rendered his name immortal. We might continue the list to a greater length, but enough has been said already, to show that the idea, that young men are not capable of performing great and ennobling actions, or of taking a high position in the councils of a nation, is chimerical and visionary, And what has been said, may well serve to encourage the young to set up a high standard, and to press towards it with ardor, suffering nothing to discourage them from soaring 'onward and upward' in the paths of fame, or in the pursuits of literature and science.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

THE FATHER IS COMING.

BY MARY HOWITT.

The clock is on the stroke of six,
The father's work is done;
Sweep up the hearth and mend the fire,
And put the kettle on;
The night-wind is blowing cold,
'Tis dreary crossing o'er the world.

He's crossing o'er the world apace,
He's stronger than the storm;
He does not feel the cold, not he,
His heart it is so warm.
For father's heart is stout and true
As ever human bosom knew.

He makes all toil, all hardships light;
Would all men were the same,
So ready to be pleased, so kind,
So very slow to blame!
Folks need not be unkind, austere,
For love hath readier will than fear!

And we'll do all that father likes,
His wishes are so few;
Would they were more! that every hour
Some wish of his I knew!
I'm sure it makes a happy day
When I can please him any way!

I know he's coming by this sign,
That baby's almost wild;
See how he laughs, and crows, and stares,
Heaven bless the merry child!
His father's self in face and limb,
And father's heart is strong in him.

Hark! hark! I hear his footsteps now—
He's through the garden gate;
Run, little Bess, and ope the door,
And do not let him wait!
Shout, baby, shout, and clap thy hands,
For father on the treshhold stands!

Little Susan, the Poor-house Girl.

In the Town of K——, in the State of New York, a Mrs. Martin was in want of a little girl to assist her in her domestic labors. As she did not succeed in finding one in the neighborhood, she rode to the Poor House for the county, and selected a little girl about twelve years of age, and took her home with her.

'Is your father or mother living?, said Mrs. Martin to her as they set out on their way to Mrs. Martin's abode.'

'No,ma'am, they are both dead.'

This was spoken in a soft plaintive tone, which went to the heart of Mrs. Martin, and awakened there a deep sympathy for the orphan.

'How long have you been an orphan?'

'My mother died about a year ago, and my father was killed a little more than a month ago.'

'How was your father killed?'

'He was assisting in raising a barn, and fell from the top of the frame, and was taken up dead.'

'Was your father a good man?'

'Not always,' said the girl with some hesitation. 'My mother was a good woman.'

'Of what disease did your mother die?'

'Consumption.'

Mrs. Martin looked on the pale, thin countenance of the orphan, and saw clearly that she had inherited her mother's constitution, and that she would probably, at an early period, fill a consumptive's grave. She addressed a few consoling and encouraging words to the orphan, and rode on in silence, musing upon the wide differences in the allotments of Providence, to the members of the human family. She had a daughter, now two years old. A tender father and mother to watch over her. Was she to be left an orphan and destitute, and would some one find that darling child, among those supported by public charity? If the child's condition was to differ from that of the poor orphan before her, to what would it be owing? Not to the worth or care of the mother, for it was evident, from the language and manners of Susan, that her mother was a woman of refinement and worth. 'After all I can do for my child,' said she to herself, 'I must leave her in the hands of God, to be disposed of according to his holy pleasure. I will be kind to this poor child, as I should wish one to be kind to my own, if she should be left an orphan?, So let every reader say to the bereaved and destitute, 'I will be kind to them.'

After Susan had live with Mrs. Martin a few weeks, she made known to her more fully, the particluars of her history. It appeared that her father had been a drunkard, that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor when he received the fall that cost him his life. He had often abused his wife and children. Mrs. Martin often wept, as she listened to Susan's simple and affecting story of the suffering thus endured.

'You have a good home now,' said Mrs Martin, 'and you shall never go away from here, so long as you behave well.

'I am afraid I shall be sick, like mother, and be unable to work for you,' said Susan.

'Never mind; you shall always have a home here while I live.'

That promise was kept, but it secured Susan a home only for a brief season. Mrs. Martin was taken ill, and in about a week she died. She was delirious from the first, and hence could not express to her husband her wishes respecting Susan. Mr. Martin broke up housekeeping, and Susan was received into the family of a neighbor, a very different woman from Mrs. Martin. She had to toil hard, and heard few pleasant and encouraging words. In a few months she bled at the lungs, and the woman with whom she lived, hurried her back to the poor-house, lest she should die on her hands. She lingered for several months, and then died, with no friend to smooth her dying pillow, and weep for her when she was gone.

My dear young reader, have you a good home and kind friends? Remember with kindness the poor orphan who has neither. Remember to adore the wisdom and goodness that has made you to differ.

Good Advice to Boys.

Truth is one of the rarest of gems. Many a youth has been lost to society, by suffering it to tarnish and foolishly throwing it away. If this gem still shines in your bosom, suffer nothing to displace it, or dim its lustre. Profanity is a mark of low breeding. Show us the man who commands the most respect. An oath never trembles on his tongue. Read the catalouge of crime. Inquire the character of those who depart from virtue. Without a single exception you will find them to be profane. Think of this and let not a vile word disgrace you.

LEARN A TRADE.—D. C. Colesworthy an excellent correspondent of the Boston Olive Branch, gives the following advice to boys:

A TRADE.—Learn a trade, boy. Select a good one—a trade that you will like, and stick to it.—A trade is an estate, Dr. Franklin says, and so you will find it. We know you will have to work hard and suffer a little, but if you have a good trade you can always get a good living, and lay up money—provided you are steady and industrious. Boys miss it amazingly by living in idleness because their parents are well off. If we were worth as much as Astor, we should advise our children to learn trades.

Death.

How many are there that call for death in the distress of their hearts, even for the very fear of it! and this unadvised desire of death does in common affect both the best and worst of men; only with this difference, the former dispise life, and the other are weary of it.

The prosperous must die as well as the unfortunate; and methinks the very despair of overcoming our fate should inspire us with courage to encounter it: for there is no resolution so obstinate as that which arises from necessity. It makes a coward as bold as Julius Cæsar, though upon different principles. We are all of us reserved for death; as Nature brings forth one generation she calls back another. The whole dispute is about the time, but nobody doubts about the thing itself.

DEFERRED ITEMS.

IMMIGRATION.—The N. Y. True Sun says that the number of passengers who arrived at that port in the last eight months, is 116,981; a greater number by 1751 than in the whole of 1846. In the remaining four months of the present year, the number will be increased to an aggregate of about 150,000. If we add 100,000 for arrivals at other ports and through the British Dominions, we shall not be far from the truth, making the total of immigration into the United States from foreign countries during the year 1847, a quarter of a million. The number this year is double that of any former year except the last or nearly so.

FATAL AND UNFORTUNATE OCCURRENCE.—At a mowing frolic, in the neighborhood of the Quaker settlement, a quarrel occurred between two men, Jacob Hays and Green Cooper. The latter having attacked Hays with a knife, it was knocked out of his hand by Mr. John Pierson, who was standing near, which incensed Hays to such a degree that he immediately seized his scythe and attacked Mr. Peirson, exclaimed "I will cut your head off," and literally cut and hacked him to pieces, wounding him in the neck, severing one of his arms, and cutting in the abdomen so that his entrails protruded, from the effects of which Mr. Pierson died on Sunday last. Hays is a desperate man, and is, we learn, in prison.—Lussex (N. J.) Herald.

SINGULAR.—There is a child in New York, hardly twenty-two month old, and is 39 inches in height. Recently, it grew four inches in three days, and then, after twelve days' intermission, it grew four inches in a week. Its strength in consequence is so reduced, that the circulation of the blood can be seen in its veins.

MORTALITY.—The deaths in New York last week were moderate—total, 355; men 83, women 91, boys 98, girls 83. 7 apoplexy, 36 by cholera infantum, 35 by consumption, 12 by debility, 16 by diarrhœa, 42 by dysentery, 23 by dropsy, 5 by drowning, 32 by typhus fever, 27 by other fevers.

EMIGRATION TO LIBERIA.—Wm. McLain Esq., President of the Colinization Society, in a letter from this city, of the 13th inst., to the national Intelligencer, gives the following account of the departure of the regular packet from this port:—

"The Liberia packet sailed on her second voyage this morning at 12 o'clock. She carried out eighty emigrants, mostly from this State and Virginia. At 10 o'clock religious services were performed on board by the Rev. Mr. Payne, (a colored man) the pastor of the colored Bethel—church of this city, which were attended by a large concourse of people, who appeared greatly interested. The packet has a full cargo of freight and was not able to take all that was offered.—She more than meets our most sanguine expectations. If no untoward event occurs between this and the close of her first year, the managers will be able to declare a very handsome dividend to the stockholders. The influence which she is exerting upon the colored people is also very encouraging. During the last forty-eight hours some twenty persons in this city offered themselves as emigrants, of whose intentions nothing has been previously known.

"We expect the packet to return in time to sail on her third voyage on the first of January, 1848."

DEATH OF REV. T. J. HINTON.—The New Orleans Times, of the 39th ult., thus announces the death of the Rev. Mr. Hinton, formerly pastor of churches in Richmond and Norfolk:

This estimable clergyman, pastor of the Baptist church, St. Charles street, expired on Saturday last, at half past 10 o'clock, A. M., of the prevailing epidemic, in the foriy-eighth year of his age. We knew something of Mr. H.,and can say with truth, that a more zealous minister, one more unaffectedly pious, or more imbued with liberal learning, did not, at his decease, live in this community. Undismayed by the ravages which the yellow fever was making among all classes of our population, he stood firmly at his post, resisting every tempting voice that pointed to a short absence as security against its attacks, and carrying the consolations of religion to the death-bed of those of his congregation, and others, who preceeded him to the grave, through the same awful visitation. Herein, he was a model to be followed by all of his sacred calling. Mr. Hinton emphatically died 'in harness,' and no doubt has received 'the exceeding rich reward, which his devotedness merited."

THE WOMAN WITH TEN HUSBANDS.—A paragraph has been going the rounds of the newspapers, for some weeks past, in relation to the morals of New Hampshire. It was stated that there was a woman in the Granite State, who was living with ten husbands! and it was added that her neighbors seemingly took no notice of the matter whatever.

The cream of the joke is:—The woman's name is Husband, and she has nine children; of course she lives with ten Husbands, as it is proper and right she should.

It is said of a celebrated hanging Irish judge, Lord Norbury, that he was never known to shed a tear but once, and that was during the representation of the "Beggar's Opera," when Macheath got a reprieve.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. VIII---NO. 52. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, SEPTEMBER 30, 1847. WHOLE NO. 416.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

REVERDY E. WHITE, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents, can have the paper at one dollar.

POETRY.

"Temples not Made With Hands."

'Tis not in temples made with hands
The great Creator dwells;
But on the mountains's top he stands,
And in the lowly dells:
Wherever fervent prayer is heard,
He stands recording every word;
In dell, on mountain, every where,
He never fails to answer prayer.

Yes—in the poor man's lowly stall,
And in the pris'ners' cells,
And in the rich man's lordly hall.
The great Creator dwells:
Where two or three are joined in prayer,
His audience-hall, his house is there;
Wherever prays the child of grace
Is his peculiar dwelling-place.

Think you that temples built of stone,
And blessed by priestly hand,
Are more peculiarly his own,
More reverence demand?
Go to thy closet—shut the door,
And all thy mercies ponder o'er:
Thine all pervading God is there;
He loves to answers secret prayer.

The temple thy Creator owns,
That temple is the heart,
No towering pile of costly stones,
Nor any work of art.
The cloud-capp'd spire that points on high,
May draw the lightning from the sky;
But 'tis the humble, modest flower,
That drinks in the refreshing shower;
And in return for favors given,
It breathes its fragrance back to heaven.

Religious.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A SERMON.---Providence.

"When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained;

What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"—Psalms, viii. 3 4.

It seems to have been at night that many of the sublime effusions of the sweet singer of Israel flowed forth. At night, still, silent night, when with many sleeps oblivion—buries the toil and anxiety of the bustling and busy world. At night, when the burning rays of the sun give place to the milder beams of the moon, while one by one the lamps of heaven gleam from its deep blue vault, and the vast concave glows serene with the many colored gems set therein. At such a season, then, behold him retiring from the walks of men, seeking with his flocks Siloa's brook, or Kedron's silvery stream. There no foolish speculation employs his mind. The world meets not his vision. He meditates on the great and wonderous being who called him into existence. What, exclaims he, do I indeed exist! Then, how, or why is it, that I am not forgotten, but am included in the government of the universe that stretches forth as far as light or thought can penetrate, or space extend. See! with what ardor he gazes toward the starry sky. To find out and know God, he grasps at God's works, sends forth his mind to wander through the illimitable expanse of creation; or meditates upon the suns or systems of countless worlds spread out before him; and while reflecting upon the inhabitants thereof and their probable character, his mind is lost in amazement, and wonder, and delight, that a race, a world of sinners are not forgotten. That they are not left to themselves, and, that, sinful and corrupt though they be, they are not lost sight of by their great original, but are included under the government of Providence in which all things meet and centre and have their being. And is not this a wonderful and an amazing contemplation! and yet, oh how it should make our hearts thrill with rapture, that God in the government of worlds unnumbered, forgets not ours, and in the apportioning of blessings of peace, and of joy, to myriads who have kept their first estate, who are holy as the Lord their God is holy. He looks from heaven his dwelling place upon us sinners, compassionates all our sorrows and distresses, and imparts to us a hope of redemption and eternal life. But why should God's Providence seem to us so wonderful? Have you never considered the field upon which it is excercised? Have you never looked forth upon the heavens to contemplate the orbs that roll nightly there? Have you never reflected upon their vast dimensions, or the almost infinity of their number, or the immense multitude of living creatures that no doubt throng upon them? Many of those orbs are millions of times larger than the earth, and the population of the earth from the most recent calculation, appears to be One Thousand Millions of souls.—Now, suppose a world one million of times larger than the earth, capable of supporting a population one million of times greater than that of the earth, and we have at once the sum of one thousand millions of millions, a sum to our minds utterly incomprehensible—a quantity of which we can form not even the most remote conception. But to extend this idea farther, the telescope reveals nearly one hundred millions of fixed stars, the general opinion concerning which, is, that they are all the centres of systems as large, if not larger, than the Solar system, in which some thirty distinct worlds are discovered to exist. Suppose each central sun already discovered, to govern a similar number of worlds, and we find in this field nearly three thousand millions of worlds; and if, as is supposed, these worlds are inhabited, if each sustains as great a proportion as the earth to our mind, what an infinity of living, thinking, creatures are presented. Now, let us endeavor to discover what has been done for this array of intelligent creatures. Take the earth for data, which has existed, say six thousand years. Suppose, then, the average population to have been five hundred millions, and each generation to have lived fifty years, and we will have one hundred and twenty generations, or sixty thousand millions of men and women called up before us, who once trod the earth, a part of whom exist now. Then, suppose these individually to have consumed fifty dollars' worth of food and clothing annually, and we have the sum of six millions of millions of dollars for their annual or yearly support, and the same total of our indebtedness to Providence for temporal things alone, is three hundred millions of millions of dollars. All this must be taken into account in the contemplation of Providence. Yea, more: we must contemplate the same benevolence exercised toward the inhabitants of other worlds.—Earth perishes, but the data—and the data here is scarcely a tithe of the vast amount, for Providence grasps the universe, and the universe pervades space. Would we know what the works and wonders of Providence are? Then marshal earth's inhabitants, her living and her dead of all ages,—bring forward the many millions that throng the universe,—bring angel, arch-angel, seraphim, and cherubim,—bring all creatures that live, and all that ever drew the breath of life, then comprehend their number,—obtain if you can, a definite thereof, so that you have a perfect understanding of the same. Then define the value of the articles necessary for their comfort and convenience, and procure for them these things for one year, then continue this case through the whole length of the existence of these creatures. Now, this is Providence. Oh, how the mind sinks weak and powerless to the earth under the mighty contemplation! And now, does it not strike you, that a being capable of exercising an universal Providence, must be Omnipotent, Omniscient, and Omnipresent?—He alone that could create, can sustain a universe. To create a universe whose several parts were perfectly adapted to the whole work, so that there could be no discord,—no confusion whatever, in the whole structure, requires a wisdom, that indeed knows no bound. This truth, the design beheld in the whole plan of creation, makes known to us, whilst the existence of the whole proclaims to us a power which we call Omnipotent, which phrase includes all of strength or of power we suppose to exist, or that ever may exist under any circumstance or modification whatever it may be, when we speak of cause, or of that which produces any effect, we refer it to this power, or to a media that depends clearly and solely on this power. These two principles being duly evinced as existing in one being, does it not appear that this being in order to understand his works to bring them forward, and to complete them according to his design, must be everywhere present throughout his vast domain, superintending and controling the various and complicated machinery used by him in carrying into effect his vast design. The wisdom that contrived,—the power that accomplished,—the presence that watched over the creation of the universe,—now sustains the universe. He whose hand formed all things possesseth all things, and is rich in all the glory and honor of Divinity. The sole monarch of all being in heaven, earth and hell. Seated on the throne of his glory he guards all, upholds all, sustains all his works, and all his creatures in all places of his dominion. None are forgotten—none are neglected. And whilst he hears the chime of unnumbered worlds, and the chaunt of angel voices, and the praise of saints redeemed, his ear is ever open to our cry, and the praise,—the faint and feeble praise,—that we employ, may, amid the chaunt of unnumbered voices, the rejoicing of angelic choristers, and the songs of the redeemed, breathe its music into the ear of God—its meaning into the heart of God—and draw down upon our heads the blessing of God, as fully and as completely as though no other being existed in all space to attract his notice, or receive his mercy. In contemplating Providence, we contemplate God as present thro'out his vast dominion, filling all things, and pervading all things, animate or inanimate, and yet not any more present in one place than another. And whilst he is governing and regulating the affairs of some far off world, where by the manifestations of himself, it is proven that he is as perfectly present as that we are here present, and yet, at the same time, we realise his presence here so powerfully, as to exclaim with one consent—"This is God's own house and the gate of heaven." And being present, none are forgotten—none are neglected, and unto each is imparted every real blessing in due season. Being everywhere present, God hears every cry, notes every tear, extends his provident care unto all, while the broad mantle of his love covers all, from the poor man in his cottage, or the beggar by the wayside, to the rich in his palace, or the monarch on his throne. Oh, what a lively sense of his Providence did the Psalmist possess! Hear him: Many there be that say of my soul, there is no help for him in God. But thou, oh God, art a shield to me, my glory, and the lifter up of my head. I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. I laid me down and slept; I awaked for the Lord sustained me. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that set themselves against me round about.—Hear him again in the 91st psalm, inclusive.—And have we no reason to rejoice in God's Providence? Let us look back to the days of infancy,—How many dangers have we escaped? How many mercies have we enjoyed? How many? Should we think of them to sum them up,—lo, they are more than can be numbered! What almost miracles do we behold in our preservation! See, also, what we have received as our share in the distribution of blessings. Health of body and mind; friends, and all the endearments of friendship; religion, and all the consolation thereof; all its holy rapture; all its high hopes, and lofty aspirations,—to cheer and comfort us here in this vale of tears. Our prosperity in business, all our successes, are from him. He prolongs the drawing of breath, the beating of our pulse, and the throbbing of our hearts; guards our going out and our coming in. But whilst he thus exerciseth a strict guardianship over us, we behold him ministering to the distrest and helpless of our fellows, soothing every sorrow, alleviating every distress, dispensing happiness in the midst of agony, and joy in the deepest grief. But not to man alone are his mercies granted. Wheresoever we find life, there we find God, and trace the displays of that Providence which crowns our lives with mercies infinite. All things that breathe—no matter however feeble or strong they be,—all, all, are under God's fostering care, all derive from him their being, and every supply necessary to the continuance of their existence. Thus, we perceive, there is a general and special Providence. A Providence on the one hand exercised toward the species or class, and on the other narrowing itself down to the individual, and seting as fully and as completely upon him as though there were no other creature existing unto whom God could manifest himself. In the discharge of the duties of Providence, we behold him who dwells in uncreated light, surrounded by a retinue of unnumbered worlds, peopled by untold millions of intelligent creatures, stooping from the throne of his glory, and giving a place in his attention to the feeblest and meanest of the creatures his hands have made, granting to them life, and sustaining that life, with all its blessings.—In contemplating the heavens, well might David cry out, What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?—Aye, what was—what is man? A fallen, a degraded, an unholy and ungrateful creature. A creature who had, and who doth despise the holy commands of the Most High God, who trampleth upon all his requirements, and is forgetful of the high claim Jehovah hath upon man, that he should serve him. What is our race but a race engaged in the service of Satan—a race thronging consentaneously the broad thoroughfare that leadeth to everlasting destruction? A race, the children of wrath, their mind earthly, sensual, devilish, haters, and contemners of God, who, when they had known God, glorified him, not as God, but worshipped and served the creature by the side of the Creator. Is this man's character?—can this be him that was made in God's image? Even so; and this is the character God's own book attributes to him. Now so much for man as a fallen being to recommend him to the notice of God. He merits at the hand of God, it is true, but he merits nought but death. Again: View man with heaven's malediction resting upon him, the storm-cloud of Jehovah's wrath settling o'er him, and vengeful lightnings blazing round illuming earth, and thus revealing sin. See all earth exposed to death—all poised on destruction's verge,—all trembling o'er the gulf of endless ruin, ready for the blow of vengeance—ready for the final plunge into the dark sea of everlasting ruin, whilst echoing above, the howling of the storm amid the sweeping of the tempest, and the rocking of the earth—a voice heard by all—a voice felt by all—a voice feared by all—proclaims unceasingly, the soul that sinneth it shall die. Sinai echoes back, it shall die; and gathering force as it echoes o'er the earth, Eden rolls it back in thunder-tones dying, it shall die. Again: A voice exclaims deploringly, remember how short my time is, wherefore hast thou made man in vain; and the response thereto rolls up from the dim future, vanity of vanities, all is vanity, surely man in his best estate is altogether vanity. If man is but a temporal being—if no hereafter awaits him—if he is destined to go hence and be no more, what is he with all his boasted intelligence—with all his fancied glory—with all his clustering honors—but, as a shadow of the night, but as a morning mist,—a vain, a dumb show?—But man's existence stops not here; it begins in time, but requires eternity for its developement. Would we discover man's worth, man's greatness as an immortal creature, as a creature destined to live when sun and stars and vaulted skies expire? Would we discover his worth as it is estimated by his Creator? Would we know the price paid down for our redemption from the curse of a violated law by the Legislator who gave that law? Then look, oh! look to Bethlehem—amazing sight! there God for man becomes incarnate, takes man's body, man's flesh, man's infirmities; is tempted and tried in all points as a man, but yet is without sin. He suffers—He bleeds—He dies! Oh, amazing thought! Oh, wonderous love! He dies for man! See the spreading glory,—see here the brightest display of the Providence,—the care,—the mercy free and boundless,—mercy of our God,—our Father, our Eternal All. Said Rausseau, if the life and death of Socrates were those of a sage, the life and death of Jesus Christ were those of a God.—Yea, we exclaim, like a God he died, but as God he arose and triumphed over death, no more to die. See, then, the crowning point—the finishing stroke—the exquisite home touches of Providence exercised toward us and for us,—Creation, Preservation, Redemption. Shall a pause be made? Shall aught be concealed? No; oh no! If God be for, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things. Them that believe upon him—them that obey the commands of the Lord Jesus—the humble contrite ones, who gratefully acknowledge God's hand in all things—who depend upon him, and look to him from hour to hour for every supply,—who make their wants and wishes known to the Father through the Son—these shall receive all things,—these have the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. What, then, have we with Christ? Redemption, Forgiveness, Justification, Sanctification, and Eternal Glorification with our God on high. Oh! Christian, faint not then by the way—grow not weary in well-doing. Hast thou the strong man's injury, and the proud man's hate—the buffetings of the world, the temptations of Satan, and the infirmities of the flesh to contend against? Even so had Christ, who is thy light and thy salvation. Be faith ful, be diligent, fight the good fight of faith—the prize is just before thee, full in thy view. Let no man take thy crown. What! hast thou then a crown? Even so; a crown of glory brighter far than that circling the brow of earth's proudest monarch. Press forward in the race—cast from thee every weight, every besetting sin: run, looking not behind, but forward unto Jesus, the beginning and the end, the first and the last of thy faith, the beginning and the consummation of thy salvation. God's provident hand shall guard thee and guide thee, and if thou dependest upon him, he shall bring thee to the promised land—to the full view of the object of thy faith, and the fruition of thy most aspiring hope—even to the inheritance eternal with them that are sanctified—the saints of light—granting unto thee through riches of grace in Christ Jesus an abundant entrance thro' the gates into the everlasting city of God and Christ. But, sinner, how is it with thee? Where is thy hope? How hast thou improved the benefits Providence hath showered upon thee? Hast thou ever once seriously thought upon the source from whence cometh all the good thou possessest? Hast thou ever felt one thrill of gratitude toward the beneficent donor of all the mercies thou hast received? Every good and perfect gift cometh down from the great Father of light, with whom there is no change. And can it be that thou hast never deigned in thy hardness of heart to look but once up to the exuberant fountain of happiness and peace, whence thou derivest all thy supplies? From the earliest dawn of thy being, thou hast been preserved and led in safety thro' every danger that has arisen before thee, by the power of that God whom thou hast ever slighted. For all his goodness to thee God demands nothing but that thou shouldest serve with a perfect heart willingly. All the return his love requires for favors past, is, that thou shalt acknowledge his hand therein, and humbly solicit a continuance of his mercies. Do this and thy soul shall live, and God will come unto thee and by his spirit will take up his abode within thee. Wilt thou still say to him, depart? still thrust him, who is thy best friend, from thee, and keep at a distance thy Lord and thy God? Think, oh think, what thy condition would be, if he should withdraw himself forever from thee! and this is possible, for he has declared that my spirit shall not always strive with man, and that they that harden their hearts and stiffen their necks, shall suddenly be cut off and that without remedy. Beware, then, oh sinner! lest from thy friend he should become thine enemy. Lest from making overtures of peace to thee, he should turn and fight against thy trembling soul. How, then, wouldest thou entrench thyself to escape his bolts of vengeance? How wouldest thou contend against him who holdeth all power in heaven and earth?—Beware, oh beware of thy present course! God is now thy friend and is seeking to reconcile thee to himself, but if thou continuest to sin against him, and to harden thy heart against his calls, if thou shalt still refuse to acknowledge his goodness, or suffer thy heart to feel his love, bidding thy heart cheer thee as thou goest forward in the error of thy ways, God will enter into judgment with thee, and will plead against thy soul in the great day of his wrath. Then be assured, tho' thy heart be made of steel, thy forehead lined with brass, God at length will make thee feel.—Nor will he let thee pass. THETA.

Pleasant View, Pa., Sept. '47.

Prudence in Conversation.

It is as obliging in company, especially of superiors, to listen attentively, as to talk entertainingly.

Do not think of knocking out another person's brains, because he differs in opinion from you. It will be as rational for you to knock yourself on the head, because you differ from yourself ten years ago.

If you want to gain any man's good opinion take particular care how you behave the first time you are in comany with him. The light you first appear in to one who is neither inclined to think well or ill of you, will strongly prejudice him either for or against you.

Be sure of the fact before you lose time in searching for a cause.

In disputes upon moral or scientific points ever let your aim be to come at truth, not to conquer your opponent.

If you happen into company where the talk runs into obscenity, scandal, or folly, or vice of any kind, you had better pass for morose and unsocial among people whose good opinion is not worth having, than shock your own conscience, by joining in conversation which you must disapprove of.

Ministerial.

From the Religious Telescope.

What Constitutes an Efficient Ministry?

EMINENT PIETY.

"Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." This is the Divine command to all that enter upon the sacred calling of Gospel ministers,—a command, too, upon the obedience to which depends the success of every one engaged in this work. It is a well known fact, that a minister is useful, in general, just in proportion to the depth of his piety. The impression made by his preaching will be guaged by the exhibition of the truth as seen in his life. His words, his spirit, his dealings, dress and general deportment, will all give weight to his discourses or weaken their force on the hearts of his hearers. Hence the absolute necessity of eminent piety in those who stand as leaders and example to the flock. "Take heed to thyself," is a Divine command to those who enter the ministry, with which it is connected as dependent upon it, the salvation of those that hear them. O, how important it is that ministers be holy, if on this depends the salvation of their hearers. How many souls have already been hardened in sin and landed in perdition that might have been saved, had they been blessed with an eminently holy ministry! It would be well for every minister to pause here, and ask himself this solemn question; "has not my unholiness precipitated some soul to an eternal hell?" or, which amounts to about the same, "have not some of my hearers been lost who might have been saved had I obtained and exhibited as much of the spirit of Christ as my sacred office calls for?" We fear that many of our consciences would answer in the affirmative. This is an overwhelmingly solemn thought, and sufficient to sink us in the deepest self abasement before God, and keep us there until we are forgiven for past negligence and fully clothed upon with salvation for all coming time, enabling us ever after to act as being conscious of affecting eternally, by our whole spirit and conduct, the beings among whom we move.

By eminent piety, we mean nothing more nor less than new testament piety,—such as, was exhibited in the lives and doctrines of Christ and the apostles. The Churches of the present day are no standard of piety for such as would attain to the summit of holiness. So far from it, that they will call a man eminent for hypocrisy and Phariseeism who, like Caleb and Joshua, is resolved to follow the Lord fully, without regard to the good or ill will of friends or foes. Hence, the minister who would attain the heights and depths of grace must be prepared to suffer persecution. This indeed, is one mark by which he may know where he stands; for what eminently holy man ever lived without being evil spoken of?—The man of deep piety will be a man of fervent and constant prayer; deep humility, so that praise will not exalt nor slander offend him, love to God and man—complacent towards the good and compassionate, and pitiful towards the vicious. He will be patient and resigned under sufferings and trials; he will be unmoved by opposition, and fearless amidst the greatest dangers, being conscious of the Divine favor and protection. He will be faithful and obedient in all things in which he perceives the will of God. In a word, he will be "full of faith and the Holy Ghost," dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God. Although such men see themselves as nothing, as less than the least of all saints, yet they may have a consciousness of their relation and consecration to God. It was under this consciousness of his integrity that Paul was enabled to say to his Brethren who were acquainted with him, "follow me as I follow Christ." Again, he appeals to them thus: "ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily, and justly and unblamably we behaved ourselves among you that believe." To make such professions before God and man requires an amount of religious confidence, and an elevation of piety not often attained. But this is not because it is not possible for us to attain such heights of grace, by no means; there was no provision made for Paul and John in the atonement that was not made for ministers of the present time. If we are willing to make the necessary consecration, and will exercise the same amount of faith, the mount of love on which John dwelt, and the mount of the assurance of faith on which Paul had ascended, are as accessible to us as them. Our God is no respecter of persons. Whosoever will, let him take the waters of life freely. All are yours. Ask and ye shall receive that your joy may be full.

Give to the church such ministers again, and the scenes of the first century will be revived; Zion will shake herself from the dust of error and sin, and be clothed with her beautiful garments of holiness and righteousness. She will awake and put on her strength, and go forth to glorious war, not to destroy men's lives, but to save them. Let the church pray the Lord of the harvest to send out such men; let her pray for the fulfilment of the prophetic declaration, "He shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jersusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in days of old, and as in former years." Already we behold this prophecy fulfilling in part; many of the ministers of the sanctuary are seeking an entire, and perpetual consecration to the cause of Christ. Already the spirit is descending on some of them, leading them to put less dependence on the arm of flesh and rely more implicitly on Him who has said, "I am thy strength." Let the church continue to pray; and this reformation in the ministry will be but the forerunner of a great and glorious revival. A holy, faithful ministry will be efficient; without this, no ministry, however well qualified otherways, can be truly efficient. A deeply pious ministry is always an efficient ministry. The pure gospel of Jesus Christ has never yet been preached in vain by holy, self-denying, consecrated men; in their hands it will prove to be the power of God. In every general reformation with which the world has been blessed, the personal piety of the instruments has been acknowledged and honored. Truly holy men, who live out what they preach, although always persecuted more or less, exert an influence over their hearers which cannot be attained by any other means. Neither wealth, nor honor, birth nor rank, gifts nor zeal can supply the place of holiness in a minister. He must be holy if he would be eminently and permanently useful.

Persons who pay one dollar to the Horticultural Society, become members of the Association, and are at liberty to visit the fair, with their families, at any time, free of charge.

TEMPERANCE.

From the Baltimore Crystal Fount

"Tears of Joy."

BY S. S. BARRY.

And Joseph made ready his chariot and went up to meet Israel his father to Goshen, and presented himself unto him; and he fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while. Where is the man, endowed with reason, and possessing all the tender sensibilities of humanity, that would not make them manifest under circumstances like these? Who, with heart so hard and destitute of human feelings, that would not rejoice and 'weep for joy' at meeting with a long lost friend and relative? Yea, with what lively interest will those peculiar emotions of soul flow out with gratiude to God for the special acts of his providence. Some may profess to disbelieve the existence of joy while in the act of weeping but divine inspiration tells us that Joseph wept, and the context clearly proves that those tears were of joy; they were the effusions of a heart overflowing with affection and regard. No expression of dissatisfaction did he utter—not a murmuring word escaped his lips, and while the hoary locks of his aged father were wet with his tears, all was peace and joy within.

Reader, have these emotions of love ever entered your soul? Can you refrain from weeping when placed in circumstances like Joseph's? or when some special act of kindness has been rendered you? or when you have been delivered from a horrid death, or some unforeseen accident? Who could avoid being touched with sensations at once sublime and tender? It is an infirmity of which no man should be destitute! Such tears are sacred—such emotions are holy, and should be cherished as the cleansing influence of a stream of gratitude flowing from a fountain of purity. We can view it in no other light; for when the effects are so glorious, the cause must be just—the motive must be pure. No consideration of reward can produce it, for benevolence is its author. No mark of selfishness can be traced upon its features; but that principle of love interested only in the welfare of others, is depicted on its countenance. Truly man is wonderfully made, and those mandates of nature which regulate his affections are all summed up in this one command: 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' This kind of benevolence is purely disinterested, tempered with the spirit of the gospel, and unadulterated by selfish ness. That which gives for the sake of reward is not benevolence, but a mere empty pretence which results in vanity, and idle aspirations. The one inspires new life into the soul of the receiver, and causes him to 'weep for joy' in view of the goodness of his beneficient benefactor, while the others is but the tribute of an indolent and unmeaning sympathy. The one, like the divergent rays of summer's sunshine, emanates from the throne of God itself—the other shines not forth with healing benefits, but is forever wrapped within the precincts of the cold hard heart, from whose opaque walls issue forth no principle of benevolence. The one is exemplified in the person of the Saviour of the world—the other in him who said: 'I will give thee all the kingdoms of the earth, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.' This is the representation the Holy Scriptures give. Benevolence is a work—a labor of love, and often calls for self-denial and perseverance; it is not a mere garb that may be laid aside at pleasure, but a robe of righteousness to be worn in like daily avocations of life. It is not in halls of taste and refinement that benevolence is called for; but in the dark and dismal receptacles of poverty and misery; the high-ways and hedges, and the streets and lanes of cities are the places where the object of pity and compassion are to be found. I have seen the miserable drunkard raised to honor and distinction by a kind word and a helping hand. I have seen the poor inebriate wallowing in the gutter, cursing his Maker, and striving if possible, to annihilate his own existence—the most vile and loathsome of all objects imaginable! It would seem almost impossible for that man to reform; but in this time of trouble a friend approaches, and like the good Samaritan, has compassion on him, lifts him up and takes him to his own home, cleanses him from his pollution, and administers to his wants. When the effects of king alcohol have subsided he finds himself among friends—he is now a man again. He wonders at the change; he knew not that he had a friend! He now has many. They gather around him—they take him by the hand—they call him brother! At the word brother his heart softens; he gives vent to his feelings; he weeps for joy! And well he may, for he is now a happy man. His friends rejoice with him—ay, angels in heaven rejoice! This is, indeed, a glorious work; it was the business of our Saviour while on earth. We are commanded to follow his example; then let us go forth and labor in the cause, and rejoice that we are accounted worthy to be co-workers with him.

Sad Occurrence at Norfolk, Va.—Another of those most melancholy results so often attending the infernal vice of intemperance, has just transpired at Norfolk, Va., in the violent death of Mr. Leonard White, of that place, by the hands of his brother-in-law, Mr. Albert Beale, clerk of the steamer Crutis Peck. On Wednesday morning last, White being in one of those paroxysms caused by the demon of intemperance, he made a violent attack upon his meek and amiable wife, and her venerable mother, Mrs. Beale, (the latter blind as well as decrepid from age,) whom he beat and bruised in a shocking manner. Upon the knowledge of this coming to the old lady's son (Mr. Beale,) the evening of the same day, it completely overpowered him, and he burst into an agony of tears; his mother, the while urging him to resort to no other than legal measures with White. But shortly after, the man who had raised this storm of passion, unfortunately passed a hotel where Beale was standing. The sight, it seems, could not be resisted; and tracing White into a sugar shop, rushed upon him, seized him by the collar and dragged him out upon the pavement, when grappling his arm around the body of White, he drew a bowie-knife and dealt him a number of stabs and cuts in the abdomen, head and neck, until restrained from further violence by the interference of by standers. Mr. White was borne home, desperately, though it was at first thought, not mortally wounded. His wounds however, proved to be mortal, and he died on Sunday at three o'clock. An inquest on the body was held the same afternoon, and the verdict returned by the jurors was in accordance with this statement, the facts of which we gather from the Norfolk Herald.

Intelligence has been received at Washington city of the death of Lieut. Jos. Irons, 1st Artillery, from wounds received in the battle of the 20th inst.

CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Written for the Western Recorder.

EXTRACTS OF MINUTES OF PITTSBURGH ANNUAL CONFERENCE M. P. C.

In the Recorder of the 9th instant, the Editor pro. tem. says—"We are happy to be enabled to give the appointments of the Pittsburgh Conference, Methodist P. Church, this week, as taken from the "Village (Pa,) Watchman." We would, however, have been much better pleased to have acknowledged the receipt of the same last week, from the publishing committee," &c. Explanation—Two things caused the omission of duty by the publishing committee:—First—At a late hour during the evening session, just before the final adjournment of Conference, the Editor of the Recorder was observed to be busily engaged in transcribing the list of appointments; and the publishing committee presumed he would forward the same in his letter for publication. Secondly—The report of the "stationing committee," is referred to in the minutes, but the document is missing, so that we could not forward the list.

Part of the committee has also been absent, agreeably to appointment of Conference, on a fraternal visit to our beloved sister Muskingum Annual Conference: which has also occasioned the delay of this second letter.

In the list of appointments as published, several inaccuracies occur in the nomenclature of the ministers and preachers, which need not now, perhaps, be corrected. The omission of one name and relation, we think, ought to be supplied, viz: W. Browing,* without an appointment, at his own request. Received into the Itinerancy, Wm. P. Ellison, G. Lanham, R. H. Sutton, Denton D. Hughes, and W. G. Williams. The following brethren were elected and ordained: To Elder's Orders, Wm. H. Doe, R. H. Walker, N. Gillespie, G. G. Collings,† H. Reger, M. Stewart, J. Holland, and D. D. Hughes. To Deacon,s Orders, Isaac Banks, J. P. Pricket, R. H. Sutton, J. McCormick, Wm. Morris, and W. P. Ellison.

We omit the names of brethren who composed the Stationing Committee, and the Secretaries,—they having been given by the Editor of the Recorder. Conference Steward, J. Cowl.

[*Browning and †Collins, we suppose.—Ed. p. t.]

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES, &c.

St's. & Ct's.	No. in Soc.	Names of unst. Min's. & Pr's.
Pittsburgh st.	270	C. Avery and J. Simmons, Min's.
Allegheny st.	320	J. Herbert, J. Maudin, J. B. Roberts, J. Harrop, & J. Guysinger, Ministers.—W. Tyson, Preacher.
Wheeling st.,	50
Union st.,	48	J. Phillips, Minister.--D. W. Phillips, Preacher.
Washington st.,	72	W. Boardman, Minister.
New Brighton st.,	35
Ohio ct.,	131
Monongahela ct.,	174	T. Maple, J. Evans, Ministers. —W. Morris, J. Hull, Preachers.
Manchester ct.,	170	J L Disselms, & J. Brown, Min's.
Morgantown ct,,	216	A. Pool, Minister.
Lewis ct.,	289	H. R. Bonnett, and A. Morrison, Ministers
George's cr'k ct.,	232	J. Haynes, Preacher.
Clarksburgh ct.,	543	B. Bailey, O. Lytle, & E. Bruen, Ministers.—J. Allen, and W. M. Dunlap, Preachers.
Harrisville ct.,	196	J. W. Wilson, Preacher.—To be divided as follows: Beginning at the mouth of Indian creek, & including all the app'ts. in Wood & Gilmore counties. The new ct. to be called Newark circuit.
Sharpsburgh ct.,	115	W. G. Williams, R. Davis, Min's.
Tyler ct.,	215	B. Knight, W. Verdin, Preachers.
Waynesburgh ct.,	360	J. Fordyce, Min.—E. Fordyce & Jos. Fordyce, Pr's. All the app'ts. west of Clinton to be added, including Johnson's, Tymon's, Coon's, & Bissett's; Fordyce's to be added to the Wheeling circuit.
Braxton ct.,	300	W. M. Betts, Preacher.
Connelsville ct.,	267	J. W. Francis, and T. Nesmith, Min's.—E. Mathers & L. Fairchild, Preachers
Brownsville ct.,	150	A. Blair, & S. Worcester, Ministers.—I. Banks, Preacher.
Wheeling ct.,	70	G. Dowler, Min.—J Turner, Pr.
Ligonier ct.,	40	To be ann'xd. to Connelisville ct.
Fairmont ct.,	300	D. Gibbons & R. Smith, Min's.
Buchanon ct.,	263	A. Spore, J. Hardman, J. Smith, Ministers.—P. W. Chichester, & G. J. Marsh, Pr's. The boundary line between this & Lewis, changed—commencing in the Pike, on the dividing ridge between the waters of Buchanon and Stone Coal cr'ks, following the ridge between the waters of Upland, & down said run to the pike; giving the S. W. side of said line to the Buchanon ct
Susquehanna ct.,	90	J. M. Gee, Minister.
Conneaut ct.,	115	S. Turner, Min.—J. Bumpus, I. Stanclift, Preachers.
Mill creek ct.	150	E. Rollins, Min. To be called Jackson ct.
Huntersville ct.,	100	J. Buckley, A. G. McNeal, Pr's.
Greenbrier ct.,	100
Valley Mission,	14	Last year's report.
Evansville ct.,	300	D. R. Fortney, Preacher,
New Castle ct.,	30	Last year's report.
Johnstown ct.,	23
Clarion ct.,	70	G. Seinor, Min.—A. Hazy, E. M. Muckle, Pr's. The territory N. of the Clarion river, embracing the Attebough ap't., to be constituted a Miss.; and the remainder of the ct. to be called Summerville ct.
Pittsburgh Miss.,	12	No report.
Fayette Miss.,		"
Western Va. Miss.,

The following resolution was passed, in reference to Br. Porter:

Resolved, That we recommend our afflicted Brother, W. A. Porter, who is now engaged in an Agency for the Book Concern of the Methodist Protestant Church, and also for Sears' Pictorial Works, to the friendly reception of the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church, wherever he may travel; and all others, that he may meet with proper encouragement in his arduous labors.

A document being received from the Vienna Circuit, of the Muskingum Annual Conference, addressed to this Conference, petitioning this body to let their circuit remain undivided; the petition was, on motion, unanimously granted.—And the Secretary was accordingly instructed to acquaint them with our action in the case.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 20, 1847.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

APPOINTMENTS OF THE ONONDAGA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, M. P. CHURCH.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

Circuits. Ministers Names.

1 Lysander—Thos, Sterricker, supt.
2 Wayne—W. W. Sterricker, supt.
3 Moringo—Solomon Paddock, supt.
4 Truxton—Isaac Seaman, supt.
5 Syracuse—Hamilton Brown, supt.
6 Manilus—Samuel U. Gridley, supt.
7 Savannah—James P. Long, supt.
8 Orleans—Himan Hoxey supt., Lyman Waugh ass't.
9 Mexico—Francis Pierce, supt.
10 Cherry Valley—James H. Richards supt.
" Nathan R. Swift, ass't.
11 Cayuga—Michael Prindle, supt.
12 Central—John Baum, supt.
13 Oswego—James Smith, supt.
14 Wilna & Antwerp—Philander L. Hakes, supt.
15 Rome—George A. Eadus, supt.
16 Columbia—Benjamin A. Sherwood, supt.
17 Schuyler—Darius Cook, supt.
Amboy Mission—Samuel Huntington, supt.
Conference Missionary and Agent, Nicholas N. Bort.
Left in the hands of the President, Benjamin Bort.
Number of Meeting houses in Onondaga District, 9.
Number of Parsonages, 3. Number of Members, 1296.
Unstationed Ministers, 13. Unstationed Preachers, 19.
Travelling Preachers, 22.
The next Annual Conference will be held at Sand Bank, Oswego county, New York, the first Wednesday in September, 1848.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

REPORT OF THE STATIONING COMMITTEE, OHIO CONFERENCE, M. P. CHURCH.

J. M. YOUNG, President.

Cincinnati st—To be supplied.
Elm Street Mission—T. Finkbine.
George Street Mission—Joel Dalbey.
Lebanon st—W. B. Evans.
Xenia ct—J. White.
Washington ct—A. Channel, R. Dobbins, sup. ass't.
Springfield ct—Reuben Rose.
Twinecreek ct—Jacob Nutty.
Cincinnati ct—A. H. Trumbo, J. D. Langdon, sup. ass't.
Richwood ct—J. B. Peat, Thos. D. Howe.
Miami ct—David Moore.
Kalida ct—Geo. Thornburg.
Lima ct—J. L. Borton.
Mt. Blanchard ct—Thos. Graham.
Port William ct—W. S. Fowler.
Clarksville ct—W. Tipton.
Union ct—O. P. Stephens.
Portage ct—Wm. Chapman.
Bainbridge ct—S. P. Kezerta.
Clarksburg ct—Wm. Pelan, Wm. Hughey, sup. ass't.
Bournville ct—C. H. Williams.
Ashridge ct—S. H. Evans.
Lebanon Mission—O. Warrington.
Greenville Mission—I. Hunt, J. Flood, sup. ass't.
Maumee Mission—Cyrus Carter.
Mad River Mission—L. Ensminger.
Conf. Missionary—A. McGuire.
A. Bessa left without an appointment at his own request.
Left without an appointment, G. M. Hunt, W. Warrington, J. H. Webster.---A. H. Bassett, Editor of the Western Recorder.

Cincinnati, Monday, Sept. 20, 1847.

The Ohio Conference adjourned this afternoon, after a short and harmonious session. Next Conference to be held at Lebanon, on the 1st Wednesday in Sept. 1848.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 30, 1847.

WANTED,

Any number of New Subscribers for the "Western Recorder," to commence with Vol. Nine. The preachers and others friendly to the enterprise, are requested to procure as many as may be, against the closing of the present Volume. Provided, however, no names be sent us but such as can be relied upon as good.

☞ The Editor with his lady reached home, in safety, on Wednesday, 29th inst., after this paper was made up.

To Our Readers.—The hourly expectation of the Editor, for the last three days, is the apology for the small amount of editorial. He will return to-day, (Wednesday,) but too late for this week's issue. He will resume his station next week,—being the first No. of the 9th Volume. In behalf of the Editor, we hope that agents will see and feel the necessity of extending the circulation of the "Recorder;" not by sending the names, merely, of new subscribers, but also the Money. Let every friend of Religion and Religious Liberty, exert him or herself, to have the "Western Recorder" sent to every family. As Printer of the paper, the profits are the same to us, whether the circulation be large or small,—we are paid only for our time. But as a friend to humanity, and a friend to Religion, we wish to see the paper and its Editor prosper. At its present circulation, the profits are nothing. Friends of the cause, exert yourselves; the power of the press is equal with that of the pulpit. As Editor pro tem, we bid you adieu. We have had a pleasant, (though laborious) time. We leave our readers to decide to whom partiality has been shown. If there has been any difference, it has been in favor of the Ladies and Children,—for we confess we have a partiality for them.

Poisonous Cheese.—Lovers of Cheese would do well to be on the look out when purchasing, as there have been several persons poisoned in and about Zanesville. On last Sabbath evening we stood by the bed-side of two children, in Zanesville, (poisoned by eating cheese) for whom their Physician had but little hopes of recovery. We are pleased to learn however, that they are recovering.

☞ A friend says, (in another column,) that, "in the list of appointments, as published, several inaccuracies occur in the nomenclature of the ministers and preachers." Could the Brother but see the manuscript nomenclature of ministers and preachers sent us a short time since, he would be surprised to know how accuracies occur. There are many who write plainly; yet when they come to giving proper names, it is done so carelessly that, unless a printer be familiar with them, they must put them in type by guess. For instance: A name commencing with "J," or "I," where the initial only is given, as in Conference proceedings, it is utterly impossible, in half the manuscripts we receive, to distinguish one from the other.

The Herald of Truth, for October, 1847, is on our table, containing its usual amount of interesting and useful reading. It is devoted to the interests of Religion, Philosophy, Literature, Science, and Art. As the advocate of Religion, it should find a welcome in every Christian family; and be regarded as the herald of truth, not in name, only, but in substance. Its Editor is an able and talented writer; and, (judging from his writings,) a friend to Religion; and as such, deserves the patronage of every lover of piety.—We hope that, for the sake of Religion, its Editor may be successful in extending its circulation.—Wherever it is read it cannot fail to accomplish great good. Terms, per year, (single copy,) $3; Two copies, per year, $5; Five copies, $11; Ten copies, $20; Twenty copies, $30. L. A. Hine, Editor; John White, Printer, and business Agent, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Interments at New Orleans on the 18th, 38—Lafayette, 13—Hospital, 7. Interments for the week, 402.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR. NO. VII.

Cincinnati, Monday, Sept, 27, 1847.

The session of the Ohio Conference which closed last week, was one of most agreeable and harmonious character. The brethren of not less than six places, solicited the appointment of the next session, at their respective points. In one instance, the citizens of a village where we have as yet no society organized, petitioned for the next Conference, nobly pledging themselves to sustain it. Such a case of liberality, excited not a little interest, and a respectable number of votes were given for Bainbridge; but the claims of Lebanon, where we have a new and promising society, were yielded to by a large majority of the Con. and the next session was appointed to be held there. We are gratified to learn that that new station is in a prosperous condition, having now the occupancy of a new and pleasant house of worship. An interesting and successful camp meeting was held near Lebanon, by our brethren, shortly before Conference. A goodly number of our friends attended from this city, as I am informed. The meeting was well sustained, and resulted in much good.

We feel inclined here to indulge in a little retrospection, in reference to the Ohio Conference. The session of 1847, was the nineteenth session of that body. Of the nineteen sessions, nine have been held in this city. The first two, viz., those of 1829 and 1830, were held before the adoption of the Constitution and Discipline. At the session of 1830, we were admitted on probation into the itinerancy. We have enjoyed the privilege of witnessing all the sessions of the Ohio Conference, and we believe there is not another individual who can make this boasting, if boasting it be. Few, very few, (but three or four aged brethren) remain, who were members when we were first admitted. But we desire to refer especially to the degree of prosperity, which has in the order of a gracious Providence, attended the Conference. At first, it included all the Western country. We have not at hand our file of old "Minutes," but believe that the Conference numbered then between 2 and 3000 members, and some 22 itinerant preachers in the entire West. Since then it has been repeatedly divided, and subdivided, till we now have in the West, nine Annual Conferences. And yet the present Ohio Conference, embracing in its District only the western portion of the State of Ohio, (little more than one third part of the State,) numbers rising 4000 members, and has a larger number of efficient itinerants than had the Conference at its first session. When we consider the difficulties and counter influences with which we have had to contend, and yet find that we are in some degree blessed and prospered, we are bound to acknowledge that it is of the Lord our God, who hath been mindful of us, and gracious unto us.

There are encouraging indications that the Conference year upon which we have entered will be a prosperous one. Let our brethren everywhere, take courage, and let them labor and pray for a general revival of evangelical religion, and we trust it will soon be our happy privilege to announce cheering intelligence from various portions of our Zion.

In this city, the cords of our Zion have been lengthened, and it is hoped that ere long we shall have three distinct stations. We had the pleasure of visiting yesterday, the Elm Street Mission, and of assisting the Superintendent, Br. Finkbine, in the Sabbath services. We found a pleasant congregation, and a prosperous Sabbath School; the latter under the superintendence of our friend, J. G. Evans. We were gratified to learn that arrangements are in progress for meeting this fall the last remaining payment on the property of this new mission. A new mission has also been recognized by the last Conference, in the western part of the city, called George Street Mission. A substantial brick building of respectable dimensions, (40 feet by 65,) is in progress of erection, and will be enclosed within a few weeks. Brother J. Dalbey has been appointed to the charge of this Mission, and as it is located in a part of the city not surrounded by other churches, we trust it will be found a useful point for establishing a congregation, and Sabbath School.

Br. Stockton arrived in the city on Saturday last, and preached last night to a crowded audience, in the Sixth Street, Methodist Protestant Church. His health seems to be very delicate. On yesterday we were also surprised to meet with our old friend J. Myers, superannuated minister of the Muskingum Conference, and formerly of Putnam. He is on his way to St. Louis, Mo., with his son Henry, with whom he is to reside. Our parting with this excellent old brother is painful, as our meeting again in the flesh is exceedingly doubtful. May Heaven support the declining years and trembling steps of the old pilgrim. His age is about 74, and he was one of the first travelling ministers of our Ohio Conference, and a pioneer of the M. P. Church in the west.

We have been taking opportunities, since Conference, with our companion, to visit our relatives and connections in Preble and Hamilton counties, after an absence of two years, and trust we shall now very soon be enabled to resume our post.

A word more in reference to the Queen City. That little word, Progress, is not yet forgotten.—Every where that there is space to be occupied, substantial buildings are going up. Enough building is done, each year, to constitute a small city. We are told that the Magnetic Telegraph is about completed to Louisville, Ky. One of the numerous attractions of the times, is the exhibition of Peale's celebrated painting of the 'Court of Death.' Dr. Colton tendered to the Conference, whilst in session, an invitation to visit the painting. Nearly all the members did so, on Monday evening last. With the rest, we 'turned aside to see this great sight,' and consider it deserving the popularity it has acquired, but have not space here to attempt a description. A. H. B.

Dont Forget.—Those who are indebted for the Western Recorder, will greatly oblige us, by paying up before the close of the present volume. It will be a convenient opportunity to send by the preachers or delegates to the approaching Conferences. We need to receive, about this time, several hundred dollars, to enable us to meet claims against us which have grown out of our publishing enterprise. Dont forget. We shall have to discontinue many at the close of vol. viii, if they do not pay up.

A Great Dependance is also placed in the liberality of those true friends of the paper, who pursue the good old custom of paying in advance. From them we trust we shall have some essential aid in entering upon our next volume. Read the next paragraph.

Annual Register, M. P. Church, 1848.—This little publication, so much demanded by the Church, is now in press, and will be issued at an earlier date than heretofore. An edition of 6000 copies of the first half of the pamphlet, including the Calendar, is already worked off from the press. And we only wait to obtain the statistics of the several Annual Conferences to be held within a few weeks, when we expect to make up the remaining part of the publication. Every subscriber for the Western Recorder who pays $2 in advance for vol. 9, shall have a copy of the Register sent him by mail, so soon as it is issued.

Information Wanted—Statistics of Conferences.—We are about publishing the Annual Register of the M. P. Church, for the year 1848, and are anxious to obtain, in view of this publication, the statistics of those Annual Conferences which have not published their Minutes in full. We desire to have the name of the President of each Conference, the number of Stations, Circuits, Missions, Itinerant ministers and preachers, Unstationed ministers and preachers, Members, and houses of worship in each District. Also, the time and place of the next session of each Annual Conference. If the secretaries, or any other having the information, will communicate it to us without delay, we shall be greatly obliged, and will be pleased to reciprocate the favor in any possible way.

OBITUARY.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MARTHA MILLER.

A mother gone! And who will fill her place? Sisters, who? Martha, consort of Brother Lewis Miller, of Clay Lick, Licking county, Ohio, departed this life, June 26th, 1847, aged fifty-nine years and six months.

Sister Miller was a native of Maryland, and embraced religion in early life. Twenty years she was an acceptable member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the last seventeen years she has been a most exemplary member in the Methodist Protestant Church. She was mother of 11 children, 5 of them have gone before, 6 are left behind to mourn her loss. In youth she fixed her affections upon the obtainment of that "Kingdom that cannot be moved," and found grace to seek after it to the last, with a fixed, unmovable principle. Her funeral obsequies were improved by Brother Montgomery, to a larger concourse of mourning friends and neighbors and acquaintances, than is often drawn together on like occasions. Now that she reaps the fruit of her labors, let it be not only the ambition, but the fixed determination of friends, relatives, and class mates, to find a place by her side. WM. HAMILTON.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FROM EUROPE.

The steamer Britannia arrived at Boston on Sunday 19 inst. There was a further decline in breadstuffs.

The Queen and Royal family still continue in Scotland.

The steamer Great Britain was successfully floated off the night of the 29th ult., and arrived at Liverpool on the 30th.

The wreck of the bark Canton, of Hull, with the loss of 300 emigrants, is reported to have taken place on the West coast of Scotland.

The British Islands have, within the last week or ten days, been visited by a succession of disastrous hurricanes, which have caused incalculable damage to the shipping.

Notwithstanding the war speech of Lord Palmerston, on the subject of the Spanish bonds, there is but little fear entertained in England, that an appeal will be made to the ultimatum.

A smart engagement took place on the 15th of June at the Cape of Good Hope, between a small party of British troops and the overwhelming number of Kafirs, in which the former suffered a defeat.

Italy still remains in a state of ferment. The town of Ferrara has been invested by the Austrian troops, and a declaration of war seems to be unavoidable on the part of the Pope. The king of Sardinia has declared his intention to aid the Pontifical power, and England warmly sympathizes with his holiness. Such a war must annihilate the Austrian dynasty in Italy.

In spain the public excitement is still unabated. The Queen has intimated her intention of calling Narvaez to the head of her councils.

Nothing of public interest from Switzerland The Diet continues its sittings, and was resolved to suppress the Sonderbund.

The overland mail from India had been received. The general state of the country was satisfactory. Trade was somewhat depressed at Calcutta and Bombay, but brighter prospects cheered the merchants from the favorable state of the crops.

The Hon. Mr. Winthrop and Gen. Armstrong go out by the Brittannia to-day—she also takes £12,000 specie.

The Sarah Sands sailed from this port yesterday.

Factory and Tannery Burnt.—The print works in Simmonsville, occupied by Mr. Patrick Wright, were destroyed by fire on Friday. The cloths, with the exception of a few hundred pieces, were removed. The loss is from $12,000 to $15,000; insurance, $5,000. The extensive tannery of Willard Parker, at Detroit, Michigan, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 15th instant. Loss $10,000; insurance $3,000.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Fatal Stage Accident.—The Cumberland Civilian gives the particulars of the accident to one of the coaches of the "Good Intent Line," on Saturday last, heretofore mentioned. The accident occurred near the bridge over Mills'creek about one mile from Cumberland, where the Mount Savage road almost touches the National road, and was caused by the fireman of a burthen train, which was just then descending from the Eckhart mines, casting out a large quantity of heated cinders, thus frightening the horses. The coach was upset, making two somersets down the bank of the creek, at that place from fifteen to twenty feet high. One of the passengers, Mr. George C. Vincent, of Erie county Pa., in attempting to escape from the upper door of the coach, was caugh by his cloak, carried over with the second turn, fell underneath, and received a concussion of the brain, of which he died in the course of an hour.

The body of Mr. Vincent was taken to Cumberland, and on Sunday evening, at 3 o'clock was followed to the grave by a very large concourse of citizens.

Another passenger had an arm injured by thrusting it out of the window, and several others received cuts on the head, while others escaped uninjured. As the fireman had particular instructions from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company never to throw out the hot coals at that points, he was immediately discharged from their service.

THE ARMISTICE.

The newspapers are still busy discussing the terms of the armistice granted to the Mexicans by Gen. Scott, and indeed few subjects possessing greater interest, have lately challenged the attention of the public ear. As yet, the reasons which induced General Scott to agree to this armistice are unknown, and it would be obviously unjust to discuss them at present.

In relation to one feature of the correspondence, however, previous to the settlement of the terms, the Baltimore American remarks as follows:

"Gen. Scott in his note to the Mexican President, tendering an armistice, calls the war between the two Republics an "unnatural war," and says that too much blood has already been shed in it. The Mexican Secretary of War, replying to Gen. Scott's note, refers to these expressions, and says:

It is certainly lamentable that in consequence of the disregard of the rights of the Mexican Republic, the shedding of blood has become inevitable between the first republics of the American continent, and your Excellency with great propriety qualifies this war unnatural, as well on account of its origin as the antecedents of two people identified by their relations and interests.

It is not without surprise that we see such language as this, reflecting upon the American Government in so gross a manner, quietly received by Gen. Scott and allowed to stand before the world as an official correspondence. If the Mexican functionary had tried his utmost at insolence he could hardly have succeeded in concentrating more of that offensive quality in the same number of words. He not only imputes the war to American aggression in "disregard of the rights of the Mexican Republic," but he takes Gen. Scott's phrase, "unnatural," which, by the way, might have been omitted with greater propriety than its use exhibits, and puts upon it a meaning which blends the American General with himself in casting reproach upon the United States.

In the hurry of the occasion, the character of this language, on the part of the Mexican Minister, was doubtless overlooked. Gen. Scott, we should suppose, is not a man to pass unnoticed any discourteous violation of propriety in relation either to the forms or substance of things pertaining to official or personal intercourse.

We publish below a copy of the terms of the armistice, and the correspondence relative to its ratification. We will not offer any reflections upon it until Gen. Scott's official Report now hourly expected, shall furnish all necessary explanations.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Art. 1. Hostilities shall instantly and absolutely cease between the armies of the United States, of America and the United Mexican States, within 30 leagues of the capital of the latter States, to allow time to the commissioners appointed by the U States and the commissioners to be appointed by the Mexican Republic, to negotiate.

2. This armistice shall continue as long the commissioners of the two governments may be engaged on negotiations, or until the commander of either of the said armies shall give formal notice to the other of the cessation of the armistice, and for forty-eight hours after such notice.

3. In the mean time, neither army shall, within thirty leagues of the city of Mexico, commence any new fortification or military work of offence or defence, or do anything to enlarge or strengthen any existing work or fortification of that character, within the said limits.

4. Neither army shall be reinforced within the same. Any reinforcements in troops or munitions of war, other than subsistance, now approaching either army, shall be stopped at the distance of twenty-eight leagues from the city of Mexico.

5. Neither army, nor any detachment from it, shall advance beyond the line it at present occupies.

6. Neither army, nor any detachment or individual of either, shall pass the neutral limits established by the last article, except under the flags of truce bearing the correspondence between the two armies, or on the business authorised by the next article; and individuals of either army who may chance to struggle within the neutral limits, shall, by the opposite party, be kindly warned off or sent back to their own armies under flags of truce.

7. The American army shall not by violence obstruct the passage, from the open country into the city of Mexico, of the ordinary supplies of food necessary to the consumption of its inhabitants, or the Mexican army within the city; nor shall the Mexican authorities, civil or military, do any act to obstruct the passage of supplies from the city, or the country, needed by the American army.

8. All American prisoners of war remaining in the hands of the Mexican army, and not heretofore exchanged, shall immediately, or as soon as practicable, be restored to the American army against a like number, having regard to rank, of Mexican prisoners captured by the American army.

9. All American citizens who were established in the city of Mexico prior to the existing war, and who have since been expelled from that city, shall be allowed to return to their respective business or families therein, without delay or molestation.

10. The better to enable the belligerent armies to execute these articles, and to favor the great object of peace, it is further agreed between the parties that any courier with despatches that either army may desire to send along the line from the city of Mexico and its vicinity, to and from Vera Cruz, shall receive a safe conduct from the commander of the opposing army.

11. The administration of justice between the Mexicans, according to the general and state constitutions and laws, by the authorities of the towns and place occupied by the American forces shall not be obstructed in any manner.

12. Persons and property shall be respected in the towns and places occupied by the American forces. No person shall be molested in the exercise of his profession; nor shall the services of any one be required without his consent. In all cases where services are voluntarily rendered, a just price shall be paid, and trade remain unmolested.

13. Those wounded prisoners who may desire to remove to some more convenient place for the purpose of being cured of their wounds shall be allowed to do so without molestation, they still remaining prisoners.

14. Those Mexican medical officers who may wish to attend the wounded, shall have the privilege of doing so, if their services be required.

15. For the more perfect execution of this agreement, two commissioners shall be appointed, one by each party, who in case of disagreement shall appoint a third.

16. This convention shall have no force or effect unless approved by their excellencies, the commanders respectively of the two armies within twenty-four hours, reckoning from the sixth hour of the 23d day of August, 1847.

A. QUITMAN, Major Gen. U. S. A,
P F. SMITH, Bv't Brig. Gen. U. S. A.
FRANKLIN PIERCE, Br'g. Gen'l. U. S. A.
IGNACIO DE MORA Y. VILLAMIL,
BENITO QUIJANO.

A true copy of the original.
G. W. LAY, U. S. A.,
Mil'y Sec'y to the General-in-Chief.

Head Quarters of the Army U. S.
Tacubaya, August 28d, 1847.

Considered, approved, and ratified, with the express understanding that the word 'supplies,' as used the second time, without qualification in the seventh article of this military convention—American copy—shall be taken to mean (as in both the British and American) arms, munitions, clothing equipments, (for men) forage, movoy, and in general all the wants of the army. That word 'supplies' in the Mexican copy is erroneously translated 'viveres' instead of 'recursos.'

WINFIELD SCOTT,
General-in-Chief of the U. States Army.

[Translation.]

Ratified, suppressing the 9th article, and explaining the 4th, to the effect that temporary peace of this armistice shall be observed in the capital and 28 leagues around it; and agreeing that the word 'supplies' shall be translated 'recursos;' and that it comprehends every thing which the army may have need, except arms and munitions.

ANTONIO LOPEZ DE SANTA ANNA.

Head Quarters Army U. S. of America,
Tacubaya Aug. 24, 1847.

I accept and ratify the foregoing qualification added by the President General of the Mexican Republic. WINFIELD SCOTT.

A true copy of the original.
G. W. LAY, U. S. A.
Military Secretary to the General-in-Chief.

Very Late from the Rio de la Plata.—The ship Star Republic arrived at New York, on Thursday, in the short passage of 41 days from Montevideo. The Journal of Commerce has Buenos Ayres dates to the 7th August. The farce of a blockade of Buenos Ayres continues on the part of the French, the British Government persevering in its abandonment of the intervention. Vessels continued to arrive and depart without molestation. The British and French ministers had returned from the La Plata, having failed to negotiate.

The decided course of Lord Howden produced the greatest exasperation at Montevideo, insomuch that it was deemed imprudent for him to land there, in order to take leave of the Montevidean government, and accordingly he omitted that formality and proceeded at once to Rio Janeiro.

Gen. Oribe was pressing the siege of Montevideo, but affairs were evidently drawing to a crisis. Some movements among the troops in the city, just before the S. R. sailed, indicated dissatisfaction and insubordination among them, and awakened no small degree of apprehension in the minds of foreigners residing there, especially the English, some of whom were sending away their families to Buenos Ayres and other places for safety. The opinion was gaining ground that the inside party could hold out but a short time, and that capitulation must soon take place.

The town of Maldonado was closely besieged by the forces of Oribe, and the inhabitants were reduced to great straits. Many are said to have died of starvation. Both parties are accused of having committed atrocities too barbarous for description.

Admiral Brown, so long in command of the Argentine navy had embarked for his native country, Scotland, whose shores he was anxious to revisit after an absence of nearly fifty years.

Two piratical boats fitted out at Montevideo have been lately committing a number of depredations on coasting craft, putting, in one instance at least, the crew to death.

A part of the crew of an English vessel, the Avon, have been massacred on the coast of Patagonia. The remnant of those on board had arrived at Montevideo—the captain was among the killed. The vessel was robbed of every thing.

Among the passengers in the R. S., are the Rev. W. H. Norris, missionary, and family.

Roguery.—A young man, a stranger in this city, in search of employment, yesterday went on board of the Alton, steamer, and asked a person whom he met, and who was no less than one of the "cases" known to our Police, for work. The "case" passed himself off for Captain of the boat, and immediately engaged the countrymen at $20 per month. He then asked the new hand to lend him $2 to buy some oil with, as he had no change about him. He then told the countryman to come back in an hour, at least. The latter did, so sure enough, but his "Captain," was nowhere to be found, and a new officer was in command of the boat. Complaint was made at the Mayor's Office and the Police arrested the offender for procuring money under false pretences. The Mayor committed him to prison.—Pittsburgh Journal.

Arrested for Murder.—Henry Apple is the name of the man arrested on the 17th instant on suspicion of having murdered Lemuel Swaym, an old man, near Ogle's mill, Illinois, nine miles from St. Louis. He had in his possession, belonging to the murdered man, three guns.

An exciting scene occurred in the Criminal Court at at St. Louis on the 9th instant. A lady witness was suddenly struck with the supposed identity of a juror, and a long lost father. She sprang forward and clasped the astonished gentleman, but soon found, to her mortification, that she had made a sad mistake. The gentleman assured her that he could not claim the honor of being her parent.

From the Baltimore Sun.

THE O'CONNELL ORATION.

The New York Tribune, of Thursday, contains, in full, the oration of Ex-Governor Seward, delivered the day previous at the great funeral demonstration in honor of Ireland's renowned and departed liberator. It is a masterly and eloquent tribute, and is said to have occupied two hours in the delivery, and to have been listened to with breathless attention by not less than fifteen thousand persons. Its great length precludes our giving anything more than a mere sketch of its prominet points, and a closing extract or two. The New York Sun says:

The oration, which was delivered by Ex-Governor Seward in a most forcible and eloquent manner, was a great and feeling eulogy to O'Connell's character and service to freedom and to man. Mr. Seward said, "There is sad news from Genoa. An aged and weary pilgrim, who can travel no farther, passes beneath the gates of one of her ancient palaces, saying with pious resignation as he enters its silent chamber: 'Well! it is God's will that I shall never see Rome, I am disappointed, but I am ready to die. It's all right!'" The liberator of Ireland has sunk to rest in the cradle of Columbus. Coincidence beautiful and sublime! It was the very day set apart by the eldest daughter of the church for prayer and sacrifice throughout the world for the children of the sacred island; the chimes rung out by pity for his countrymen, O'Connell's funeral knell; his soul went forth on clouds of incense that ran from altars of Christian charity: and the mournful anthems which recited the fall, and the virtues, and the endurance of Ireland, were his becoming requiem. The lament of Ireland comes forth from palaces deserted, and from shrines restored; from Boyne's dark water, witness of her desolation, and from Tara's lofty hill ever echoing her renown. But louder and deeper yet that wailing comes from the lonely huts on mountain and moor, where the people of the greenest island of all the seas are expiring in the midst of insufficient though world-wide charities. Well, indeed, may they deplore O'Connell, for for they were his children, and he bore them.

"A love so vehement, so strong, so pure,
That neither age could change, nor art could cure."

Next to the chief mourner, space is opened to America. O'Connell was a champion of universal freedom. When one of the chieftains of freedom falls, be his tongue or his lineage what it may, whether he die on the mossy plains of Poland, among the classic islands of Greece, under the bright skies of Italy, among the vine clad hills of France, or in the green valleys of Ireland; be he Kosciusko, or Bozzaris, or Lafayette, or O'Connell, "America hastens to bear witness that he was her soldier, citizen, and representative." Mr. Seward said "the people of Ireland, during 700 years, have maintained a conflict for our common race, of resistance against force; freedom against power, right against usurpation." Through more than twenty years of that conflict, Daniel O'Connell was the impersonation of that people.

"A Nation in a man comprised."

In this consists the secret of the interest he excited while living, and of all his fame now that he lives no more. He alluded to Ireland when long ago an independent nation, governed by a King and Council, and was divided into inferior Kingdoms and subordinate Sects: to the time when Henry II cast in his mind to conquer it, and when the Irish were denounced as "Aliens" "Enemies" and "Wild Irish." He spoke of the religion of Ireland and of the rebellion of '98—British troops fired on the militia of Massachusetts, in Lexington, on the 19th day of April, 1775, and Daniel O'Connell was born at Carhen, in Ireland, on the 6th of August, in the same year. The American Revolution exhibited a triumphant resistance to the unconstitutional legislation of the imperial Parliament. Ireland sympathised profoundly with and yielded at once to the mercy of the great American idea of Universal Emancipation. There was only one Washington in America, and there could be only one O'Connell in Ireland. He was a lineal descendant of opposed generations, and a living and majestic work of perpetual persecution for conscience sake; every physical and moral element of his constitution confessed the Celtic stock. He was a King none the less, though "the stone of destiny" had been removed from Tara's Hall, to Westminster Abbey—a King without royal descent—a King without a crown, a court or guards—a King by consent of clergy and laity—a very King of 7,000,000, standing erect before the Imperial Throne.

After paying an impressive tribute to the clergy of Ireland, for adhering to their charge spite of all inflictions, and to the heroism of the Irish people in repressing all dangerous outbursts of passion, he comes to the time when O'Connell first went up to London as Ireland's representative, demanding her constitutional place in the councils of the British king; and from that king religious liberty.

The British ministry advise the king that Catholic Emancipation can no longer be resisted. All that remains is to grant it by law, not to concede it by seeming treaty—to emancipate Catholic Ireland before her representative can reach the Capitol, and to save wounded pride by denying O'Connell the seat to which he has been elected and by disfranchising the refractory peasantry of Ireland.

And this is done. But the wound given to British pride must rankle nevertheless; for faithful Clare, though its peasantry are disfranchised, returns the Liberator by acclamation.

O'Connell, as a Senator, followed up the act of Emancipation by successful measures to modify the tithes of the established church in Ireland, to open the close corporation of the realm, and to establish a system of equat and universal education in his native country, while he lent to the English Reformers efficient & indispensable aid in the Repeal of the Corn Laws, which established a more beneficent system of revenue, and in that reform of Parliament which is gradually bringing forward a new and better Constitution for the United Kingdom.

The beneficent labors did not for a moment divert him from the great object which remained—the restoration of the independence of Ireland by a Repeal of the Act of Union.

The picture of the repeal agitation is then presented in all its grandeur. The trial, conviction, and imprisonment of O'Connell follow, and then this allusion:—

The revolution was just recovering from this brief recoil when a blight fell on the only food that the aristocracy of England had left for the subsistence of the Irish people. Agitation ceased and the jar of political elements was hushed before the fearful presence of famine. Perhaps this latter desolation was necessary to convince the government and the people of Great Britain of the solemn and mighty import of O'Connell's words.

"The cause of all the afflictions of Ireland is that we have not been allowed to govern our own country."

Perhaps his death was necessary to conciliate her oppressors. Certainly such a visitation, and such a death, were a fitting end for the woes of the Irish people.

The following is the close of this just and masterly production:—

O'Connell left his mighty enterprise unfinished! So did the Founder of the Hebrew State; so did Cato; so did Hampden; so did Emmett and Fitzgerald. Will their epitaphs be less sublime by reason of the long delay which intervenes before they can be written? The heoric man conceives great enterprises and labors to complete them. "Success he hopes, and fate he cannot fear." It is God that sets the limits to human life & the bounds to human achievement.

But has not O'Connell done more than enough for fame? On the lofty brow of Monticello under a green old oak is a block of granite, and underneath are the ashes of Jefferson. Read the epitaph—it is the Sage's claim to Immortality.

"Author of the Declaration of Independence and of the Statute of Religious Liberty."

Stop now and write an epitaph for Daniel O'Connell:

"He gave Liberty of Conscience to Europe & renewed the Revolution of the Kingdoms towards Universal Freedom, which had begun in America and had been arrested by the anarchy of France."

Let the statesman of the age read that epitaph and be humble. Let the Kings and Aristocracies of the earth read it and tremble.

Who has ever accomplished so much for human freedom, with means so feeble? Who but he has ever given liberty to a people, by the mere utterance of his voice, without an army, navy or revenues—without a sword, a spear, or even a shield?

But he ever subverted Tyranny, saved the lives of the oppressed, and yet spared the oppressor!

Who but he ever detached from a venerable constitution a column of Aristocracy, dashed it to the earth, and yet left the ancient fabric stronger and more beautiful than before?

Who but he has ever lifted up Seven Millions of People from the debasement of ages to the dignity of Freedom, without exacting an ounce of gold or wasting the blood of one human heart?

Whose voice yet lingers like O'Connell's in the ear of tyrants, making them sink with fear of change, and in the ear of the most degraded slaves on earth, awaking hopes of freedom?

Who before him has brought the schismatics of two centuries together, conciliating them at the altar of Universal Liberty? Who but he ever brought Papal Rome and Protestant America to burn incense together?

It was O'Connell's mission to teach mankind that Liberty was not estranged from Christianity, as was proclaimed by Revolutionary France—that she was not divorced from Law and Public Order—that she was not a demon like Moloch, requiring to be propitiated with the blood of human sacrifice—that Democracy is the daughter of Peace, and, like true religion, worketh by Love.

I see in Catholic Emancipation, and in the Repeal of the Act of Union between Great Britain and Ireland only incidents of an all-pervading phenomenon—a phenomenon of mighty interest, but not portentous of evil. It is the universal dissolution of Monarchical and Aristocratical Governments, and the establishment of pure Democracies in their place.

I know that this change must come, for even the menaced Governments feel and confess it. I know that it will be resisted, for it is not in the nature of power to relax. It is a fearful inquiry, How shall that change be passed? Shall there never be an end to devastation and carnage? Is every step of human progress in the future, as in the past, to be marked by blood? Must the nations of the earth, after groaning for ages under vicious institutions established without their consent, wade through deeper seas to reach that condition of more perfect liberty to which they are so rapidly, so irresistibly impelled? Or shall they be able notwithstanding involuntary ignorance and debasement contracted without their fault, and notwithstanding the blind resistance of despotism, to change their forms of government by slow and measured degrees, without entirely or all at once subverting them, and from time to time to repair their ancient constitutions so as to adapt them peacefully to the progress of the age, the diffusion of knowledge, the cultivation of virtue, and the promotion of happiness?

When that crisis shall come, the colossal fabric of the British Empire will have given away under its always accumulating weight. I see England then, in solitude and in declining greatness as Rome was when her provinces were torn away; as Spain now is since the loss of the Indies. I see Ireland, invigorated by the severe experience of a long though peaceful revolution, extending her arms East and West in fraternal embrace towards new rising States; her resources restored and improved; her people prosperous and happy, and her institutions again shedding the lights of Piety, Art and Freedom over the world. Then I see among the perplexed and disturbed nations the now proud and all-conquering Anglo-Saxons looking up to the regenerated Celtic people for guidance and direction.

Come forward, then, ye nations who are trembling between the dangers of Anarchy and the pressure of Despotism, and hear a voice that addresses the Liberator of Ireland from the caverns of Silence where Prophecy is born:

"To Thee, now saluted Spirit,
Patriarch of a wide-spreading family,
Remotest lands and unborn times shall turn,
Whether they would restore or build. To Thee!
As one who rightly taught how Zeal should burn;
As one who drew from out Faith's holiest urn,
The purest stream of 'Patient Energy.'"

CORRECTION.—The Cincinnati Signal having stated that Senator Crittenden had received a letter from Gen. Taylor, declaring his opposition to the extension of slavery into any territory already free, the Atlas, of the same city, makes the following statement:

"Mr. Crittenden having seen the foregoing article in the Signal, requests us to say, that he never before had seen or heard of the publications mentioned, and that whosoever made or repeated the statement they contain, it is entirely erroneous and unfounded. Gen. Taylor never did declare in a letter to Mr. Crittenden, "that he was opposed to the extension of slavery into territory already free," nor did he, in any form, ever express to him any opinion on the subject; so that Mr. Crittenden knows nothing whatever of Gen T's sentiments in relation to that matter."

The Portland Argus tells the following, to say the least, a large story:

As Rufus Groves was clearing a well for Mr. J. Folsom, in Monmouth, Maine, while stooping down to fill the bucket, he heard a rumbling noise, and looking up perceived a large stone coming down upon him, which he made out to avoid partially, when instantly some four feet above his head, he being still in a stooping position, the stoning of the wall closed in, and completely covered him. This was at three o'clock in the afternoon. The well was about thirty-three feet deep, and the whole of the stone was to be cleared out before he could be reached. People came in from the adjacent places, and the work went on with much zeal. After being about half cleared out, he was heard to halloo, which encouraged the workmen. After incredible exertions he was reached about one o'clock at night, and rescued but little hurt.

Peace Report:

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

PETERSBURG, Sept. 17, 11½ A. M.

From the N. Orleans Delta, Sept. 8, 1847.

We are informed that our contemporaries of the La Patria have later news from Mexico, to the effect that Articles of Peace had been signed by Mr. Trist and the Mexican Commissioners:

[It may throw some litule light upon the above despatch to state, that Mr. Trist went to Mexico with special instructions to make a Peace by asking of Mexico a surrender of the whole line of territory East of the Rio Grande, and the Provinces of Upper California and New Mexico. If Mexico did not consent, any counter proposition was to be submitted to our own Government for reference, but in the meantime there was to be no suspension of hostilities. For all this territory an equivalent in money was offered, and as far as one can guess at the result, this surrender of territory has been the basis of the agreement of peace. It has been said that a subsequent demand was sent to Mexico, claiming Lower California with Upper, or some of the principal ports and harbors on the Pacific, but this is doubtful.]

THE REASON OF A CHILD OR A BULLY.—The Pennsylvanian says:

If no other good results from the war, the demonstration of this single fact, is a sufficient recompense for all the blood and treasure expended in it. We have satisfied the world that while we have just conceptions of the right and honor of our government, we are at any time prepared to maintain them. We have taught other nations that boast of their standing armies, that here, in this free republic, the whole nation is the standing army, ready and willing to die, if need be, to sustain our glorious flag.

So then it needed this demonstration to show the world what we were, and that, after two wars with England, and peace obtained upon the most honorable terms. The first time we heard this idea broached was in a speech from Lewis Cass, in the Senate. He wished to show Europe how spunky we were, and what a terrible whipping we could give the world in arms! All this was then, and is now deemed ample compensation for bloodshed. A little glory,—a childish bauble, a bubble broken by a breath, is deemed glory enough to compensate for the horrid misfortunes of war. An ill-bred child loves sometimes to seem the thing he is not, and children of the larger growth to assume a virtue where they have it not. The bully, too, glories in his feats of pugilism, but for a sane man, or a sane press, to borrow glory abroad for a Nation like this from the fuits of war, shows a mean appreciation of the true glory of the Nation, and no respect whatever for the truly good opinion of the world. —Pittsburgh Gazette.

The Killed in the Army.

The Washington Union of Friday night contains nearly two columns and a half of the killed and wounded of the battles of the 18th and 19th of August. The names of 1017 of our brave officers and soldiers, killed and wounded on the bloody fields of Mexico, are given. And these, we fear, do not include all that fell.

The First Division, commanded by General Worth, suffered most severely—the aggregate being 336. The Second, commanded by General Twiggs, comes next. Then the Third, under Gen. Pillow and Gen. Pearce, and the Fourth, under Gen. Quitman. A large number of dragoons were also killed.

General Cadwalader supported the attack of Colonel Reilly, and was in turn supported by General Shields in the battle of 19th.

Among the wounded in the late battles before the capitol, we notice the name of Lieut. Farrelly, of this city. He belonged to the 5th Infantry, but was attached to Smith's Light Battallion. He is quoted in the official despatches, as having been severely wounded.

As a pleasing incident in the life of Mr. Wright we copy the following from one of his last letters. Here is true philosophy and a good example.

"I am trying to become, upon a small scale, a farmer in fact, and have, during this season labored very steadily. Each day tires me a good deal but I eat and sleep well and enjoy a freedom from care and a contentment which is already becoming very dear to me. As is usual with me in whatever I undertake, my business is already controlling me too much, and I now find it very difficult to command a day for leisure or recreation.

"My farm is new and therefore uncomfortable to work, though requiring a great deal of labor to bring it to a condition to be either pleasant for labor, or productive, but I begin very slowly and patiently, determined not to make my efforts extensive, as I do not expect they will be profitable in a pecuniary way. The employment I like, and it keeps me out of mischief, and from being discontented and home-sick at home.

"I have not had an unhappy hour from the personal consequences of my late defeat, while it has given me a happiness in my retirement which I have not known through many long years of my respectable public service."

Effect of Railroads.

The Editor of the Eaton (Preble county) Register has just returned to his post from a visit to Indiana, in the course of which he spent some time on a portion of the line of the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad. Ten years ago, he resided at the point where he now tarried. Farmer's produce would not then pay for being carried to market, transportation eating up the entire price obtained for it. Now it pays a large profit, and production is greatly stimulated. Then the farmers were wofully poor—now they are generally in comfortable circumstances, and some of them getting rich. What has affected this change? Mainly the construction of this Railroad. Preble county wants a similar road to Cincinnati—the matter is being moved in—and the farmers of that region will do well to listen to the arguments in its favor which the editor of the Register fortified himself with by his visit to the Madison and Indianapolis road.—Cin. Gazette.

REMOVED.—We learn by the round-about way, of the Pittsburgh Gazette, that an out break of violence occurred at Cambridge on the 14th inst. directed against the office of the "Clarion of Freedom," a crazy abolition paper published there. An arrangement was finally made for the removal of press, type, editor, &c. to a place 8½ miles west of Cambridge, where they are now located.

We are sorry to hear that violence of any kind has been used in this matter. It is true that it was merely confined to the throwing of missiles &c., against a building, but this was none the less violence. Granted that the paper was fanatically incendiary, defying God and man, decency and the law, in its outrageous and indiscriminate assaults upon public and private character. But the law affords a remedy for these things, without forcing good citizens to a step that at least looks like mob-violence and affords so fruitful a pretext for the continuance of the nuisance. —Zanesville Courier.

Mr. Hugh Frazier, of Cynthiana, a man of wealth and respectability, committed suicide on Saturday last, by hanging himself.—Maysville Herald.

NOTICES.

BR. CLANCY, you are hereby informed, that at a called meeting on Coshocton circuit, they decided to receive Br. William Ross, as their Superintendent, the present conference year. Your concurrence is respectfully solicited: J. H. HAMILTON.

BR. BASSETT: Please give Br. Clancy, (the President,) and the friends concerned notice, that it will be impossible for me to go to my circuit this year.

T. B. CUSHMAN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT—Buchanon Circuit.—I wish to inform our worthy President, Br. Brown, that we expect to commence a Camp-meeting, three miles west of Buchanon town, on the land of Nathan Reger, on Friday, the 8th day of October; to embrace his visit to this Circuit. And we also invite all our ministerial brethren, without naming them, that can come, to come to our aid. Come, brethren, come over and help us.

R. H. WALKER, Sup't.

Indiana Conference.—Inasmuch as the next Session of the Indiana and Wabash Conferences was appointed to commence at the same time, and being not far distant from each other, it is thought advisable that Indiana Conference change the time of its Session. I believe there is no provision in our Discipline in reference to this matter; and where there is no law there is no transgression. After having consulted about three-fourths of the members of Conference, and the District Committee, I am requested to publish to all, whom it may concern, that our next Session of the Indiana Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, will commence the twenty-ninth of September next, at Johnson's meeting-house, 7 miles West of Shelbyville, Shelby county. We earnestly solicit aid from sister Conferences. T. SHIPP.

INDIANA DISTRICT,—FRANKFORD CIRCUIT.—The Indisposition of Br. Bailey, (Superintendant,) and the absence of Br. J. Shipp, warrant the postponement of the Fourth Quarterly Meeting of Frankford Circuit, until the 9th and 10th of October, to be held in the town of Frankford. Brethren will please call and spend the Sabbath with our Frankford friends,—as the meeting will embrace the Sabbath previous to the sitting of our Conference.

T. S. FALKINBURGE.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Fairmont	Circuit,	October	3rd,	"
Buchanon	"	"	10th,	"
Braxton	"	"	17th,	"
Lewis	"	"	24th,	"
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

As our brethren have declined my proposition for Camp Meeting in September and October, on the River and Southern parts of the District, and as the preachers will be somewhat late in making these distant appointments, I have therefore changed my plan, as the above will show. We have had a most pleasant Conference—may we not hope for glorious success this year in our labors? Come, brethren, now for a new start. God send prosperity. I want early information from the Superintendants, when my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:—

Wellsville	circuit,	2d Sunday	October.
Leesburg	"	3d "	"
Granger	"	4th "	"
Wayne	"	5th "	"
Frederick	"	1st "	November
Licking	"	2d "	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d "	"
Coshocton	"	4th "	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st "	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts. I think it proper to say, that I will meet my appointment on the Granger circuit, at the Society near Br. Swan's:—Would the 4th Saturday and Sunday of October be too early for the 1st Quarterly Meeting?

For reasons of a very satisfactory character, (upon his application to me the morning after the rise of Conference) Br. C. Caddy was released from the Bellview circuit. No supply, as yet, for said ct. GEO. CLANCY.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE, N. Y.

BR. BASSETT: Please insert the following plan of appointments:

Cayuga	Circuit,	October	9–10
Wayne	"	"	16–17
Lysander	"	"	23–24
Truxton	"	"	30–31
Syracuse	"	November	6–7
Cherry Valley	"	"	13–14
Columbia	"	"	20–21
Schuyler	"	"	27–28
Oswego	"	December	4–5
Mexico	"	"	11–12
Orleans	"	"	18–19
Wilna & Antwerp	"	"	25–26
Manilus	"	1st Saturday in January,	1848.
Savannah	"	2d " "	"
Moringo	"	3d " "	"
Central	"	4th " "	"
Rome	"	5th " "	"

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, meets (met) at Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, August 15, 1847.

The Illinois Conference met at Bethel, Morgan county, Illinois, August 24, 1847.

The Muskingum Conference at Youngstown, Mahoning county Ohio, September 1, 1847.

The Iowa Conference, at Van Buren county, Iowa, September 8, 1847.

The Ohio Conference, at Cincinnati, Ohio, September 15, 1847.

The Indiana Conference, at Johnson's Meeting House, seven miles West of Shelbyville, c. h., Indiana, September 29 1847.

The Michigan Conference, in Leoni, Jackson county, Michigan, on the 5th, (1st Tuesday,) of October, 1847.

The North Illinois Conference, in Lafayette, Starke county, Illinois, October 6, 1847.

The Wabash Conference, in Frankfort, Clinton county, Indiana, October 13, 1847.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Editor, 2—Cincinnati,	O.	G. B. McElroy,	Pa.
C. J. Sears,	"	W. Reeves,	"
F. Swift,	"	Pub. com., Pitts. Conf.	"
Geo. Clancy,	"	R. Sears,	N. Y.
A. Stevenson,	"	W. W. Sterricker,	"
T. Hanna,	"	G. Williams,	Ia.
James Tharp,	Va.	Wm. M. Baker,	"

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whem they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—In South Grove, Walworth co., Wisconsit, on Sunday, August 22d, by REV. JOHN TIBBALLS, REV. WILLIAM M. OSBORNE, of the Rock River Annual Conference, (M. E. C.) to Miss MARY JANE SEELY of South Grove, Wisconsin.

——On Tuesday, 7th inst., by REV THOMAS BARKDULL, REV. WILLIAM W. WINTER, of the North O. Conference, (M. E. C.) to Miss PHILINDA HOWARD, of Wood county, Ohio.

——On the 16th instant, at New Castle, Delaware, by REV. WILLIS LORD, REV. DANIEL LORD, of New York, to Miss SOPHIA E. POTTS, formerly of Philad.

——On the 17th of August, by REV. D. KEMPER, REV. THOMAS D. CROW, of the Ohio Conference, (M. E. C.) to Miss HANNAHRETTA DOWNS, of Urbana, Ohio.

——On the 19th of August, by REV. C. COLEMAN, REV. ALEXANDER HARMOUNT, of the North Ohio Conference, (M. E. C.) to Miss ELIZABETH MUSSELMAN, of Salem, Shelby county, Ohio.

The Markets.

LATEST DATES.

[CORRECTED WEEKLY.]

PUTNAM & ZANESVILLE.—Flour $4,25—Wheat, 75c.—Corn, 95c.,—Oats, 18c.—Zanesville Courier.

CINCINNATI.—Flour $4,38@$4,40,—Wheat 70@75c.—Oats, 25,—Corn 30@31. Beef Cattle $4,00@$4,50 ₩ cwt.—Cincinnati Commercial

PITTSBURGH.—Flour $4,87@$4,90,—Wheat 85@90c,—Corn 40,—Oats 25c.—Commercial Journal. No change.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour $5,50@$5,62½—Wheat $1,15—Corn, 68@70c.—Oats, 42@43c.

BALTIMORE.—Flour $5,25@5,37—Wheat, $1,04@1,11 Corn 68@70c,—Oats, 40.—Balt. Sun.

NEW YORK.—Flour $5,75@5,87; Wheat $1,00@1.05: Corn 65@66c.; Oats 45@47c.; Rye 74@75c.

Advertisements.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October, with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

Pupils will likewise have the benefit of Professor Munson's instruction in vocal music, without incurring any additional expense.

The advantages thus furnished by the Seminary for young ladies to acquire a truly liberal education, are superior to those of most institutions in the country, and it is to be presumed that many will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - 28 Weeks.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - 16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - $12 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - $16 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - $6 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - $4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.

Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

LATEST ARRIVAL OF NEW GOODS.

WILLIAM P. LARGE,

Has the pleasure of calling the attention of the public to a large and splendid assortment of Foreign Domestic Fall and Winter Goods, purchased at the lowest cash prices, which he is now receiving and opening,—consisting, in part, of the following articles of Dress Goods, &c., Plaid, Striped, Fancy, and Shaded Cashmeres.

Fancy Mouslin de Laines, Caledonia Plaids, Plain plaid and striped Alpacas, Silk Warp and Real do. A large stock of French, Scotch, Changeable, Earlston, Manchester and Domestic Ginghams. A large and well selected supply of FANCY PRINTS from 6 cents up. Plaid Cloakings.

SHAWLS OF VARIOUS DESCRIPTIONS.

An extensive assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Flannels, Linseys, &c., &c. Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, Queensware, Hats, Caps, Groceries, Dye-Stuffs, Paints, Hardware, and so many other desirable goods; that it is too tedious to enumerate; which are in the market, cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! Notwithstanding some of my neighbors admit their former brags of CHEAP mean just nothing at all, I am not willing to be so understood, but will sell VERY LOW for cash, or good trade.

I want it especially understood, that I am not to be undersold by any person. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods.

Putnam, September 30, 1847.

CO-PARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

[NEAL'S SATURDAY GAZETTE.]

CHARLES J. PETERSON having purchased an interest in this paper, the business will hereafter be conducted by the subscribers, under the firm of Cummings & Peterson:—The editorial department will be controlled by C. J. Peterson and Mrs. J. C. Neal.

Mr. Peterson has been one of the editors of this paper, with but a single interval, from the first week of its publication. Mrs. J. C. Neal is favorably known to the public in general as Alice G. Lee, and has, for some months, been an assistant editor of this paper.

It is the intention of the subscribers to make the Gazette as pre-eminent as a family, as it has always been as a literary newspaper.

ALEXANDER CUMMINGS,
CHARLES J. PETERSON,
MRS. JOS. C. NEAL.

Liberal Offer for Prize Stories.

The proprietors of "Neal's Gazette," desirous to encourage native writers, offer the following liberal prizes.

$150 00 for the best Revolutionary Story.
100 00 for the best Sea Story.
75 00 for the best Tale of Real Life.
50 00 for the second best Tale.
25 00 for the third best Tale.

The articles to be sent, free of charge, to the publication office, addressed to Jos. C. Neal & Co., No. 46, S. Third street, Philadelphia; before the 1st of January, 1848.

A committee of literary gentlemen will read and pronounce judgment on the articles. The decision to be made known on the 8th of January, 1848.

The name of the writer, in every instance, to be enclosed in a sealed note, which is not to be opened until after the award.

The prizes to be paid the day after the award.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞ TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS. ☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,
No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

☞NEW GOODS.☜

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,

Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

Sept. 15, 1847. [4t

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN, BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St. Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritual Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

JAMES K. LOGAN,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN & DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

No. 83 Wood St., (One door from Diamond Alley,) Pittsburgh, Pa.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.,

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

A few copies will probably be taken to the Pittsburgh, Muskingum and Ohio Conference.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,
Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

150 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums, from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30.

III.—80 VOLUMES,

With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50.

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools. With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 25 cents a year. The 20

POET'S CORNER.

AUTUMN.

The flowers begin to fade, and soon
The leaves will sear and fall—
For paler grows the summer moon
That glitters through the hall

And darker clouds are floating past
The golden-tinted sky,
And colder sweeps the fitful blast;
Like sullen spirits, by

How brief and fragile is their lot;
Those bright and gentle things,
Which yester were, to-day are not,
Like sullen dreams with rapid wings.

It scarcely seems an hour hath flown,
Since Spring was here in bloom;
Yet half of Summer's glory strown,
Lies mouldering for the tomb.

But flowers and leaves revive again
When spring anew appears;
And only Man, 'mid grief and pain,
Has no renewing years.

Each Spring and Summer with their light,
Each Autumn, dark and chill;
Each Winter with its robe of white,
But makes him frailer still.

God grant there is a gentle Spring,
A golded Summer-time,
Where we shall have an angel's wing
And live in childhood's prime.

Biographical.

From Scott's Philadelphia Weekly Paper.

JOHN ADAMS.

John Adams was a native of Quincy, Masschusetts, & born on the 19th of October, (O.S.) 1835. In childhood the career of John Adams was marked with a rapid development of strong intellectual powers, which were skillfully cultivated by Mr. Marsh, a celebrated and successful teacher, at Braintree. At the age of sixteen years he entered Harvard College, at Cambridge, where he became a finished scholar and graduated at the age of twenty. He gained a high reputation for frankness, honesty and untiring industry, and was greatly beloved and esteemed by the professors and his classmates.

From college he proceeded to Worcester, commenced the study of law under Mr Putnam, and finished with Mr. Gridley, supporting himself in the meantime by teaching a grammar class. At that early age he possessed wisdom to perceive right, and moral courage to pursue it. In view of the past and present, he made a grasp at the future.

After pursuing his studies three years, Mr. Adams was admitted to the practice of the bar. He then commenced his professional career at Braintree, and in 1761 rose to the rank of barrister and attained eminence in his profession. In 1864, he married the accomplished Miss Abigail, daughter of Rev. W. Smith, who participated with him in the changing scenes of life for fifty-four years.

When the stamp act was passed, the fire of indignation against lawless oppression rose in the bosom of Mr. Adams to a luminous flame, & he at once became a public man, and entered into a defence of chartered rights and rational freedom. He published an "Essay on the Canon and Feudal Law," which established his reputation as an able and vigorous writer.

In 1766 Mr. Adams removed to Boston, and at the end of two years had become so conspicious and displayed so much talent that the governor endeavored to purchase him by offering him the office of advocate-general in the court of admiralty. But he found his mistake when Mr. Adams refused to accept it, and continued to act a conspicious part in the proceedings of popular assemblies of the citizens. He was soon after elected to the legislative body then called the "General Court," where he continued to oppose all arbitrary measures and exerted his powerful influence to rouse the people as well as the members of that body to a like spirit of opposition, till he was appointed to Congress in 1774.

At the appointed time he was in his seat in Congress, and his manly conduct manifested that with all his ardent zeal he was discreet, prudent and politic, in his opposition to or advocacy of any measure.

In May, 1775, Mr. Adams again took his seat in Congress, & as the members of that Congress had come to the conclusion that "after all we must fight." It became necessary to appoint a commander of the military forces to be raised. To fix upon the best man was of vital importance. The southern members were willing to submit to any nomination made by the eastern delegates—most of whom fixed upon Gen. Artemas Ward, except John Adams. In George Washington he had discovered the commingling qualities of a philanthropist, a philosopher, a statesman and a hero. He at once endeavored to influence his colleagues to sanction his choice, and although nearly all of them were opposed to it, stood firm in his purpose, and met every objection with conclusive arguments. At last Samuel Adams became convinced that his junior colleage was right. These discussions were all private—not a word was uttered on the floor of Congress as to who should be the man. Satisfied that his measure would be supported by a majority, John Adams rose in Congress and proposed that a commander of the American armies should be appointed. When this resolution was passed, he proceeded to portray the requisite qualities necessary to fit a man for this important station, and emphatically remarked 'such a man is within these walls.' But few knew who he was about to nominate, and could not imagine who among their number was possessed of all those noble attainments. A transient pause ensued, and a breathless anxiety produced a painful suspense. The next moment the name of COLONEL GEORGE WASHINGTON, of Virginia, was announced, at which he was more astonished than any other member of the house. He had not received an intimation of the intended honor from any person. The vote was taken and was unanimous in his favor.

In 1776 he took his seat a third time in Congress, and offered a resolution proposing that the colonies should organize governments independent of the mother country, which was adopted in a modified form, a few days after. Mr. Adams took a prominent part in the discussion on the declaration of independence, and when the 4th of July dawned upon the patriots, he came forward with his vote and signature boldly and fearlessly. On his return from Congress at the close of the session, he was chosen a member of the council of Massachusetts under the new constitution, and aided to organize a free government on a basis purely republican. In 1777 he resumed his seat in Congress, and was constantly engaged in arduous committee business. In December he was appointed a commissioner to France, and embarked in February following on board the frigate Boston, and remained in France a little more than a year.

In 1779 he again embarked as "minister plenipotentiary for negotiating a treaty of peace and a treaty of commerce with Great Britain, and remained there several successive years, during which time he was continually engaged in diplomatic business and advancing the interests of the United States with other European nations.

In 1788 he obtained permission to return home, and in autumn was elected the first vice-president under the federal constitution. He was re-elected in 1792, and in 1796 he was elected President of the Republic, to establish which he had periled life, fortune and honor. He proceeded to the conscientious and independent discharge of his presidential duties, prompted by the best motives for the glory of his country, and at the end of his term retired to private life.

Soon after his retirement he was offered the gubernatorial chair of his native State, but declined the honor—continuing to take a deep interest in the welfare of his country and writing essays and letters in favor of liberal principles. In 1815 Mr. Adams had the gratification of seeing his son at the head of the diplomatic commission to conclude a second treaty with Great Britain, which carried his mind back to the times when he had executed a similar mission. In 1817 he was placed at the head of the list of presidential electors, and three years after was elected president of the convention that revised the constitution he had written forty years previous. He duly appreciated the compliment, but his infirmities did not permit him to preside, although he aided greatly in its revision.

This was the last public act of this great man's life—the curtain of the political drama then closed upon him for ever. Two years previous the partner of his bosom had gone to her rest, and his now frail bark glided down the stream of time until the 4th of July, 1826, when an unexpected debility seized him and he was unable to leave his bed, but no one supposed him sinking on the last inch of his time. He was aked for a sentiment, to be given at the celebration that day —"INDEPENDENCE FOR EVER," burst from his dying lips, and he expired without a groan or sigh.

Ladies' Department.

Brains and no Brains.

A lady writes thus:

"Since my last communication, I was detained in the family of a sick friend. While there I fell in company with a female whose intemperate use of snuff exceeded anything I had previously seen. Doubtless there are parallel cases, but, for humanity's sake, I hope they are few. Can you guess, Mr. Editor, how long she has been a slave to this artificial appetite, and the enormous quantities consumed meanwhile? From her own confession, upwards of twelve pounds a year for more than thirty years. And this, too, at the expense of sixty-two and a half cents per pound.—I opposed the evil, and urged her by all means to take the Golden Rule."

Let us calculate—twelve pounds a year for thirty years, at sixty-two and a half cents per pound, amounts to two hundred and twenty-five dollars. This amount in Testaments, at six cts. each, would make the round sum of 3,750!—Quite a pretty lot of Testaments snuffed up by one lady. Suppose every would-be lady should snuff the same amount? Snuff on, madam, snuff on; your entrance into the everlasting kingdom will be abundant. Snuff on, you are not the only one whose olfactory is well nigh burnt out, and whose brains are more than half "old Scotch," and Rappee.—Golden Rule.

From the Golden Rule.

Rules for Governing Children.

"Sweet is the time of Spring,
When Nature's charms appear;
The birds with ceaseless pleasure sing,
And hail the opening year.

But sweeter far the spring
Of wisdom and of grace;
When children bless and praise their King,
Who loves the youthful race."

Never idolize your children. God gave you these precious spirits, not to worship, but to train for his glory. How frequently it is said, "The child is not, for God took it." Yes, in great mercy, He snatched the idol—tore it from the cruel mother's too fond embrace. Does God spare, it thus idolized? It is a curse, a bitter curse! "Our God is a jealous God."

Parent, pray, if you ever pray, that God will deliver you from false tenderness. This is the letting out of waters which deluge the world!—Whence originate pride, vain glory, self-will, every evil work? from false tenderness, self-indulgence.

Pray, if you ever pray, that God in mercy will open your eyes to behold the faults of your children, and give you wisdom and firmness to correct them. Some parents are blind as bats.—They are eagle-eyed, to be sure, in beholding the faults of their neighbor's children, while their own house is worse than a bedlam!*

Be familiar with your little ones, but never lose your authority or self-respect. Some children are all honey one moment, gall and vinegar the next! Stop this folly, stop it. Stop it now.

Never suffer your children to interfere or trespass upon any domestic duty or regulation. We have known the family altar crushed, and every holy, solemn duty abandoned, by the satanic recklessness of children, wholly devoid of order or parental fear! What is such a family but a little hell? Be sure your little ones bow the knee, early, around the family altar, with perfect order and stillness. Put down your foot; put it down, keep it down. Let every thing be hush! sweet as heaven. Who can compose his thoughts or pray in a bedlam? Satan has no right to trespass on this solemn, sacred hour: drive him out, keep him out; shut the door, bar it.

Whatever you do or say, see ye to it that the family altar is kept burning continually. Let incense arise morning and evening, pure as the breath of heaven; and let order prevail, order, perfect order.

Does the Sabbath draw on? Point to God, point upward; put away your toys of pastime, and impress deeply and early the minds of your little ones, that this day is God's, God's in a very special manner. Why is this first day stamped with practical infidelity, by many who in the main believe in heaven's mandate? Parent, ask yourself this question. Clear as the sun's beaming rays. You are the guilty one. On your head the thunderbolt falls.†

Never tempt the appetites of small children; never ask them whether they will have this dish or that, this article of food or that article. Be thou judge; stand thou in God's place. Some parents satiate the appetites of their little ones, even to surfeiting! Suicidal! Gluttony, disease and premature death, often result.

Provide your children with suitable implements for amusement: their little minds & hands should and will be occupied. But never give them books or periodicals. We have seen books and papers—sometimes borrowed ones—of great value, defaced, if not wholly destroyed, by reckless children! Wicked, shamefully so. Is a book or pamphlet worthy a place in your library—it should be a sacred treasure; if not—burn it up, make a bonfire. Many Christian parents, and booksellers too, should make a bonfire forthwith.

Never allow your children to be mischievous in any thing; some children are worse than monkies, a great deal; their fingers are in every pie, in every dish. Officious, impudently obtrusive. Parents, are these children yours? keep them at home, lock them up, or teach them better manners.

Parents, are you ashamed of your children, perfectly ashamed of their misconduct, especially when visited by a friend? don't put them in the garret, or lock them them up in the kitchen or stable. Are they ungovernable? have you failed hitherto in your restrictions—you can't conceal it; "murder will out." Repent of this thy wickedness; repent. Begin now to establish order, on the spot, come life or come death; yes, now: break the ice.

Dispatch is an item of gold. Dispatch, write it upon your door-posts in golden capitals. Teach these precious immortals of yours, dispatch, to do what you tell them to do, now, this very moment, in a twinkling, with their might." Why do very many drag out life; loiter, lounge, drivel, snivel? Mr. Sexton, where are you—up, about your business, dig these men graves, quick.

* An infant's care engross the whole time and affections of the mother? no time or heart for Mercy's calls? Must it be? Has God so ordained? Mothers take care. Still stretch forth your hand in the world's salvation.—God requires it. You can find time, much, only train your little ones to order:

† We know more than one fond mother, keen as a razor, to notice the least deviation of parental discipline in those around her, while her own children are perfectly reckless! Lord, open our eyes.

‡ Many parents complain that their children misbehave in church—do they behave at home? Guess not:

Dr. Franklin's wife.

Franklin, in his sketch of his life and habits, relates the following anecdote of his frugal wife. A woman could scarcely make a prettier apology for purchaseing the first piece of luxury.

"It was lucky for me that I had a wife as much disposed to industry and frugality as myself. She assisted me cheerfully in my business, folding and stitching pamphlets, and tending shop, purchasing old linen rags for making paper, &c. We kept no idle servants; our table was plain and simple; our furniture was of the plainest sort. For instance, my breakfast for a long time, was bread and milk (no tea,) and I ate it out of a two penny porringe with a spoon, but mark how luxury will enter families, and make a progress in spite of principle. Being called one morning to breakfast, I found it in a china bowl, with spoon of silver. They had been bought for me without my knowledge, by my wife, and had cost the enormous sum of three and twenty shillings, for which she said she thought her husband deserved a silver spoon and a china bowl, as well as any of her neighbors. This was the first appearance of plate or china in our house, which afterwards, in the course of a few years, as our wealth increased, augmented gradually to several hundred pounds in value.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

LINES.

For Everet S. Smith, on the Death of his little Brother, Arling A., who died June, 17, 1846, aged two years.

BY E. M. S.

Oh, mother! I was thinking then
Of little Arlington;
I love to think of him; but Oh!
'Tis sad to think he's gone.

I think of all our pretty plays,
And how he used to talk,
When, with his little hand in mine,
We took a run or walk.

Oh! then I often used to think
How happy I should be,
When Arlington was old enough
To go to school with me.

Oh! how he loved to cull a rose
For our dear sick papa,
In hopes to win a smile and kiss
From him and dear mamma.

I think how he began to droop,
And then how sick he lay,
And how I kiss'd his sweet pale face,
And wept to hear you say—

That when the morning sun arose
I'd have no little brother,
For God would take his spirit home;
And so it was, dear mother.

How cold his cheek, how white his brow,
How still the little hand;
You called him once our bird of song,
But now our smitten lamb.

I miss his fairy footsteps now,
I miss his merry smile,
I miss him when I come from school,
I miss him all the while.

Mamma, I love to go with you
To little brother's tomb;
He sleeps so sweet and quiet there,
'Tis not a place of gloom.

And there the sunbeams brightly glow,
The bird sweet music pours,
And we will plant some roses there,
And strew the spot with flowers.

You tell me he will rise again,
More beautiful than ever;
I've read it, too, how all the dead
Will rise and live forever.

You say his little spirit lives
In a better world than this;
And I have read how Jesus said,
Of such my kingdom is.

William Herbert.

"O dear, Martha," said William Herbert, in a tone of despondency, to his older sister' "I don't believe I shall ever be good."

"Why, my dear," said his sister, raising her eyes from the print she was examining, "what has happened to discourage your attempt to-day?"

"Nothing more to-day than any other day; but somehow it seems as if I don't know how to be good; I can do my chores, and get my lessons, and mind what you tell me pretty well, but," as he continued, he came close to his sister's side, and spoke in a more subdued tone of voice, "I don't love to think about God, Martha. I can't be good, as you and father, and Aunt Hannah are, and as dear mother was good. There is a strange feeling, when I think of the words which she said to me when she was dying. I don't want to forget them, but somtimes they make me feel afraid."

Martha put her arm around her brother's waist, and kissed the cheek, which was glowing with the excitement of unwonted feeling. She felt a christian sister's strong sympathy for the motherless boy, who, it was evident, had just begun to seek for that light, which is darkness by corruption within, and by bad influence without. With a silent prayer for the Divine Spirit's aid, she said—

"I know not what you mean, William. There are times when all around must look dark and cheerless to those who do not love God. And even a loving mother's dying counsel, when it has been neglected, is recalled with a mysterious dread. But, my dear, there is one who is both ready and willing to remove all your gloomy fears. If you will only be persuaded to give your heart to him, you will find a peace and joy in believing, of which you cannot now conceive. You say you can't be good—you don't know how, and that is very true. It is true of every person in the world. No one can change his own heart. But God has promised to do this great work for all who will wait upon him. If you will only sincerely and perseveringly seek his favor, pray for the influences of his Spirit, regard its teachings, and trust in the Saviour, you will be a child of God, and then you will wonder how it could be that you did not love him before."

William listened with much attention to his sister's words, and when she had stopped speaking, he said with an appearance of much feeling:

"I sometimes wonder I don't love God now. He has done so much for me, I will try and seek him, I am resolved."

And this resolution was kept, and William soon happily realized the truth of the promise, "I love them that love me, and they that seek me early shall find me."

Avoid bad Company.

Little S——— had never been known by his mother to tell a lie, or take what did not belong to him. One afternoon in summer, as the school did not keep, his mother left him at home to play in the yard, and locking the door of the house, went away for an hour or two to make some calls. While little S——— was playing by himself, a larger boy came to see him, and they played together awhile very pleasantly. At length the playmate of S——— offered to make him a kite if he would get him some paste. But this, little S——— said he could not do, as his mother was gone.

"What difference does that make?" said the boy.

"Why," said little S———, "how can I get it if mother does not give it to me?

"Don't you know where the flour barrel is?"

"O yes, but I am afraid she will not like it?"

"Nonsense; she won't care just for a little flour."

"But what if she should?"

"Why she will never know it. You can go in and get the flour and then come right out again?"

"But what if she asks me if I have been in the house, what shall I say?"

"Tell her you played in the yard all the time she was gone."

Now little S——— was soon over-persuaded by this bad boy, and he started off for the flour. But here was another difficulty; the door was locked. The mischievous boy, however, who had set him on at first, soon remedied the difficulty, by opening a window and boosting him in. Trembling, the little fellow went to the barrel; with his cup scooped up the flour, and hurried away without looking behind him;—in his haste scattering some of it upon the floor. They then went busily to work upon the kite. Before he went away, this bad playmate of little S——— told him over again what he should say, if his mother asked him any thing about the paste. It was all false: but little S——— had not yet learned how wicked it was to tell that which is untrue. Mrs. S——— came home, and was surprised to find the floor all sprinkled over with flour, and could hardly believe her little boy had been so wicked as to have taken anything, when she was away, without liberty. She called him in. He came, looking ashamed and guilty, as little boys always do when they have done wrong.

"Has my little boy," said she, "been into the house since I have been away?"

"No," answered he sulkily, and hung his head O how was his poor mother's heart grieved to hear this. Her little boy had not only taken the flour without leave, but now denied it."

"Where did you get your paste then?" said his mother.

Little S——— told the foolish and wicked story the bad boy had taught him.

"Come here, my little boy," said Mrs. S——— and she led him to the pantry, and showed him the flour that he had spilled on the floor. Now I know you have been here," said she. "How could you tell me that you had not?"

"Henry (the larger boy's name) told me to, said little S———; and he now related to his mother the whole scene, weeping more to see his mother look so much grieved, than because he understood the wickedness of his act.

His good mother then sat down and told of the dreadful sins he had committed against God, first in disobeying his mother, then in taking what did not belong to him, and finally in telling a lie about it. After this, the little boy being now very penitent, she kneeled and prayed with him that God would forgive him, and help him to do so no more.

Learn from this account of S———, children, to avoid bad companions; and expect if you do wrong, your sin will find you out; and remember that one fault or sin almost always makes another necessary; a little thief will generally be a little liar.

PECKING.—Children, dear, don't peck each other. The woodpeckers peck: but they peck the bark of trees, not each other. Did you ever see a woodpecker, peck? tap, tap, tap? Quite funny. God made it so. But some children peck each other, husbands and wives, too, sometimes peck. God never made them to do this. We have seen them peck so hard, the skin would fairly blister. Awful! If parents peck,* the children will be sure to peck, and then there is a constant pecking; tap, tap, tap, all over the house.

* Children do what parents do. Do parents peck?—children peck. Do parents smoke? children smoke.—Do parents 'dip?' children 'dip.' So on.

"Birds in their little nests agree;
And 'tis a shameful sight,
When children of one family
Fall out and chide and fight."

Agricultural.

The Young Farmer's Song.

I have no sparkling gems, love,
To bind around thy brow—
I cannot bid my heart to thine,
In a golden channel flow:
And didst thou ask for these, love,
How bitter were my part,
For the only wealth my pride can boast,
Is a true and loving heart.

A true and loving heart, love,
I know't is little worth,
For men forget that hearts, in heaven,
Are as jewels on the earth.
But still 't is all I have, love,
And thou dost ask no more,
For having this, what'er say men,
Thou knowest I am not poor.

Thou knowest I am not poor, love,
My hands disdain not toil—
I fight the daily fight of man,
With the stern, rebellious soil:
And as I sow I reap, love,
My just and equal part:
And though I have not gold or gems,
I've a true and loving heart.

TO PROTECT GRAIN FROM RATS.—An individual of much practical experience, states that green elder deposited in and about the mows of hay and grain, will prove an effectual preventive against the depredations of mice and rats. These animals are frequently very destructive in their ravages; and if a remedy so simple and easy of attainment is efficacious, it deserves to be known and remembered by all. We have long known that the leaves of the common mullen will drive rats from their haunts. There is something in the odor of this plant that is disgusting to their ratships, as was the leek to the ancient Pistol; they cannot abide it.'

IMPORTANCE OF DEEP LILLAGE.—However skilfully and philosophically we may carry on our saving and application of manures; however well we may select our seed, and choose our seed-time; without deep tillage we can by no means receive the maximum result. Drained land, deeply stirred, and thoroughly pulverized, becomes a kind of regulator of the weather for itself it is not soon soaked in wet, and it forms a stone house of moisture in dry weather. It is a bad conductor of heat, and is therefore not easily over-heated; but on the other hand it is not soon cooled, and so keeps up an equal temperature by night and by day, in cloud and in sunshine, in the highest degree favorable to the healthy developement of plans.—Farmer's Herald.

Miscellaneous.

From Bentley's Miscellany.

The Glorious Uncertainty of the Law.

In a certain town in Normandy, the authorities ('for divers good reasons then thereunto moving') thought proper to issue a proclamation to the effect that none of the worthy inhabitants, under a severe penalty, should stir abroad after sunset without a lantern. Well, it chanced that in the very same evening a man was siezed and taken incontinently before the dispenser of justice, to be dealt with according to the new law.

"I am exceedingly sorry," said the chief officer, recognizing the individual, "that a citizen of your respectability and station should be the first to infringe the new regulation."

"I would not willingly do so," said the man coolly.

"Have you not read it?"

"Certainly," replied the captured party, "but may have unfortunately misunderstood it. Will Monsieur oblige me by reading it, that I may learn of what I am guilty?"

The officer graciously complied, and after glibbingly running over the verbose preamble, came to the point "that no inhabitant should stir abroad after sunset without a lantern," which he certainly delivered with peculiar emphasis, to the admiration of the fellow who had taken the man into custody, and was twirling his fingers, impatient to receive his moiety of the fine. "I have a lantern, Monsieur," firmly contended the man holding it up to view.

"Yes, but there is no candle in it," replied the officer with a smile.

"The proclamation does not mention a candle, I believe, Monsieur," replied the cunning fellow, most respectfully.

"A candle!—but of course"—began the informer, trembling lest he should lose the fish he had hooked.

"It does not mention a candle; and I contend, Monsieur, that I have not infringed the law," persisted the quibbler. "The words are—without a lantern—and here it is."

"Hem!" cried the officer, endeavoring to conceal the confusion occasioned by this defeat by poring over the copy of the proclamation. "I must confess there is an omission, and I am happy to give you the benefit of it. The case is dismissed."

The informer was not only defeated, but rather alarmed, when the prisoner called to mind a certain act which rendered him, the aforesaid informer, liable to heavy damages for the false imprisonment, &c., and the poor fellow was fain to avert the infliction of an action of law by disbursing a certain sum in hard cash to the accused.

But lo! on the next evening he again encountered his "dear acquaintance," and to his infinite delight, he beheld the same unilluminated lantern in his hand; for an amended proclamation had been issued that morning, with the words "that no inhabitant should stir abroad without a lantern and candle therein."

The informer chuckled at the ignorance of the man who had so coolly victimized him on the preceding night, and with a heart beating with the desire of revenge, and a certain prospect of the restitution of the mulct which he had suffered, he with a sneering politeness, requested the honor of his company to the justice-room.

"Really, it is impossible to resist the amiable importunities of a man who pays such delicate compliments and such good coin!" replied the man; and away he walked, chattering good-humoredly and joking with his delightful captor.

"What again?" cried the officer.

"I hope Monsieur will do me the honor to remember that my former appearance here was not only against my inclination, but against the law," said the prisoner. "Really these proceedings are very vexatious and——"

"Have yout read the proclamation?" interrupted the officer.

"Monsieur did me the favor to read it only last night, and——"

"I will read it again for your edification," replied the officer; & he looked furtively at the informer who could scarcely contain himself for very joy.

The amended proclamation was read. The accused stood placidly smiling at the rigmarole verbiage; but when the officer read the concluding words, "that no inhabitant should stir abroad without a lantern and candle," he started.

"Ha!" cried the informer, unable longer to restrain his feelings.

"How very, very fortunate!" cried the delinquent, and quickly opening his lantern, continued, "Lo! here is a candle! How fortunate!"

"But it is not lighted!" exclaimed the informer with an uncontrollable agitation. It is not lighted, nor has it been, as the wick itself proves!

"Lantern and candle! a lantern and a candle repeated the man. I appeal to the justice of Monsieur, that there is no such word as lighted candle in any part of that respected document!"

This was a clencher! The parties were completely outwitted; while to abate the fever of the informer's extraordinary excitement, the man charitably repeated the "bleeding" which he had so effectually performed on the former occasion. Of course the lawyers lost no time in "amending" the "amended" proclamations, and inserted lighted before the word "candle."

From the Sabbath Recorder.

What is he going to make?

When one of our young men is inclined to devote to study more time than is generally allowed by this money-making, money-loving age, the question is asked whether he is to make a lawyer, a doctor, or a preacher; as though of necessity he must pursue one of these three professions, if he sought the advantages of school. We all acknowledge the importance of education to the professional man. But do not farmers and mechanics fill a responsible place in our social compact? They have learned by experience, that they too are subject to the shameful intrigues of designing men. To meet these, they need a perception as keen as the tempered steel—a mind that can cut its way through the battlements of error up to the throne of truth. We do not expect that all will charm the multitude by their eloquence, or be versed in all the technicalities of our present lawyers, yet they are to make our governors, and our legislators are subject to their will. Yes, these very youth are to entwine around our social and political interests the silken chords of love and justice, or rivet the galling chains of tyranny upon future generations. How indispensable to our prosperity as a denomination, and our welfare as citizens, that every mind should have a moral and intellectual training. We trust the time hastens, when the question will be seriously asked, what he will make if he neglects to give his youthful days to study and improvement —when fathers and guardians will feel that they are serving God and their country, by making sacrifices to prepare the young for the responsible duties of life. MECHANIC.

DEFERRED ITEMS.

From the Pittsburgh Despatch, of Monday.

Horrible Murder.

A WOMAN MURDERED AND AFTERWARDS BURNED TO ASHES BY HER STEP DAUGHTER!—An aged lady, named Mary Morrison, wife of Samuel Morrison, residing in Mifflin Township, in Allegheny county, about three miles from McKeesport, was murdered on Friday last, and afterwards burned to ashes by her step-daughter. The facts, as far as we have been able to learn, are these:

On Friday morning Mr. Morrison started to the city with produce for the market, leaving his wife and daughter at home. The daughter is a woman about thirty-five years of age, rather a simple creature, and considered by the neighboors as insane. Mrs. Morrison has from her childhood been subject to spasmodic spells. On the afternoon in question, she was taken with one of these spells, and being on the floor under the influence of the fit, her step-daughter, Mary Morrison, beat her on the head with a fire shovel, until, it is supposed, she killed her, and then threw her into the fire and kept piling on the fuel until she burned her almost to ashes, there not being bones enough left of the body to fill a quart measure.

The step-daughter, after consummating the horrible and tragic act of burning the mother, carefully scrubbed the floor to obliterate the traces of blood, and made her escape to the woods.

Mr. Whitaker, a brother of Mrs. Morrison, visited the house on Saturday morning, and found it deserted, but there being a very disagreeable stench, he suspected that all was not right, and immediately commenced a search of the premises. On examing the fire-place, from whence the smell proceeded, he discovered a number of small bones, and the jam spotted over with blood. Several of the neighbors were called in, and started in pursuit of the step-daughter, who was arrested a few miles from the scene of the tragedy; she alleged as her reasons for doing so, that "her father, step-mother and herself could not agree, and she thought the best thing she could do was to burn her up." She also confessed the manner in which she consummated the act.

Coroner Richardson was sent for to hold an inquest on the remains, and the jury, after hearing the testimony of a number of witnesses, returned for a verdict, that the "deceased came to her death from violence at the hands of her step-daughter, Sarah Morrison," and authorised the coroner to take the murderess into custody. He brought her to this city, and lodged her in jail on Sunday morning.

Mrs. Morrison, the deceased, was a sister of Dr. Whitaker, of Allegheny city, and is said to have been a woman of mild and gentle disposition, when not under the influence of the spasmodic spells to which she was subject. Her untimely and tragical death is regretted and mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends.

LATER FROM AFRICA.—Attack by Natives.—Town and Factories Burned by the English.

The N. York Commercial has a file of the Africa's Luminary extending from the 14th of April to the 9th of June.

The latest advices received at Monrovia from the United States were brought by the frigate United States, which arrived from Port Praya.

We find in the Africa's Luminary, of June 9th the following account of a disturbance originating with the native tribes, and ending in loss of life and the interference of H. B. M. vessel of war, the Rollo. The account is furnished by a correspondent, and is dated "Monrovia, June 10." The fray occurred at Timbo:

On the 2d inst., "Prince," chief of the Timbo tribe, came down to the beach, accompanied by a number of young men armed as his body guard, for the purpose of making prisoner of a man of the tribe of Fishmen, for some litle offences he had committed. His tribe refused to deliver him up, and in the scuffle that ensued they came to blows, and from blows to firing at each other.—one was instantly killed on each side and two or three wounded.

The Fishmen were compelled to retreat to the barricaded English factories, which had as factors persons of their own tribe.

Captain Murray, owner of one of the factories, at the same time was at anchor off Timbo, and having a quantity of Kroomen on board his vessel, sent them on shore to protect his factory.—At the dawn of day on the 3d, the Timboes renewed the attack, and a general fight commenced. The Timboes wounded seven of Capt. M's Kroomen and several of the Fishmen. There were killed in the fight four Fishmen and two Timboes.

After the Fishmen had left the place, the Timboes returned to the factories and plundered them of everything that could be carried off. While the Timboes were thus engaged, a number of—manna people, with some Timbo bushmen, came up and turned upon two factories belonging to J. B. McGill, merchant, Monrovia, and carried off a large quantity of goods.

The "Eliza Frances," a colonial craft, owned by McGill, arrived there a few hours after the affray. The factors, considering their lives in danger, embarked with what goods they had remaining. The "Eliza," on her way from Timbo to Grand Colah, met an English man of war, the "Rollo," on her way to Timbo, the commander being informed of the affair by dispatch from Capt. Murray. The commander of the "Rollo," landed his men, with the warrior of Trade Town, "Boyed," and a number of his men, and burnt all the towns along the beach, including the English factories and the factories of Mr. McGill.

Very favorable accounts are given of the different schools. A school among the emigrants from Virginia numbers thirty-seven scholars, and is improving.

Thursday, the 8th of July, was appointed as a day of thanksgiving, by proclamation of Governor Roberts.

Rev. Mr. Benham announces his return to this country by the Liberia Packet, on the first opportunity. Ill health is assigned as the reason.

A DEATH SCENE.—The Cincinnati Gazette says—"On Friday night there was a fight and riot at a drinking house kept by a German named Hahn, at the corner of John and Elizabeth streets. On Saturday night, the disturbance was renewed, and resulted in the death of an Irishman, named Cafferty, from blows on the head with a poker, and another man was severely injured. Cafferty's wife, living near, hearing the disturbance, ran in, and in her efforts to save her husband, was also hurt by a blow with the same weapon. Hahn, with seven others, have been arrested, and committed to prison for further examination."

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. I. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, OCTOBER 7, 1847. WHOLE NO. 417.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. B. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

REVERDY H. WHITE, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents, can have the paper at one dollar.

POETRY.

From the Erie Observer.

IS THERE A GOD!

BY ARCHETYPAL.

Is there a God?—
Look to yon firmament above,
Where world on world peers out,
And ask the planets there that move—
Or ask thine heart whence springs the doubt;
Ask, and thine inmost soul will say,
These are His works—and His alone—
All in that blue fair heaven we see,
Bear proof of Him, the eternal One.

Is there a God?—
Look to the mighty depth below
Where oceans 'mid dark caverns sweep;
Whence springs the mystic ebb and flow—
What power commands the restless deep?
"'Tis nature." Yes, but nature too,
Proclaims to all—proclaims aloud—
Holds forth in every shade we view,
The power of a ruling God.

Is there a God?—
Look to the green and fertile earth—
Look to each herb—each plant we see;
And ask thyself what gave them birth,
The smallest blade—the loftiest tree?—
Thine heart must tell thee, if sincere—
Thine age bear witness of the proof—
That thou can'st feel and see e'en there,
The will—the power of Him above.

Is there a God?—
O, doubt it not—where'er we gaze,
Where'er we roam—where'er we be,
There are in each and every place,
Myriads of proof, Lord God, of thee!
The eagle soaring in high air,
The insects on the low grass-sod—
The great, the small, in every sphere—
All nature's works proclaim a God.

Is there a God?—
Man, ask that which within thee dwells,
And wakes thy soul to hope or fear;
That which thine every action feels,
And whispers to thine heart and ear:
Or look around, beneath, above;
Look where thou wilt, thou 'lt ever see,
In all, in each, full proof enough,
Of Him who reigns eternally.

Religious.

Written for the Western Recorder.

FRAGMENTS.

No. I.

Who has not been in the furnace of affliction? Who has not experienced the deceitfulness of life and the pleasures of the world? Man is born to trouble, as the sparks fly upward. The venerable Patriarch, Jacob, said unto Pharoah, "few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage." Yet how we cling to our sorrowful existence, delighted with the things that cause our tears to flow, and rend our bosom with many a bitter pang. The pleasures of the world are like the morning cloud and early dew; and its riches and honors fade, wither, and die—all as transitory as the beautiful flowers that adorn the surface of the earth.

No. II.

"Lean not on earth, 'twill pierce thee to the heart;
'Tis but a reed at best, and oft a spear—
On its sharp point peace bleeds and hope expires."

The works of creation, as they unfold themselves in all their variegated loveliness and splendor, I cannot but love. I love the mighty and majestic ocean, the onward flowing rivers, and the sweet murmuring of pleasant streams; the rich drapery of the forests, the green fields, the incense of flowers, and the music of the birds: the mighty orbs that shine in the blue expanse of heaven, illuminating the canopy with beams of holy light, worlds upon worlds, rolling their onward march to the grand music of time! These I love fervently. There is a voice here, that, if listened to and obeyed, will teach man to be holier and happier, and will lead him higher than their created beauty, even to the foot-stool of the Eternal.

No. III.

Man at his best estate is vanity. What has he to boast of? What his beauty? a bubble. How soon it fades. It may vie with the rose for a time, and almost as soon it withers. The finely expanded features soon wrinkle, and become furrowed with age. We are as the grass also, which flourishes in the morning of a summer's day, presenting its verdure, which is beautiful to the eye, and displaying its blossoms, which are grateful to the smell, but which is cut down before the evening and withereth.

"Earthly things are but the transient pageants of an hour,
And earthly pride is like the passing flower
That springs to fall, and blossoms but to die."

No. IV.

Many are the afflictions of the righteous. Bitter the cup which the children of God have to put to their lips. Dark the clouds that lower above their pathway, and gloomy the wilderness through which they travel to Mount Zion, the city of God. Yet, O Christian! the cup is not all bitter, the clouds all darkness, nor the wilderness all gloom. A Saviour's kind love sweetens the bitterness of the cup, fringes the clouds with rays of mercy, and throws a beam of heavenly light across the dark gloom of the wilderness waste. How sweet to have a resting place when the soul is weary—to find a secure haven when the tempest is gathering. When afflictions surround our path, or the head reclines wearied on its languid pillow, when all the beautiful scenes of earth recede from the vision, and the tendrils of holy affection, woven in the deep recesses of the heart, begin to break by the iron hand of death;—sweet is it to realise that the poor tempest-tossed soul can find a resting place in the bosom of her God.

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Saviour hide,
Till the storm of life is past,
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last."

No. V.

We are all hastening to that bourne whence no traveller returns. We all do fade as a leaf, and our days pass away as a tale that is told.—What is our life? it is even a vapor which appeareth but a little time and then vanisheth away. The trials and afflictions of life are wearing us down to the tomb. Life is flying rapidly away, its privileges, its enjoyments, its trials, will soon be interrupted by death. But the Christian, thro' the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, is prepared for every emergency. The nearer he arrives at heaven, the more pleased he is. He stands with his loins girt and his lamp burning, "waiting for God to draw aside the veil of flesh, and admit him into his glory." For him to live is Christ, but to die is gain. When contemplating the subject of death, he may shrink from entering its dark and gloomy portal, "nature appalled may shake off her wonted firmness," yet still he knows that death, however terrific in appearance, is the harbinger of eternal rest and glory; and in the triumphant language of the Psalmist, exclaim—"though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil!" Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord.

"The good man's hope is laid far, far beyond
The sway of tempests, or the furious sweep
Of mortal desolation. * * * Ee'n in death,
In that dread hour, when with a giant pang,
Tearing the tender fibres of the heart
The immortal spirit struggles to be free,
Then, even then, that hope forsakes him not,
For it exists beyond the narrow verge
Of the cold sepulchre."

ANON.

Solitudinarian Cabin, Sept. 1847.

Ministerial.

From the Methodist Protestant

An Incident, With a Moral.

A minister of the Gospel, in one of our Northern cities, some years ago, became deeply impressed with a desire for increased usefulness. He thought much upon the most probable means for the accomplishment of this object. The ordinary opportunities of access to his people, by pulpit ministration and customary pastoral visitings, did not satisfy his soul. He longed to lead his flock directly to Christ; to witness a greater degree of spirituality among them. At length, he resolved to visit every family; and, as far as practicable, to ascertain the spiritual condition of each of its members, by personal conversation upon religious experience. At an appointed time, he entered upon his labors of love. He called on one and another of the families of his people—had every household gathered,—and with much affectionate concern spoke to them of the necessity of living each day for God and for eternity. His own soul was comforted, and he felt that his labors were not in vain in the Lord.

A day or two after he had commenced this heavenly employment, he called at the house of one of his most pious and influential members—a man of wealth. The father was absent at his place of business, but the mother, an amiable and pious woman, was at home. On making known to the latter his desire that she should summon her family to the parlor, and acquainting her with his design to speak personally to them—to admonish—exhort—or encourage as they might need, the mother thanked him with tears of gratitude; but said,

"I have one request to make of you, sir."

"What is that?" said the minister.

"It is that you will say nothing to my eldest daughter, Mary, on the subject of religion. I have prayed for that child for years. I have talked to her again and again. But her heart is set upon vanity. Fashion and the world are predominant in her affections. She has become, of late exceedingly sensitive to reproof or admonition. Respectful in every other relation, she will not permit me to speak to her on religious subjects, without returning a violence of language entirely unbecoming a daughter. I have determined therefore to refrain from any direct appeal to her, until she shall give evidence of greater docility. You will please therefore say nothing to Mary, whatever you may say to the others. I should be sorry to have your feelings injured as well as my own, by the manner in which I am but too confident she would respond. May God bless your admonition to the rest."

In a few moments the family were gathered in the presence of the minister. Mary sat among them. She had entered, with a respectful courtesy, and taken her position at a window looking upon the street, apparently more interested in what was going on without, than attentive to the conversation within. The minister spoke first to the mother, of her responsibilities and duties; then to a son, a youth of intellect and promise: then to a younger daugher and so on until he had administered his kind and fatherly instructions to all. I mean all except Mary. To her, he said nothing. He seemed to be unconscious of her presence. As the tears of tenderness flowed freely from all who participated in the delightful interview, Mary sat at the window playing idly with the tasselling at the silken curtains, her proud spirit refusing the first intimations of sympathetic feeling. The brightness of her eye was undimmed by any gathering tear—the loftiness of her carriage was not for a moment relaxed by the affecting scene before her; and when the Minister said "let us pray!" she arose not from her seat to bow with the rest, but remained still in her position, of scornful unconcern, her delicate fingers toying with the silken fringes of the drapery before her. The minister poured out his soul in a fervent address to the throne of grace. Oh, how earnestly committed he that family to the guardianship of heaven!—referring to them in his supplication individually, and appropriately presenting them to the mercy of the Father thro' the merit of the Son. But he offered no prayer for Mary. Unconcernedly and proudly, she still played with the silken toys. The prayer ceased—the good man arose. Taking each by the hand, he affectionately gave a parting admonition and invocation; and bowing coldly to Mary, who as coldly returned his civility, he left the room and made his way to the entrance of the dwelling.

He had scarcely passed the threshold, when the words of the Redeemer "I am not come to call the righteous but sinners to repentance," flashed upon his mind. Suddenly pausing, he said to himself, 'shall I refuse exertion for any soul, to which my Master came down from Heaven? Nay—God being my helper I will return.!"

Again he stood in the parlor. The family sat just as he had left them, musing upon the things he had spoken. Mary was to all appearance still cold and unmoved.

With a courage imparted by the Holy spirit, he walked to where she sat, and taking her hand in his, said, "It is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Shall he save you?"

The rock was smitten! The waters gushed forth freely, and fully! Mary, proud and scornful as she seemed to be, needed only the word of invitation, to bow and weep and pray. Then was heard the bitter cry "God be merciful to me, a sinner!" Angels hovered over that little assembly, and ere the descending Sun gave place to the gathering twilight, the shout of conversion ascended to the throne and there was joy in heaven over the sinner that had repented.

It has been years since the above was related to us, and we do not know that it has ever been in print before. Its moral—which is two-fold—is borne upon its very face. Mothers may learn from it never to despair; and ministers may learn from it never to falter!

Missionary Intelligence.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

LETTER FROM MR. DWIGHT, JUNE 7TH, 1847.

Additions to the Church—Persecution.

For some time past there has been no very striking incident to record respecting the work of God in this metropolis. I think we may say that there has been a constant progress of truth and righteousness; although it has been slow, and at times not immediately perceived. We have, however, two very clear and satisfactory proofs that God's Spirit is still working here upon the minds of men. One is that conversions are actually taking place from time to time, and names are added to the church "of such (we trust) as shall be saved."

Yesterday was the regular season of communion, and seventeen new members were admitted, five of them being males, and twelve females. This is a larger number than were ever before admitted at any one time, and we bless the Lord for it. Four of the females and three of the males are members of our seminaries, and fruits of the revival reported to you some months ago. The whole number of church members in this city is now about eighty, and there are others to be examined for admission at the next communion season.

The services yesterday were peculiarly solemn and affecting; and many of the church members were melted to tears at the sight of so many coming out from the world, and joining themselves to the people of God. May the Lord enable them all to hold on their way!

The second proof of progress to which I referred, is the constant activity of the Patriarch and his agents in opposing the reformation. In the nature of things such activity could not be thus perpetuated witout some constantly working stimulus; and that stimulus is furnished by the conquest of the truth over new minds in the Patriarch's ranks.

I wrote you a long time ago, about the imprisonment and trial of the owner of the Protestant house in Constantinople, where the Sunday morning preaching service is held. The same individual has been since repeatedly addressed by some of the rich bankers of the Patriarch's party, with the most liberal promises of pecuniary recompense, and the most earnest entreaties, to induce him to return to his Church. Finding all their efforts vain, they got up another lawsuit; more than three hundred men signing a paper charging this brother and eight others whith kidnapping and returning by force thirty of their children, and with being, in other respects, disturbers of the peace! These nine individuals have been twice tried on these charges before the great police court of this city, and nothing could be proved against them.

Besides this case, there are almost numberless others of petty persecution occurring continually. A man of evangelical sentiments who, at the first opening of the vials of the Patriarch's wrath in January, 1846, subscribed the idolatrous confessions of faith through fear, after spending months of mental agony in consequence of thus sinning against the light God had given him, comes out and, fearless of all consequences, takes his stand with the people of God! He is a silk merchant by trade, and owns the shop in which he transacts his business and procures a livelihood for his family. But in consequence of his forsaking the ranks of the Patriarch, the latter finds means to close his shop and throw him into the greatest distress, and this under a show of legality, though in reality the whole preceeding is most iniquitous and cruel.

Another man of precisely the same class, after openly avowing his determination to live and die in the evangelical faith, is taken before the Turkish courts by his Armenian neighbors, who fear to disobey the injunctions of their spiritual rulers; and the most vigorous effort is made to eject him from his own house into the street! Both of these men are sober, honest, industrious and quiet citizens; and they are called to suffer these abuses merely because they choose "to follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth." Another is prosecuted on a false claim of debt, and by false witnesses is made to pay heavy damages. Another loses his customers because the shopkeepers around him are of the Patriarch's party; and they warn every man whom they see approaching that he is an accursed heretic, and therefore, it is a sin to transact business with him. Another is stoned in the street, spit upon, and other wise insulted. And still another's house is attacked by a mob, and the life and limbs of his wife and children are put in jeopardy. These are all real cases, and it is impossible for me to enumerate half of those of a similar kind which are continually occurring, throwing our brethren into the greatest distress.

Nor can I possibly put on paper the excellent spirit many of them manifest under these sore trials encouraging our best hopes for them, that by the grace God they will be enabled to endure even unto the end. It would be no matter of surprise, however, if some out of the whole number should prove to have no root in themselves, and should fall away and perish, under such a succession of tribulations and persecutions.

My particular object, in dwelling upon this subject, is to lead our more favored brethren and sisters at home to sympathize more deeply with those who are thus suffering for the cause of Christ. I could, if necessary, give a catalogue of names of men and women who are at this moment in circumstances of real suffering from poverty, some of them on beds of sickness; and their distress is chiefly occasioned by what may be called petty persecutions, which, through the untiring perseverance of their enemies, become almost intolerable, and especially, since the method of infliction, now generally adopted, is such as to render the case intangible by the civil authorities. The Lord, however, knows how to sustain his people under trial, and how, also, to bring the greatest good to his cause out of the most deep and wicked designs and doings of his enemies; of which we all have been many times eye witnesses.

It is matter of devout thankfulness that hitherto no effort of the Patriarch has availed to close the place of worship opened in the city proper by our evangelical brethren. On every Sabbath the pure gospel is preached there by the pastor to from seventy or eighty hearers of both sexes, no one offering any molestation? We bless the Lord for this liberty; and we do fully believe that the everlasting truth of God, which has thus gained a foothold in this city of multiform errors, will never again be rooted out.

LETTER FROM MR. EVERETT, JUNE 7TH, 1847.

Presence of the Spirit—Persecution.

I have often intended to give you my impressions of the great and glorious reformation going on among the Armenians of this city and vicinity. But I will only say now, in a word, that the past year has been a most delightful year to me. I have continually felt myself carried back to apostolic times, and seen the power of the glorious gospel as it was then seen. I have witnessed its blessed influence in leading men to choose Christ and his service in the face of bitter persecution. I have several times seen the triumphant consolations of the gospel exhibited on the bed of sickness and death. I have enjoyed sweet Christian communion with our native brethren, in the public meeting and in the private circle. And I have been led many times to say in the language of the Apostle, "If there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the spirit, if any bowels of mercies," I see and experience them here among these afflicted and persecuted members of Christ's body. And I can also say that if the fruits of the Spirit are any evidence that any persons have the spirit of Christ; if a holy life is any evidence that a man has the truth within him; and if facts and experience in exact accordance with the revelations of our blessed Savior, are any proofs that his power is seen and felt, then the work that is going on among the Armenians of this land, is of God, and cannot be overthrown.

But we must ever be aware that the conflict has but just commenced. The powers of darkness and gross superstition are but just beginning to be aroused. The enemy are almost daily devising some new plans of persecution. The government is now making recruits for the navy & army; and opposers are ready to seize this opportunity to vex the Protestants by pointing them out as bad men, and thus causing them to be seized and pressed into the service of the government; as the still undefined political position of the Protestants does not forbid this mode of procedure by the enemy. Our brethren at Nicomedia, some weeks ago, were thrown into great fear and trepidation, as you may have heard, in consequence of the forcible seizure by Turkish soldiers of Baron Garabed, a young man of an excellent spirit, the son of one of the oldest members of the church, and one of those who were received into the church when Mr. Hamlin and myself were there. He was sent in the company of two vagabond Armenians to this city, & placed in the arsenal to labor for the government. We have good evidence to believe that this brother was pointed out to the Turks as a bad man by the Armenian Bishop. We learn that the Patriarch has succeeded in liberating one of the men belonging to him, and has also sent to Nicomedia for the names of all the the Protestants. We have some reason to expect that this violent persecutor is meditating another outrage on the members of Christ's flock there; but the Lord will defend and deliver in his time!—Miss. Herald.

TEMPERANCE.

A Warning Dream.—The following narrative of a very singular and extraordinary occurrence which took place many years ago, was forwarded by a gentleman residing in Malta, Saratoga county, New York, to the editors of the Boston Recorder in 1824. The writer vouched for its authenticity, having heard it from pious old gentlemen to whom the Rev. Mr. Tenant related the circumstances. The occurrence was indeed extraordinary, but there are warnings in the drunkard's daily path, not less important because more frequent, which should urge him to fly immediately to the ark of safety and seek refuge from the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is never quenched.

"When Rev. Mr. Tenant was minister in Freehold, in the then province of New Jersey, he had a neighbor, a carpenter by trade, who was a habitual drunkard, and always spent much of his time, particularly evenings and Sabbath days, in company with people of like habits, and never went to church or religious meetings of any kind. This man dreamed one night that he had a fit of sickness and died, and as he always expected, after death he went to hell. Hell was not to him what he had expected to find it, but was a large tavern with a bar-room full of benches, well lighted up, all the benches filled with people, all silent, each with a hat on his head, and each covered with an ample black cloak reaching to his feet. The man went to the landlord and said, "I expected to find hell full of fire and a place of torment as it was represented to me while living, but I find it very agreeable." Upon this, every one of the persons in the room stood up and each one slowly and silently opened wide his cloak, & holding it open, displayed his body, a solid mass of fire.—The man was so struck by this sight that he begged the landlord to allow him to return to the earth again—who after many entreaties consented that he should return, if he would make a solemn promise that he would return there again at the end of the year. This the man promised and awoke.

The dream filled the man's mind with great horror, and in the morning he went to Mr. Tenant and told the story. Mr. Tenant advised him to reform and lead a new life, it seemed a special warning which if he neglected, it would enhance his future punishment, &c. The man did reform, and for six months avoided his old companions; at the expiration of that time, he was returning from work one evening, and was met by several of them near a tavern and they began to ridicule him for becoming religious and dared him to go in and take one drink with them. The man felt very strong in his new resolutions and said he would go in and take one drink to shew it would not hurt him. He took one and another till he was much intoxicated,—from that time he returned to his old habits and grew worse and worse. His family lived in the second story of a house to which there were stairs on the outside of the house, and one night on which he had drank more than usual, he made a shift to get up stairs and go to bed, and slept all night, but in the morning when he went out of the door to go to his work, he was still drunk, and pitched of the stairs to the ground and broke his neck.—The news was carried to Mr. Tenant, who instantly recollecting the man's dream, on looking at a memorandum he had made when the man told him the dream, found it was a year that day since the man told it to him."

THE DRUNKARD'S HOME.

BY JAMES STILLMAN.

The drunkard's home! What words can show
The scenes of misery there?
What mind conceive, what heart can know,
Save those compelled to share?
Th' abode of wretchedness complete,
Whence every comfort's fled.
Where want, disease and ruin meet,
And every hope is dead!

The drunkard's home, more cheerless far
Than ever convict's cell,
With granite wall and iron bar,
For guilty one's to dwell;
O, better far the vaults of death,
For there all sufferings cease,
And care-worn pilgrims yield their breath,
And sleep the sleep of peace.

The drunkard's home! that barren waste!
That desert of the soul,
Without one green oasis graced,
Where streams of comfort roll;
Stricken as by the simoon's blast,
All bliss is prostrate laid,
And Pity, weeping, stands aghast
To see the ruin made.

The drunkard's home! the rock-girt strand
Where honor shipwrecked lies,
The den where Murder dyes his hand—
Where Virtue, poisoned, dies;
Where Vice, spreads round its filthy slime,
Where Falsehood forms her lair,
The haunt of Infamy and Crime,
Of Madness and Despair!

The drunkard's home! ye generous youth,
Yet from intemperance free,
Attend the warning voice of Truth,
And from the poison flee:
Touch not the cup of liquid fire,
Beware of Habit's chain,
Quench the first spark of wild desire,
And spurn the damning bane.

Temperance.

It is said that Bishop Doane, of New Jersey, is strongly opposed to temperance, and his sideboard and tables are loaded with gin, brandy, wine, &c. A short time since, Rev. Perkins, of the order of "Sons," dined with the Bishop, who, pouring out a glass of wine, desired the Rev. gentleman to drink with him, whereupon he replied—

Can't do it, Bishop, 'wine is a mocker.'

Take a glass of brandy, then.

Can't do it, Bishop, 'strong drink is raging.'

By this time the Bishop becoming somewhat restive and excited, remarked to Mr. Perkins.—You'll pass the decanter to the gentleman next to you.

No, Bishop, I can't do that; 'wo unto him that putteth the bottle to his neighbor.'

What was the peculiar mental condition or moral state of the Bishop, at this stage of the proceeding, our informant did not state.—Protestant Monitor.

Another Great Victory!

The last place for the retailing of arden spirits in Tuscumbia, Alabama, a town containing 2,000 inhabitants, has been compelled to suspend operations for want of patronage! There is not a single grog shop in the place!! The Democrat says: "About three months ago 'Protection Division' of the 'Sons of Temperance,' was organized in this place, and has progressed and extended its benign influence over our population until it numbers now about one hundred members, comprising some of our best citizens. So great is the reform it has worked that there are not left among our citizens drinking men enough to sustain even one drinking establishment. This is one of the gratifying results of this honorable philanthropic institution.—Columbian Fountain.

Capt. Tyler not Headed Yet.

A Virginia paper tells a good story of Ex-President Tyler, which shows he is not the man to be headed so easily as some imagine. The judges of the county court last spring appointed him overseer of a very bad road, forcing him to discharge an annoying duty, or subjecting him to the fine prescribed by statute for failure to discharge the public business imposed on him. Instead of neglecting the business, however, he entered upon it with great vigor, and called on the judges and others to turn out and work on the road, as required by law. As the road was very rough, he kept them working on it for two months. They begged to be let off, but refused to discharge them. They then persuaded him to resign; but he declared it to be too difficult to get into office, now, for him to voluntarily abandon authority when conferred upon him; besides, he would be liable to a fine, if he failed to have the road put in good condition. They promised to pay his fine if he would back out; but he preferred to be above any such favor, by doing his duty fully and legally. They were thus headed at their own game, as their short crops have since proved.

It costs the people of the United States annually, twelve millions of dollars, to support their dogs. So says an exchange

Ladies' Department.

From the Syracuse Star.

SEWING GIRLS.

"Sewing girls get good husbands—Sometimes."

[Kate.

So they do, Miss Kate, but they oftener die of broken hearts, or consumption, as it is called.—Let me tell you a story of a pretty little dress maker, that I knew years ago, and who lived in the village where I was born.

She was, when I first saw her, a delicate girl of sixteen. Her eyes and hair were dark as night; her cheeks revealed the rose bud, and her lips were full and red. Indeed she was very beautiful, and many a proud and high-born girl envied the village "dress maker."

The young gentlemen were bold in their expressions of admiration—stared at her when she modestly entered the country church, and were officious in their attentions to her, when none of the aristocracy were near. They were the sons and brothers of her employers, so she quietly listened to their flattery, and received their attentions—but none reached her heart.

At last, (I know not how it came about,) she loved—loved one, too, who was all unworthy.—She had never read of man's treachery in novels; never heard of it in real life; and when Jas. H——— called her his "sweet love," and told her how dear she was to his heart, she believed him, and loved him with all the depth and fondness of a pure young heart.

On Saturday evening, as Mary sat humming a tune, and cheerfully finishing a dress for a lady, her lover entered the room. She smilingly welcomed him, and with a sweet happy voice, she said—

"You will excuse me if I do not put away my work, will you not? for the dress must be finished in an hour."

"Oh, yes," said he, and he drew his chair close to her side, "but dear Mary, do not take any more sewing. I do not love to have you dim your bright eyes with work. Come live with me, and let me take care of you."

His voice grew husky and he hesitated a moment, as if ashamed of his own baseness, then he said—

"You know that I cannot marry you. My father would disown me if I did; but I cannot live without you, sweet one," and he threw his arm about her slender waist.

The poor girl shrunk away, as if from the touch of a deadly serpent. Her cheek blanched, her eyes were wild, and for a few moments she was speechless. Then, with words of scorn, (may they ring in his dying ear,) she bade him leave her forever.

How these few words of his had changed the appearance of the world to that young girl! Before he came in, she was cheerful and happy, the world about her was bright and beautiful—the future full of hope and joy. Only a few moments had passed away—she sat in the same room—the unfinished work still was in her lap—but her heart was now broken and desolate. The world had suddenly grown hateful, and the darkness and gloom of night shrouded her future.

She sat motionless in the chair where he had left her until she was aroused by a knock at the door. She opened it, and a servant enquired if Mrs. L———'s dress was done?

"No!" said Mary, and she was startled at the sound of her own voice. "I have not been well this evening. Can you come again in half an hour?"

The servant turned away, and Mary was again alone. There was no tear in her eyes, and she took up the dress, and mechanically commenced sewing. but in a few moments the same servant returned, and said—

"I told Mrs. L——— how pale and sick you looked, and she says you must not finish the dress to-night—she does not wish to wear it to-morrow. There is a basket of fruit she sent you."

Mary sunk down in the chair; the kindness had touched hear heart, and tears, wholesome tears, burst from her eyes.

Days and weeks passed on. Those who employed Mary noticed that her steps grew languid, and that the song with which she used to beguile her hours of toil, was hushed, but no one know the cause.

Her heart gradually failed. One afternoon, while her head was resting on the bosom of the kind hearted Mrs. L———, word came that Jas. H——— begged earnestly to see her. The name had power, even then, to rouse her from her lethargy, and a slight flush came into her cheek, as she softly whispered—

"Tell him I am dying—that I forgive him, but I cannot, indeed, I cannot see him."

Mary died that night. In the quiet churchyard of C——— she lies buried, and the sighing of the winds, through the low willow near the grave is her only requiem.

A Compliment to the Sex.

During the progress of a protracted meeting held in Johnstown, Ohio, by the Rev. Mr. C———, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it so happened that the most of the persons who came forward to the altar for the prayers of the church, were females; which induced some objectors to say that weak minded persons were generally the first to seek religion, which came to the ear of Mr. C———.

The next evening of the meeting, he took occasion to notice their objections as follows, as near as I can remember:

Well, friends, we have had a very profitable meeting to-night. I wish to notice a little objection I heard of to-day concerning our meeting. Some persons have said that this is not the work of the Lord, because nearly all the seekers are females; they, moreover challenge us to tell why there is so large a portion of the weaker sex engaged. Now sirs, I will not answer you directly, but see here: Two years ago I had occasion to preach to the prisoners in the Ohio penitentiary. Now how did it happen that there was more than four hundred males, and but about half a dozen of the weaker sex?

When you answer this, I will prepare to speak to your question.

Requisites for Going to Law.—To him that goes to law nine things are requisite:—

1. A good deal of Money.
2. A good deal of Patience,
3. A good Cause,
4. A good Attorney,
5. A good Counsel,
6. A good Evidence,
7. A good Jury,
8. A good Judge
and
9. Good Luck.

Conference Proceedings.

APPOINTMENTS OF THE OHIO CONFERENCE,
M. P. CHURCH.
J. M. YOUNG, President.
A. H. BASSETT, Editor "Western Recorder."

Cincinnati st—To be supplied.
Elm Sreet mission—T. Finkbine.
George Street mission—Joel Dalby, jr.
Lebanon st—W. B. Evans.
Cincinnati ct—A. H. Trumbo, J. D. Langdon, sup. ass't.
Xenia ct—J. White.
Washington ct—A. Channell, R. Dobbins, sup. ass't.
Springfield ct—R. Rose.
Twin Creek ct—J. Nutty.
Darby mission—R. K. Davis.
Lebanon mission—O. Warrington.
Richwood ct—J. B. Peat, T. D. Howe.
Miami ct—D. Moore.
Kalida ct—G. W. Thornburg.
Lima ct—J. L. Borton.
Mt. Blanchard ct—T. Graham.
Clarksville ct—W. Tipton.
New Richmond ct—R. M. Dalby.
Port William ct—W. G. Fowler.
Union ct—O. P. Stephens.
Portage ct—W. Chapman.
Bainbridge ct—S. P. Kezerta.
Clarksburg ct—W. Pelan, W. Hughey, sup. ass't.
Bournville ct—C. H. Williams.
Ash Ridge ct—S. H. Evans.
Greenville mission—I. Hunt, J. Flood, sup. ass't.
Maumee mission—C. Carter.
Mad River mission—L. Ensminger.
Conference Missionary—A. McGuire.
G. M. Hunt, J. H. Webster, W. B. Warrington, to be employed.
A. Bessee, without an appointment at his own request.
E. H. Weir, referred.
L. Hadder, expelled.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

Ct's. & St's.	No. of mem.	Unst. min's. and Pr's.
Cincinnati st.,	379	I. Snider, John Laymau, and G. Redding.
Elm st miss.,	81	J. Garrison, and L. Z. List.
Lebanon st.,	172	E. G. Hardesty.
Cincinnati ct.,	141	J. Hill, & I. Edwards.—Batavia class returned to N. Richm'd ct
Beauford ct.,	186	D. Inskeep, & C. Wamsly.—Name changed to Ashridge.
Xenia ct.,	90
Springfield ct.,	172	Edward Newlove.
Kalida ct.,	100
Lima ct.,	160	D. Crall, J. P. Fay.
Twin Creek ct.,	130	R. White, E. Stibbens.
N. Richmond ct.,	231	J. McNeal, J. Phillips, L. Runnels, C. Tatman, J. Lyons.
Port William ct.,	314	J Turner, R Huzza, W Caterel.
Clarksville ct.,	113	J Villers, T E Scott, L Howard.
Union ct.,	285	Jno. Inskeep, Joshua Inskeep, W. Inskeep, D. Gill, J. Smith, J. I. Baker.
Miami ct.,	207	W. Medaris, J. Parks, J. Stephens—All the app'ts. W. of Troy, attached to Greenville miss.—containing 44 members, 1 meeting-house.
Richwood ct.,	200	W. Hamilton, A. Davis.
Bainbridge ct.	335	A. M'Ginnis, A. Jester.
Washington ct.,	250	J. Dalby, sen., B. Ryan, W Lyon, D. Craig, C Little, W Jacks.
Mt. Blanchard ct.,	175	J. Swaney, J. Guest, R. Park.
Portage ct.,	65	P. Laney.
Darby Mission,	64	G. E. Chapman.
Greenville Mission,	56	B. Garretson, J Jervis, A Ross.
Mad River Miss.,	65	V. Thomas.

Bainbridge circuit divided into three parts, the South-western part, containing four appointments, two meeting-houses, and forty-five members—to be called Bainbridge circuit. The Southern part to include six appointments, three meeting-houses and 104 members—to be called Bournville circuit. The North-eastern part including six appointments, three meeting-houses, 184 members—to be called Clarksburg circuit.

NUMBER OF MEETING-HOUSES AND PARSONAGES.

Cincinnati st., 1 meeting-house, 1 parsonage—Elm st. miss., 1 m. h.—Lebanon st., 1 do.—Cincinnati ct., 2 do., 1 parsonage—Beauford ct., 2 m. h.—Xenia ct., 2 do.,—Springfield ct., 4 do.—Lima ct., 3 do.—Twin Creek ct., 2 do., New Richmond ct., 6 do.—Port William ct., 6 do.—Clarksville ct., 3 do.—Union ct., 4 do.—Miami ct., 2 do.—Richwood ct., 5 do.—Bainbridge ct., 7 do.—Washington ct., 6 do.—Mt. Blanchard ct., 1 do.—Portage ct., 1 do., 1 parsonage—Mad River miss., 1 m. h.

The Conference adopted the following rules for the government of all missions in the Ohio District:

WHEREAS, the Discipline authorises each Annual Conference to make such rules and regulations for the government of missions in conformity to the Constitution and Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church, as the Conference shall deem best. (See p. 72.) Therefore,

Resolved, That the following rules and regulations be adopted for the government of missions under the jurisdiction of the Ohio Annual Conference:

1st. When three or more societies, containing in the aggregate not less than thirty members, shall be formed, they shall have power to elect all the officers necessary, as in stations and circuits, to perfect their organization.

2d. When organized, the Stewards, together with the official members, shall have authority to hold a Quarterly Conference in each quarter, and shall have the same power as in circuits and stations.

3d. Should any such mission be so situated as to render it necessary, they may have a Leaders' and Steward's meeting, as in stations.

4th. All missions, containing thirty members, shall be entitled to a delegate, Provided such mission shall have at the time of such election a regular organized Quarterly Conference.

JOEL DALBY,
O. P. STEPHENS,
J. M. JOHNSON. } Committee on Missions.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 16, 1847.

Resolutions reported by the Financial Committee and adopted by the Conference:

1st. Resolved, That the first Quarterly Conference of the year make an estimate of the probable expenses of the circuit or station, and apportion the same to the several classes according to their ability by a vote of a majority of the Leaders present—when in a book provided by each Leader, each member shall subscribe what he is willing to pay for that year, to be paid quarterly. Provided, That each Leader may obtain subscriptions from persons that are not members, who may be disposed to aid us.

2d. Resolved, That each and every Class Leader shall have a Class Steward elected, (or act in that capacity himself,) who shall use his utmost exertion to obtain the amount apportioned to his class by subscription or otherwise.

3d, Resolved, That any minister or preacher shall be exonerated from all service in his appointed field of labor, if at the end of any quarter he is not fully paid his regular disciplinary allowance up to that time. Provided, that he notify the Quarterly Conference of his intention to leave, and within 3 weeks after leaving, publish the reason thereof in the Western Recorder, together with a copy of this resolution.

4th. Resolved, That President's salaries be apportioned as follows, for the ensuing year, to wit:

Cincinnati st.,	$41,58	Elm St. mission,	$9,11
Lebanon "	19,79	Cincinnati ct.,	16,26
Ashridge ct.,	21,39	Xenia "	10,35
Springfield ct.,	19,78	Kalida "	11,50
Lima "	18,40	Twin Creek ct.,	14,95
New Richmond ct.,	26,56	Port William "	37,11
Clarksville ct.,	12,99	Union "	32,77
Miami "	23,80	Richwood "	23,00
Bainbridge "	5,00	Washington "	28,75
Mt. Blanchard ct.,	20,12	Portage "	7,47
Darby mission,	7,36	Greenville mission,	6,44
Mad River mission,	7,47	Maumee "	3,30
Bournville "	11,44	Clarksville "	20,24

RECEIVED INTO THE CONFERENCE.

Ministers—W. B. Warrington T. Finkbine, W. Hughey
Licentiate—C. Carter, W. Chapman, T. D. Howe.
By transfer from Indiana Conference,—W. B. Evans, C. H. Williams.
By transfer Muskingum An. Conference—A. Channell.
Elected to Deacon's orders—Thos. Graham, A. Channell, G. W. Thornburg, E. G. Hardesty.
Elected to Elder's orders—T. Finkbine.
By order of the publishing committee, R. ROSE.

CONFERENCE STEWARD'S REPORT.

C'ts. & St's.			salary.	rec'd.	deficit.
			$ cts.	$ cts.	$ cts.
J. M. YOUNG, President.			400,00	274,64	131,36
Cincinnati st.,	Joel Dalby,		750,00	750,00
" ct.,	O. Warrington,		100,00	100,00
Clarksville ct.,	R. Dobbins,		100,00	60,28	39,72
Springfield ct.,	O. P. Stephens,		200,00	181,00	19,00
Kalida ct.,	J. L. Borton,		200,00	136,49	63,51
Port William ct.,	R. Rose,		220,00	220,00
Bainbridge ct.,	A. H. Trumbo,		220,00	132,30	87,70
" "	Thos. Graham,		100,00	62,75	37,25
Lebanon st.,	R. M. Dalby,		305,00	305,00
New Richmond ct.,	S. H. Evans,		280,00	205,70	74,30
Washington ct.,	A. H. Webster,		200,00	182,00	18,00
Beaufort ct.,	W. G. Fowler	3mo.	50,00	13,12	36,88
" "	J. Nutty,	9 mo.	150,00	66,34	83,66
Mt. Blanchard ct.,	A. Bessee,		200,00	87,07	112,93
Richwood ct.,	J. B. Peat,		200,00	127,30	72,70
Xenia ct.,	Jos. White,		220,00	220,00
Darby miss.,	R. K. Davis,		200,00	95,00	105,00
Greenville miss.,	S. P. Kezerta,		100,00	50,00	50,00
Twin Creek ct.,	W. Pelan,		100,00	87,00	13,00
Miami ct.,	G W Thornburg		100,00	100,00
Union ct.	D. Moore,		200,00	112,00	88,00
Maumee miss.,	no report.
Mad river do.,	L. Ensminger,		200,00	85,31	114,69
Elm st. mission,	T. Finkbine,		no claim.
Conf. Missionary,	A McGuire,		100,00	55,45	44,55

Paid to J. Flood by Bainbridge ct., for previous dues, $150,00

CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

Cincinnati st.,	$33,50	Cin. S. S. donations,	$45,75
Cincinnati ct.,	18,40	Springfield ct.,	4,00
Kalida "	9,00	Port William ct.,	2,20
Bainbridge "	3,35	Washington "	,00
Beanford "	2,10	Greenville mission,	1,30
Mad River mission,	1,00	Bal. from last Con.,	2,54
Elm Street mission,	5,00

JOHN WHETSTONE, Con. Steward.

Reported for the Western Recorder,

EXTRACTS OF THE MINUTES OF THE PITTSBURGH ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The following is the Conference Steward's Report, in reference to all monies received and paid over, for the use and benefit of Rev. Asa Shinn, which Report was ordered to be published.

John Cowl, in account with the Pittsburgh Annual Conference, for monies received for the benefit of Rev. A. Shinn, Dr., 1847:

May 11th,—To cash rec'd.		Manchester ct.,		$17,05
27th,	"	" Washington st.,		7,00
Aug 18th,	"	" Ohio ct.,		10,72
"	"	" Morgantown ct.,		7,05
"	"	" Pittsburgh st.,		30,00
"	"	" Allegheny st.,		17,33
"	"	" Connellsville ct.,		5,87
"	"	" Fairmont ct.,		3,60
"	"	" Buchanon ct.,		4,00
"	"	" New Brighton ct.,		4,50
"	"	" Waynesburgh ct.,		3,00
"	"	" Fayette Springs ct.,		3,75
"	"	" Braxton ct.,		0,22
"	"	" Brownsville ct.,		2,90
"	"	" Monongahela ct.,		10,25
"	"	" Clarksburgh		1,50
				$128,74
				47,33
				$81,41
Cr.—By cash paid by Pittsburgh st.,			$30,00
" " Allegheny st.,			17,00
			$47,33	$128,74
Aug. 21st, by cash paid W. Graham, as per receipt,			$81,41
From the Muskingum An Conf., forwarded by a member of the Publishing Committee,				8,00
Total,				$136,74

On Monday morning, according to previous appointment, an hour was appropriated to the delivery of an Address, by Rev. T. H. Stockton, in reference to the enterprise in which he is engaged. The Conference listened with profound attention to the Address. Then appointed a Committee to consider the subject thereof, and report thereon. The following is the report:

Whereas we have not had time to examine the subject fully: and whereas it was not presented for adoption, but for our consideration; Therefore we recommend him to publish his Address, that our people may have an opportunity of examing it for themselves. We appreciate the motives of our beloved Brother, and so far as it is an institution of Christian benevolence, we give it our hearty concurrence; and recommend it to the favorable consideration of the Church and the community.

A resolution was passed in reference to the election of delegates to the Annual Conference, which together with the law regulating said elections in this District, was ordered to be published. The following is the standing law of this district, which was enacted by the Annual Conference, in the year 1843, at its session in the city of Pittsburgh.

That whereas difficulties have occurred in consequence of elections being held at the time and place of holding the last quarterly-meeting on Circuits; Therefore—

1. Resolved, That the election of delegates on Circuits, be held in the classes, by the Stewards or Leaders, between the 3d and 4th quarterly-meetings.

2. That the superintendents shall give, or cause to be given, at least two weeks' notice of said election, at all the appointments.

3. That all the votes given in each society, shall be cast on the same day, and within one hour from the time of opening the election; and that the votes there and then given, shall be sealed up, and sent to the Quarterly Conference; and if it be found that there is no election, the Quarterly Conference shall be competent to elect, out of the three (candidates) having the highest number of votes.

N. B.—This Resolution shall not be so construed, as to require all the classes to vote on the same day.

The following is the Resolution of the Annual Conference, at its recent session in Waynesburgh, respecting the itinerant ministers:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Annual Conference, that the law regulating the election of delegates to the Annual Conference, does not admit of any minister or preacher, under the stationing authority of the Conference, to participate in, or exercise any influence or control over said election.

The following is the resolution touching a day of fasting and prayer:

Resolved, That we observe the 1st Thursday in November next, as a day of fasting, prayer, and humiliation, before God, throughout the Pittsburgh District.

Hope this resolution will be generally and strictly observed by us all, and in the true spirit of the subject.

We append the names of brethren who constitute the District Committee. W. Reeves, P. T. Laishley, James W. Brown, Ministers; Path. Donnally, T. L. Mahan, and F. H. Pierpoint, Lay-men.

W. REEVES,
J. ROBISON,
J. GARRARD, } Pub. Committee.

CONFERENCE STEWARD'S REPORT OF CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

Dr. To Collection from		Evansville	ct.	$1,22
" " "		Fayette Springs	"	7,25
" " "		New Brighton	st.	4,25
" " "		Connellsville	ct.	6,25
" " "		Susquehanna	"	2,00
" " "		Ohio	"	4,00
" " "		Manchester	"	10,34
" " "		Fairmont	"	3,27
" " "		Morgantown	"	5,75
" " "		Ligonier	"	1,00
" " "		Sharpsburgh	"	3,00
" " "		Buchanon	"	1,00
" " "		Washington	st.	4,54
" " "		Huntersville	ct.	0,90
" " "		Clarion	"	0,62
" " "		Mill Creek	"	1,00
" " "		Allegheny	st.	10,98
" " "		Union	"	2,00
" " "		Greenbrier	ct.	2,00
" " "		Braxton	"	0,43
" " "		Clarksburgh	"	4,00
" " "		Pittsburgh	st.	17,13
" " "		Wheeling	"	4,00
" " "		Monongehela	ct.	0,81
" " "		Conneaut	"	0,60
" " "		Weston	"	0,80
" " "		Waynesburgh	"	22,00
				121,14

The following brethren from sister Conferences, were present, and voted to honorary seats, viz:

Rev. T. H. Stockton, Phil. Con.
" Wm. McGwigan, Va. "
" Zech. Ragan, Musk. "
" A. H. Bassett, Ohio "

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 7, 1847.

OUR ABSENCE.—We have been spending a few weeks, chiefly in attending the sessions of the Pittsburgh, Muskingum, and Ohio Annual Conferences. It has been very gratifying to us, to meet with so many brethren, from so many different sections of the country, on those occasions. We were also gratified to witness the increased energy and efficiency of the Conferences, in promoting the interests of the church of Christ, and the general encouragement of our brethren, to expect reviving seasons, and enlarged prosperity. Meanwhile we have travelled some 850 miles, chiefly by land, and by various modes of conveyance, 300 miles by stage, 200 by private carriage, 150 by rail cars, 100 on horseback, and nearly 100 by canal packets. Our journeying and sojourning abroad, with the relaxation from our accustomed confinement, and toil and application at home, has proved a benefit to our impaired health, for which we desire to feel thankful. Having been providentially preserved in all perils, and returned in safety to our charge with the blessing of many friends and brethren, who bid us God speed in our enterprise, we trust we shall resume with renewed encouragement our work, sparing no pains nor labor, to make our weekly sheet interesting to our readers, and especially to make it useful as a promotive of their highest interests.

TEMPERANCE HOUSES.—Who does not, when on a journey, love to find refreshment or repose at an orderly house, where no apprehension need be entertained of encountering a battle of brandy bottles, or any of the usual disgusting annoyances incident to rumdealing taverns? On our return, recently, from Cincinnati, we came by the train of cars to Springfield, that beautiful place where the railway intersects the National Road. Having several hours to spend in the village, waiting for the mail coach going east, we did ourselves the satisfaction of turning in at the American House, a commodious Hotel, kept by Messrs Rowzey and Snowden, on strictly temperance principles. We know those gentlemen well, and their families, from previous acquaintance, and can assure those who may call, that they will find all things attended to, and done up about right. Then, call at the American House—for, who would not prefer to look out for a Temperance Hotel? When you arrive by the cars or coaches, you may meet with a dozen proclamations, and demands to go to other houses, but don't forget that Rowzey and Snowden's American House is the place to put up.

We have just learned that our friend John Cary, Jr. has recently opened a Temperance House in Cambridge, Ohio, on the National Road, east of Zanesville. We are glad to hear it, for we apprehend that such a house has been much needed at that place. We trust that Mr. Cary will be well sustained in the enterprise. The friends of Temperance and good order, ought to patronize such houses in preference to others. Dont forget the Temperance Hotel kept by Mr. Cary, in Cambridge. We are told it is nearly opposite the Court House. We should be gratified to announce the establishment of such houses, in all our cities and villages, and all along our highways.

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT IN CINCINNATI—The friends of Temperance in the Queen City have lately commenced a new effort to resist the inroads of Rum. The City has now a Temperance Council, who will grant no licenses to sell liquor. But it seems that many of the grog dealers have continued to sell, without, license, in defiance of the law. This imposition has been carried on to an alarming extent, so that the number of unlicensed groggeries, in actual operation has reached from five to six hundred! The friends of Temperance and good order, have taken the alarm, and have summoned their forces, to stay the progress of the destroyer. For this purpose public meetings are held almost every night, at different points in the city. We hope they will succeed in abolishing those houses of disorder and riot and death.

Plan of Union Between Great Britain and the United States.

We observe in a recent number of one of the London Monthly Journals, a lengthy letter from ROBERT SEARS, ESQ., of New York, headed—"Alliance of Perpetual Friendship between England and America," We take the following extracts from the letter. The sentiments will meet with the approval and concurrence of the good men of both countries:

"Never, in my humble opinion, were there two nations so prepared for a perfect truce, and combined action; never was the opportunity for arranging it so bright and promising; and never was the call, both within and without, at home and abroad, so urgent and so plain." * *

"It has often occurred to me, as one of the noblest enterprises that could be effected in this world, if your country and ours could be induced to enter into a solemn agreement: First, that all disputes which may arise between us shall be settled by arbitration, and never by an appeal to arms; Secondly, that we shall combine in every way which shall commend itself to the united judgments of both nations to engage in a mission of benevolence towards the entire human race." * * *

"It has been said, 'England and America AGAINST the World!' Let us say, England & America FOR the World!' How mighty would such a confederation be for the interests of peace, of freedom, of commerce, and christianity!"

* * * * *

The subject is truly of great importance, and one in which Mr. Sears has been, and is now deeply engaged in bringing before the people of England and America, through the influence of that mighty instrument—the Press. A leading article on the subject, from the pen of the same gentleman, appeared but a few weeks since in one of the leading and most influential papers of the Union.

DEATH'S DOINGS.—On our late visit to Cincinnati, we learned of the recent death of two of our old friends, who were of the first and earliest members of the Methodist Protestant Church of that city.

Joseph T. Hodgson, was a native of Virginia, but for many years past, a citizen of Cincinnati. In the latter part of his life he was subject to a nervous affliction, which for much of the time, prostrated his mental and physical energies. But we believe he remained a devoted Christian, steadfast in his faith in God. He died, July 16, aged 62.

William Edwards, formerly of Cincinnati, but late of Blue Rock, Hamilton county, was, we think, a native of Pennsylvania, but for 20 or more years past, a citizen of the West. He was the father of Br. I. Edwards formerly of the Ohio Con., and step-father of Brother C. Caddy, of the Muskingum Conference. We have not the particulars of his last illness and death, but believe he died the last week of September, at an age, a little short of sixty years. We ever considered him an honest man, and humble Christian.

We have just received a private letter from L. Marston, Esq., Millersburg, Ky., dated 2d inst., communicating to us the following sad intelligence:

"Nicholas Amos, a subscriber to the Western Recorder, died on the 29th ult., at the advanced age of 76 years."

Father Amos was another old friend, whose society we very much enjoyed, in years past, and at whose hospitable dwelling, we used to find ourself very much at home, in 1833—4, when we by appointment, officiated for a year, in Bourbon county, Ky. But it appears we shall see him no more in the flesh.

We are passing away, we are passing away,
To a visionless sleep and a couch of clay,
Like the light of the stars before the sun,
We are fading and vanishing one by one;
Like twilight hues of a summer day,
We are passing away, we are passing away.

SYNODS.—The Synod of the Presbyterian Church, (O. S.) was in session last week, at Lancaster, Ohio; and the Synod of the Presbyterian Church, (N. S.) was also in session at the same time at Granville, Ohio. The ministers of that denomination, belonging to Zanesville and Putnam, were in attendance.

FRUIT CONVENTION.—The great Fruit Convention was in session at Columbus, as we passed through that city, on the 29th ult. Our friend Rev. C. Springer, of this county, was in attendance.

A NATIONAL CONVENTION of colored Americans, as we learn by the National Era, is to be held in the city of Troy, New York, on the 6th day of October, inst.

MOVEMENTS IN THE SOUTH.—We see that an association of southern gentlemen have issued a prospectus for publishing a paper at Washington City, in which the institution of Slavery is to be defended. The Editor of the National Era, we believe, is quite well pleased that there should be an opposition line. On the other side of the question, it is announced that an Anti-Slavery paper is about to be commenced in Virginia. Furthermore, we learn that the people of Kentucky have by a large majority decided upon the call of a Convention for altering the Constitution of that State. These are important signs of the times.

SEARS' MAGAZINE.—The September number has been received, and contains a pictorial description of the States of Delaware and Maryland, and the District of Columbia. Much interesting and useful information is embraced. We rejoice that Mr. Sears is receiving the reward of his enterprise and perseverance by the extensive patronage of his works. The present and future generations will be indebted to him for his labors in placing before the people a pure and useful literature. He is making arrangements for an improved volume in 1848, of which we will duly apprise our readers.

Since the above was in type we have received the number for October, containing a pictorial description of Virginia, with numerous illustrations, some of which are quite interesting.

THANKSGIVING.—The 25th day of November, has been designated by the governors of New Hampshire and Missouri, as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer. There is a growing disposition to set apart a common thanksgiving day for the entire nation. As the governors of those two states have spoken thus early, we apprehend that the same day will be fixed upon by the governors of many other states, if not by all.

CLARION OF FREEDOM.—This is an Anti Slavery paper, for some time past published at Cambridge, O., but lately removed to New Concord, in the eastern part of this county. We have received the first number of a new volume just commenced at that place. We regret to learn that the "Clarion," with its editor, Rev. M. R Hull, has been literally driven from Cambridge by lawless mob violence. A statement from an exchange, which appeared amongst our last week's news items, was the first we had seen in reference to this disgraceful outrage. We have since received a very friendly call from Mr Hull who has been so rudely treated. He desires us to say on his part that several particulars in the article referred to are not correct. He says that the "Clarion" is not a "crazy abolition paper," and that it is not the case that it "defies God and man, decency and the law," that it has defied none of these.

The fact is, the Editor of the "Clarion" is a plain spoken man, and whilst he feels it his duty to oppose certain evils, as slavery and intemperance, he is not inclined to take pains to use the mildest terms in denouncing those sins, and those who are supposed to participate in them. We own that we have considered Br Hull too vituperative, and we still conceive that if he would use a method less denunciatory, he would effect more in behalf of the cause of truth and righteousness. But, it is a way he has, and we wish not to dictate for him. Furthermore, let Mr. Hull's paper please or displease us, or the public, he has rights, and is entitled to the protection of law. And no circumstances could justify the resort to brute force, for the purpose of putting to silence the "Clarion" press. We hold in utter detestation such proceedings, and we unqualifiedly condemn the whole, as unworthy of any people, save barbarians. In the number of the "Clarion" just received, the Editor gives some details of the riotous proceedings at Cambridge. He ascribes their origin, in great part to the enmity excited on the part of doggery keepers, by his opposition to their nefarious business. He says that "every drunkard in town was enlisted in the mob. They could get as much whiskey as they wanted, by throwing eggs and stones at the Clarion Office; and they made a frolic of doing so." He continues—

"For eighteen nights we were assailed by the Cambridge mob. Stones, large enough, and thrown with sufficient force to knock down a buffalo, were hurled whizzing through our bed room, whilst our wife & children barely escaped their intended murder. These were our annoyances and these our perils and dangers.—They threatened to tear down our press—to blow up our building with powder, and to burn the house over our heads. For protection of our persons and property we appealed to the Mayor, asking him to establish a watch with an ordinance requiring every citizen to be in his house by nine o'clock at night or be jugged till morning to give account of his being out. He summoned the council; so they met and adjourned twice without making provision for the protection of our persons or property, and we believe that some of them would rejoice to see our blood and the blood of our wife and children rippling through the gutters of their streets. On the last night of the mob they gathered in large numbers in and in front of Mr. Brown's, clearing (through the assistance of Mr. B.) the pavement of all who were suspected of friendship for the Abolitionists. After this was done, showers of stones were thrown through our windows, and bottles of oil mixed with lamp black were thrown at the house and through the windows, defacing the house and furniture in a most shameful manner.

On the same night they determined to whip every Abolitionist in town; so they went to work and knocked down two or three with clubs, while others escaped to places more secure than the public streets.

Up to this time Mr. Wolf & ourselt had been not beaten, though frequently assailed in the street by drunken ruffians; but it had been determined on, and Jonathan Davis, a butcher in town, was, no doubt, selected to beat us. This he did in real butcher style, with much ease to himself, (for we offered no resistance) and much to the satisfaction of the Clique, who paid his fine of $15 00 and costs.

We are grieved that the goodly village of Cambridge has been dishonored by these scenes of outrage. The friends of order there, doubtless deplore the fact. We sympathise also with those who have suffered personal violence and abuse. And we pray that such scenes may not a sin be enacted in this community.

Foreign News.

From the Zanesville Daily Courier, October 5.

Fifteen Days Later from Europe.

Arrival of the Hibernia.—Depression of the Markets.—Rally and Advance in Breadstuffs.—Decline in Cotton—Prospects of Continental War!

NEW YORK, Oct. 3, 10½, P M.

The steamer Hibernia arrived at Boston, at 20 minutes before 3 o'clock, this afternoon.

The Corn Market had been still farther depressed from the failuers that had occurred, and by reason of the prospect for an abundant harvest.

The extent of purchases, however, in the market, for Holland and Belgium, where the Potato Crop has failed, has caused prices to rally and advance, on the 13th.

Wheat was 62 shillings per quarter.

Flour had reached 28@30s. ℔ bbl. with limited supples on hand.

Cotton had declined three-eighs of a penny per pound.

The minister of the king of Sardinia had announced to the Court of France that if the Pope should require the aid of his master to resist and repel the Austrian invasion, his majesty would feel himself bound to render it.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Death is still repeating his destructive visits to our fold, and taking both young and old from the flock—both from the church and congregation. Since Conference, we have buried our beloved Brother, Thomas F. Brown, a precious man of God. But he is gone to dwell in a mansion prepared for him in heaven.

Aged Sister Jane Scholey, too, mother of Br. W. Scholey, recently deceased, while he is across the Atlantic, on a visit to his native land. Praise the Lord! her end was peace.

A Mrs. Narcissa A. Paulson, also, consort of Mr. Charles H. Paulson, and daughter of Hon. Daniel Kilgore, of Cadiz, Ohio, an amiable lady, departed this life, on last Sabbath morning, at the St. Charles Hotel, in this city. Hope she is now tuning her harp of gold, to the praise of her Redeemer and God.

And now William Augustus, son of Brother W. Rinehart, is removed to the fold above. Dear little lamb! his gentle spirit is far removed from the storms of this rigorous clime; in the green pastures of paradise, near the banks of the river of life, he now peaceably feeds, walking close by the side of the great and good Shepherd. O, may our Almighty Saviour sanctify these afflictive visitations of his Providence, to the good of all the surviving friends. W. REEVES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 28, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MEDAD VINTON.

Died, at Port Washington, Ohio, September 29th, 1847, of Typhoid Fever, Mr. Medad Vinton, aged fifty years. Mr. Vinton emigrated from Massachusetts in 1839, and settled at Port Washington, where by an honorable and upright course of conduct, in all his business transactions, by his amiable and unaffected manners, his consistent and practical piety, he gained largely the confidence and esteem of the community in which he lived. The funeral services were conducted by Rev J. W. Case. R. S.

Putnam, Ohio, Oct. 5, 1847.

Later from the Army.

[Telegraphic Despatches.]

From the Zanesville Daily Courier, Octo ber 2.

The Armistice Broken.

Another bloody Battle—Mexican loss 25,000 —American loss severe—Gen. Worth badly wounded — No prospects of Peace — Paredes heading Guerillas—$20,000,000 refused for California—Herrera's recommendation —The end not yet.

RICHMOND, Oct. 1, 10 o'clock, A. M.

By a late arrival at New Orleans we have later news from the seat of war, and of a nature, too, that while we are rejoiced that our arms are once more victorious, we at the same time are compelled to yield our convictions formed on the intelligence, received by former arrivals, that the prospects of peace were flattering, and that the end of this war was nigh, and own that peace is still far distant.

By this arrival we have intelligence from the city of Mexico to the 9th September, from which we gather the startling information that the armistice has been broken, and that hostilities have been actually re-commenced. On the 8th, our forces attacked the Mexican out-posts at Chapultapec, which were driven in, with the heavy loss of twenty-five hundred men! our own loss not mentioned. The Mexicans were commanded by General Leon, and the General himself was wounded in the engagement!

General Scott and Santa Anna accuse each other with breaking the Armistice, and from the known character of the two generals, we are not at a loss on whom to throw the censure for thus again plunging the two countries into a bloody and perhaps lengthened struggle, by which thousands of victims will be immolated on the altar of blood. God spare us the farther effusion of blood!

The American force engaged in this battle was small, and the Mexicans, as usual, outnumbering us greatly, and the engagement was of so sanguinary a nature, that the American loss is represented to be severe, compared with the numbers engaged.

So exasperated are the Mexicans that Herrera recommended the women and children to stone the Americans from the housetops as they enter the city, and from the known characteristics of the country, we have not the least hesitation in saying that that recommendation will be strictly carried out, even beyond the spirit and the letter.

The animosities of the Mexicans have been so thoroughly aroused, that they have announced their determination to yield nothing beyond the Nueces, excepting territory on the Pacific, for the purpose of establishing Factory Houses, and that exception only for the space of eight years.

The American loss on the march to the city of Mexico, has been found to be three thousand between Puebla and the city.

Paredes is between Vera Cruz and Gedico, heading a formidable body of guerillas.

There are no prospects of Peace given us by this arrival, even should the United States pay twenty millions of dollars for California.

General Worth, as usual, bore a conspicuous part in this engagement, and we are pained to learn that he was badly wounded!

From the Zanesville Daily Courier, October 5.

LATER.

Painfully Exciting News! Worth dangerously Wounded—Bravo killed and Santa Anna Wounded—American Loss 1000 to 1500 Men! Battle still Raging!

WASHINGTON, Oct 2—7 P. M.

The Post Master General, now in this city, has received by to-day's mail, a letter from the Deputy Post Master at New Orleans, with one day's later advices from the army.

General Scott entered the city of Mexico on the 8th, and fought a great battle.

General Bravo was killed. Santa Anna was wounded, and retired with his shattered forces to Gaudaloupe.

The American loss is reported to have been one thousand to fifteen hundred killed and wounded!! The Mexican loss is not reported.

At the latest accounts, General Scott and the American army held half of the city, and, in the other part of it, a sanguinary battle was raging.

As to General Scott's position, the aspect of affairs, &c., there are various reports, which I omit.

General Worth was dangerously wounded.

STILL LATER.

The negotiations–Severe Correspondence between Scott and Santa Anna—Charges of bad Faith.

MEXICO, Sept., 9, 1847.

The Mexican Commissioners declared Trist's propositions to be inadmissible. Thereupon, Santa Anna invoked a Council of General Officers, and subsequently gave to General Scott notice that hostilities would re-commence on the 9th.

Gen. Scott accused Santa Anna with having violated several articles of the Armistice, and especially in not permitting the Americans to obtain supplies.

A severe correspondence took place between Gen. Scott and Santa Anna. The latter accused the former of sacking the towns and robbing the churches of the Mexicans, while the American General retorted with the charge that supplies of food, &c., from the Mexicans had been unduly obstructed.

STILL LATER FROM MEXICO.

Accounts still more exciting!!—Puebla blockaded—Scott's Despatches cut off—Distressing Rumors!

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3, 9½ P. M.

One of the charges made by Santa Anna, against Scott, was, that he had stolen and destroyed many articles esteemed sacred by the Mexicans.

Riley, the infamous leader of the band of deserters, who were taken in arms against our flag, and who were called the "Legion of St. Patrick," had, with seventy of his men, a fair trial before the Court-Martial, were found guilty, and sentenced to be hung!

The Sentence was approved by the Commander-in-Chief, General Scott, and it was carried into effect accordingly, the execution taking place in the full presence of both armies on the 8th.

Several bloody battles were fought from the 8th to the 16th of September, in one of which three hundred Americans, it is reported, were blown up by bombs from the Castle of Chapultapec falling among our amunition wagons. General Worth it is reported was killed. Gen. Persifer F. Smith was also killed.

The Mexicans report the American loss at seventeen hundred, or one fourth to one third of the entire Army!!!

The Citadel of Chapultepec, and those famous Halls of the Montezumas are now completely in the possession of the American Arms!!

The news comes well authenticated.

The Mexican and American letters agree in depicting this struggle as the hardest and most bloody battle yet fought.

At one point of the City, where our loss was four hundred killed, & from six to seven hundred wounded, Santa Anna, in person commanded the Mexicans columns.

There were Eight Thousand Americans engaged in the battle.

LATEST AND IMPORTANT.

Later Particulars!—Puebla blockaded—Scott's Despatches cut off—Distressing Rumors!

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4, 6 P. M.

The National Intelligencer has letters from officers of the army, dated Puebla, September 10th, which state that they had been hemmed in there, for three weeks, by a force of Four Thousand Mexicans!!

All of General Scott's despatches have been cut off.

A telegraphic despatch from Richmond says that "La Patria" has letters with, or purporting to be with, later dates from the Army.

These letters state that Paredes had been elected Inspector General of the Mexican Army, but had refused the appointment.

It was rumored that the Mexican General Rea, with a large body of National Guards and eight thousand other troops, was lying in wait to attack Gen. Lane's train which left Vera Cruz on the 10th.

There were also reports that Peubla had been taken by the enemy. This last appears to tally very well with the letters in the Intelligencer.

News of the Week.

The Business of Mansfield.

A correspondent of the Statesman gives the following statistics of the trade of Mansfield.—Let it be remembered that Mansfield was a few years age an obscure village whose existence even, was unknown at any great distance—that it is now the southern terminus of the Sandusky Railroad, and that to that improvement is owing altogether the important position which this inland village is taking in the trade of the State. The tables not only show what a railroad will do for a place, but also what a place will do for a railroad.

"But I find I am extending this letter to a greater length than I intended. To the kindness of Mr. McCreary, of our place, I am indebted for the following statistics of the amount of produce purchased and forwarded, at this place, from the 1st of August, 1846, to the 1st of August, 1847:

Wheat,	558,574	bushels
Corn,	13,624	"
Oats,	6,250	"
Clover Seed,	9,649	"
Timothy Seed,	1,834	"
Flax Seed,	1,576	"
Ashes,	1,371	barrels.
Flour,	63,359	"
Pork,	3,588	"
Tobacco,	361,909	pounds.
Lard,	67,000	"
Wool,	245,916	"
Butter,	355,000	"
Leather,	84,000	"

With an indefinite, yet large amount of smaller trade, viz: Apples, Peaches, Eggs, Beans, &c., &c.

Imports during the same period have been 12-000 barrels of Salt, and 14,654 tons of various other merchandise.

Transportations on the above articles from this point, over railroad, to

Sandusky City,	$72,420 37
On articles received here,	39,635 00
Total,	$112,055 37

What, at six per cent., would make capital to the amount of $1,867,583.

The value of the above exports, at average prices, as paid in this place, would be over $1,-000,000,"

A SUDDEN SCRAPE.—On Tuesday a woman sued another woman at Philadelphia, for malicious mischief. At the hearing of the case, the husband of the claimant, Jesse Dean, happening to appear, the defendant claimed him as her husband. It turned out that the defendant had been married to him some three years, and that the complainant became his wife in April last. And so the husband of two wives got himself into a scrape that may yet get him into the penitentiary.

DEATH OF JUDGE THOMAS BUCHANAN.—We regret to learn from the Patriot of last evening of the death of the venerable Judge Thomas Buchanan, Associate Judge of the judicial district composed of Allegheny, Washington and Frederick counties.

The Hagerstown Torchlight, received last night, confirms this melancholy announcement, and says that on Wednesday a dark cloud overspread the feelings of that whole community in consequence. On the day previous, Judge Buchanan held court and heard several elaborate arguments in Chancery. On his return home, in the evening, he was accompanied, in his carriage, by his daughter, (Miss Buchanan,) and was unusually cheerful until he arrived within two miles of his residence, when a sudden silence seizing him, his daughter cast her arms around him and inquired the cause. He made no reply, and in an instant he had expired, from an attack of apoplexy. Probably never since the establishment of our county, says the Torchlight, has the decease of any one in our midst been received with more profound regret. Deep has been the impression of his death, and long will his memory be cherished by those upon whose life, liberty and property he has, in days past, been called to judge. Judge Buchanan succeeded the Hon. Roger Nelson, and was elevated to the Bench on the 5th of May, 1815. He was, at the time of his death, in the 79th year of his age. He was the brother of the late Chief Judge John Buchanan, of the Court of Appeals of this State.

A MOTHER'S CARE.—In Leverett, Mass., a child of Peter Hobart, Jr., cut the arteries of his arm with a scythe, but was prevented from bleeding to death by the presence of mind of his mother, in pressing the flesh above the wound, until a doctor arrived two hours after, and took up the arteries.

A MOST DELIBERATE SUICIDE.—A correspondent of the Mobile Register, writing from Pensacola, Sept. 17, relates an unusually deliberate case of suicide on the part of Judge Garnier, a venerable and respected citizen of that place. He drowned himself, it appears the night previous, and from letters he wrote to several of his friends, he had for some time past been making his arrangements to commit the deed. He assigns as a reason "poverty," that he had but $120 and that it would take all of that to pay his debts and bury him decently. He wrote a few lines at midnight to Dr. Smith, which he gave to a black boy, and told him to hand it to Dr. Smith early in the morning, which was to inform where his body might be found. He had every thing arranged. He directed notes to all to whom he was indebted, even to his washerwoman. He laid his clothes in which to be buried on the bed and directed where every thing might be found. He sewed two large bricks in a towel and tied them to his back, and pinned a towel over his breast and back, and tying one end of a rope to the end of the warf and the other end around his waist, threw himself into the water, where he was found in the morning. The evening previous he was perfectly cool, speaking of the Mexican war, &c., and his letters and the note written at midnight were very neatly executed.

THE GALE OF SATURDAY.—The N. Y. papers give the particulars of numerous disasters occasioned by the late gale:

A case of woolen goods, market G 381, E. Bogart, New York, washed into Lloyd's Harbor during the gale, and was forwarded to N. Y. city by Mr. Jones for the owners.

Papers, apparently from a Greenport vessel, drifted ashore near the residence of Mr. Cambrelong, West Neck. A chest lid, marked "to the care of Capt. Starr, washed into Lloyd's Harbor, and was picked up by Capt. Durfee, of the Thos. W. Throre.

Sloop Catharine Hale, of Stonington, Capt. Brown, upset off Eaton's neck light-house during the gale. The captain's wife and another lady passenger were drowned in the cabin, and a boy was lost from the deck. The captain saved himself by means of a spar and a board, on which he drifted five miles; the crew three in number, saved themselves by clinging to the wreck, which righted, with the loss of spars, and drifted on the West side of Eaton's neck, where she now lies in a bad state,

The schooner Sarah S. Davis, from Fredericsburg, laden with flour, anchored off the quarantine on Saturday, went ashore during the night, but was got off on Sunday morning—the vessel leaks badly.

LOSS OF THE NEW ORLEANS PACKET SHIP AUBURN.—The Captain, First Mate, and sixteen other persons drowned.—The New York Journal of Commerce, of Tuesday afternoon, is indebted to John S. Tappen, Esq., secretary of the board of underwriters, for the following particulars of the loss of this vessel, which we mentioned yesterday, by telegraph:

"Long Branch, Setp. 25, 1847.

"The ship Orbit, of New York, Captain White, (evidently a mistake, intended for the Auburn, Capt. Hoyt,) from New Orleans, came ashore on Long Branch, Barnegat Inlet, on Saturday night last. She has gone to pieces—the Captain first mate, and sixteen others lost."

The Auburn was about 10 years old. 449 tons burthen, hull valued at about $25,000, cargo $40 to $50,000—made up of the usual New Orleans assortment. She was fully insured, and probably, also, the cargo, in Wall street. She belonged to Stanton & Frost; sailed from New Orleans August 28. The underwriters have sent assistance down.

The Express says:—"The sixteen persons, last named, include some passengers, as her ship company does not number so many."

Those lost on board the packet sloop Catherine F. Hale, Capt. Dudley Branch, from Stonington for N. Y., capsized about half a mile from the shore, are the Captain's wife, Eveline, and a lady passenger, Mary A. Burdick, with the cook, a boy named Geo. E. Stanton, were drowned; the Captain saved himself by means of a spar and a board, on which he drifted five miles; he was in the water five hours.

COLD BEDROOMS.—A person accustomed to undress in a room without fire, and to seek repose in a cold bed, will not experience the least inconvenience, even in the severest weather. The natural heat of his body will very speedily render him even more comfortably warm than the individual who sleeps in a heated apartment, and in a bed thus artificially warmed, and who will be extremely liable to a sensation of chilliness as soon as the artificial heat is dissipated. But this is not all—the constitution of the former will be rendered more robust, and far less susceptible to the influence of atmospherical vicissitudes than that of the latter.—Jour. of Health.

FIRE IN LOWELL.—The large machine shop belonging to John R. Adams, Esq., was entirely consumed by fire last week. Insurance $2,500, which will cover about one half of the loss. Messrs. Patterson & Smith, engineers, had an insurance at the Rockingham office for $2,500; their loss will be about $4,000. There were other considerable losses.

TRIAL OF MIDSHIPMAN POLLOCK.—The trial of Midshipman pollock, at Buffalo, N. Y., for shooting E. R. Jewett, Esq., of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, with intent to kill him, came on last Friday afteroon, and was brought to a close on Saturday morning, when the jury returned into court declaring they could not agree, and were consequently discharged. The evidence was certainly most positive, three balls, with the wallet which obstructed their passage into Mr. J's person being in court, with several persons to testify to the act of shooting, the defence contended that the proof showed only an assault with an intent to wound. The Buffalo Commercial says that eleven were for a verdict of guilty under the indictment, while one stood out for the "intent to wound."

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—The Cincinnati Signal of the 25th, relates an accident which occurred to the train from Xenia the evening previous. Two of the first class passenger cars became detached and caught in the frame-work of the track. The forward car, which was filled with ladies, was thrown off the rails, precipitated down the embankment, and completely demolished. Providentialy, no lives were lost; but several of the passengers were seriously though not dangerously injured. One lady had an arm broken, another received a severe contusion on the head, and many others were more or less bruised.

GUILTY OF MURDER.—David Sheeley, who killed his wife in Covington, Ky., while drunk, in May last, has just been found guilty. He choked her to death, leaving behind her three small children.

ARSON AND ROBERY.—The store of the Messrs. Sloan, grocers, at Pittsburgh, was burnt down on Monday night last, after having been broken open and robbed—fully insured.

BISHOP ONDERDONK.—The annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York, met at St John's chapel, New York City, yesterday morning, at which convention it is given out that a great effort will be made to reinstate Bishop Onderdonk.

A New York letter, of Tuesday, says:

"In relation to the restoration of the Bishop, all has been settled; if his friends are strong enough, his restoration will be moved for, but not otherwise. A sort of caucus is to be held tonight, and the whole affair discussed. The lay delegates are in favor of restoration, but of the parishes there is doubt."

Another letter says:

"It would not surprise me if the grant of two thousand dollars to the suspended Bishop was refused in toto."

DECREASE OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.—By an offical document, printed by order of the British House of Common, it is shown that, in five years to 1826, there was 5286 persons convicted on capital charges, and 307 were executed; in the next five years 7077 persons were convicted, and 304 executed; in the next, 3877, out of wich 44 were executed.

Religious Notices.

OXFORD, September 30, 1847.

To the President of the Ohio Conference:—

BR. YOUNG: Having no opportunity of ascertaining your whereabouts, I am compelled to adopt this method of addressing you. I returned from Conference, suffering severely from the chills and fever; arriving at home I found Mrs. Pelan suffering from the same. We have been greatly reauced, but are now slowly recovering.—General debility, arising from the labors of the past year, together with the present affliction, and doubts as to my ability to discharge the duties of the present year, compel me to solicit, that you will release me from the Clarksburg circuit, for this year. By placing the circuit in the charge of some other brother, and sending me a certificate of my release from the same,

You will much oblige yours, WM. PELAN.

Address Oxford, Butler county, Ohio.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT—Buchanon Circuit.—I wish to inform our worthy President, Br. Brown, that we expect to commence a Camp-meeting, three miles west of Buchanon town, on the land of Nathan Reger, on Friday, the 8th day of October; to embrace his visit to this Circuit. And we also invite all our ministerial brethren, without naming them, that can come, to come to our aid. Come, brethren, come over and help us.

R. H. WALKER, Sup't.

WABASH DISTRICT,—FRANKFORD CIRCUIT.—The Indisposition of Br. Bailey, (Superintendant,) and the absence of Br. J. Shipp, warrant the postponement of the Fourth Quarterly Meeting of Frankford Circuit, until the 9th and 10th of October, to be held in the town of Frankford. Brethren will please call and spend the Sabbath with our Frankford friends,—as the meeting will embrace the Sabbath previous to the sitting of our Conference.

T. S. FALKINBURGE.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Buchanon	Circuit,	October	10th,	1847.
Braxton	"	"	17th,	"
Lewis	"	"	24th,	"
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents when my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:—

Wellsville	circuit,	2d Sunday	October.
Leesburg	"	3d "	"
Granger	"	4th "	"
Wayne	"	5th "	"
Frederick	"	1st "	November
Licking	"	2d "	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d "	"
Coshocton	"	4th "	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st "	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts. I think it proper to say, that I will meet my appointment on the Granger circuit, at the Society near Br. Swan's:—Would the 4th Saturday and Sunday of October be too early for the 1st Quarterly Meeting?

For reasons of a very satisfactory character, (upon his aplication to me the morning after the rise of Conference) Br. C. Caddy was released from the Bellview circuit. No supply, as yet, for said ct. GEO. CLANCY.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE, N. Y.

BR. BASSETT: Please insert the following plan of appointments:

Cayuga	Circuit,	October		9–10
Wayne	"	"		16–17
Lysander	"	"		23–24
Truxton	"	"		30–31
Syracuse	"	November		6–7
Cherry Valley	"	"		13–14
Columbia	"	"		20–21
Schuyler	"	"		27–28
Oswego	"	December		4–5
Mexico	"	"		11–12
Orleans	"	"		18–19
Wilna & Antwerp	"	"		25–26
Manlius	"	1st Saturday in January,		1848.
Savannah	"	2d	" "	"
Moringo	"	3d	" "	"
Central	"	4th	" "	"
Rome	"	5th	" "	"

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Xenia	ct.,	Oct. 30th,	1847.
Port William	"	Nov. 6th,	"
Springfield	"	" 13th,	"
Union	"	" 20th,	"
Darby	mission,	" 27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec. 4th,	"
Miami ct.,		" 11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, when my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Spingfield.

JOHN M. YOUNG.

Oct. 2, 1847.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. Reeves, and others,	Pa.	Anon, two,	O.
P. M.—Beverly,	Va.	R. Rose, two,	"
A. Randall,	Lake Superior.	T. Noble,	"
P. M.—Graham,	Ia.	W. Pelan,	"
J. C. Wright,	"	C. Lusk,	"
L. Marston,	Ky.	L. D. Johnson,	Mass.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

[Received during Editor's absence.]

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts.
D. Bagley,	J. Kilvington,		9	49	2 00
"	Joseph Ross,		8	35	2 00
C. J. Sears,	John Blackburn,		8	38	2 00
G. Williams,	Z. Garrison,		8	41	1 00
"	R. Williams,		9	15	2 00
"	J. Guiselman,		9	15	2 00
Wm. M. Baker,			9	20	1 00
J. Tharp, Va.,			7	52	2 00
Received since his return.
C. Caddy,	W. H. Lawyer,		8	39	3 00
R. Rose,	J. Houghey,		8	52	2 00
"	Is Gerard,		8	52	2 00
"	J. Abernathy,		7	25	1 00
Geo Wheatly,	A. Thomas,		8	52	2 00
"	J. Ridlin,		8	52	2 00
P. J. Strong, Ill.,			9	52	1 00
J. Cary, Jr.,			9	26	3 00
C. Lusk,			8	52	1 00
J. C. Wright,	J. Morris, Sen.,		9	52	2 00

METHODIST PROTESTANT.—Please credit L. Newlove, Springfield, Ohio, and J. D. Langdon, Cincinnati, $2, each, and charge us. Mrs. M'Chesney, Oxford, Ohio, requests her paper discontinued

COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN.—Please ask your neighbor, W. W., what bad thing we have done, that he will not write to us.

Received at Muskingum Conference.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts.
J. Nichols,	J. Entz,		9	26	5 00
H. Springer, N. Lisbon,			9	52	2 00
J. H. Hamilton,	J. W. Smith,		7	52	2 00
John Burns,	J. Davis,		9	52	2 00
"	J. Maxwell,		9	52	2 00
"	J. Elliott,		10	3	2 00
"	J. Mercer,		8	52	2 00
"	H. Marshall,		8	52	3 00
"	V. Sutherland,		8	34	3 00
"	N. Hayne,		8	52	2 00
"	Thos. Scott,		8	52	2 00
"	A. Fell,		8	26	2 00
"	J. Parr,		8	13	50
"	H. Scott's estate,		7	52	2 00
W. L. Baldwin,	R. Dolvin,		8	52	2 00
"	J. C. Lukens,		8	52	2 00
"	R. Patterson,		9	18	2 00
"	R Heming,		9	32	2 00
"	W. Gillespie,		9	26	1 00
O. V. Warren,	R. Fulton,		8	26	3 00
C. J. Sears,	G. Armstrong,		8	52	2 00
"	J. Ady,		9	26	1 00
"	I. Stephens,		8	52	1 00
"	G. Campbell,		8	48	3 00
"	R. Scott,		8	52	2 00
"	J. K. Gray,		8	52	2 00
A. C. Jackson,			10	8	2 00
J. W. Case,	J. Whiteside,		8	47	2 25
W. Hatfield,	A. Shaner,		8	52	3 00
"	B. Petitt,		8	26	2 00
"	M. Law,		8	52	2 00
"	J. Law,		7	23	50
"	W. Beatty,		8	48	1 00
H. T. Lawson,	T. A. Pinnell,		10	7	2 00
Jos. Wells,	Mrs. K. Wells,		8	52	2 00
D. Warren, Cleveland,			9	52	2 00
J. Bambay,	A. J. M'Coy,		8	52	4 00
"	J. C. Frederick,		9	23	2 00
T. Potter,	J. Miller,		8	26	3 00
"	S. Bolinger,		9	26	2 00
P. Lewis, Mt. Pleasant,			9	52	2 00
F. Scott, N. Alexander,			8	52	2 00
S. Lancaster,	D. Yantees,		8	26	3 00
"	I Cassell,		8	52	2 00
A. R. Brown,	E. Matthews,		9	37	2 00
"	W. B. Miller,		7	26	1 00
G. R. Bowman,	J. C. Wales,		9	52	2 00
E. S. Hoagland.	John Scott, (Green)		9	52	2 00
Isr. Thrap,	T. E. Belknap,		8	52	2 00
"	Geo. Shawl,		10	10	2 00
"	H. Rossenburg,		9	20	2 00
"	A. Clarke,		9	22	2 00
"	Wm Rice,		8	52	4 00
"	H. Bowlus,		9	52	4 00
"	Brackley,		8	52	4 00
"	W. N. Longsworth,		7	52	2 00
R. Beckham,	J. F. Vanallen,		7	52	2 00
"	Himself,		9	52	2 00
John Hankins,			9	52	2 00
Jos. Leonard,			8	52	2 00
Jer. Jack,	E. Jack,		8	47	50
Jos. Barklay			8	52	2 00
A. Swan, Penensula,			8	52	3 00
C. Caddy,	M. M'Laughlin,		9	20	2 00
"	C. Russell,		9	52	2 00
W. Maynard,	J. S. Gutridge,		8	26	2 00
N. Burgess,	W. Brisbine,		8	26	2 00
S. Elliott,	Jos. Cline,		9	52	2 00
John Burnett,			9	8	2 00
Wm. Turner,			9	52	3 00
A. Tracy,	J. Hoagland,		8	52	2 50
"	Miss L. Pierce,		9	31	2 00
S. Gee,	Dr. A. Powers,		8	26	3 00
"	W. Knox,		8	52	2 00
[Received at Steubenville Ohio.]
J. Keath,			8	52	2 00
T. Hanna,	J. Fickes,		9	52	4 00
"	M. E. Lucas,		8	52	2 00
"	J. Howard,		8	52	2 00
"	C. Irwin,		8	47	2 00
R. Andrew,	I. Abdeel,		8	52	2 00

R. & T. Hipsley, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, are credited one dollar by Rev. G. Clancy.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office

The Markets.

PUTNAM & ZANESVILLE.—Flour $4,25—Wheat, 75c.—Corn, 25c.,—Oats, 18c.—Zanesville Courier.

CINCINNATI.—Flour $4,35@$4,40,—Wheat 70@75c—Oats, 25,—Corn 30@31. Beef Cattle $4,00@$4,50 ₩ cwt.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PITTSBURGH—Flour $4,87@$4,90,—Wheat 85@90c,—Corn 40,—Oats 25c.—Commercial Journal. No change.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour $5,50@$5,62½—Wheat $1,15—Corn, 68@70c.—Oats, 42@43c.

BALTIMORE.—Flour $5,25@5,37—Wheat, $1,04@1,11 Corn 68@70c,—Oats, 40.—Balt. Sun.

NEW YORK.—Flour $5,75@5,87; Wheat $1,00@1,05; Corn 65@66c.; Oats 45@47c.; Rye 74@75c.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED, on Wednesday, 22d ult., by Rev. W. REEVES, Mr. JOHN GILLESPIE, (brother of Rev. NOBLE GILLESPIE of the Pittsburgh Conference,) to Miss MARY ANN YOUNG, of the city of Pittsburgh.

OBITUARY.

DIED, at New York, September 25th, Maj. WILLIAM POPHAM, a soldier of the Revolution, aged 95 years. He was the oldest commissioned officer of the United States.

——At Port Platte, St. Domingo, August 27th, Capt. FRANCIS HAMPSON, a Philadelphia ship master.

——In Fairfield county, Ohio, on the 17th ult., Mr. LEWIS CRAMER, aged nearly 69. He was a respected member of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ.

——Near Santa Fe, July 10th, Col. JOHN M'ELVAIN, of the U. S. Dragoons, formerly of Columbus, O.

——Near Cincinnati, on the 26th ult., Mrs. MARIA L., wife of SAMUEL F. CARY, Esq, aged 28 years. She was a Christian.

——At Cincinnati, on the 17th ult., Mrs. REBECCA, consort of RICHARD MULFORD, Sen. Esq., a member of the Third Presbyterian Church. Her death was triumphant.

——On the 26th ult., Mr. JONATHAN D. PORTER, a successful and distinguished temperance lecturer. His death was very sudden.

——On the evening of the same day, suddenly, Mr. SAMUEL WARWICK, sash maker.

——On the same evening, also suddenly, Mr. THOS. JUSTISS, boiler maker.

The sudden death of the last three gentlemen named above, is attributed to the imprudent use of ice water, when they were warm.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum co., Ohio, on the 1st of October, 1847.

A		M
Atkinson, Joseph B.		Mendenhall, Mr. John
Augh, Mary Ann		M'Knight, William
B		Miller, Isaac
Boyd, John		Mitchell, George
Bendure, George		McCalister, Mr. Nelson
Brooke, Esq., M. D.		McFeters, J. B.
Barr, John		Man, Mr. Robert
C		Moore, Mr.
Campbell, George		Mitchell, Esq., J. B.
Calhoun, Mrs. Jane M.		Manhall, Miss Mary E.
Courdals, Mr. Elias W.		P
D		Pratt, Abraham
Dorsey, Miss Hannah		Puff, Mrs. Sarah
Devolve, Washington		Prentis, Mr. A. P.
Deitrick, Joseph		R
E		Riley, Mary E.
Ellis, Miss Amanda		Richardson, Wm.
F		Roberts, Mr. Thomas
France, John		Reynolds, Roxana
Freeman, Able		Roush, Henry
Forbes, Edward		S
G		Scanland, Benjamin
Genthrie, Mrs. F. C.		Scott, James L.
Goble, J.		Scadmand, Mr.
H		Sherwood, Miss Mary C.
Hosler, George		Sweeny, Joseph
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.		Showers, Elizabeth
Hoffman, Mr. Jeremiah K.		Smith, Asa C.
Hood, Charles F.		T
J		Tupper, Rachel S.
Jennings, Miss Sarah		Timmel, Mr. F.
James, Elizabeth		W
Johnson, Mr. J. J.		Watson, Jane
L		Woodruff, David
Limel, Joshua		Wilson, Johnson

J. ELDER, P. M.

Advertisements.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October. with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

Pupils will likewise have the benefit of Professor Munson's instruction in vocal music, without incurring any additional expense.

The advantages thus furnished by the Seminary for young ladies to acquire a truly liberal education, are superior to those of most institutions in the country, and it is to be presumed that many will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - -	28 Weeks.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - -	16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - -	$12 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - -	$8 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - -	$6 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - -	$4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.

Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

LATEST ARRIVAL OF NEW GOODS.

WILLIAM P. LARGE,

Has the pleasure of calling the attention of the public to a large and splendid assortment of Foreign Domestic Fall and Winter Goods, purchased at the lowest cash prices, which he is now receiving and opening,—consisting, in part, of the following articles of Dress Goods, &c., Plaid, Striped, Fancy, and Shaded Cashmeres.

Fancy Mouslin de Laines, Caledonia Plaids, Plain plaid and striped Alpacas, Silk Warp and Real do. A large stock of French, Scotch, Changeable, Earlston, Manchester and Domestic Ginghams. A large and well selected supply of FANCY PRINTS from 6 cents up. Plaid Cloakings.

SHAWLS OF VARIOUS DESCRIPTIONS.

An extensive assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Flannels, Linseys, &c., &c. Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, Queensware, Hats, Caps, Groceries, Dye-Stuffs, Paints, Hardware, and so many other desirable goods, that it is too tedious to enumerate; which are in the market, cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! Notwithstanding some of my neighbors admit their former brags of CHEAP mean just nothing at all, I am not willing to be so understood, but will sell VERY LOW for cash, or good trade.

I want it especially understood, that I am not to be undersold by any person. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods.

Putnam, September 30, 1847.

CO-PARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

[NEAL'S SATURDAY GAZETTE.]

CHARLES J. PETERSON having purchased an interest in this paper, the business will hereafter be conducted by the subscribers, under the firm of Cummings & Peterson.—The editorial department will be controlled by C. J. Peterson and Mrs. J. C. Neal.

Mr. Peterson has been one of the editors of this paper, with but a single interval, from the first week of its publication. Mrs. J. C. Neal is favorably known to the public in general as Alice G. Lee, and has, for some months, been an assistant editor of this paper.

It is the intention of the subscribers to make the Gazette as pre-eminent as a family, as it has always been as a literary newspaper.

ALEXANDER CUMMINGS,
CHARLES J. PETERSON,
MRS. JOS. C. NEAL.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sep 30, 1848.

JAMES K. LOGAN,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN & DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

No. 83 Wood St., (One door from Diamond Alley,)
Pittsburgh, Pa.

☞NEW GOODS.☜

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam, Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A. A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

Sept. 15, 1847. [4t.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly

POET'S CORNER.

From the Methodist Protest ant.

THE THUNDER STORM.

'Tis noon;
The burning sun pours down a sultry beam;
The herds have ceased from grazing, and have sought
Beneath the spacious foliage of the oak,
A refuge from his rays. The blithesome birds
Which chirped upon tree-tops at the dawn,
Have ceased their songs; & now with drooping wings
They sit and pant beneath the silent shade.
The flowers that proudly reared their heads at noon,
All teeming with the glistening dew-drops, smiled
To meet his milder rays; but now how changed.
From their bright faces he has drunk the dew,
And poured upon them his unclouded beams
Till they all faint have grown, and drooping low,
Do kiss the ground.

The low-toned winds are hushed.
A death-like stillness now pervades the air;
Not even a zephyr stirs the drooping leaf,
Or fans the withered grass. Deep silence reigns
O'er Nature's face; she stands in solemn awe.
While in the distant west a purple tinge
Appears; which deep'ning into blue and black,
And rising slowly up, betokens that
In Nature's laboratory a storm
Is now preparing. Darker still it grows,
And mounting higher, spreads its sable wings
To either pole; and like an endless chain
Of huge, misshapen mountains, there it lies,
Majestic, awful, beauteous, and sublime!
Far as the stretching eye can reach appears
Profoundly solemn all; and issuing from
The swelling, heaving bosom of the cloud,
A low and sullen murmur now salutes
The listening ear.

Now swiftly nears the storm,
And with increasing terrors as it comes.
Its furies now burst o'er me and around,
The gleaming lightnings blaze from pole to pole;
The deaf'ning thunders roll incessantly;
The rain descends in torrents, and the wind
Sweeps howling, moaning onward; bending low
The verdant forest-trees before its bow,
Or reeling, tossing, crashing, prostrate fall.
The elements—so deeply calm a few
Short hours ago—in their convulsions jar
The solid earth—disfigure Nature's face
They mark their pathway mid the deep and dark
Unbounded forest shades. The flowery meads
And fields they now lay waste; for all things—trees,
And fruits, and flowers, & herbs, & plants—have now
Become the playthings of the storm.

And yet
There's beauty in thee, oh mjestic storm!
To me thou ever didst display a charm.
'Twas my delight in childhood's days to stand
Amid thy havoc, and survey the scenes
By thee laid waste—for I was nursed by thee.
Thy howling tempests oft have sung to me
At close of day a solemn serenade;
Till I from dreams awoke to list thy roar,
And catch the music that thou didst awake.
And if thy rolling thunders in my breast
Awakened terror, it was sweet to me;
For then before the Majesty of heaven
My spirit humbly bowed—my heart was raised
In silent adoration unto Him
Who sits upon the eternal Throne above,
And at his pleasure guides the raging storm:
Ay, when thy awful thunderbolts were hurled---
As now they hurl round my defenceless head,
With a terrific roar and vivid glare---
I thought of Nature's wreck, departing time,
Dissolving elements, eternity!
And thought of Deity, omnipotent,
Invincible, incomprehensible,
Tremendous, boundless, endless, and supreme!

And now, roll on, clouds, winds and waters—roll!
Ye wake again the spells of early hours.
'Tis thus there is such beauty in thy march,
Such music in thy roar.

THE EVENING AND THE MORNING.

Carroll Co., Md., 1847.

The Budget.

Russia--Its Population--Serfs--Peasants of the Crown.

The population of the empire, exclusive of Poland and Lithuania, is estimated at fifty-three million five hundred thousand, of whom twenty-seven million are serfs, belonging to private individuals, and fifteen million are peasants of the crown; this, therefore, leaves but eleven million five hundred thousand persons, who are in the enjoyment of civil rights, and with whom the government is actually brought into contact.

The serfs of private individuals are under the absolute control of their respective masters, and, therefore, give the government very little trouble; while the peasants of the crown are ruled by a system or organization peculiar to themselves, and separate from the regular government of the country.

Now of these eleven million five hundred thousand, who are not serfs, but seven hundred and fifty-one thousand are of a grade sufficiently high to allow them to bring their affairs into the Senate, namely:

Of the nobility,	350,000
Of the clergy,	273,000
Of the merchants of three classes,	128,000
Total,	751,000

So that in reality, the officers of the higher courts of the empire are employed entirely in the affairs of seven hundred and fifty-one thousand persons!

It is a good sign for the serf, that he who now wears the crown of the Czars is not the owner of a single slave; and though the freedom of the Imperial peasant may be as yet, by force of circumstances, imperfect, still the Russian peasant can tell his sons, how the children of the Father "wear no bonds, and how that Father desires the liberty of all who own his sway. God strengthen those ideas in his breast, and should he even succeed in perfecting so stupendous a work, he may know that twenty-seven million hearts, already devoted to his service, will throb wildly in gratitude to the 'Father'—such gratitude as a captor might evince to his liberator, or the prisoner of a dark dungeon might feel towards him who burst his chains, and led him forth to life, liberty, and light."

Be Active.

The body was made for use. Every part of it is formed for activity. But any thing made for use will suffer injury to lie still. The human body, especially if suffered to remain inactive, becomes useless. Activity strengthens the parts. If you would have more strength, you must use what you have, and it will increase. The right use of your members, also must be learned by practice. Much practice is necessary, for instance to train the fingers to the various uses in which they are to be employed, so as to use a homely phrase, to make them handy, the body likewise, needs exercise, to keep it in a healthy state; the various parts of its machinery have a great work to do, every day, in turning over food into blood and sending it a great many thousand times, in a vast number of little streams, to every part of the body. But this machinery will not work, if the body is all the time inactive. It requires motion, to give it power. Nothing, therefore, is so bad for it as laziness. It is like a dead calm to a wind-mill, which stops all its machinery.—Rev. H. Newcomb.

Young Men's Department.

Pursuit of Knowledge under Difficulties.

The following is a most remarkable and praiseworthy instance of what perseverance and industry, rightly directed, are able to effect. Among the graduating class at the commencement last week, at Williams College, was one by the name of Condit, from New Jersey. This gentleman is a shoemaker, is married, and has a family of four children. Six years ago, becaming sensible of the blessings of an education, he commenced learning the simple branches, such as are taught in our primary schools. One by one, as he sat on his shoemaker's bench, he mastered grammar, arithmetic, geography, &c., with some occasional assistance from his fellow workmen. At this time he determined to obtain a collegiate education. Without means, and with a large family depending on him for support, commenced and learned Latin and Greek in the evenings, after his day's labor was over, under the direction of a friend, and after the lapse of a year and a half, prepared himself, and entered the Sophomore Class of Williams College. He brought his bench and tools, as well as his books with him. The students supplied him with work; the faculty assisted him; and together with the fund for indigent students and some occasional assistance from other sources, he was enabled to go through the college course, and at the same time support his family. He graduated last week, on his birth-day, aged thirty-two. He stood high in his class, and received a part at Commencement, but declined. At the farewell meeting of the class, in consideration of his perseverance, talents and Christian character, they presented his wife with an elegant set of silver spoons, tea and table, each handsomely engraved with an appropriate inscription.

Mr. Condit will now enter the Theological Seminary at New York, and no doubt make a faithful and popular minister.

What young man in this country will ever, after such an example as this, despair obtaining an education.—N. Y. True Sun.

To Young Men.

How, after the duties of the day are over, do you employ your evenings? This is a question of importance. If you have no regular employment, no fixed pursuit to engross your attention and operate as a stimulus to the mind, when unemployed, you must, of necessity have many leisure and unoccupied hours; intervals when time will hang heavily on your hands, and suggest the necessity of some means to relieve it of its weight. The very time which is dissipated in idleness, would, if devoted to study, enable many a young man to obtain eminence and distinction in some useful art.

A sexton's son became an astronomer by devoting a few hours every evening to the study of the stars, after ringing the bell for nine o'clock. Gifford, was in early life, an apprentice to a shoemaker, and spent his leisure hours in study. His destitution was such, that he was compelled to work out his problems on a smooth piece of leather, with a blunted awl. David Rittenhouse was a plough-boy, and covered his plough-beam and fences, with his juvenile calculations. James Ferguson was a shepherd boy, and learned to read and write while watching his flocks in the fields by night, and with no other light than the moon and stars.—Hallowell's Courier.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

Faith in God.

There was once a man to whom God spake, and told him to leave his home, his town, and his country; and go off into a strange land, and live under a tent, and never again have a home.—The man asked no reasons, but obeyed. After this, he had a son, his only son. God told him that this son should live and grow up, and should be the forefather of great nations, millions of people. But after this, God told this man to go and take this boy of his, and take his life, and burn up his body with fire. God gave him no reasons for this direction. The good man prepared to obey. He got the wood ready to burn the body of his dear child; he bound his hands and feet, and put out his hand, and took the knife with which to take his life. God then told him not to do it, but to take a ram which he would find close by, and kill him. This was faith in God, for Abraham (for that was his name, and you will find the whole account in the 22d chapter of Genesis,) obeyed God, because he believed God was wise, and holy, and good, though he could not understand why he told him to do this.

Suppose you had lived while the children of Israel lived in Egypt. And suppose you had walked out some pleasant day, just at night down towards the river. Look now, and see what is before you. Yonder is a cluster of tall trees, and just beyond them is a little cottage or hovel.—They are poor folks who live there. See, the house is small, and has no paint on it, no windows, nothing about it that looks comfortable.—This hovel is the home of slaves. The man and the woman are poor slaves. But just look in.—What is that woman doing? See her weaving a little basket with rushes, which she has gathered from the banks of the river. See! she weeps as she twists every flag; and, by the moving of her lips, you see that she is praying. She has finished it. Now, watch her. Do you see her go to the corner of the room, & there kneel down, and weep, and pray over a beautiful little boy?—See her embrace and kiss him. Now she lays him in the little basket; now she calls her little daughter, and tells her to take her little brother, and carry him, and lay him down by the cold river's side. There! now she takes the last look of her sweet babe; now she goes back weeping into the house, and lifting her heart to God in prayer, while her daughter goes, and carries her dear boy, and leaves him on the bank of the river. What will become of him? Will the crocodiles eat him? or will the waters carry him off and drown him? No, no. That poor mother has FAITH in God; and God will take care of her son. The king's daughter will find him, and save him; and that little infant is to be MOSES, the leader of Israel, the prophet of God, and the writer of much of the Bible! This was true faith in God.

Faith in Jesus Christ is a strong belief in him; such a belief as will lead us to obey his commands. We believe there was such a being on earth once as Christ; that he did the miracles told of in the Testament; that he was holy; that he spake the words and the sermons told of in the Testament, as coming from him; that he died for sinners, and rose from the dead, and is gone to heaven, and now lives there, and is doing good to his people. We believe all that is told of him in the Bible. And if this belief or faith is good for any thing, it will cause us to love to read the Bible, to obey Christ, to love him and serve him, because he will reward his people forever beyond the grave, and punish those who do not obey him.

Suppose, as a good old writer says, you should fall into a river, which was deep, and where the water ran swiftly, and you were almost drowned; and a man should run to the bank of the river and call to you, and throw you a rope. This would be just like our Savior. We are all perishing in the "deep waters" of sin; and Christ throws us the rope, and calls us to take hold of it. But it will all do no good unless we take hold of it. Now, this taking hold of the rope is faith.—Faith makes us take hold of Christ, just as you would take hold of the rope, when drowning.—He draws us from the deep waters; and when he has done it, we love him, we thank him, and we obey him.

HUME, THE INFIDEL.

Hume, the celebrated infidel philosopher, and author of a History of England, was dining at the house of an intimate friend. After dinner the ladies withdrew, and in the course of conversation, Hume made some assertions which caused a gentleman to observe to him, "If you advance such sentiments as those, you certainly are what the world gives you credit for being—an infidel."—A little girl, whom the philosopher had often noticed, and with whom he had become a favorite, by bringing her little presents of toys and sweetmeats, happened to be playing about the room unnoticed; she, however, had listened to the conversation, and on hearing the above expression, left the room, went to her mother, and asked her, "Mamma, what is an infidel?" "An infidel! my dear," replied her mother; "why should you ask such a question? an infidel is so awful a character, that I hardly know how to answer you." "Oh! do tell me, mamma," returned the child, "I must know what an infidel is." Struck with her eagerness, her mother at length replied,—"An infidel is one who believes there is no God, no heaven, no hell, no hereafter."

Some days afterward, Hume again visited the house of his friend. On being introduced into the parlor he found no one there but his favorite little girl; he went to her and attempted to take her up in his arms to kiss her as he had been used to do; but the child shrunk with horror from his touch. "My dear," said he, what is the matter? do I hurt you?" "No," she replied, "you do not hurt me, but I cannot kiss you, I cannot play with you." "Why not, my dear?" "Because you are an infidel!" "An infidel! what is that?" "One who believes there is no God, no heaven, no hell, no hereafter." "And are you not very sorry for me, my dear?" asked the astonished philosopher. "Yes, indeed, I am sorry!" returned the child, with solemnity; "and I pray to God for you." "Do you, indeed? and what do you say?" "I say, Oh God teach this man that thou art!" What a striking illustration of the words of sacred writ—"Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained strength, because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and avenger."—Psalms viii, 2.

Miscellaneous.

The Jerking Exercise in Kentucky.

The history of Presbyterianism in Kentucky, by the Rev. Dr. Davidson has many curious chapters, instructive to the christian philosopher. In the accounts of the great revivals of 1800, we have mention made of various bodily agitations, which we have not seen elsewhere so graphically described.

"Swoons and convulsive falling have not been without precedent. They have been recorded as occurring in the days of Wesley, Whitefield, Edwards, the Tenants, and Blair, as well as at Cambuslang and Kilsyth, and examples are not unfrequent in the meetings of the Methodists and Cumberland Presbyterians, at the present day. But the phenomenon now to be described was something far more extraordinary, and altogether without precedent in Christian lands. It was familiarly called "The Jerks," and the first recorded instance of its occurrence was at a sacrament in East Tennessee, when several hundred of both sexes were seized with this strange and involuntary contortion. The subject was instantaneously seized with spasms or convulsions in every muscle, nerve and tendon. His head was jerked or thrown from side to side with such rapidity that it was impossible to distinguish his visage, and the most lively fears were awakened lest he should dislocate his neck or dash out his brains. His body partook of the same impulse and was hurried on by like jerks over every obstacle, fallen trunks of trees, or in a church, over pews and benches, apparently to the most imminent danger of being bruised and mangled. It was useless to attempt to hold or restrain him, and the paroxysm was permitted gradually to exhaust itself. An additional motive for leaving him to himself was the superstitious notion that all attempt at restraint was resisting the Spirit of God.

The first form in which these spasmodic contortions made their appearance was that of a simple jerking of the arms from the elbows down wards. The jerk was very quick and sudden, and followed at short intervals. This was the simplest and most common form, but the convulsive motion was not confined to the arms, it extended in many instances to other parts of the body. When the joint of the neck was affected, the head was thrown backward with a celerity, frightful to behold, and which was impossible to be imitated by persons who were not under the same stimulus. The bosom heaved, the countenance was disgustingly distorted, and the spectators were alarmed lest the neck should be broken. When the hair was long, it was shaken with such quickness, backward and forward, as to crack and snap like the lash of a whip.—Sometimes the muscles of the back were affected, and the patient was thrown down on the ground, when his contortions for some time resembled those of a live fish cast from its native element on the land.

The most graphic description we have is from one who was not only an eye-witness, but an apologist; He says, "Nothing in nature could better represent this strange and unaccountable operation, than for one to goad another, alternately on every side, with a piece of red hot iron. The exercise commonly began in the head which would fly backward and forward, and from side to side, with a quick jolt, which the person would naturally labor to suppress, but in vain; and the more any one labored to stay himself, and be sober, the more he staggered, and the more his twitches increased. He must, necessarily, go as he was stimulated, whether with a violent dash on the ground, and bounce from place to place like a football, or hop round, with head, limbs and trunk twitching and jolting in every direction, as if they must inevitably fly asunder. And how such could escape without injury, was no small wonder to spectators. By this strange operation the human frame was commonly so transformed and disfigured, as to lose every trace of its natural appearance. Sometimes the head would be twitched right and left, to a half round, with such velocity, that not a feature could be discovered, but the face appear as much behind as before; and in the quick progressive jerk, it would seem as if the person was transmuted into some other species of creature. Head dresses were of little account among the female jerkers. Even handkerchiefs bound tight round the head, would be flirted off almost with the first twitch, and the hair put into the utmost confusion; this was a very great inconvenience, to redress which the generality were shorn, though directly contrary to their confession of faith. Such as were seized with the jerks, were wrested at once, not only from under their own government, but that of every one else, so that it was dangerous to attempt confining them, or touching them in any manner, to whatever danger they were exposed; yet few were hurt, except it were such as rebelled against the operation, through wilful and deliberate enmity, and refused to comply with the injunctions which it came to enforce."

From the universal testimony of those who have described these spasms, they appear to have been wholly involuntary. Thus they have been represented by McNemar in the passage just cited. This remark is applicable also to all the other bodily exercises. What demonstrates satisfactorily their involuntary nature is, not only that, as above stated the twitches prevailed in spite of resistance, and even the more for attempts to suppress them; but that wicked men would be seized with them while sedulously guarding against an attack, and cursing every jerk when seized. Travellers on their journey, and laborers at their daily work, were also liable to them.

Instances have been given of men concealing whips on their persons, with the intention of using them upon the subjects or advocates of these contortions, who have themselves, to their great surprise and horror, been suddenly seized in a similar manner, and their whips have been violently jerked out of their hands to a distance. A young man, the son of an elder, who was a tanner, feigned sickness one Sabbath morning, to avoid accompanying the family to a camp-meeting. He was left alone in bed, with none others in the house but a few black children. He lay some time, triumphing in the success of his stratagem, but afraid to rise too soon, lest some might be accidently lingering and detect him. As he lay quiet with his head covered, his thoughts were naturally directed to the camp-meeting, and fancy painted the assembled multitude, the public worship, and individuals falling into the usual spasmodic convulsions. All at once he found himself violently jerked out of bed, and dashed round the room and against the walls, in a manner altogether beyond his control. Recollecting that praying was said to be a good sedative on such occasions, he resorted to the experiment, and to his great satisfaction found it succesful. He returned to bed quite relieved, but only to be again affected in the same way, and to be agaid quieted by the act of praying. He then dressed himself, and, to occupy his mind, went to the tanyard, and drawing a skin from the vat, prepared to unhair it. He rolled up his sleeves, and, grasping the knife, was about to commence the operation, when, instantaneously, the knife was flirted out of his hand, and he himself jerked backward over logs and against the fences, as before. Gaining relief by resorting to the former remedy, he ventured to resume his occupation, and again he was interrupted. But, finding his talisman losing its efficacy, he began now to be really alarmed, and, quitting the yard, he returned to his chamber, and betook himself to prayer in good earnest. In this condition, weeping and crying to God for mercy, he was found by the family on their return. The result of this singular incident was that he became a truly converted man, and shortly after connected himself with the Church.

Another example of the involuntary nature of these motions is presented in the case of a lady and gentleman of some note in the fashionable world, who were attracted to the camp-meeting at Cane Ridge by mere curiosty. On the way they diverted themselves with a variety of jokes upon the poor deluded creatures who allowed themselves to roll screaming in the mud and sportively agreed that if either of them should fall, the other should remain and render suitable protection and assistance. They had not been long on the ground when, to the consternation of the gentleman, his gay companion suddenly dropped; whereupon, instead of fulfilling his promise, he fled at full speed. Flight, however, proved no preservative, for he had not gone 200 yards before he was seized in the same way, and measured his length on the ground; while a crowd flocked round him to witness his mortification, and offer prayers in his behalf.

The Jerks continued to prevail for several years. Dr. Cleland saw a young woman in a Baptist settlement up Green river, who had been supject to them for three years. Lorenzo Dow met with them in 1835, in Knoxville, Tennessee. He was preaching in the Court-house, the Governor being present, on which occasion 150 persons were exercised with the jerks.—Nor were they confined to any particular sect or denomination of Christians, for at an evening meeting that eccentric individual held 18 miles from Knoxville, about a dozen "Quakers," the most unlikely subjects that could have been selected, were affected by them. He says, "I have seen all denominations of religion exercised with the jerks, gentleman and lady, black and white, young and old, without exception. I passed a meeting-house, where I observed the under-growth had been cut away for a camp-meeting, and from fifty to a hundred saplings were left, breast-high, on purpose for people who were jerked to hold by. I observed where they had held on they kicked up the earth, as a horse stamping flies." One is almost tempted to suspect that some wag meant to pass a hoax on Lorenzo's credulity, in this account of the jerking-posts, for it would seem a much more plausible explanation that they were used for tying horses, especially as others assure us it was so difficult to restrain the persons affected.

Non-suiting a Creditor.

There was a certain lawyer on the Cape a long time ago—the only one in those "diggens" then, and for aught I know, at present. He was a man well to do in the world, and what was somewhat surprising in a limb of the law, averse to encouraging litigation.

One day a client came to him in a violent rage. "Look here, 'Squire," said he; "that 'ere blasted shoemaker down to Pigeon Cove has gone and sued me for the money for a pair of boots I owed him." 'Did the boots suit you?' "Oh, yes: I've got 'em on; fust rate boots." "Fair price?" "Oh, yes." "Then you owe him the money honestly." "Course." "Well why don't you pay him?" "Why, cause the blasted snob went and sued me, and I want to keep him out of the money if I kin." "It will cost you something." "I don't keer a fig for that; how much do you want to be feed with?" "Oh, ten dollars will do." "Is that all? well, here's an X; so go ahead;" and the client went out, very well satisfied with the beginning. Our lawyer next called on the shoemaker, and asked him what he meant by commencing legal proceedings against M———. "Why," said he, "I kept on sendin' to him for money till I got tired. I know'd he was able to pay, and I was 'termed to make him. That's the long and short of it." "Well," said the lawyer, "he's always been a good customer to you, and I think you acted too hastily. There's a trifle to pay on account of your proceeding, but I think you'd better take this five dollars, and call it square." "Certainly, 'Squire, if you say so, and very glad to get it," was the answer. So the lawyer forked over one V, and kept the other. In a few days his client came along, and asked him how he got on with his case. "Rapidly," said the lawyer; "we've non-suited him; he'll never trouble you." 'Jerusalem! that's great!' cried the client. "I'd rather gin fifty dollars than have had him got the money for them boots."—N. Y. Spirit of the Times.

VARIETY.

From Burritt's Christian Citizen.

The letter below, from Major General Howe, in reply to a note from Colonel Edmands, inviting him to participate in the funeral ceremonies of Captain Lincoln, will be perused with pleasure by our readers. A rebuke like this, of the abominable doctrine, "our country right or wrong," and from such a quarter, is indeed a cheering indication of the growth of higher sentiments than usually actuate the conduct of our military commanders in regard to matters connected with that profession. Such an exhibition of moral courage, is worth to humanity, more, a thousand times, than that mere brute courage, which knows no higher principle of duty, than to obey the orders of some ruffian in epaulettes, regardless of every question of right, or principle of duty. We copy from the Boston Courier.—T. D.

South Weymouth, July 5, 1847.

DEAR SIR: I have this morning received yours of the 30th ult., relative to the interment of Capt. Lincoln, who fell in the battle of Buena Vista; and feel obliged to say that I do not approve of the object expressed in your letter. It seems to me that the cause in which he fell is one which ought to cover with shame, instead of honor, all who are engaged in it. The Mexican war has been pronounced—justly, I think—infamous; and I do not know of any reason which has been assigned in justification of it, which might not be urged with equal truth and propriety as a reason for making war on the government of the U. S.—If the government of Mexico have been perfidious in regard to treaties, so have ours: if that government have failed to pay their just debts at their proper time, so have ours; if that government have trampled on the rights and liberties of individuals, who desired to reside within her borders, so have ours. And what adds to the enormity of the whole matter is, the hypocrisy which has been manifested in regard to the progress of this war, in assigning false reasons for its inception, and the most palpable absurdities for its continuance. Who does not know that this war would not have occurred, had it not been for the existence of slavery in our own country, and a desire on the part of the present administration and its abettors, to extend it into the Mexican territories! The whole scheme was contrived, as I believe, to extend and perpetuate that system of slavery which now disgraces our country—a country whose voice is loud in the proclamation of liberty, while her hands are busily engaged in the work of despotism. In a cause like this, however cool a man may be in danger—however daring in exploits, or however reckless of consequences, I can see no reason which should entitle such an one to any public honor, which would not apply with equal force to the case of a duellist or pirate, who should exhibit equal evidence of bravery.—I know it may be said that Captain Lincoln belonged to the regular army, and that his duty was to obey the orders of his superior officers; but I am not aware that the orders commanding him to the Mexican territory were repugnant to his inclinations, or that he made any efforts to be excused from the duties assigned him on that station, and in this view he should be placed on a par with the volunteer corps of the army, whose infamy, I hope, may be as lasting as the cause they have espoused. Had Captain Lincoln fallen in a good cause, in the defence of his country, no one would have been more ready than myself to do him honor; but in the invasion of another country, he loses all my sympathy, and all my respect.—Such are some of my feelings in regard to the subject-matter of your letter, and while I thus plainly express them in all honesty, and with due respect to those who may differ from me in opinion, I accord to others the same liberty which I claim for myself, of thinking and expressing their thoughts in accordance with their convictions of duty. I must, therefore, decline taking any part in this matter, and leave it in your hands, or in the hands of those who may feel an interest in the concern.

With sentiments of the highest respect,
I remain yours, &c.,
APPLETON HOWE.
Maj. General 1st. Division M. V. M.

Colonel B. F. EDMANDS.
1st. Infantry, 1st. Brigade, 1st. Division.

Railways---Hear a Bostonian.

A writer in the Boston Courier, on the subject of railway connection with the great west, makes the following sensible remarks relating to our trade:

Formerly almost the entire trade of Ohio was with Baltimore and Piladelphia. The construction of the New York Canal, and the Ohio, from Portsmouth, on the Ohio river, to Cleveland, on Lake Erie, has diverted a very important portion of it to New York, and some small portion to Boston, for which the latter city may credit the railway system. But it is in the highest degree important to the business men of these cities that the dealers from the country who visit them, should do so without first having their pockets collapsed in Philadelphia and Baltimore, for they, like nature, abhor a vacuum, and particularly in the purse. The question of the extension of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to Wheeling, has just been settled, and the work will be prosecuted with vigor. Companies are organized in Ohio for the continuation of this road through Columbus, the capital and near the geographical centre of the state, to the line of Indiana, with an ultimate termination at several different points on the Mississippi river. That the road from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh will be made, there can be no doubt nor of its extension westerly or southwesterly through Ohio, unless roads be made northerly in Ohio to Lake Erie.

If the roads first referred to be made, in the absence of any counteracting effort, it requires neither prophet, nor the son of one, to see that three-fourths or more of the trade of Ohio, whatever New York or Boston get, will be only that rejected in the more southern cities. But if wrong in this, as all trade is prosecuted for the profit, it must not be forgotten that western merchants, coming through Baltimore and Philadelphia, are made to believe they can make their entire purchases there on better terms than in New York and Boston; and if sales are made to them in these cities, it will be on much less advantageous conditions than if they had made their first visits to them.

The state of Ohio has now near two millions of people, and is capable of sustaining three times as many. She has a people, too, industrious, enterprising, energetic, economical, and honest, and who have maintained their faith to their bondholders through the worst of times, and in more cases than one, at great sacrifice; and when one ancient and far wealthier state on the east, and three younger sisters on the west and north, hung out the black flag of practical repudiation. She has now about as large a population as the state of New York, excluding a circle of ten miles, of which the city Hall of New York should be the centre. It was, in 1840, 300,000 a head of Virginia counting bond and free, and but 200,000 behind Pennsylvania; and in 1850, will be the second state in population. You can hardly find a quarter section of absolutely waste land within her bounds; and much of the land is exceedingly fertile, while iron and salt may be made in quantity ample to supply the Union.

A share of the trade of such a country as this, is to be worth the efforts of any city, and it depends much upon New York and Boston, whether they will not appropriate to themselves much the larger share of it. The expense of railroads at the west is light, compared with it in New England. A road may be made complete, equal in quality with the Boston and Albany, from Detroit to Lake Michigan, from Sandusky to Cincinnati, and from Cleveland to Columbus and Cicinnati for about one-third of the cost of merely grading the one first named. The same comparison may be made with the road now being constructed hence to Lake Champlain, though the differences would not be so great. The climate too, is to be considered, for a well-made road at the west may be kept in repair the whole year for less money than it frequently costs to remove the snow from a New England road, which at the west would be nothing.

But I have spun out the matter much more than I intended, and I only restate that if Boston and New York wish to share largely in the trade of the southern slope of the great Mississippi Valley, the policy is to aid in making railroads northerly to the Lakes. Laying aside the benefit of this and looking merely at dividends, I submit if roads costing from 30 to $55,000 a mile in this country will pay liberally, that roads of equal quality running through the fertile fields of the west, costing but $15,000 a mile would pay at least as well. The business might not be so great for a time, but stockholders would find a marked difference between spreading profits over $15,000 and 50,000.

BOISTEROUS PREACHING.—A celebrated divine, who was remarkable in the first period of his ministry for a loud and boisterous mode of preaching, suddenly changed his whole manner in the pulpit, and adopted a mild and dispassionate mode of delivery. One of his brethren observing it, inquired of him what had induced him to make the change? He answered—"When I was young, I thought it was thunder that killed people: but when I grew wiser, I discovered that it was the lightning—so I determined to thunder less and lighten more in future.

DEFERRED ITEMS.

NATIVE AMERICAN CONVENTION.—The National Native American Convention, recently assembled in this city, had quite a stormy time during their session. One party wished to discard the twenty-one years' principle, and adopt a resolution in favor of allowing no man to vote who was not born in this country. A large portion of the Convention withdrew upon finding a disposition in the majority to force this new principle through. In their absence it was adopted.

Letters were read from various distinguished gentlemen, in answer to others asking them if they would accept the nomination of the Native party for the Presidency. General Taylor replied as usual, that he would be the candidate of no party. Henry Clay declined the nomination, waiving the expression of any opinion upon the principles of the Native party. Com. Stewart also declined, as unwilling to encounter the high responsibilities of such an office. Ogden Edwards also declined, though he expressed his approbation of Native principles. It was finally agreed to propose—not nominate—Gen. Taylor for the Presidency, and to nominate Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn, of Massachusetts, for the Vice Presidency.

There were about 120 members in attendance on the Convention, 30 of whom were from Pennsylvania; 39 from New York; 10 from Massachusetts; 8 from New Jersey; 6 from Delaware; 6 from Maryland, and 4 from Ohio.—Saturday Ev. Post.

THE FAILURES IN EUROPE.—The Effect Here.—The New York Herald gives a list of twenty-four failures in the principal cities of Europe, the estimated liabilities of which amount to more than five million pounds sterling. It then adds:

"We find nothing in the public accounts of the amount as the assets of these concerns, and nothing very definite as to the amount of liabilities. There are some conjectures relative to the probable dividends of W. R. Robison & Co. and Alexander & Co. It is stated that the former will pay 12s. to 15s. and the latter 6s. to 8s. on the pound. We have our fears that most of these concerns will turn out no better.

"There is no doubt but that the losses by these houses will fall heavily upon houses in this country; but we trust, and are induced to believe, not to an extent sufficient to create many, if any, insolvencies. If the failures do not increase much—if the bulk of bankruptcy has taken place, we may not suffer so much as at first anticipated Suppose an average dividend of 10s. on the pound is paid by each of the houses connected with this country, and the liabilities of these houses amount to £3,000,000, there will be a deficiency of one and a half millions sterling, equal to seven and a half millions of dollars. This amount distributed throughout this country, would not fall very heavily upon any section, and would not amount to the aggregate profits on the shipments of breadstuffs for the past year.

The New Orleans Picayune of the 14th, referring to the accounts of the failures recieved by the Caledonia, which left Liverpool on the 19th, says:—

"So far as New Orleans is concerned, which has been set down as a large sufferer, we feel authorized to say that the reports have been grossly exaggerated. We have taken some pains to inform ourselves in the premises, and are induced to believe that the amount of bills returned to New Orleans scarcely exceeds ten thousand pounds, and this sum is so distributed among the commercial community that no notable harm is to accrue therefrom."

SUICIDE OF A YOUNG GIRL.—Elizabeth Reddick, an orphan girl, about 17 years of age, killed herself on the 17th instant, at St. Louis, Missouri, by taking arsenic, in consequence of having wrongly been charged with a theft, in a family where she resided This is a most melancholy case.

NEW COUNTERFEIT.—A new counterfeit three dollar note on the Bank of Sandusky, has made its appearance. It is signed B. Higgins, President, and W. W. Wetherell Cashier, dated October 1st 1844, letter A., payable to O. Smith.—Their general appearance is well calculated to deceive, and the signatures extremely well done; the general appearance rather lighter than the genuine. No notes have been issued by this bank, of a date since 1842, and none payable to O. Smith.—O. S. Journal.

The amount of the recent forgery in N York is now fixed at $53,000

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 2. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, OCTOBER 15, 1847. WHOLE NO. 418.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

REVERDY H. WHITE, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents, can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

LAY OF AN INVALID.

Soon will the wearied wheels of life be still,
It's fev'rish cares and troubles all be o'er:
Secure from all its dark'ning gloom of ill,
Rude storms shall break my quiet rest no more!

Long have I sighed for a secure repose—
A quiet resting place to lay my head;
Where all the busy scenes of life shall close.
And Peace her wings outspread above my lowly bed

What is this world? Pure Friendship dwells not here:
Her's is a sweeter and a holier clime:
Falls not her lovely tones upon my ear,
To soothe the mournful soul with her melodious chime!

War, lust, deceit, rapine, and angry strife
Spread a dark veil across each lovely scene;
And Christian mars his fellow Christian's life,
Then smoothes his pious face with sanctimonious mien!

No, let me rest in some lone pleasant grave,
Where flow'rets bloom, and birds sweet music make
Upon the willow's bough that zephyrs wave,
Nor stormy scenes of life the solitude awake!

But when the clangor of the trump of God
My sleeping dust from fetters shall release,
I'll rise in triumph o'er the yielding sod,
On golden pinions borne to realms of endless peace!

Wilmington, O., Sept. 1847. J. B. P.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XI.

Having been absent from home, attending two protracted meetings and the Annual Conference, I have got behind with my Sketches; and as some of the brethren have expressed themselves well pleased with them, I will venture to send on a few more numbers.

On Friday the 15th of January, 1830, according to promise, I set out for Tanner's Creek, 25 miles west from Cincinnati: favored with the company of Brother I. Snyder and Brother Garretson, we reached Brother Ewbank's about dark. Saturday, 16th, preached to about fifty in a very comfortable stone church,—the Lord blessed the word to many souls. I then met the class who were nearly all from Old England,—we had a precious season. I then obtained fourteen names who wished to organise under the conventional Articles; the balance of the class expected to unite with them when I came again. And as the meeting-house had never been deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America, those brethren who built it, justly kept it as their own property, notwithstanding the preacher in charge, demanded a deed after they had withdrawn. Saturday night, Brother Snyder preached with great zeal, and Brother Garretson gave a warm exhortation,—we had a precious season. Sunday morning, we had a glorious old-fashioned English love-feast: a number spoke very feelingly. By eleven o'clock the house was nearly full, to whom I preached with liberty,—many tears were shed. At night, I preached in another meeting-house to a large assembly, about two miles distant. Monday, 18th, set off to see my family, having been absent one week longer than I expected,—reached home the next day,—found all in health. O, how good the Lord is to me and mine! We have been blessed with health nearly two years, though ten in number, not one of us I believe have been confined in bed one day on account of sickness. Praise the Lord! yea, let all that is within me praise the Lord! I have met with opposition from preachers in a certain quarter, but it has generally tended to their own hurt, and I am getting so accustomed to their evil reports, that I mind it no more than if they would keep silent. May the Lord have mercy upon them, and fill their hearts with love!

On Saturday, 23d, rode thirty miles to Brother Ready's,—preached there Sunday, and the word was blessed to many. At the close I invited all who wished to be organised under the Articles of Association, to come forward. Brother Ready, who never had belonged to any church, was the first to come forward, his wife and daughter and one more.

Monday, 25th, rode to Brother Handford's,—preached at night, and God attended the word with power,—several sinners were cut to the heart, by the sword of the spirit, and the whole class appeared to be re-baptised with the Holy Ghost. Twenty-ninth, rode 20 miles to Moore's settlement,—preached next day at Br. Flake's, and agreeably to a previous plan, attempted to organise; a local preacher came forward, but the hearts of the rest failed; however they afterward agreed to unite, and did so. Preached again at night.

Sunday, 30th, rode ten miles to Br. Shroaf's,—preached at night to a house full, who had been told of the meeting after I got there. The good Lord attended the word with power,—several sinners were convicted, and one converted. I organised a class of eight members, and a prospect of a number more. Glory to God, that in the midst of surrounding opposition, and hard toiling, through the stormy wintry blasts, I have some blessed seasons. Meeting continued very late.—Next morning, February 1st, I found the snow had fallen about one foot deep, and I was fifty miles from home, and had been absent several weeks. I set out and had to break the road nearly all the way. A little after dark I missed my way, but saw a light, and went to it; I called, and Brother J. Tribby came out, an Episcopal Methodist; I asked for entertainment, he knew my voice and gladly received me, and we had a very pleasant time together. Next day I reached home.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Watchman of the Valley.

INTERESTING.

Cincinnati, Sept. 13, 1847.

Dear Br. Goodman: Many of your readers will doubtless be interested to know, that an effort has been made by the Western Evangelical Missionary Society, (now an auxilary of the American Missionary Association,) to carry the gospel to the Red men of the forest. Two stations have been established by this Society among the Ojibway Indians, one at Red Cedar Lake, on the head waters of the Mississipi, and the other at Red Lake, north of the dividing ridge between the head waters of the Mississipi and Red Rivers.

The Station at Red Lake was commenced in 1843. For want of adequate support these Missions have had to struggle with difficulties and privations that none but those who have been placed in like trying circumstances can appreciate. But, notwithstanding their sufferings and discouragements have been great, their hearts have been cheered by the conversion of souls among that benighted people and they have been amply repaid for all their toil. In the winter of 1835-6 they had an interesting revival. Ten were hopefully converted and received into the church. The following letter is from one of the converts, a man about 45 or 50 years of age.—In the spring of 1846 one of our missionaries from Red Lake came down to the northern part this State, and this man was anxious to accompany him and visit the white man's country. He came with him 250 miles through the wilderness towards the Falls of St. Anthony, when something awakened a doubt in his mind, whether he ought to come or not. After praying very earnestly for direction, he says to the missionary—"the Great Spirit won't hear me. When I pray about any thing else, he hears me; but when I pray about this, he won't hear me; and I think he would not have me go." He concluded to return home, though he was very anxious to come. He then dictated to me the following letter, which is a better picture of an Indian convert's heart than any I can draw. If you will give it an insertion in your paper, I hope it may stir up the hearts of some of your readers to do something to aid this Society in sending the gospel to the heathen of our own and other lands.

Donations for either of the above mentioned Societies may be directed to myself at Oberlin, Ohio, or to Lewis Tappan, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, New York.

Yours, respectfully,
J. P. BARDWELL.

Crow Wing River, March 29, 1846.

To Rev. J. P. Bardwell.—My Father I wish to speak to you. I wish to inform you how I am. I had thought to go and see you to speak to you well. To let you know how we Indians are, how poor we are. We did not know how poor we were before the teachers came. Now we see that we did not know how poor we were. My Father, indeed we were very blind. We walked in darkness. Now I wish to tell you how I have been blessed. I rejoice very much that God has blessed me. He has opened my eyes to see what I should do to be well here in this world and to enter heaven. I trust in the Great Spirit to help me. God has put down to us poor Indians a great blessing. We thank him who owns us that he has shown us how we may be wise. He, while we were sitting in darkness, has brought to us a great light. I thank you that you sent your brethren here to teach us poor Indians. The teachers have greatly pitied us, and done us great good. We thank them. I see with my own eyes how much good they do. Now, my Father, I will tell you what they have done. Before they came among us we were all naked, we and our children. Before we saw your brethren our clothing was like a net, full of holes, but now we all have something to wear. They pitied us and helped us to clothe ourselves and our children.—They helped us to cultivate our gardens, and raise corn to sell and buy us clothing, and that we might have food and not suffer with hunger. This was doing to us great good, but now, since we have seen and felt in our hearts, that the Word of the Great Spirit is truth, we thank them much more that they have brought this to us than all they have done for our bodies. I assure you, my Father, that the word of the Great Spirit, has entered, not only into my head, but also into my heart; and as I have seen, first, that the Book is truth, I want to help you and your brethren here in teaching (as well as I know how) my fellow Indians. I cannot tell you how happy I was when I first gave up my heart. All my old ways I cast behind my back. I hate the way I once lived. I love the truth. God has shown me how wicked I was. He has shown me how I may overcome all that he hates. I will tell you what I loved most when I lived in sin. There was nothing I loved so much as gambling. I thought of nothing so much. I wish to tell you well how I was. I once loved my reputation very much. The Indians all called me brave. When we went to fight the Sioux, I was always among the first, and I thought I was doing well. I rejoiced very much that I was honored as a Brave. I tell you, my Father, that though I was strong-hearted to stand in battle, when the Word of the Great Spirit came into my heart I was the first to tremble. I had no courage now. I fell. My brother, who carries this to you will tell you that I now love the truth. I had thought to go and see you to tell you all these things myself, but I have asked the Great Spirit to teach me whether I should go or not, and I think he would not have me go.

I must tell you something about my wife and children. My wife is strong to believe the Word of God. We were together blind, but now we both see. Our children, too, believe; one little daughter, about ten years old, has been received into the church. We trust they will all become truly wise. We are happy. Our hearts are sometimes full of joy, though we are poor. We have seven children, the Great Spirit owns them all. We give them all up to be taught to be wise. We have settled down by the teachers that we and our children may be instructed.

My Father, I will tell you more how I am.—While I have been talking to you now the Indians who are drinking whiskey near by, have sent twice to have me come and drink with them, but I have no thought to go. Now I want to say to you and your brethren, as though I stood before you, don't hate a poor Indian. I wish to shake hands with you all in my heart. As you believe so I believe. Will you pity me, and pray for me, that the evil spirit may not overcome me? If I cannot see you again on earth, I want to see you in heaven. This is all I will say to you now.

KUAUISENSISH,
[The bad little boy.]

Mission Among the Ojibways.

We heard an address last Sabbath, from the Rev. Mr. Bardwell, who has spent two years as a missionary, with the Ojibway Indians. Like other missonaries, his toils and privations for this benighted people have deeply enliisted his sympathies in their behalf, and christians who listen to his statements will be very happy to participate in his sympathy.

The missionary station is about 400 miles north west of the Western shore of Lake Superior, in latitude 48. It is accessible from said lake, by water, with the exception of about 60 miles of portage, in the aggregate, on different points of the route, over which the bark canoes and their contents—provisions, clothing, merchandize, &c.—are carried by hand. The missionaries get their supplies throngh this channel.

The Ojibway tribe is estimated to contain about 25,000 souls, divided into squads of about 50 each, at the head of which is a chief. The men have the common Indian characteristics of indolence, improvidence, fondness for intoxicating drink, and a dispositition to oppress the weaker sex.

The sufferings of the Indians, from want of food, Mr. Bardwell represents as sometimes very great, and death from starvation frequently occurring. Dried deer skins, old shoes, decoctions of bark, and other things even more meagre and disgusting, are the miserable apology for food which they attempt to live on at such times. Instances of cannibalism, have sometimes grown out of such suffering. Mr. Bardwell related a case—said to have occurred before his residence among them—in which the parents ate successively their two children, and the husband afterwards ate his own wife.

In these seasons of destitution, the missionaries have sometimes divided their last morsel with the suffering Indians, not knowing where their next meal was to be procured. But a kind Providence had always met their exigencies at such times. The winter is usually the time of the greatest suffering, before the sugar season commences. After this season commences, they subsist often, for weeks, on sugar alone.

Their means of cultivating their land are very limited. The women dig small portions of ground for planting Indian corn, with a wooden hoe, which they obtain by cutting from a tree (with sharp stones) a horizontal limb, with a chip on the but of it, which they work into the shape of a hoe.

The missionaries among the Ojibways, are supported some of them by the American Board, and others by the American Missionary Association, who are united in one church. Mr. Bardwell is in the employment of the latter society, and is at present traveling as agent in its behalf.
—Watchman of the Valley.

TEMPERANCE.

NOW I'LL NOT DRINK ANY MORE.

AIR—"Thou reign'st in this bosom."

Go, go, thou that enslav'st me,
Now, now, thy power is o'er;
Long, long, have I obey'd thee;
Now I'll not drink any more.
No, no, oh, no,
Now I'll not drink any more.

Thou, thou, bringest me ever,
Deep, deep, sorrow and pain,
Then, then, from thee I'll sever;
Now I'll not serve thee again.
No, no, oh, no,
No, I'll not serve thee again.

Rum, rum, thou hast bereft me,
Home, friends, pleasure so sweet,
Now, now, forever I've left thee,
Thou and I never shall meet.
No, no, oh, no,
Thou and I never shall meet.

Joys, joys, bright as the morning,
Now, now, on me will pour,
Hope, hope, sweetly is dawning,
Now, I'll not drink any more.
No, no, oh, no,
Now, I'll not drink any more.

From the Golden Rule.

The directions given below, taken from the Religious Herald, are exactly in point. Reader, follow them implicitly, and we ensure success. On this point we speak confidently, having groaned out, some eight or ten years, a gloomy miserable dyspeptic.

Dyspeptic Precepts.

1. Take your food in large mouthfuls—say an inch cube or more.

2. Swallow these mouthfuls with the least possible chewing.

3. Pack them in, one after another, as fast as you can.

4. Take copious draughts of some liquid at all your meals—whether soup, tea, coffee or milk. If milk, let it be very poor. If tea or coffee, put in little or no cream.

5. Eat your bread, especially leavened wheat bread, hot from the oven. Never let it be a day old. Bread two or three days old is a terrible anti-dyspeptic.

6. Take very little exercise; but let that little be always just after meals; never just before them.

7. Sit up late at night, and be abed late in the morning. Early hours, and exercise before meals, are worse against dyspepsia, if possible, than bread two or three days old.

8. Do not laugh or talk much, nor read aloud, nor sing; but sit moping, and thinking about your stomach.

9. Smoke, or chew tobacco—I do not say a great deal, because if you begin, the great deal will be pretty sure to follow.

You may heighten the efficacy of the above rules in various ways---by taking alcoholic drinks, for instance, ever so moderately; or by eating from a great variety of dishes at the same meal—the greasier the better; or by taking a snack between every two meals.

But these latter refinements and additions are superfluous. You may rely upon the nine precepts to give you, or to keep you, as beautiful a case of dyspepsia as ever baffled a doctor or worried a patient.

By way of filling up, allow us, if you please, gentle reader, to add a few items.

1. Let the soles of your shoes be thin very thin, that dampness may easily penetrate.

2. Seldom, if ever, ventilate your rooms, especially your sleeping rooms. Let the atmosphere be confined and impure as may be.

3. Never bathe in pure water; keep the whole system as filthy as possible.

4. Let all your garments fit like a drum-head, especially near the region of the lungs. Endeavor to conform nearly in shape to the wasp. Stays are excellent!

5. Be sedentary in your habits; meanwhile, exercise very little in the open air.

6. Sip, now and then, at the wine and brandy bottle. Let your food be highly seasoned. Make free use of gravies, sweet-meats, confectionaries.

7. Be sure and take tea and coffee; take them hot, scalding hot; very strong, with but little admixture of sugar and cream. Indeed, take all your food smoking hot.

Lastly and finally, to crown the climax, use tobacco freely, in every form; keep the pockets well filled, especially keep the pipe agoing briskly, don't stop.

Miscellaneous.

The Christian Society of Brotherly Love.

A correct Synopsis—Prepared for the Newspapers.

As certain defective and inaccurate statements have found their way into the public journals, in relation to this Institution, the following synopsis has been prepared, in hope that it will be favored with general circulation.

I. ITS ORIGIN.

It originated in the exercises of a confirmed faith in Bible Christianity; an ardent love for Bible Christianity; and a sinecure desire to promote Bible Christianity.

II. ITS HISTORY.

It was first suggested, in a "Candid Address to our Readers," by the Editor of the "Christian World," in the fourth volume of that work—in the number for February, 1844. The "Constitution" was first published, in the fifth volume—in the number for March, 1845. Though the trial of the plan was encouraged by ministers and laymen, of distinction and influence, in various Denominations; and by several Annual Conferences of the Church to which its projector belongs; no effort was made to obtain signatures to the "Constitution," until Tuesday evening, April 27, 1847. Only one Society has yet been organized. These facts are furnished, in proof that there has been no inconsiderate or eager haste in the matter. Meanwhile, other schemes have been tested—and have failed. The demand of the age—a prompting from heaven—remains as it was: "Show us something that is worthy of Bible Christianity."

III. ITS MAIN PRINCIPLE

Its main principle is—that it is the design of Christianity to ascertain and supply all human need. In connexion with this principle, and in order to its practical exemplification, it asserts and urges the imperative duty of Christian Union and Co-operation: and this, whatever may be in the way—whether creeds, governments, and forms of worship, or the personal and sectarian interests connected with them.

IV. ITS OBJECT.

Its object is—to ascertain and supply the natural, spiritual, and social need, of its members and others, in the name, for the honor, and according to the commandments, of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

V. ITS TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

These are—an approved moral character; Christian discipleship, actual or desired; the acknowledgement that the Bible is the Book of God, and Private Judgment the duty and right of man; and an engagement to comply with the By-Laws—which, of course, each society will form or adopt for itself. In the Society already organized, each member is presented, at the time of his reception, with a plain, portable copy of the Bible, bearing the stamp of the Society, with the name of the person over it, and the date of the presentation under it.

VI. ITS MEANS OF USEFULNESS.

These are—the Ordinances of the Gospel; the Press; and pecuniary Contributions—both prescribed and voluntary. The Philadelphia Society entitles its two funds: the Contributors' Fund, and the Voluntary Fund. The former resembles the funds of the Beneficial Societies, generally: the latter gives free scope to the generosity of Christian benevolence. No initiation fees are required; nor is any fine or tax allowed. Initiation offerings, however, are received—intended to correspond with personal ability, and express Christian principle. The Society is not allowed to go in debt; or to authorize agents to solicit private donations. It depends on its own resources; in connexion with Public Collections, Donations sent to its Officers, Bequests, &c.

VII. ITS ORGANIZATION.

The affairs of the Society are conducted by a President, one or more Vice-Presidents, a Recording Secretary, Corrresponding Secretary, a Treasurer, and a Publication Agent; in connexion with a Board of Managers; and a series of Committees, intended, as far as practicable, to keep the whole membership actively employed in all good works.

VIII. ITS COMPREHENSIVE CHARACTER.

In view of the simplicity of its Main Principle; the completeness of its Object; the liberality of its Terms of Membership; the variety of its Means of Usefulness; and its all-employing Organization—it may be affirmed, that this one Institution is comprehensive of all the commendable distinctions of all the Churches and Benevolent Societies in existence. Its one inquiry—"What do you need?"—includes all their designs; and its one promise—"In the name of Christ, I will supply it!"—embraces all their methods.

IX. ITS LOCAL INDEPENDENCY.

The plan is—to unite all the Christians in a neighborhood in doing all the good that neighborhood needs. Being united, for this purpose, they are to proceed "under law to Christ," but in perfect freedom from the interference of any other society, or confederation of societies. If a thousand similar societies should be organized, they would compose, not an Authoritative but merely a Sympathetic Christian Union.

X. ITS RELATIVS POSITION.

Some mistake its relation to Individuals: supposing it accessible only to Church members—which is an error; or that it especially excludes the members of Secret Associations—which is equally an error. Christians are welcome—let them come whence they may. Persons desiring to become Christians, are received—let them come whence they may. The poor slave of vice, having just broken his bonds, is particularly exhorted to come. The Society says to him: "This is the very place for you! Cnre up not only one sin but all sins! Be not only a Reformed Drunkard, or a Reformed Gambler, or a Reformed Swearer, or a Reformed Sabbath-Breaker: but come and be a Christian!"

Others mistake its relation to other Institutions: supposing, because, in its great work of supplying need, it may sometimes assume a Church form; that, therefore, it portends offensive war against all existing Churches—and, also, because, as a Benevolent Society, it acts on the Bible principles of openness, simplicity, and general beneficence; that, therefore, it threatens hostilities against all the Societies which disregard these principles. On account of the fact that its founder is a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church, some seem to think that it is a sort of special Opposition-Society to that Church. Others, for the same reason, imagine that it is a kind of Auxiliary-Society to that Church. Others, for other reasons, consider it a competitor for public favor with the Order of the Sons of Temperance. All these notions are utterly erroneous. Every thing like them is an error. Persons who thus judge, have no just appreciation of the principles and facts in the case.

See! A survey has been made, however imperfectly, of Social Institutions in whole—Civil and Ecclesiastical, Benevolent and Semi-Benevolent, and all other classes. In the honest exercise of private judgment, they have been compared with the Book of God—compared, in particular, with the Church of the New Testament. Their faults, as apparent on this comparison, have been carefully noted. These faults are regarded as causes, in part, of the declension of religious influence. A Society, intended to avoid these faults, and, at the same time, to exhibit various improvements, has been organized. It has no concern, for or against, any one Sect, Society, or Order, more than any other. It disdains all indirectness and litleness. It sounds the silver trumpet from the heights of Moriah—turning, as it blows, that all Jerusalem may hear. It rises up in the midst of all the Churches, and all the Societies, and all the Orders, to show them all "a more excellent way!" If that be offensive war—it declares it!—if that be offensive war—it will wage it! And it has no fear for the result. For this is a work that must be done. "A more excellent way" must be shown. The present way—the way of usurped authority, and consequent impositions, oppressions, strifes, divisions, and desolations—the way of dishonor at home and inefficiency abroad—must be abandoned for something better. According to the present way, God's "word," which is "forever—settled in heaven," is forever unsettled on earth: the "Son of Man" is again "betrayed into the hands of men:" and "the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood," is sold for gain and enslaved with a smile! If the "Christian Society of Brotherly-Love cannot show "a more excellent way" than this, it prays that it may perish—and that something better, infinitely better, may arise to do what it is so obvious must be done.

Meantime, if surrounding Institutions are so sensitive that they will not bear to be told of their faults, even by a friend—not in anger but in love, not with resentiment but in sorrow, not for evil but for good: not as their foes tell them—in strains of Satanic derision and delight: not as they themselves often disclose them—when they come into mutual collision; and Satan gains an advantage over them; and persuades them they are doing God service, by severing the sinews of each other's usefulness, with the scalpel of scorn; and burning the embroidered girdles of confidence and affection in the fires of jealously and suspicion: if, under such circumstances, they repel the brotherly monitions of this Society, and insist upon it that its voice is the voice of an enemy—why, sure enough, it will have but one way to recall them to their senses, and that is, by asking them, in calm Paulonian dignity—"Am I therefore become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?"—and then proceeding, as faithfully as before, with its appointed work.

XI. ITS INVITATIONS.

It invites inquiry. This may be made, most conveniently, by addressing, post-paid, the "Editors of the Weekly Christian World—Philadelphia." A number of the paper, containing the Constitution, By-Laws, two Addresses, and other matter illustrative of the subject—will be sent, as directed, in answer to such applications.

It invites co-operation. In the organization recently made in this city, (Philadelphia,) besides Masons, Odd Fellows, Sons of Temperance, &c.—there is an informal representation of fourteen different Churches; viz: the Associate Reformed Presbyterian; Baptist; Christian; Cumberland Presbyterian; Dutch Reformed; Friends; German Reformed; Independent; Meth. Episcopal; Methodist Protestant; New Jerusalem; N. S. Presbyterian; O. S. Presbyterian; and Protestant Episcopal. This really begins to look like True Christian Union: and if the Society succeed in the accomplishment of its "Object," as already stated, certainly it will present an example worthy of universal imitation; and so exert, upon older institutions, the kind of influence it prefers.

It has been asked: "Whether a Society could be formed in the country?—how many members it would take to start a Society?" &c. It may be answered, that there is not a human being in the world to whom the principle of this society does not apply; and there is not a neighborhood, where twelve men can be found to act as officers, where the Society may not be usefully established. There is no chartered right to be applied and paid for. The "Constitution" will be sent any where. Any who are conscientiously disposed to sign it may do so, and set to work. The call is this: "Come, Brethren! let us fulfil the grand design of Christianity! Let us ascertain and supply all need—every man, in his own soul; every family, in its own home; every community, with its own limits—so beginning at the centre and working outward, and onward, until our expanding circles shall meet, and one magnificent and blissful scene of common and complete redemption shall glorify our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ!" T. H. S.

Philadelphia, July 29, 1847.

Under Beds.

I am perfectly satisfied that of all the various, I had almost said innumerable, materials used for filling under beds, corn husks, properly selected and prepared, are the best. Straw, which for a great number of years was almost the only article used for this purpose, and which, even now many regard as superior to "everything else," soon wears down, becomes chaffed, and requires frequent replenishing; where-as the soft plant, and elastic inner husks of corn, when once you have obtained a sufficiency of them to fill the bed, enables you to dismiss all care or apprehensions about it for years. If carefully stripped and dried, a bed filled with this material, will last a lifetime. Farmers who do not attend to this important item of domestic economy, are culpably remiss in an important and obligatory duty. Not only are husks more healthy than straw, but they possess also a very decided advantage over it, in the important manner of cleanliness. Straw, from its liability to wear down, soon becomes a fruitful source of dust, which, is surely from the sack or tick, in the form of fine and almost impalpable particles, almost imperceptibly insinuates itself into every part of the house, and becomes a source of continual annoyance to the accupants as well as to those whose duty it is, and whose pleasure it should be, to keep it clean. B.

Bensalem, Aug. 20, 1847.

From the American Patriot.

Mrs Birney, the Somnambulist Preacher.

Mr. Clarke: It might, perhaps, be gratifying to some of your readers to learn something concerning this remarkable woman from one who heard her preach. On Sabbath, the 8th of Aug., I had the pleasure of hearing her, and can furnish a brief statement of her interesting case. For near eight years she has been afflicted with periodic Neuralgia, called, "Catalepsis Loquax," or a species of Somnambulism. Upon every alternate Sabbath, near 10 o'clock, A. M., the spasm seizes her, and in a short time the religious exercises commence. On the day mentioned, she began to speak a few minutes before eleven. Being elevated to an erect sitting posture in her bed, she commenced by an appropriate and solemn prayer. She then chose for her text, Luke 17: 24: "Strive to enter in at the straight gate; for many I say unto you, will seek to enter and shall not be able." The general plan of her discourse was to specify some reasons why the "many," spoken of could not enter in at the "straight gate;" such as unbelief, sectarian bigotry, and pride of heart and life.

Upon each of these topics, she discoursed at length, drawing her illustrations from both sacred and profane history, some of which were striking and happy. She avowed and vindicated as her theological system—Man's entire sinfulness and inability to recover himself—Salvation by unmerited grace, and the complete sovereignty, faithfulness, and holiness of God; upon these last she appeared to have enlarged views.

A great proneness to wander from the thread of her discourse, (to which, however, she always returned,) and a considerable amount of stammering, mars the enjoyment of her hearers much. She also introduces much extraneous matter, which destroys the unity and perspicuity of her discourse, but apart from these, the performance we heard, would not disgrace many who have been set apart by the "laying of hands."

Her manner is earnest and animated, her eyes are serenely but perfectly closed, during the entire address. She sits unsupported in the bed, and accompanies her discourse with an appropriate gesticulation of the hands.

The discourse closed with a pretty accurate recapitulation of her arguments and proofs, and a very solemn and pointed appeal to the impenitent. Her style is rather that of the pulpit than colloquial, abounding with Scripture, aptly, but not very accurately quoted.

The prayer and address occupied 2h. 14m. Immediately after ceasing to speak, she fell backward in the bed, foaming considerably at the mouth, and exhibiting evident symtoms of great pain.

In a few minutes the spasm passed off, and I then had the pleasure of a free conversation with her, and received satisfactory replies to all the queries proposed. Her own testimony and many other facts, proved beyond doubt that she is utterly unconscious whilst in the somnambulic state; nor does she retain the least recollection of all that has passed when her faculties are restored. An atmosphere of truth surrounds the whole scene, and every doubt concerning the honesty of the person vanishes the moment you come into her presence. Crowds are attracted by the novelty of the scene, among whom are often to be found strangers from a distance; on the day mentioned, there were perhaps more than two hundred persons present, notwithstanding the badness of the roads from the heavy rains of the previous night; and from a gentleman who had seldom failed to be present, we learned that there have often been one thousand persons present. Many are said to go as purely devotional exercise, and through the politeness of Mr. Birney, seats are prepared for as many as the house will contain. Good order and a considerable appearance of solemnity, characterised the scene we witnessed.

Mrs. Birney is near forty years of age, and has been for more than twenty years, a member in good standing in the Presbyterian church.

When at church, or elsewhere, when music is performing, she is compelled to withdraw on account of the great pain and uneasiness occasioned by the musical sounds.

Her general health is much improved within the last year, so that she now efficiently manages her domestic affairs.

Mr. Birney resides near Tippecanoe, in the central part of Harrison county, Ohio.

J. R. HUGHES.

Wellsville, Aug. 20, 1847.

"I never complained of my condition," said the Persian poet Sadi, "but once when my feet were bare, and I had not the money to buy shoes; but I met a man without feet, and became contented with my lot."

Religious Intelligence.

NORTH ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Princeton, Ill., Sept. 24, 1847.

Dear Br. Bassett: I would just say that the fourth quarterly meeting for Magnolia circuit commenced on Saturday, the 18th of this inst., and closed on Tues. evening, the 21st. It was a season of refreshing to the Church, and a time of general awakening amongst the ungodly. Some five or six professed religion, and eight joined the Church, and nearly all the rest that attended during the meeting seemed to be under deep concern for their souls. The circuit is small, but is at this time in a healthy condition, and the prospects are good for a general revival of religion.

Yours in Christ, P. J. STRONG.

From the Methodist Protestant.

GENESEE DISTRICT.

Br. Reese,—To learn of the welfare and prosperity of Zion, seldom fails to interest and please her real friends, and I doubt not but what you and your readers may be gratified with an item of intelligence respecting her success in the bounds of the "Old Genesee District." My last quarterly meeting for Castile and Leicester circuit, was held the 28th and 29th of August, at this place. The several societies on the circuit were generally well represented by a full attendance of members and friends. All seemed to have come expecting to obtain a large blessing. Our esteemed and indefatigable President, Rev. Wm. Williams, was with us, and in excellent spirits—his heart and lips richly stored with "the fullness of the blessings of the gospel of peace." Also Brother J. Streeter, from Warsaw, Wyoming county. The presence of God was with us from the commencement of the meeting, and the bright out-pourings of his glory illuminated the heart of his people, and abode upon them. In the love-feast, Sabbath morning, the overwhelming power of the Holy Spirit fell upon the people, firing with holy fervor the intelligent faith of believers—and willing witnesses were not wanted to tell of his goodness and power to save. The hour for public preaching arrived, and the love-feast was adjourned to 5 o'clock, P. M.—The word of life was then dispensed to an overflowing and attentive audience. At the communion table, Jesus met his humble disciples and blessed them freely. It was a melting and refreshing season.

The adjourned love-feast came on—a full house, warm hearts, and willing worshippers, with the Saviour's presence, made it indeed a Bethel to us. It continued until night, when being dismissed, the people retired with a reluctant step to their own dwellings. To use the characteristic language of our President, it was truly, "a glory to God! Hallelujah! time."

An interesting account of the condition of the district, was given us by the President, from which we learn that peace and prosperity reign predominant.

Two years ago, I came to this people "a stranger, and they took me in." Their kindness and hospitality towards me, has been cordial and overflowing. Many who are now rejoicing in Christ, were then "in the gall of bitterness, and the bond of iniquity." But, thank God, they have found and love my Saviour! To him be all the praise! O Jesus, take care of the dear lambs of the flock! And may we all meet in heaven.—I soon go to Conference, but whether to return to this place and people again, God only knows.—O Lord, I am thy servant! Do with me as seemeth thee good! Thy will be done."

Saturday and Sabbath, Sept. 4 and 5, I spent, accompanied by Brother R. Pennell, on the high lands of Middlebury, Wyoming county, with Br. S. M. Short, at a place in the bounds of his circuit, where Methodist Protestantism is new and little known. This was our first meeting in the place. The congregations were large and attentive. On Sabbath day, the house proved to be entirely too small for the congregation. In this emergency an expedient was hit upon, which was to place a wagon under one of the windows, with a plank over the top of its box. The window was then taken out, and we stood upon the plank outside of the house, and preached to the hundreds without and through the window to those within the house! God was with us, and we believe good was done. The principles of Mutual Rights are taking deep hold upon this people, and the harvest will be plenteous.

I understand that Brother Lewis Sweetland is enjoying a precious revival in Cattaraugus county, where a number have recently been converted to God. But I must close. Excuse the great length of this communication, and allow me to remain as ever,

Yours, affectionately,
E. A. WHEAT.

Gibsonville, Sept. 9, 1847.

MARYLAND DISTRICT.

Church Prospects.

We rejoice to be able to communicate to the Church, the cheering intelligence that in various portions of our work the Lord is graciously visiting his people. For some weeks past, our letters have teemed with the most encouraging assurances that the labors of our ministry and people are about to be followed by unusual success. Intimations of good are apparent in the congregations, and the spirit of revival seems to pervade the hearts of God's people.

In Baltimore our churches are in quite a prosperous condition. At the East Baltimore Station, there have been recent accessions, and at the present time, the church at the corner of Lombard and Greene sts., (under Brs. Varden and Wilson) is rejoicing in the blessedness of reviving influences. Mourners have presented themselves again and again for conversation and prayer; and the spirit of conversion has been realised. The meetings are growing in interest, and will probably furnish occasion for further remark hereafter.

As a church, we have nothing to fear if we live up to our privileges. The excellence of our Institutions cannot but commend them to the approval of the community: and we have only to address ourselves promptly and with energy to the work before us to ensure success, and usefulness.

That there has been for some year or two past, an unusual drought in the spiritual vineyard there can be no denial. Our exchanges from other denominations have sorely lamented this. All churches seem to have shared in it. But we trust a change is coming over them. In our own city things seem to be improving. We learn that our Baptist and Methodist Episcopal brethren have had of late very encouraging intimations.—Methodist Protestant.

More Revival Intelligence.—A Brother informs that on Baltimore Circuit, at the Warren Factory appointment, there has recently been a very gracious revival of religion. For several nights the altars were crowded with penitents.

At 'All-Saints,' A. A. Circuit, a very successful meeting has just closed. Fifteen converts, eight of whom have joined the Church.

At Easton, Md., we learn that recently a number of persons have united with us in fellowship—the result of recent efforts in that section.—Methodist Protestant.

Conference Proceedings.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

[We are indebted to Br. C. H. Williams, for a copy thus early, of the Appointments of the Indiana Conference, Methodist Protestant Church.]

THOS. SHIPP, President.

Tanners Creek Ct.—James Edmiston.
Madison Ct.—To be supplied.
Liberty Ct.—G. W. Cain.
Sugar Creek Ct.—H. Collings.
Flat Rock Ct.—To be supplied.
White River Ct.—Wm. Barnet.
Mill Creek Ct.—H. Brenton.
Washington Ct.—J. Sevier, T. S. Stilwell, sup. as't.
Stouts' Creek Ct.—P. Clingler.
White Lick Ct.—J. D. Medearis.
Driftwood Mission—Geo. Wheatley.
Outer Mission—D. Hannah.
Conference Missionary—S. Morrison.
Home Missionary—George Baxter.
Transferred to Ohio Conference—W. B. Evans, C. H. Williams.
Transferred to Wabash Conference—A. L. Collings.
To be employed by the President—J. K. Dawson, J. Gardener.
Left without appointments at their own request—B. Wilson, S. Solomon.
Next Conference to be held at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam co., Ia., on the 1st Wednesday of October, 1848.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 14, 1847.

Annual Register, 1848.—This publication will be out of press in a few days. Those who intend to order parcels, should do so immediately, as after we shall have shipped our large packages, there may be no other opportunity of transmitting them but through the mail.

Subscribers Wanted.—Our New England correspondent, who has had much experience as Editor and Publisher, in a private letter says to us:—

"I hope you are obtaining several thousand subscribers for the Western Recorder. You need 4000 at least to make it profitable."

With the commencement of our new volume, we have discontinued a large number of delinquent subscribers, in addition to a few who have ordered their paper stopped. This has reduced our list to 1,200, including exchanges and agent's papers. Will our agents now send us names rapidly, that we may at least supply the places of those which prudence required us to cut off? We however want only responsible names, if our friends please. And we trust that whenever practicable, the pay will be obtained in advance, or at least within the three months. If you send soon, we can supply the numbers from commencement of Vol. 9. And we trust that new subscribers will prefer to commence with the new volume.

An example for those who think of discontinuing.—A brother, residing in one of the new counties out west, paid up for his paper last week, (as he always does,) and stated to us in his letter, that he had had much family affliction for a year past, and that it still continues. "But," says he, "Brother B., I hardly know how to do without the Recorder. You will think so when I tell you that I have to travel ten miles every week to get my paper. So, if you are agreed, I will continue to take it another year, if the Lord will. Please send me also the Annual Register. Do send me one or more, and you shall not lose by it if you send half a dozen—you shall have the cash."

Serious and long protracted family afflictions, with remoteness from a post-office, do not form sufficient reason with Brother Charles Lusk, of Allen county, for discontinuing his paper. Let some others who think of discontinuing from less occasions, think of that Brother's case.

Wilmot Proviso.—We see by the Watchman of the Valley that a large meeting was lately held at the Fifth st, Market space, Cincinnati, in reference to the Wilmot Proviso. A large concourse of people, was addressed by Mr. Chase with his usual ability. Resolutions were passed by acclamation, approving of the Proviso measure, and urging the overthrow of the slaveholding domination which has so long cursed our country.

Our Poetry.—"J. B. P." after a spell of serious affliction, has produced "Lay of an Invalid." Glad to hear from him after so long a silence. The muse does not slight that "Solitudinarian Cabin."—"Louis," too, has favored us with a touching article this week. We like it well, save the appeals to the Deity, but these could not conveniently have been omitted in this instance. We know that no irreverence was intended, and that the judgment of the writer accords with ours in the case. A portion of his accompanying note was intended as private, and should not have been inserted. We were not apprised of this, till too late to make the correction. We trust our friend will continue his contributions.

"Want of the West."—The article under this head from the pen of Elihu Burritt, (the learned blacksmith,) which we take from a late number of the Christian Citizen, published at Worcester, Massachusetts, will prove interesting to our western readers. It contains facts and thoughts which are valuable, and is the more interesting as it is from an eastern pen, doing justice and honor to the West.

Great Hotel.—A company in Cincinnati has entered upon the magnificent project to erect in that city, a Hotel which will probably equal if not excel any house of the kind upon the continent. We learn by the Commercial that the structure is to be erected on the corner of Third and Vine streets, extending 228 feet on Third, and 225 feet on Vine, and running back to Baker street. The building is to be five stories high, and will front on each of the three streets.

The Onderdonk Case.—It will be recollected that the suspension, a few years ago, of Bishop Onderdonk from the Episcopal office in the Protestant Episcopal Church, for indulgence in habitual intemperance, caused no little noise in the world. The case was a painful one to all sincere Christians. But it was gratifying that the Church had the moral courage, as well as self respect, and respect for the cause of Christ, to 'put away' the unworthy person, even from its highest office. We had supposed that the matter was forever at rest. But it seems of late that a sympathy on the part of friends of the suspended Bishop, has gone so far, that a movement has been made for his restoration. We see that the editor of the Episcopal Recorder, an excellent religious newspaper in the interest of the Episcopal Church, published in Philadelphia, which we receive in exchange, takes decided ground against this movement to restore. He argues that the suspension of a Bishop as effectually vacates his diocese, as that of a presbyter severs him from his parish, and that even penitence and reformation could but in extremely rare cases justify the Church in restoring him. The following remarks form the concluding paragraph of an editorial article on this subject, in the last number of the Episcopal Recorder.

"Where the offender is an obscure man, and suspended for a single offence, which was little known beyond his own neighborhood, or likely soon to be forgotten, it may perhaps be safe to restore him to the duties of the sacred office, after adequate trial and abundant evidence of penitence and reformation. But if he be one of high position and extensive note, and the ground of his suspension be not a solitary offence, but a series of guilty habits pursued through a long course of years, then, as the dishonor to the Church and the injury inflicted upon others are proportionally great, so his restoration, even under the most promising circumstances, must always be a measure of doubtful expediency. This is especially the case if those habits are such as when once fixed, men seldom abandon entirely; and from whose recurrence, even if abandoned for a time, they can never be perfectly secure. Such is intemperance. All experience proves that very few drunkards are permanently reformed; and that reformed drunkards (supposing their restoration to be genuine,) must ever live in hourly and most peculiar peril of relapse. This condition is one of extreme and criminal danger, which can never be entirely removed. It always exists. This view of the subject becomes still stronger when the case presents that specific and rare form of intemperance, in which immense quantities of the liquid poison can be swallowed without being succeeded by any of the ordinary signs of intoxication; and in which too its deliterious power is rather exerted upon the moral perceptions, than either the intellectual or physical constitution of the unhappy subject. Proof of reformation becomes, in cases of this recondite description, extremely difficult, if not utterly impossible.

Not Bad.—The last number of the "Star in the West" contains the proceedings of the General Convention of Universalists, lately held at New York. A Circular put forth by the Convention, also accompanies, which concludes with the following good words:

The Convention feeling deeply the importance of a greater spirituality, and an exalted, holy living in all the individual members of our denomination, would most affectionately, and seriously urge this matter on the candid attention of all, invoking the grace of God and the influence of the Holy Spirit on all the Israel of the great Master of Assemblies.

"Greater spirituality, and an exalted, holy living" should indeed be "seriously urged upon the candid attention" of "all the individual members" of any and all denominations at the present day. We are glad that our neighbors have thought of this.

Progress of Rail Roads.—Our Hoosier neighbors have been having a rejoicing at Indianapolis, on the completion of the railroad from Madison to that place. Trains of cars now run through the entire route.

The Little Miami Rail Road having been completed from Cincinnati to Springfield, the southern portion of the Mad River and Lake Erie Rail Road only remains to be finished, to connect Cincinnati and Sandusky City. The unfinished portion extends from Springfield to Bellfontaine, a distance of 32 miles. We learn by the last number of the Urbana Gazette, that the work between that place and Bellfontaine is rapidly progressing, and will no doubt be finished ready for the cars during the month of December next. The portion of the road between Urbana and Springfield, 14½ miles, is to be put under contract the present month, and will doubtless be completed within a few months.

The Cleveland, Columbus, and Cincinnati Rail Road is not to be wind work alone. The work was actually commenced near Cleveland, on the last day of September, in the presence of the President and officers, as well as a large concourse of spectators.

Success to internal improvements.

Cincinnati Historical Society.—We have heretofore noticed the objects of this association, viz: "the collection, preservation, and diffusion of historical, biographical and antiquarian matter; more particularly such as relates to the western country." We sent to the Society a copy of a series of articles by Major Nye, on the settlement of Ohio, published last spring in our paper. We have since been repeatedly assured that the articles are held in due appreciation by the society. They were acknowledged some months ago, through our friend, S. Langdon, Esq. in the absence of the Secretary. He informed us that it was intended for the 'Reminiscences' of Maj. Nye, to be published in a volume of the Annals of the society. A few days ago, we received a letter from A. Randall, Esq., the Corresponding Secretary, written from La Pointe, Lake Superior, where he has been for some time engaged in the U. S. Geological Explorations of the North Western Territory. He is pleased to express the acknowledgments of the society, in reference to the articles referred to, and adds: "The letters from Major Nye which you have published, are invaluable to the future historian of Ohio, and I sincerely hope that you will receive the increased patronage merited."

More Sudden Deaths in Cincinnati.—Last week we announced the sudden deaths of three gentlemen in Cincinnati, on the evening of the last Sunday in September. We have now to record three more equally sudden deaths in that city, upon the authority of the Cincinnati Commercial. Major Edward Wade was found dead in his bed on the morning of Thursday, 30th ult. He had been in the engagement at Monterey, but was serving as a recruiting officer at the time of his death.

On the morning of the next day, (Oct. 1st,) a Mr. Robinson, was found dead in his chair at the boarding house of Mr. M'Cadden, on Congress street. He had been apparently well.

On the evening of Tuesday, 5th inst., Mr. S. F. R. Morris, tragedian, attached to the National Theatre, died very suddenly in his room, at Holmes' Hotel. He was seated on his bed, in conversation with a friend, when he fell over into the arms of the latter, and expired. The editor of the Commercial says he saw him the same afternoon, lively and jocular as usual, speaking of the performance which was to come off the following night, in which he was to take a part.—Mr. Morris was also under an engagement to be married to a young lady of Cincinnati.

How solemn and important the injunction, "Be ye also ready."

Got Home.—The last number of the Western Christian Advocate says that Bishops Morris and Hamline, of the Meth. Episcopal Church, have just reached that city in good health, and that they have just finished a laborious tour of the eastern Conferences, in which their services were duly appreciated.

Ohio Convention—Against Puseyism.—The Ohio Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which lately held its session in Zanesville, adopted spirited resolutions against Tractarianism. We give below the resolutions, which we take from a late number of the Episcopal Recorder. It is well known that Bishop M'Ilvaine has published a masterly work against Puseyism. The editor of the paper referred to says, "We rejoice to see how nobly the Convention of Ohio sustains their excellent and eminent Diocesan in his powerful opposition to this pestiferous heresy."

"Whereas, the Church has been, for several years, seriously disturbed by a system of doctrine, essentially Romish, called Tractarianism, which has been from time to time, ably and faithfully exposed in the Episcopal Charges, and other more extending publications of the Bishop of this Diocese; and whereas the open perversion to Romanism, within the last three years, of the chief propagator and ablest advocate of the said system, with a considerable number of its adherents, in England and this country, leaves no reasonable doubt of its fatal tendency; and whereas there is reason to believe that the leaven of the said heresy is still working its mischievous and corrupting effects upon the doctrinal purity and practical piety of the Church. The Convention of the Diocese of Ohio deem it right, expedient, and consistent with our heretofore uniform decided and avowed opposition to the aforesaid heresy to reiterate, and respectfully republish our sentiments respecting the same, in the two following brief and general resolutions.

1st. Resolved, That in the judgment of this Convention, it is the solemn duty of every true and consistent Protestant Episcopal Churchman to oppose, in every appropriate position, and by all proper means, all the essential and distinguishing features of that system of error which is known by the name of Tractarianism.

2dly. Resolved, That our Delegates to the next General Convention be, and they are hereby instructed, to confer with the Delegates to that body from other Dioceses, who are opposed to Tractarian errors, and to take such action against the same, as such a consultation may indicate to be wise and expedient."

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

ASA C. S. REEVES.

My Dear Br. Bassett: I have sorrowful news to tell. But how can I tell it? My soul is clothed in sack-cloth, while my heart bleeds through the loss of a precious member of the inward man. Part of my own self is torn from me—My blessed boy is dead! Yes, my dear son Asa C. S. is no more! Last Monday morning he was with us, and in moderately good health, and now he has been two days in his grave. The hope and earthly comforts of our future years below is taken away with a strike. Our fondest anticipations of enjoyment in the decline of life are all blasted. Almost the only tie on earth is severed. Thrice now have we been bereaved of an only and loved one! At first we were struck dumb, and opened not our mouth, because God had done it. And now the lips are unsealed I see the danger of saying too much. O for grace to check the murmur, if not the sigh. Check the sigh? No! For, as a dear afflicted and sympathizing sister said to us on the day of the funeral, "There is a luxury in grief!" Therefore she would not attempt to comfort us, for she did not wish to rob us of our mystic joy.

During our sojourn in this city, I have written a number of obituary notices of departed friends. But how can I write this? No more than I could preach yesterday. The friends did not expect the one, neither will you the other.

Since the return of the dear child and his mother from their tour to Canada, both being very sick on the Lake, he had enjoyed better health than usual, and his appetite much improved.—But about two weeks since, at the changes of the weather, he took some cold, which appears to have laid the foundation for the fatal malady which finally took him away. But he still attended his school, and played about by day, while the insidious disease was undermining his constitution, or making fast his fangs, not to let go till death had drunk up the fountain of life. Even on Tuesday last, he was, as his teacher observed, more lively and playful than usual. And about dark in the evening, his mother called him in from his play, when he complained of chillness and head-ache. She instantly commenced a course to cure him. And after prayer meeting, as he grew worse, I hastened for a doctor. But he continued to grow worse. Wednesday night, still worse, and I tried to bring in other physicians, but none came till morning. Thursday forenoon, the severity of the disease seemed to be a trifle abated, but in the evening, it renewed its strength. And about 1 o'clock, Friday morning, he breathed his last, having tarried with us in the wilderness, 5 years, and 4 months, lacking about 5 days. He was buried on Saturday afternoon, the same hour his dear little class-mate in the Sunday School (W. A. Rinehart,) was interred the week before. Ah! how little did any of us think on that Saturday morning, when I led Asa to see his class-mate in his coffin, that the next Saturday morning, he would be in the same situation? Alas! how true the admonitory declaration of the Prophet, "All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof as the flowers of the field." But what a comfort that "The word of our God abideth forever!" O may this severe dispensation of divine Providence be sanctified to our good! Truly it is a humiliating thought, that we still need such a fiery ordeal, to purify our spirits. I think we have fully made the necessary surrender of our all to God. But O the distressing stillness in the house! No more we hear the sound of his footsteps in the hall! No more is he seen in his place at the table! No more of his prattling questions to answer! No more is he led to the sanctuary.—The awful, unbroken silence of the grave reigns throughout our dwelling! But he is at rest,—"We shall go to him, but he will not return to us." Many dear children have recently died in the city by the same fell and fatal disease—the croup! The same insidious and deadly foe, which destroyed our former son Samuel William!

But behold the goodness of the Lord. For, generally, in this terrible disease, the agonies of death are aggravated by convulsive fits! which has been the case, in this city, with other dear children the same week. But our dear boy died without a struggle or a groan, at last!—We had retired to the closet, to give him up to God, with this one request—that he would interpose, and not suffer those terrible accompaniments to take place, in this case. And, blessed be the Lord, he finally, breathed easy, and composed himself to sleep. In his sleep, he died, without a motion, more than a long breath!—And before he left us, what an exhortation! did he give me! As the world was receding from his sight, heaven seemed to appear in his view. And with all his powers excited, at the top of his feeble voice, did exclaim, "Papa, Come on! Papa, Come on! Come on!" O that I may speed my way onward and upward, till I meet him in heaven! He also mentioned "Mr. Stockton," wishing him also to "come on." But why call on him, and not those with whom he was so much better acquainted?

The Church, has lost more by death, of late, than for years before, as if I had come here to bury them! O that we may all be stirred up to seek and serve the Lord. Yours,

W. REEVES.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 4, 1847.

News of the Week.

Later from Mexico.—Highly Interesting Letter.

Santa Anna and his Army driven out; and General Scott in full possession of the City of Mexico.

The New York Sun published on Monday evening a letter from a Spanish Mexican in the city of Mexico, to a Spanish house in New York, which gives a more full account of the recent proceedings in Mexico than has reached us from any other quarter. Indeed, its narrative comes down to the 16th, three days later than was received in any of the accounts brought by the James L. Day, at New Orleans, which have been published. This letter, which moreover is Mexican authority, states that Gen. Scott was in actual possession of the capital. It is said to have come by way of Orizaba, under cover to Mr. Dimond, at Vera Cruz. We give the following extracts:—Baltimore Sun.

City of Mexico, 19th Sept., 1847.

On the 13th instant the Americans made a demonstration on Chapultepec and the mill of El Rey, but our Gen's. were prepared for them * * Chapultepec, you know, is situated between Cacubya and the city, within cannon-shot of the former and some three miles of the latter. It is a bold hill overlooking a vast range of country, which enabled our soldiers to watch every manœuver of the enemy. It also commands the road from Tacubya to the city, which runs close to its base, and it can only be ascended by a circuitous paved way, which after turning a certain angle, is exposed to the full range of the fortress guns. As the Americans ascended the hill a perfect storm of musket balls and grape shot drove them back with heavy loss. They recovered & advanced again, but were repulsed.

Our troops fought with desperate valor, worthy the character of Mexicans. The enemy also fought bravely—his men seemed like so many devils, whom it was impossible to defeat without annihilation. He made a third and last charge with fresh force and heavy guns, and our gallant troops having exhausted their grape-shot, were forced, very unwillingly to retreat and yield up the fortress, of which the enemy took possession. Our soldiers retreated towards the city, but were unfortunately cut off by a detachment of the enemy's cavalry, and about a thousand were made prisoners, but soon released, as the enemy had no men to guard them. The enemy then opened his batteries on the Mill El Roy, (King's Mill) close upon Chapultepec, which after obstinate fighting and great loss to the Americans, we were obliged to abandon.

The two actions continued over nine hours, and were the severest, considering our small number of soldiers and the enemy's large force, that have been fought. Our loss, in killed and wounded was not more than 300, while the enemy lost over 400, or at least such was the report of deserters from the American camp who came to us in the evening. Seeing that the city would inevitably be attacked, Gen. Santa Anna, during the actions, caused a number of trenches to be cut across the road leading to the city, which were flooded with water. On the morning of the 14th, before day light, the enemy, with a part of his force, commenced his march upon the city. Our soldiers, posted behind the arches of the aqueducts and several breastworks which had been hastily thrown up, annoyed him so severely, together with the trenches which he had to bridge over, that he did not arrive at the gates until late in the afternoon. Here he halted and attempted to bombard the city, which he did during the balance of the day and the day following, doing immense damage.

In some cases whole blocks were destoyed and a great number of men, women and children killed and wounded. The picture was awful. One deafening roar filled our ears, one cloud of smoke met our eyes, now & then mixed with flame, and amid it all we could hear the various shrieks of the wounded and dying. But the city bravely resisted the hundreds of flying shells. It hurled back defiance to the bloodthirsty Yankee, and convinced him that his bombs could not reduce the Mexican capital. The enemy then changed his plan, and determined to enter the city, where we prepared to meet him.

Having barricaded the streets with sand-bags, and provided on the housetops and at the windows all who could bear arms or missiles, stones, bricks, &c., to throw on the heads of the enemy. Before General Scott had fairly passed the gates he found the difficulty of his position. A perfect torrent of balls and stones rained upon his troops. Still he kept advancing until he gained the entrance of two streets leading direct to the Plaza.

Finding that he could not oppose himself to our soldiers, & that he was losing his men, rapidly, Gen. Scott took possession of the Convent of San Isador, which extends back to the centre of a block, and at once set his sappers and miners to cutting away directly through the blocks of buildings. In some instances whole houses were blown up to facilitate his progress; but after several hours he again emerged into the street, and finally regained the Plaza with great loss. On entering the Plaza a heavy fire was opened on him from the Palace and Cathedral, which were filled and covered with our patriotic troops.

Finding himself thus assaulted the enemy drew out his forces in the Plaza, and opened a cannonade on the Palace and Cathedral, firing over one hundred shots, which did immense damage to the buildings and caused a severe loss of killed and wounded. Seeing further resistance useless, our soldiers ceased firing, and on the 15th of September (sad day!) the enemy was in possession of the Mexican capital. Though we inflicted havoc and death upon the Yankees, we suffered greatly ourselves.

Many were killed by the blowing up of the houses, many by the bombardment, but more by the confusion which prevailed in the city, and altogether we cannot count our killed, wounded and missing since the action commenced yesterday at less than 4,000, among whom are many women and children. The enemy confessed a loss of over 1,000; it is no doubt much greater. What a calamity! But Mexico will yet have vengeance, God will avenge us for our sufferings.

Santa Anna has gone with his generals and all the troops he could draw off to Guadaloupe. He is said to be wounded severely. We have lost heroic officers and brave men in these two days, I cannot forsee what is to come. Thousands are gathering upon the hills around the city determined to cut off all supplies and starve the enemy who has so audaciously entered it. General Scott may yet find that Mexico is not vanquished. He may find our lakes bursting their barriers and filling the beautiful valley, to annihilate the infamous Americans.

We scarcely hope, yet do not quite despair. Our brave generals may recover what is lost, and Mexico with her ten millions of people, arise to sweep the invader from the land he has descerated.

The Fruit Convention.

The convention of Nurserymen & Fruit Growers, assembled in this place, pursuant to notice, on Wednesday, the 29th ult., and was organized by the appointment of Rev C. Springer, of Muskingum county, President, and F. R. Elliott, of Cleveland, and M. B. Bateham, of Columbus, Secretaries.

The number of persons in attendance was not as great as we had been led to anticipate, considering especially the large number of nurserymen in the State, and the interest they ought to feel in the reputation of their profession. The show of fruits, however, was quite extensive and fine—much better than was anticipated both in the number of varieties and general excellence. Among them were several apples of great excellence, believed to be new seedling varieties.

A good deal was accomplished by the convention in the matter of correcting names of fruits, and judging of their comparative merits; and the report, (which is to be published in pamphlet form) will be found of much value to nurserymen and fruit growers in the West.

It was resolved to hold another convention of the kind, on the last Wednesday of September, 1848, and a standing committee of nurserymen and fruit growers in the different counties in the state, was appointed to collect information respecting the fruits of their several counties, and to bring specimens to the convention, &c. Bela Latham, Esq., was appointed President, and M. B. Bateham, Secretary of the General State Committee.

It was further resolved, that a report of the minutes of this convention, with portions of sundry letters, &c., be published in pamphlet form, under the supervision of Messrs. Bateham and Latham, and that they be authorized to call on the members of this convention to defray any part of the expense that may not be provided for by individual subscriptions, and the sale of copies.

The convention adjourned at a late hour on Thursday evening.—Ohio Cultivator.

From Bermuda and the West Indies.—The Royal Gazette, from Hamilton, Bermuda, to the 21st of September, contains extracts from various West India journals.

Jamaica is likely to become a free port, the disposition of the Home government being favorable to the petition that the colony may be made a free port, though not quite to the extent demanded. The goods, however, are to be imported exclusively for the consumption of the Island.

At Barbadoes, Trinidad, and most of the Islands, they had very seasonable weather, and no doubt existed that good crops would be realized.

Two shocks of an earthquake were felt at the Island of Dominica; one on the 5th instant, the other on the 6th. A church at Marie Galante was destroyed, and other buildings.

Awful Death.—Mr. Studiford, a baker of Newark, was killed on the New York and Philadelphia rail road on Wednesday night last. It is supposed that he attempted to jump from the car, while at full speed, and his foot catching in the step, he was dragged in this position, his head striking against the sleepers of the track, until he was thrown off, mangled and lifeless.

Serious Accident.—Mr. Wm. Key Bond, an eminent lawyer of Cincinnati, and formerly a member of Congress, had both of his legs broken, and was otherwise injured, by the fall of a derick upon him.

Whipping to Death.—Mrs. Ann Tanner, and Cornelia, a female slave, have been arrested and imprisoned in St. Louis, on a charge of having whipped to death a little colored girl in the employ of Mrs. Tanner.

The South Moving.---Maryland.

Dr. Snodgrass attended a meeting in Cecil county, Maryland, on the 26th ult., and, after addressing it on the subject of slavery, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, 1st. That the time has come when our sectional jealousies and differences should be forgotten in an earnest and persevering effort to rid not only Maryland, but the country at large, of this moral and social evil.

2nd. That we are determined that our sanction shall never be given to the further extension of slavery, feeling as we do, that having allowed it the constitutional guarantee within its present limits, we have done all that can be fairly asked of us as lovers of the Truth and Justice, or as true patriots.

Another meeting was held in the county, in which Marylanders declared the determination to discuss the whole subject, and passed the following resolve:

3rd. That we believe that not only the physical, but the moral interests of Maryland, demand that slavery shall cease within her borders—resting, as it does, like an incubus upon her body social, while blasting, as if with a general mildew, the fruits of her beautiful and naturally productive soil, and drying up, as was a rushing wind, the fountains of Truth and Justice.

A letter from a Kentuckian in Cumberland, Maryland, to a friend in this city says:

"There is an evident and growing determination to bring up the subject of emancipation, and when the presidential election is over; I believe it will be done, as slaveholders seem as bent upon it as those who do not own any negroes."

This looks bright and cheering. It seems, indeed, as if the border slave States were resolved to master their one great evil. The will alone is wanting. Give them that, and they conquer it, and rise to a pitch of moral and physical greatness as they could never begin to reach under slavery.—Louisville Examiner.

From the Christian Citizen.

Delaware---Number of Slaveholders.

This little State knows, through its warm hearted sons, how to do and say true things, and do good deeds. But since it has resolved to get rid of Savery, most of its journals do not measure their language, in denouncing the patriarchal institution. Listen to one them:

"In the South, there are about one slaveholder to four non-slaveholding whites, and the slaveholders are about one to three slaves; therefore, one-eighth of the people of the South bear rule in the slave region—and not only so, but by management and sticking together have been able to rule the Union. But the time has come when this must end. When Russia is giving freedom to their slaves—can America extend and perpetuate the curse of human bondage? In the name of Heaven, we answer, no! How much has our Government to answer for? Was it not to extend slavery that the horrible war with Mexico was commenced? A war that is swallowing up by hundreds of millions the hard earnings of the operatives—a war that is destroying hundreds and thousands of valuable lives—a war that is characterized by cruelties and outrages almost unparalleled in modern times. Oh! save us from the extension of slavery!

ABOLITION.—It appears that slavery is about to be abolished in French Guiana. Can't our government put a stop to this business by re-annexing French Guiana to the United States? If the old monarchies of Europe, go on in this way, the institution of slavery will be in great jeopardy: the inalienable right to flog negroes will be abridged, and the wages of dough-faced politicians be withheld entirely.—French Guiana lies south of 36° 30′ and is therefore provided for in the Missouri compromise.—Kennebec Journal.

MURDER WILL OUT.—A man named Caleb Robertson, has been arrested at Memphis, Tennessee, and brought to Cincinnati, for being concerned in a double murder and arson at Xenia, Ohio, two years ago. He is said to have confessed to a former fellow prisoner.

PROBABLE SETTLEMENT OF THE ANTI-RENT DIFFICULTIES.—At a mass meeting of the Anti-renters of the county of Renssalaer, held on the 25th of September, after listening to some remarks, a resolution was unanimously adopted, acceding to the propositions for an amicable arrangement of the Anti-rent difficulties, made by Hon. John C. Spencer, on the part of Wm. P. Van Rensalaer. The proposition is in substance that all matters in dispute shall be left for arbitration to Hon. George N. Briggs of Massachusetts, Hon. Wm. Kent and Hon. Judge Denio, of New York.

MORTALITY.—Deaths in New York, last week, 289—men 82, women 65, boys 71, girls 71. A very strange proportioned increase of deaths amongst male adults. 13 died of cholera infantum, 37 of consumption, 8 of diarrhœa, 34 of dysentery, 13 of typhus fever, 24 of other fevers.

EMIGRANTS.—During the month of September 17,664 passengers, from foreign ports, arrived at New York.

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION IN ROME.—Advices from Rome state that an interesting ceremony took place in that city a short time ago, namely, the installation of a Jewish Chief Rabbi. The Jews, since the death of their high priest, some dozen years ago, had not been allowed to appoint a pontiff in succession.

EXPULSION OF THE JESUITS.—At the sitting of the Swiss Diet, on the 3d of September, the debate on the expulsion was renewed, and conformity, with the vote of the cantons a decree was issued, declaring that the existence and secret practices of the Jesuits are incompatible with the order and peace of Switzerland—that the cantons of Lucerne, Schwyiz, Friburg and Valais, in which the Jesuits are established, are invited to expel them from their territories, and that the admission in future of Jesuits into any one of the cantons of Switzerland is interdicted.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.—A correspondent of the New York Evangelist, describes a recent visit to Mr. Adams at Quincy. He states that Mr. Adams' general health is good his spirits cheerful, and his intellectual powers bright and vigorous; and remarks that—

"The people of the United States will be interested and generally pleased to learn that Mr. Adams expects to be at his post in Congress at the opening of the session. The delicate health of Mr. Adams requires a milder climate for winter than that of Massachusetts, Mr. Adams himself thinks that he shall winter more comfortably at Washington than at Quincy. Besides, he feels that he is bound by duty to his constituants to be found at his post as long as he has any remnant of strength that he can employ in their service. He observes that the only national question on which he now felt any deep interest was that of slavery, with the Mexican war, its adjunct. On this, his patriotic anxieties are intense and unceasing. He has had a great longing to see the question of slavery brought to an issue in his day."

John Quincy Adams.

It is said that this veteran statesman has by him twenty folio volumes (manuscript,) containing all the events of his travels, diplomatic missions, treaties, and numerous important and instructive incidents of his life, since he was eighteen years of age, when he was, at that early age, Secretary of Legation to Russia, and in his then official capacity, visited every Court in Europe, on pleasure, and business connected with the Legation. Being averse to a biographical history of men while living, Mr. Adams will not part with these treasures, leaving them as a legacy to posterity to place these volumes in such hands as will, if published, be a most valuable accquisition to the library of the statesman, scholar and philanthropist of the 19th century, giving, as these volumes doubtless will, Mr. Adams' views and opinions of those men most conspicuous, who figured in the early days of our Republic, in which himself as well as his father assisted in shaking of the trammels of the mother country, and made us a Nation to be respected throughout the world, and an example to all monarchies.—Sat. Courier.

Mutiny on the Plains.

The St. Louis Union of 30th September, has intelligence of the 24th from the troops en route for Santa Fe, in a letter of that date from the Middle Semirone Spring. After mentioning the extraordinary march of 425 miles in thirty four days, performed on foot by a detachment of the companies of the Illinois Regiment, the writer states that by far the greater part of companies F. and G. were a few days before the date of his letter in open mutiny—absolutely refusing to obey positive orders. The dutiful force consisting of but one company, was not sufficient to quell the insurrection, and the mutineers had pretty much their own way, till the regiment was joined by Lieut. Col. Boyaken, with a detachment of three companies. Order was then forthwith restored, and the non-commissioned officers who took part in the insubordination, were arrested and reduced to the ranks. The offence being above regimental jurisdiction, final proceedings in the matter had to be postponed until the arrival of the troops at Santa Fe.

FATAL CASUALTY.—As the Dayton Stage-coach was coming in on Sunday night, a Mr. Derrill, quite an aged man, was run over and crushed to death—the horses' hoofs striking in upon him and the wheels of the vehicle passing length-wise over his body. He had been inebriated during the afternoon, and was returning home at the time of the accident. The night being very dark, he was not seen by the driver until it was too late to save him.—Cin. Chron.

BREAD versus BULLETS.—The Americans having nobly supplied food for the Irish, we shall look at their flag with increased respect. Their stripes shall be to us significant of a gridiron, and their stars of sugared buns. Glad are we to find that the American subscriptions have been so nobly acknowledged in the House of Commons. These thanks for bread will go far to keep bullets out of fashion. The Indian Meal Book is, to our mind, a much more delightful volume than any History of the American War, and the directions therein written for the composition of Hominny cakes and slap jacks, far better than any talk of red coat tactics. Bombs have their day; let us henceforth try buns: and wherever America has battered our ships, let her, for all time to come, batter our frying pans. To paraphrase the pieman, "Brown Johnny-cakes is in— Congreve-rockets is out."—Punch.

Abolition of Slavery in Tunis.

The Barbary States, on the northern coast of Africa, Morrocco, Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, occupy a beautiful country. But their piracy, their slavery, their despotism, and their Mahommedan fanaticism, have made them for centuries the execration of the Christian world. In Tunis alone, in 1545, Charles V. liberated 20,000 christian slaves. At one time, the United States paid a kind of tribute to the Algerines to induce them to abstain from their piracies on American vessels. But in 1815, U. S. ships of war captured an Algerine frigate and brig of war, and compelled the Bey to pay 60,000 dollars as a compensation for American ships, which his subjects had plundered. A treaty was then made with the United States in which he renounced all claims to tribute. In 1819, England and France called upon the Barbary States, in the name of all the European powers, to acknowledge and observe the law of Nations. The four States together contain a population of about 10,000,000. Tunis has about 2,000,000. Their Capital of the same name, contains about 100,000. The country has about 500 miles of coast on the Mediterranean sea. Slaves have been brought from the interior and shipped at these ports.

In 1841, the Bey commenced the work of abolition, by prohibiting both the introduction of slaves from the interior and their exportation from his harbors. The next year he declared all children free born in his dominions subsequent to Dec. 8, 1842, Jan. 22, 1648, the Bey declared slavery at an end in his dominions. On this occasion he addressed a circular to all the foreign Consuls in his dominions. The following are extracts:—Zion's Advocate.

"The servitude imposed on a part of the humankind whom God has created is a very cruel thing, and our heart shrinks from it."

"It never ceased to be the object of our attention for years past, which we employed in adopting such proper means as could bring us to its extirpation, as is well known to you."

"Now, therefore, we have thought proper to publish that we have abolished men's slavery in all our dominions, inasmuch as we regard all slaves who are on our territory as free, and do not recognise the legality of their being kept as a property.

We have sent the necessary orders to all the governers of our Tunisian kingdom, and inform you thereof in order that you may know that all slaves that shall touch our territory, by sea or by land, shall become free.

May you live under the protection of God."

COURTESY.—The colored race are said to be remarkable for their natural politeness. Here is a proof. The Baltimore Sun relates that a colored man was taken to Washington College to have amputation performed on a badly fractured leg. All being ready, professional spectators present, &c., he became alarmed, and declined. He was told his life would be the forfeit if the operation were delayed, to which he stubbornly replied that he would rather lose his life than his leg. The man's resolution was such that the operation was about to be given up, somewhat at random—"But,——" calling him by name, "you see I have invited several of my friends to witness the operation, and if you are determined to refuse, they will be disappointed." The poor fellow turned it over a moment in his mind, and then promptly replied, "Well, Massa Gibson, sooner than the gentlemen shall be dissappointed, you may take off the leg."

The Coburg Star indulges the gloomy foreboding that one-half the potato crop of Canada will be destroyed by the blight.

—From Burritt's Christian Citizen.

THE WANT OF THE WEST.

We trust that none of our readers will deem us partial to local interests, if we recur to the subject of a railway for the transportation of the produce of the great west to the Atlantic sea-board, when other channels of conveyance have closed. In a recent article, we considered some bearings of this necessity in the light of humanity. We endeavored to show how that vast, fertile region had all its Egyptian granaries locked, as with bars of adamant, whenever famine, or want came upon other lands. Hunger, in the sharpest agonies of its appetite, though eating through stone-walls, could not eat through the icy barriers girdling a region of measureless abundance. We endeavored to demonstrate, that not a person in Ireland would have perished with hunger, during the past bitter year of want, if the west could have got at that unhappy country through the ice of the —— Erie Canal! that, trusting to the short-lived facilities of that precarious ditch, the grain of Ohio and Michigan was actually eight months on its passage from the lake-ports to the sea-ports of Great Britain or Ireland; where it arrived just as the fields of those countries were white unto the harvest, and the hungry laborers were going forth to them with sickles in their hands. Since we wrote that article, and before this will reach our readers, thousands in America must have verified our statements in their own experience. To that experience, in all the freshness of its disaster, we now appeal for credence to the conviction, that the want of the west has been, this year, the want of the world, to a distressing exigency; that, if that want had been supplied, two years ago, by a good railway from the northern boundary of Illinois to the port of New York, Baltimore or Boston, it would not only have saved the lives of two millions of human beings in Ireland, supposed to have perished in consequence of famine, but it would have prevented every one of the tremendous failures that have recently occurred in the Corn Trade in England, and which must react, with almost equal ruin, upon the corn dealers in America. The liabilities of the firms in England which have already fallen beneath the pressure of the crisis, amount to more than $15,-000,000. The house of Messrs. W. Robinson & Co., the senior partner of which is the governor of the Bank of England, will pay, it is estimated, 12s to 15s in the pound. It would be fair to assume that half the amount of these liabilities will be a dead loss. Let us suppose that the loss to the corn dealers in the United States, in consequence of these failures, and of the great fall in the price of grain in their hands, were $4,-000,000; then we have a sum total of $12,000,-000; enough to build 480 miles of railway, at $25,000 per mile. This is merely the amount of loss incurred by the corn dealers of the two countries, in consequence of the English market being overwhelmed with vast importations of grain at the commencement of harvest. And the importations that chiefly produced this condition of things, were those from America. It was the unlooked-for influx of a gulf-stream of the wheat and Indian corn that lay nearly six months in the lake depots, "waiting for the opening of navigation" through the Erie Canal.

But this is but one item of the loss to the world occasioned by the barriers of ice which prevent the productive region of the west from coming to the rescue, when scarcity and want are abroad. Let us see how it affects the consumers and non-producers of grain, on both sides of the Atlantic, and what the lack of this railway for the West costs them in a year like the past, or one of much less pressure. Let us suppose that there are 15,000,000 individuals in Great Britain, and 10,-000,000 in the United States, who must buy all the grain they consume—who raise not a handful of wheat or a hill of corn. Let us suppose also that they require, upon an average, one quarter, or eight bushels, per head, during a year. Well, something inauspicious has occurred to the crop in Great Britain, and about the first of October, a rumor of a deficiency in the wheat harvest, or in the potatoe crop, reaches America. All kinds of grain exhibit an upward tendency, but large transactions are suspended for further advices from abroad. The Erie Canal is doing its little best in the meantime, and its narrow ditch is full of produce threading its way through the locks to Albany and New York; and, by the middle of November, there is nearly grain enough in the eastern ports to supply the manufacturing and non-producing population of New England through the winter. But about this time, further advices from abroad establish the fact, that some important crop is short, at least, 25 per cent. of the usual and necessary amount. This estimate may prove too low; it is the interest of the corn holders in England to produce that impression, at least. So the price of breadstuffs has advanced 25 per cent. on previous quotations, and the last reports leave them tending upwards. Of course there is a remarkable activity in the grain market in the United States. Speculation is rife and rampant. Corn holders in the eastern sea-ports are keenly alive to prospects and probabilities of higher prices. In three days after the arrival of the foreign steamer, the price of every barrel of flour in the country is enhanced at least 25 per cent.; and the laboring men of New England are told, when they go to their grocers on Saturday night for a temporary supply of provisions, that flour is rising, and that they had better lay in a stock at once. The journeyman mechanic who bought his last barrel of flour for $6, now pays $7,50 for one of the same brand, and trundles it home on his wheel-borrow, feeling that he has bought it at a bargain, although his last is still half en hand. And now comes a frosty night or two about the 20th of November, and the Erie Canal is done for. From Buffalo to Albany it is frozen through all its length, breadth and depth. The Ohio river closes soon afterwards, and the whole region of the west goes into winter quarters.—Now comes the harvest of speculation in the Eastern States. No more grain from the west until navigation opens—England or France is in the market bidding high—the stock short for New England itself—such are the facts cried industriously through the country, and prices tend upwards without any stimulus from additional foreign advices. Such are the facts carried out to England, by the next steamer from Boston, where they produce a corresponding effect. The Baltic and the rivers that run into the Black Sea are closed; the great granaries of the world are locked up by ice, and there is a precarious prospect of supplying the demand created by the deficiency of one quarter of the usual amount of one crop in Great Britain. Consequently there is another rise in the price of grain in the English market, and it is now enhanced by 50 per cent. to all the consumers in the kingdom. The corn markets of France, Belgium, and almost of the whole commercial world, must be in a state of equilibrium with that of England; consequently the price of breadstuffs is enhanced at least 40 per cent., to all the consumers of those countries. In the course of a few weeks the corn dealers in the United States are advised of this condition of the foreign markets, and an additional 25 per cent. is added to the price of every bushel of grain in the Eastern States.

Now let us estimate the loss to the laboring people, on both sides of the Atlantic, in consequence, we will suppose, of a deficiency of 25,-000,000 bushels of wheat, or an equivalent in potatoes, in one harvest of Great Britain; and which deficiency could not be supplied from the surplus abundance of the western States, for lack of a channel of conveyance to the Atlantic seaboard, available in the winter. For the space of six months, these two causes have conspired to enhance the price of all the grain consumed in the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Netherlands, and other continental countries, fifty per cent. Assuming one quarter, or eight bushels, per head, for the usual quantity consumed by the people in a year, and one dollar to be the average price per bushel for wheat, then 10,000,000 of non-grain growing consumers in the United States would consume in six months—bush.

	40,000,000
15,000,000 do. in G. Britain,	60.000,000
20,000,000 do. in France & Belgium,	80,000,000
Total,	180,000,000

Now the price of every bushel of this vast amount of grain has been increased 50 cents, by the causes we have considered. Then the actual loss to the consumers in these four countries, occasioned by those causes, is Ninety Millions of Dollars!! enough to build a railway from Albany to the mouth of the Columbia.

Is, then, the proposition of a Railway for the west a mere local question? Can it be considered an interest affecting only one section of our country? We pause for a reply.—E. B.

SUICIDE.—Gotlieb Loew, residing on North Street, committed suicide on last Saturday night, by cutting his throat with a razor. The deceased was a German, but had resided for a number of years in the United States; pursuing his occupation generally, as a stone-cutter. During Saturday, he was engaged at his work, but seemed depressed in spirit and somewhat flighty. That night he requested the attendance of a religious friend, who remained some time with him, and on his expressing a wish to retire, his friend returned home. About 11 o'clock he left the room, and soon afterwards his wife followed him with a light, when she found he had committed the fatal deed. He was still sensible, and though the laceration was extensive, the large blood vessels had escaped, and the wound being dressed, he lingered until Sunday evening.

The deceased was 41 years of age, and has left a wife and six children, whose condition, appeals strongly to the philanthropic. He was a man of excellent mind, well informed and cheerful and accommodating in his deportment, but he had formed habits of occasional intemperance against which his strongest efforts of resolution, seemed not always sufficient to protect him; and there are demons in human shape, who glory in throwing snares in the way of him who would reform. It proved his ruin. He was evidently not perfectly in his right mind, when he committed the rash act.

The name of the deceased is pronounced LAPE, and some of his relations translate it into LYON, by which name they are known.—Zanes. Gaz.

Notices.

To all whom it may concern:—Having, by the action of the Muskingum Annual Conference, at its last session, during my necessary absence, been removed from Zanesville circuit, and appointed to Pennsville circuit, contrary to my wish, which was fully expressed in a letter, that was honored with undisturbed repose in the drawer of the Secretary's table, and the change subjecting me to considerable inconvenience, acting from the honest convictions of duty, I respectfully decline accepting the appointment. The circuit can negociate with the President for a supply, as he has several efficient Ministers in his hands CHAS S. CALLIHAN.
October 4th, 1847.

OXFORD, September 30, 1847.

To the President of the Ohio Conference:—

BR. YOUNG: Having no opportunity of ascertaining your whereabouts, I am compelled to adopt this method of addressing you. I returned from Conference, suffering severely from the chills and fever; arriving at home I found Mrs. Pelan suffering from the same. We have been greatly reduced, but are now slowly recovering.—General debility, arising from the labors of the past year, together with the present affliction, and doubts as to my ability to discharge the duties of the present year, compel me to solicit, that you will release me from the Clarksburg circuit, for this year. By placing the circuit in the charge of some other brother, and sending me a certificate of my release from the same,

You will much oblige yours, WM. PELAN.
Address Oxford, Butler county, Ohio.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Braxton	Circuit,	October 17th,	1847.
Lewis	"	" 24th,	"
Clarksburg	"	" 31st,	"
Evansville	"	November 7th,	"
Morgantown	"	" 14th,	"
Monongahela	"	" 21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	" 28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December 5th,	"
Home,	"	" 12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	" 19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:—

Leesburg	Circuit,	3d Sunday	October.
Granger	"	4th "	"
Wayne	"	5th "	"
Frederick	"	1st "	November
Licking	"	2d "	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d "	"
Coshocton	"	4th "	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st "	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts. I think it proper to say, that I will meet my appointment on the Granger circuit, at the Society near Br. Swan's:—Would the 4th Saturday and Sunday of October be too early for the 1st Quarterly Meeting?

For reasons of a very satisfactory character, (upon his aplication to me the morning after the rise of Conference) Br. C. Caddy was released from the Bellview circuit. No supply, as yet, for said ct. GEO. CLANCY.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE, N. Y.

BR. BASSETT: Please insert the following plan of appointments:

Wayne	Circuit,	October	16–17
Lysander	"	"	23–24
Truxton	"	"	30–31
Syracuse	"	November	6–7
Cherry Valley	"	"	13–14
Columbia	"	"	20–21
Schuyler	"	"	27–28
Oswego	"	December	4–5
Mexico	"	"	11–12
Orleans	"	"	18–19
Wilna & Antwerp	"	"	25–26
Manilus	"	1st Saturday in January,	1848.
Savannah	"	2d " "	"
Moringo	"	3d " "	"
Central	"	4th " "	"
Rome	"	5th " "	"

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Xenia	ct.,	Oct. 30th,	1847.
Port William	"	Nov. 6th,	"
Springfield	"	" 13th,	"
Union	"	" 20th,	"
Darby	mission,	" 27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec. 4th,	"
Miami ct.,		" 11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Springfield.
Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following appointments.

Liberty	ct.	Nov. 6–7	1847.
Madison	"	" 13–14	"
Flat Rock	"	" 20–21	"
White Lick	"	" 27–28	"
White River	"	Dec. 4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	" 11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. M. Young,	O.	W. Reeves,	Pa.
W. Lytle,	"	G. B. M'Elroy,	"
T. Forshee,	"	C. H. Williams, 2 subs.	Ia.
Geo. Calahan,	"	P. M.—Willshire,	O.
A. M'Guire,	"	T. M'Fee,	O.
W. W. Tipton,	"	G. S. Webster, 2,	Pa.
S. H. Davis,	"	Ch. Craig,	Pa.
J. S. Hudson,	"	F. Madera,	Va.
L. D. Littleton,	"	J. Alter, 1 sub.	Ia.
W. L. Baldwin,	"	B. Bayn,	Mich.
S. Wilson,	"	Jos. Shipp, 1 sub.	Ia.
W. N. Irwin,	"	T. Shipp,	Ia.
P. M. —Cincinnati.	"	P. M.—Peninsula,	O.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
R. George,		9	26	1 00
G. B. M'Elroy,	T. Webster,	9	26	2 50
"	J. T. Miller,	9	52	2 00
"	H. Reeves,	8	47	1 00
"	D. O. Waters,	10	9	1 50
T. Forshee,		9	52	2 00
Geo. Calahan,		9	13	2 50
T. Hanna,	J. Hickman,	8	52	4 00
"	A. Devinney,	8	52	2 00
S. Wilson,		8	52	2 00
C. H. Williams,	Jas. Johnson,	9	52	2 00
"	J. Gardner,	8	52	1 00
"	G. W. Cain,	9	52	1 00
Geo. Wheatley,	W. H. Walton,	8	52	2 00
G. S. Webster,	Mrs. E. Sproat,	9	26	2 00
"	Himself,	9	52	2 00
Ch. Craig,	J. Scott,	8	52	2 00
B. Bayn,	J. Warner,	9	31	2 00
Jos. Shipp,	T. Brown,	9	52	2 00
Th. Shipp,	John Ship,	9	38	2 00
"	J. M. Overstreet,	9	39	2 00
"	J. Sevier,	8	52	1 00

We are indebted to Br. T. Forshee, for his gratuitous exertions in behalf of our paper.

Br. B. Bayn, will oblige us by collecting our dues from D. P. Sylvan, Mich. He owes for 4 volumes.

Br. M'Elroy, tell H. R. we are satisfied, only he should send for our paper again when he gets moved. D. O. W. for his two remittances, is credited to No. 9. vol. 10. The missing numbers are sent.

The P. M. at Cincinnati notifies us that B. A. Hill, J. Hudson, and T. H. Barwise have ceased to take their paper from the post office. Will Br. Dalbey please see to this matter, and give us information at once?

Br. Swift, we believe the post office address of Br. W. H. Marshall is Zanesville.

☞ Will Br. Burns be pleased to furnish the original and entire resolution passed by the Muskingum Conference touching the duty of Stewards and Superintendents, in reference to Conference Collections?

C. SPRINGER.

Br. W. M. Edwards is informed that we never received the remittance of last May, which he speaks of. Trust he will recover the amount. We are sorry that our brother's article came a little too late for insertion. Should be glad to see Br. E. in the West.

Received at Ohio Conference.

O P Stephens,	J Stickney,	9	52	2 00
"	Th Mills,	9	52	2 00
S Graham,	D Inskeep,	9	26	2 00
G W Thornburg,	I Plum,	9	11	2 00
"	E H West,	8	37	1 00
L Ensminger,	J Hall,	8	52	2 00
Dr R S Mitchell,		9	48	2 00
J W Noble,	L Floyd,	9	52	2 50
J. Taylor, Mt. Blanchard,		9	52	2 00
D Moore,	J L Mowdre,	8	52	2 00
"	D Gill,	8	52	1 00
W G Fowler,	J M'Neal,	9	52	2 00
"	J B Lucas,	9	52	3 00
"	W P Taylor,	9	4	2 00
Wm. Smith, Ia.	Th. Eubank,	9	52	2 00
"	John Eubank,	9	52	2 00
"	Himself,	9	52	2 00
D C Carson,	S Chalfanst,	7	52	2 00
W Eckels, Cass,		8	52	2 00
A H Trumbo,	J W Wilson,	9	6	2 50
"	A V Jester,	9	52	2 00
"	Geo. W Corn,	8	52	2 00
S P Kezerta,	R Manning,	8	42	2 00
J H Webster,	S Straley,	9	52	4 00
R M Dalbey,	B Bassett,	9	15	2 00
"	L Peckenpaugh,	9	26	2 00
"	E Cretors,	8	52	1 00
"	L S Ingersoll,	8	52	2 00
"	R Morris,	8	52	2 00
"	T Lane,	9	26	2 00
"	A Beachey,	9	26	2 00
Jos. White,	Rowzey & Petterson	8	52	2 00
W B Evans,	R M'Connell,	9	23	2 00
"	Moode & Walker,	8	35	2 00
"	K Wantland,	8	35	2 00
O Warrington,	H Hopper,	9	35	2 00
"	W Buchanon	8	52	2 00
Is. Edwards,		9	52	1 00
J Dalbey, Jr.	John Snyder,	8	26	2 00
"	J A Simpson,	8	16	2 00
"	J Steubert,	8	52	2 00
W Cones,	Mrs. E. J. Banks,	9	35	1 50
"	W W Cones,	9	35	1 50
E D Norris,	N Hulbert,	8	52	4 00
"	Himself,	8	52	2 00
Is. Snyder,		9	52	2 00
Mrs. E Hall,		9	52	2 00
J D Langdon,		9	52	1 00
W Closson,		9	52	2 00
E Mudge,		9	52	2 00
J H Empson,		8	52	2 00
Jas. Foster,		8	52	2 00
C Jeffries,		9	52	2 00

Br. Joseph Ross, of Illinois, was credited $2 in Aug. 1846, by Br. S. Lancaster, and now $2 by Br. D. Bayley, which pays to vol. viii. No. 35. We believe this is in accordance with Br. R's. account of the matter.

Br. J. Blackburn is informed that 50 cents more will satisfy us in full. Please pay our agent.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

OBITUARY.

DIED, at his residence in Champaign county, on the 11th ult., Mr. THOMAS SAYER, a member of the Presbyterian Church, in his 74th year.

——At N. Orleans, September 1st, Br. D. D. CRISPENN, formerly of Wilmington, Delaware, and a devoted member of the Episcopal Church.

——In Washington county, Md., recently, Hon. Judge BUCHANON, a distinguished jurist.

——At Northampton, on the 28th ult. Rev. Dr. C. J. TENNY.

HYMENIAL.

——In Columbus, on Tuesday evening last, by Rev. Hitchcock, WM. E. IDE, M. D., of Cincinnati, to Miss HARRIET E. JEWETT, of the former city.

——On the 7th inst. by the Rev. Pinkney Lewis, MR. SAMUEL C. SPENCER, of Smithfield township, Jefferson county, to Miss ISABELLA WOOD, of Nottingham township, Harrison county, Ohio.

The Markets.

PUTNAM & ZANESVILLE.—Flour $4,50—Wheat, 75c.—Corn, 23@25c.,—Oats, 18c.—Zanesville Courier.

CINCINNATI.—Flour $4,75,—Wheat 90c,—Oats 25c,—Corn 30@31c. Beef Cattle $4,50@$4,75 ₱ cwt.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PITTSBURGH.—Flour $4,87½@$4,06¼,—Wheat 90c,—Corn 38@40c,—Oats 25c.—Commercial Journal.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour $5,75@$5,87½—Wheat $1,25@$1,30—Corn, 68@70c.—Oats, 45@49c.

BALTIMORE.—Flour $5,87@6,00—Wheat, $1,32@1,35, Corn 66@70c,—Oats, 40@43c.—Balt. Sun.

NEW YORK.—Flour $5,75@5,81½—Wheat $1,16@1,25—Corn 65@68c—Oats 45@47c—Rye 81@82c.

Advertisements.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum co., Ohio, on the 1st of October. 1847.

A	M
Atkinson, Joseph B.	Mendenhall, Mr. John
Augh, Mary Ann	M'Knight, William
B	Miller, Isaac
Boyd, John	Mitchell, George
Bendure, George	McAlister, Mr. Nelson
Brooke, Esq., M. D.	McFeters, J. B.
Barr, John	Man, Mr. Robert
C	Moore, Mr.
Campbell, George	Mitchell, Esq., J. B.
Calhoun, Mrs. Jane M.	Manhall, Miss Mary E.
Courdals, Mr. Elias W.	P
D	Pratt, Abraham
Dorsey, Miss Hannah	Puff, Mrs. Sarah
Devolve, Washington	Prentis, Mr. A. P.
Deitrick, Joseph	R
E	Riley, Mary E.
Ellis, Miss Amanda	Richardson, Wm.
F	Roberts, Mr. Thomas
France, John	Reynolds, Roxana
Freeman, Able	Roush, Henry
Forbes, Edward	S
G	Scanland, Benjamin
Genthrie, Mrs. F. C.	Scott, James L.
Goble, J.	Scalmand, Mr.
H	Sherwood, Miss Mary C.
Hosler, George	Sweeny, Joseph
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.	Showers, Elizabeth
Hoffman, Mr. Jeremiah K.	Smith, Asa C.
Hood, Charles F.	T
J	Tupper, Rachel S.
Jennings, Miss Sarah	Timmel, Mr. F.
James, Elizabeth	W
Johnson, Mr. J. J.	Watson, Jane
L	Woodruff, David
Limel, Joshua	Wilson, Johnson

J. ELDER, P. M.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October, with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

Pupils will likewise have the benefit of Professor Munson's instruction in vocal music, without incurring any additional expense.

The advantages thus furnished by the Seminary for young ladies to acquire a truly liberal education, are superior to those of most institutions in the country, and it is to be presumed that many will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term,	28 Weeks.
Summer "	16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term,	$12 00.
Summer "	$8 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term,	$6 00.
Summer "	$4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.

Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

L

POET'S CORNER.

Written for the Western Recorder.

CONSTANCY OF WOMAN.

Mr. Editor: In turning over the leaves of my Recorder last evening, my eye fell on the following—

SCENE FROM REAL LIFE.

Most persons have heard of the Tombs in New-York.—They are the prisons of the Police Courts—and the name very well expresses the moral death of most of those who enter them.

The relater is Clerk of the Police Court:

Last Sunday, said he, I was passing Tammany Hall, and saw, sitting upon the stoop, a man with his head buried in his hands, and covered all over with flies. The poor fellow was almost naked. I shook him and asked him who he was. He looked up and called me by name, saying that he only wished for a place to die! I gazed on his disfigured features, added the Colonel, and was horror-stricken at the mighty change! I recognized in him a man, who was a few years ago editor and proprietor of one of the most respectable daily journals in the city of Boston! The man who was partner with him then, is now conducting the same paper under a new head. He was a correspondent of the National Whig Organ for some time—was at the inauguration of Harrison at Washington, and introduced two gentlemen to Webster and Clay, who had since seen him in his present low situation in the Tombs. He looks bad, but the Colonel says he means to make a man of him yet. He had a letter in his pocket he received from his wife, who lives in Boston, "and," stammered out the sorrow-stoicken man, "she begins as she always did!" and ourst into a flood of tears. Curiosity called the Colonel's attention to the letter, and it began thus: "My ever dear husband!"—What a sad picture!

I was moved to tears, and for a few moments sat with my hands pressed upon my eyes, then suddenly seizing my pen I produced the following lines. They are the spontaneous effusion of a moment of excitement. Please tell me what you think of them. Yours, Louis.

Putnam, O., Oct. 5, 1847.

"My husband ever dear"—(Almighty God!)
How faithful is the trusting heart of woman—
His wayward steps in degradation trod,
And, yet, her voice among the Tombs, (an omen
Of good,) whisper'd into his sadden'd ear,
As she was wont of yore—"My husband ever dear!"

He had been, once, a man of sterling worth;
Loved by the good, companion of the great—
A nobler heart breathed not upon the Earth!
But now how changed! how wretched is his state!
And yet that voice, like music to his ear,
Breath's sweetly as of yore, "My husband ever dear!"

In wretched rags among the Tombs he roams,
His only wish, to seek a place to die!
When, lo! a letter from the wronged one comes:
What is it dims his swollen, blood-shot eye?
(Good God!) it is a penitential tear!
She writes him as of yore, "My husband ever dear!"

Oh, Woman! we are wont to call thee frail,
Because thy spirit wears a fragile form;
But when the tempest comes, and our hearts fail,
We see thee rise, far, far above the storm!
And, then, thy voice amid the strife we hear
As sweetly as of yore, "My husband ever dear!"

The Budget.

Are these things so?

We all bewail bitterly, and sometimes with an agony of sorrow, the sleep of death; and yet it is but little harder than the sleep of the world, and is not nearly so awful. Wisdom lifteth up her voice in the streets; and is commonly as unheeded, as if the streets were alleys in a graveyard: and indeed they are not unlike. For, in every street, and on either side, many have a name that live and are dead. Out-side the church-walls, and throughout every town, there is a worse decay than that of mortality—a more horrible putresence than the rotting of a corpse—that of the passions in their loathsomeness, that of a soul suffered by its human owner to see corruption. Years before his body has Christian burial, does many a citizen permit a golden grave to be dug for his spirit, and allow Mammon to read diabolical service over his dead and buried conscience. Wretched men that they are! Who shall deliver them from the body of that death? Thank God, there is a Saviour that can. And what does that Saviour say? "Watch therefore, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." Are your eyes heavy with worldly slumber? Think how such slumber may become the sleep of the grave, and shudder at the thought! Think of the uncoffined, helpless, and unconscious dead, and thank God that you, yourself, are yet alive! Think how they lie in the cold ground, with closed eyes, and faces upturned to the world above! Think how the funeral bell swings above their heads, announcing from time to time, an addition to their silent numbers; and they neither mourn nor rejoice. From the church steeple or the house-clock, every midnight does Time make proclamation all around, that the world is another day nearer its doom.—But of the buried multitude below none ever hear the terrific notice. To them it is not addressed; for them it is not intended; to them it is of no use. Thou hast ears to hear, do thou hear. We may not wish for death; but, God be thanked that the grave is no longer repulsive to us Christians! Thank God, and Christ, the Son of God, for the sure and certain hope, which everywhere springs heaven-ward from the lowliest grave.

If life be time that here is spent,
And time on earth be cast away;
Whose his time hath here misspent,
Hath hastened his own dying day.
So it doth prove a killing crime,
To massacre our living time.

Providence.

There is a Jewish tradition concerning Moses, which so beautifully illustrates this point, as to be worthy of universal notice; for though merely a fable, it is not, on that account, the less instructive. The great prophet says one of the Rabbins was once called by God to the top of a high mountain, and there permitted to propose any questions he pleased concerning the government of the universe. In the midst of one of his inquiries as to Providence, he was directed to look down upon the plain below, where was a clear spring of water. At this spring a soldier had alighted from his horse to drink. No sooner had he satisfied his thirst and gone, than a little boy came to the same place, and finding a purse the soldier had dropped; picked it up and went away. Soon after there came an infirm old man, with hoary hairs, and weary with age and travelling, who, having quenched his thirst, sat down for rest and refreshment by the side of the spring. The soldier by this time had missed his purse, and returning, demands it of the old man, who affirms that he had not seen it, and appeals to heaven to attest his innocence, and the truth of his assertion. The soldier, not believing his assertions, kills him on the spot! Moses falls on his face in horror and amazement, that such an event should be permitted by God: when the Divine voice thus prevents his expostulation: "Be not surprised, Moses, that the Judge of all the earth should have suffered this to come to pass. To you there appears no reason why that child should be the occasion of that old man's blood being spilled; but know, that that same old man, years ago, was the murderer of that child's father! And so in every dispensation of Providence, there is some wise design; and in every one the Judge of all the earth will do right!—Rev. T. Edwards.

The Smithsonian Institute and its Objects.

The Association of American Naturalists, which was in session last week at Boston, adjourned on Saturday to meet next September in Philadelphia. In the course of the Session, Professor Henry, as we learn from the Boston Journal, read a paper on the plans and objects of the Smithsonian Institute.

He first, however, gave a brief historical account of Smithson, who was born in England in the year 1768. He was educated at the University of Oxford,—was a man of amiable disposition and devoted to science. He was the best chemist in Oxford, and after his graduation became the rival of Wollaston, on minute analysis, and possessed most extraordinary skill in manipulation. The following anecdote to the point was related on the authority of the late President of the Royal Society.

On one occasion he observed a tear trickling down the face of a lady—he caught it on a piece of glass, lost one half—analysed the other half and discovered a microscopic salt. He resided most of the time abroad, and was an illegitimate son of the Duke of Northumberland, who recognised him, and left him a handsome property.—He was the author of upwards of twenty original memoirs on various subjects of science. He appears to have been proud of his scientific attainments, and on one occasion wrote thus—The best blood of England flows in my veins—on my father's side I am a Northumberland—on my mother's I am related to kings. But this is of no consequence. My name shall live in the memory of mankind, when the titles of the Northumberlands and Percys are forgotten. Professor Henry said he could find no evidence that he had written this in view of the establishment of an Institution.

Smithson died at Genoa in the year 1829, leaving his property to his nephew, the son of his brother, with a clause in his will leaving it in trust to the United States, for founding an institution for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men, in case the nephew died without issue. He did so die, and the money, about $500,000, came into possession of our government.—It was idle to say that this money was lost when it was lent to Arkansas and other States. It could not be lost, for the national government held it in trust, and having accepted the trust, was bound to see it devoted to the purpose designated in the will of Smithson. Various schemes had been proposed to carry the plan into execution, but none was definitely decided upon until a year since, when an act of Congress was passed organizing the Institution. Professor Henry then explained his own connection with the Smithsonian Institution, which was entirely unsolicited on his part. He mentioned the several plans which had been suggested for the organization of the institution, as well as that which had been finally adopted as a compromise. According to this—

To Increase Knowledge. It is proposed, 1st, To stimulate men of talent, in every part of the country and of the world, to make original researches by offering suitable rewards: and 2d, To appropriate annually a portion of the income for particular researches, under the direction of suitable persons.

To Diffuse Knowledge. It is proposed, 1st, To publish a series of periodical reports on the progress of all branches of knowledge; and 2d, To publish occasionally separate Treatises on subjects of general interest.

No memoir, on subjects of physical science, to be accepted for publication which does not form a positive addition to human knowledge, and all unverified speculations to be rejected.

Each memoir presented to the Institution to be submitted for examination to a commission of persons of reputation for learning in the branch to which the article pertains and to be accepted for publication, only in case the report of this commission is favorable.

The reports on the progress of knowledge, to be furnished by collaborators, consisting of men eminent in the different branches of knowledge. These reports to consist of three classes—Physical—Moral and Political,—Literature and the Fine Arts.

One-half of the income of the Institution is to be devoted to carrying out this plan; the other half to the increase and diffusion of knowledge by means of collections of books and objects of nature and art.

The building, which is slowly in progress, is to be erected, in considerable part, out of the interest which will accrue upon the interest which has accumulated upon the original sum, since it has been in the keeping of the U. States.

The Professor then gave an account of what had already been done, and of the memoirs which had been accepted and are in the course of publication.

Narrative.

An Hour in the Penitentiary.

During our sojourn in Philadelphia, last summer, we one day accepted an invitation to visit the Penitentiary there. We had letters to the kind-hearted Warden, Mr. Scattergood, (a most appropriate name, by the way,) who extended to us all the courtesy we could have desired. We were conducted through the Prison, and in company with Mr. S., we entered several of the cells. The Superintendent learning we were from Boston, informed us that a prisoner was confined there, for passing counterfeit money, who hailed from Massachusetts. He had been there some two or three years, and we found him a very intelligent man. His cell was exceedingly cleanly, and upon the little table in the corner, we discovered several standard books, a Bible, &c., which gave evidence of having been thoroughly read by the prisoner. He was said to be very industrious, and certainly appeared comfortable, under such circumstances. His name was George ———. He remarked that he was very glad to see any one from Boston, and seriously regreted that he should have been one of the few Bostonians, comparatively, who had disgraced the name of the 'Old Bay State.' He was happy, apparently, and as we parted, we shook his hand, and remarked that it was possible we might call on him again, in a few weeks, 'You will be sure, sir, to find me at home,' said he, with a smile, as we left the door of his cell.

As we entered the reception room once more, a bulkly despatch was handed to the Warden by one of the deputies, and upon opening it, he informed us that it was a pardon for one of the convicts. We inquired if it would encroach upon the Prison rules, under such circumstances, to accompany the Warden to the cell, while he should read it to the prisoner, and were kindly informed that we could join him. We soon reached the cell, where we found a fresh faced young man, of perhaps twenty-four, who was busily engaged at a little loom, weaving.

'Good morrow, John,' said the Warden blandly, as we entered.

'Good morning, sir.'

'Thee keeps busy, John?'

'O, yes sir—but it's very dull.'

'Does thee tire of work, John?'

'No sir—but 'I think of home.'

'And thee would like to visit home once more?'

'Oh, sir—if I could but do so'——

'And thee would not return again?'

'I would try and deserve better, sir.'

'Well, John, what would thee say, if I should tell thee I had a pardon for thee?'

'Oh, sir, such news would be too good.'

'But thee would like to hear it?'

'I care not for myself, so much,' said the poor prisoner, and tears filled his eyes—'but for my wife and child, I would be so happy'——

'And thee would shun wicked company, John?'

'Oh, yes—and I would labor for my wife and little one——

'Well, John, here is thy pardon,' continued the good old man—and he read the document, which freed this unfortunate being, who had been the dupe of other knaves. We had the pleasure of seeing him released, after a three years' confinement, and of learning that he joined his young family, to whom he has since been a faithful guardian.

We passed out to the ante-room again—where we encountered a new comer, who had just reached the Prison as we re-entered. He had been sent up for five years, on a charge of embezzlement.

He was elegantly attired in the latest style of fashion, and possessed all the 'nonchalance' and devil-me-care appearance of a genteel rowdy. He twirled his watch chain, looked particularly knowing at a couple of ladies who chanced to be present, and seemed utterly indifferent about himself or the predicament he was placed in! The Warden read his commitment, and addressed him, with—

'Charles, I am sorry to see thee here.'

'It can't be helped, old fellow!'

'What is thy age, Charles?'

'Twenty-three.'

'A Philadelphian?'

'Well—kinder, and kinder not!'

'Thee has disgraced thyself, sadly.'

'Well, I ain't troubled, old cock.'

'Thee looks not like a rogue.'

'Matter of opinion!'

'Thee was well situated'—

'Yes—well enough'—

'In good employ!'

'Well—so-so.'

'And thee had parents?'

'Yes'—

'Perhaps thee hast a mother, Charles?'

'The convict had been standing during this brief dialogue, perfectly unconcerned and reckless, until the last interrogatory was put. Had a thunderbolt struck him, he could not have fallen more suddenly than he did when the name of 'mother' fell on his ears! He sank into a chair—a torrent of tears gushed from his eyes—the very fountain of his heart seemed to have burst, on the instant! He recovered, partially—and said imploringly to the Warden:

'Don't you sir—for God's sake, don't call her name in this dreadful place? Do what you may with me, but don't mention that name to me?'

There were tears in other eyes besides the prisoner's, and an aching silence pervaded the group who surrounded the unfortunate convict. * * * * The black cap was drawn over his head, he was led to an adjoining apartment and stripped, and shortly afterwards he re-appeared upon the corridor. He passed silently on, in charge of a deputy keeper, to a lonely cell in a distant part of the prison, the door creaked on its hinges, he disappered. the Chain dropped from outside bolts; and Charles ——— was a close prisoner for five years to come?

We left the prison with heavy hearts, relieved however by the reflection that this was one of the best devised institutions of its kind in the world, and that its administration in the hands of Mr. Scattergood, secured to its unfortunate inmates the most equal and exact justice.—Philadelphia Times.

Ladies' Department.

THE NOVEL READER.

'Twas very sweet on a summer's eve,
To hear her talk and sing
Of stars, and dews, and rocks, and caves,
And all that sort of thing.

I loved her for her mild blue eye,
And her sweet and quiet air;
But I'm very sure that I didn't see
The novel on the chair.

I longed to have a quiet wife,
For a noise quite drives me frantic;
But to be a novel reader's spouse
Is anything but romantic.

The live-long day does Laura read,
In a cushioned easy chair,
In splashed shoes and dirty gown,
And tangled, uncombed hair.

The children look like beggar's brats,
And little have they of breeding;
Yet this is but one of the many ills
That flow from novel reading.

But oh, the meals!—I'm very sure
You ne'r did see such "feeding;"
For the beef is burnt, and the veal is raw,
And all from novel reading.

The bed-room's very like a sty,
And the kitchen seems a stable;
The lap-dogs litter the parlor o'er,
And the nursery is a Babel.

Ho! youth in search of a quiet wife,
Before to the shrine you lead her,
Take care, I pray you, take good care,
That she isn't a novel reader.

Ambition.

"I am weary," said the aspiring Cornelia, "of being called Scipio's daughter. Do nobly, my sons, and men shall style me the mother of the Gracchi!"

It is indeed a blessed thing to be a mother, when you are the mother of children distinguished for their goodness. Children grown to maturity, who are eminent for their intellectual and moral acquisitions, marked among men for the expression of noble thoughts and the performance of noble deeds, reflect honor on her who gave them birth. She lives in them. Her character shines in their glory.

Mothers, what shall be your children? Catch the spirit of the Roman matron, and chastening this spirit, by the pure spirit which is from above ---baptizing it into the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost—burn with an inextinguisable ambition of being the mothers of Christian sons and daughters—sons and daughters who shall be blessings to the church and the world—and receive the plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servants," in the presence of an assembled universe! These are jewels indeed, whom the Saviour acknowledges to be such, and sets in his crown to sparkle there forever. Shall those now your little ones, so shine in bliss and glory? We hope, we pray, that they may.

Pickles.

A Correspondant of the New England Farmer gives an easy and efficacious method of pickling cucumbers, which he learned from an old sea captain in the West Indies. The recipe is very simple, and the superiority of the pickles cured by its directions has been tested by many years experience. They are effected by neither age nor climate. The following is the recipe:

"To each hundred of cucumbers put a pint of salt, and pour in boiling water sufficent to cover the whole. Cover them tight to prevent the steam from escaping, and in this condition let them stand twenty four hours. They are then to be taken out, and after being wiped perfectly dry care being taken that the skin is not broken, placed in the jar in which they are to be kept. Boiling vinegar (if spice is to be used, it should be boiled with the vinegar,) is then to be put on them, the jar closed tight, and in a fortnight delicious hard pickles are produced, as green as the day they were upon the vines."

Co-operation of the Wife.

There is much good sense and truth in the remark of a modern author, that no man ever prospered in the world without the co-operation of his wife. If she unites in mutual endeavors, or rewards his labor with an endearing smile, with what confidence will he resort to his merchandise or his farm, fly over lands, sail upon the seas, meet difficulty and encounter danger, if he knows that he is not spending his strength in vain, but that his labor will be rewarded by the sweets of home! Solitude and disappointment enter the history of every man's life; and he is but half provided for his voyage, who finds but an associate for happy hours, while for his months of darkness and distress no sympathizing partner is prepared.

An Example.

Cyrus had taken the wife of Tigranes, and asked him what he would give to save her from servitude. He replied, all that he had in the world, and his life into the bargain. Cyrus, upon this, generously restored her, and pardoned what had passed. All were full of his praises on this occasion, some commending the accomplishments of his mind, others, those of his person. Tigranes asked his wife "whether she did not greatly admire him?" "I never looked at him," said she. "Not look at him! Upon whom, then, did you look?" "Upom him," she replied, "who offered his own life to redeem me from slavery."

This charming example should be copied into our behaviour in the house of God, where we should behold and contemplate the beauties and perfection of that blessed person alone, who actually did give his life a ransom for all.

[Bishop Horne.

Children's Department.

Looking for a Place.

"Well, Johny, how have you succeeded to-day, my son?"

"Nothing good to-day, mother; I have been all over town almost, and no one would take me.—The bookstores and dry goods stores, and groceries, have plenty of boys already—but I think if you had been with me, I should have stood a better chance."

"Oh, you look so thin and pale, mother, somebody would have felt sorry, and so taken me; but nobody knew me, and nobody saw you."

A tear stole down the cheek of the little boy as he spoke, for he was almost discouraged; and when his mother saw the tear, not a few ran down her's also.

It was a cold, bleak night, and Johny had been out all day looking for "a place." He had persevered, though constantly refused, until it was dark, and then gave up, thinking his mother must be tired waiting for him.

His mother was a widow and a very poor one. She had maintained herself by her needle work till a severe spell of sickness had confined her to her bed, and she was unable to do more.

She told her litule son to sit down by the fire while she prepared his supper. The fire and the supper was very scanty; but Johny knew they were the best they could provide and he felt that he would rather share such a fire and such a supper with such a mother, than sit at the best filled table with any body else, who did not love him as she did, and whom he did not love as he did her.

After a few moments of silence, the boy looked up into his mother's face with more than usual seriousness—

"Mother," said he, "do you think it would be wrong to ask my new Sunday school teacher about it on a Sabbath?"

"No, my son, not if you have no other opportunity; and I think he would be a very suitable person, too; at least I should think that he would be interested in getting you a good place."

"Well, to-morrow is Sunday, and when the class breaks up, I believe I will ask him."

After reading a portion of God's holy word, the mother and her little boy kneeled down together in their loneliness, and prayed the Lord most earnestly to take care of them and provide for them. They were very poor, but they knew that God cared for the poor. They knew also that God would do what was best for them. Oh it's a sweet thing to the soul to be able to say sicerely, "Thy will be done."

"I feel happier now," said John; "I was so tired when I came in, that I felt quite cross, I know I did—did I not look so, mother?"

The mother's heart was full, and she gave her boy one long, affectionate kiss, which was sweeter to him than many words.

Next morning was the Sabbath. Johny,s breakfast was more scanty than ever, but he said not a word about that, for he saw that his mother ate very little of it. But one or two sticks of wood were left outside the door where it was kept, and he knew that both food and fire might all be gone before night. They had no money to buy any with for several days.

The Sabbath school bell rang. The sun was shining bright and clear, but the air was exceedingly cold. The child had no overcoat, and was still wearing a part of his summer clothing. He was in his seat just as the superintendent and teacher entered.

"Who is that little pale-faced boy in your class?" asked the superintendent of the teacher.

"His name is Jones; he lives on Stone street, and I must visit him this very week. He is very regular, and a well behaved boy."

The superintendent did not forget him, and when the classes broke up, seeing him linger behind the other scholars, went up and took him by the hand kindly.

"You have been here to school several Sabbaths, have you not, my boy? said he.

"Yes, sir, I came just a month ago to-day."

"Had you ever been to school before that time?"

"Yes, sir, before mother was taken sick I used to go to ——— street school; but that was a great way off, and when mother got beter, and you opened this new school, she advised me to come here, as it is so much nearer."

"Well, did I not see you yesterday, looking for a place on Water street?"

"I was down there, sir, looking for a place."

"Why did you not take that place which the gentleman had for you in the large grocery store?"

"Do you mean the store where the great copper worm stood on the sidewalk?"

"Yes."

"Ah, sir, I didn't know they sold rum there when I first went in, and when I saw what kind of a store it was, I was afraid."

"Have you a father?"

"No, sir, father is dead;" and the little boy hung down his head.

"What did your father do my son—what business was he in?"

"Sir, he once kept a large store like that;" and the child shuddered when he answered.

"Why did you not keep the piece of gold money that you found on the floor, as you were coming into the store?"

"Because it was not mine, and I thought that the gentleman would find the owner sooner than I should."

"He did, my boy—it was my money. Did you get a place yesterday?"

"No, sir, all the places were full, and nobody knew me."

"Well, my boy, you may go now and tell your mother that you have a place. Come to see me early in the morning—your teacher will tell you where I live."

Johny went home with his heart and his eyes so full that he could hardly see the street or any thing else as he went along. He knew that it would cheer his dear mother very much and so it did. His superintendent procured a good place for him, and they were made comfortable and happy.

Surely this story carries its own moral.—Zion's Herald.

VARIETY.

Forwardness in Young Men.

Nothing is more unbecoming. Nothing will so soon repel the attentions of sensible persons. While modesty and diffidence win upon all who come within their influence, the opposite characteristics cannot fail to awaken disgust.

Many very young men fill prominent places in societies, in Church meetings, in the ministry, who are nevertheless becomingly diffident. It is not the thing done, so much as the manner in which it is done, that offends. We have known a number of youths, of promising abilities, who might have been useful to the Church and to society, who have literally "killed themselves off," as the saying is, by their officious forwardness.

Young man!—half-grown boy! would you be useful to your fellows? would you be respected by your superiors? would you exert an influence upon those of less pretensions? Avoid forwardness! Do not obtrude your opinions boisterously upon those who are older, but wait until they be asked for. Do not speak with too much positiveness. When you enter a church, do not push your way to the uppermost seat, and struggle to make your voice heard in singing above every one else: your motives may be questioned. At prayer in church join heartily in the devotions, but do not ejaculate so loudly as to disturb those near you, and almost drown the voice of the preacher: persons, whose good opinions you desire, may think you are more noisy than sincere. Consent to be a "private" in the ranks, before you seek to wear epaulets or flourish a broadsword.

We know it is a much easier thing to find fault, and to recommend methods of improvement, than it is to practice all one preaches. But we cannot forbear noting things of this kind occasionally. They are so common. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.—Methodist Protestant.

Abolition of Slavery in the Danish Islands.—Letters received by the Caledonia from reliable sources, says the New York Journal Commerce, announce that on the 28th day of July last, the King of Denmark issued a decree, declaring that all persons who should hereafter be born in his dominions should be born free, and that all persons of servitude in his dominions on the 28th of July last, and remaining so on the 28th of July, 1859, shall then be absolutely free, without compensation to the owners.

In the negotiation with the colonists which preceded the issuing of this decree, he offered them the alternative of three years with a compensation of $60 per head for each slave, or twelve years without any compensation, and they chose the latter.

Denmark has three small islands in the West Indies, viz—St. Croix, St. Thomas, and St. John's. St. Croix contains above 30,000 slaves, St. Thomas and St. John's, perhaps, 5,000.

Shameful.

The Washington Union publishes a notice of the commitment to jail, as a runaway slave, of a negro woman, who calls herself Ann E. Hodges. She is about 22 years of age, and says she is free, having served her time out with a Mr. Benjamin Daltey, of Southampton, Va. She has two scars on her left leg, near the knee, one on her left wrist, and one on the point of her breast bone. The owner is required to come forward & prove her, or she will be sold for her prison expenses, as the law directs. So it seems that a woman who claims to be free, may be seized, upon bare suspicion, imprisoned for a while, and then, without any proof that she is a slave, sold into a slavery worse than death. While such things are done in the city of Washington, the Capital of the U. States, who can wonder that our boasts of freedom are held in derision by intelligent foreigners.—Sabbath Recorder.

Pulpit Ingenuity.

A popular preacher at the close of a sermon soliciting a contribution for a certain object, added the following short address: "From the sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, and the strict attention you have honored me with, there is one thing I am afraid of, that some of you may be inclined to give too much. Now it is my duty to inform you that justice, though not so pleasant, should always be a prior virtue to generosity; therefore, as you will all be waited upon in your respective pews, I wish to have it distinctly understood, that no person will think of putting any thing into the plate who cannot pay his debts." This produced an overflowing collection.

Advertisements.

NEW GOODS.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,
Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, We will not be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

Sept. 15, 1847. [4t.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—Books of Universal Utility—Sears' Popular Pictorial Works, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

Merchants, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN, BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE Methodist P. Church. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection o Spiritul Songs, BY Rev. J. Dalby & J. B. Peat To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

Scripture Stories,	Bible Geography and Antiquities,
Illustrations,	Temperance,
Biographies,	Duties of Children,
Domestic Duties,	Prayer,
Parental Relations,	Narratives of Real Life
Missions,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exslusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; ncluding Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 25 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered. $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-		$1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	- 3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	- 5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st

With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50

Philadelphia.

Treasurer—Herman Cope, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

Frederick W. Porter, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadeldhia.

Frrderick A. Packard, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

Boston, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.
New York, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.
Louisville, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.
Mar. 18, '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 3. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, OCTOBER 21, 1847. WHOLE NO. 419.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. M. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

REVERDY H. WHITE, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within Three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

A HYMN,

For the Harvest-Home of 1847.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "PROVERBIAL PHILOSOPHY."

O nation, Christian nation,
Lift high the hymn of praise,
The God of our salvation
Is love in all his ways;
He blesseth us, and feedeth
Every creature of his hand,
To succor him that needeth
And to gladden all the land!

Rejoice, ye happy people,
And peal the changing chime
From every belfried steeple
In symphony sublime;
Let cottage and let palace
Be thankful and rejoice,
And woods, and hills, and valleys,
Re-echo the glad voice!

From glen, and plain, and city
Let gracious incense rise,
The Lord of life in pity
Hath heard His creatures' cries;
And where in fierce oppressing
Stalk'd fever, fear, and dearth,
He pours a triple blessing
To fill and fatten earth!

Gaze round in deep emotion:
The rich and ripened grain
Is like a golden ocean
Becalmed upon the plain;
And we, who late were weepers
Lest judgment should destroy,
Now sing, because the reapers
Are come again with joy!

O praise the hand that giveth
—And giveth evermore,—
To every soul that liveth
Abundance flowing o'er!
For every soul He filleth
With manna from above,
And over all distilleth
The unction of His love.

Then gather, Christians, gather
To praise with heart and voice
The good Almighty Father,
Who biddeth you rejoice;
For He hath turn'd the sadness
Of His children into mirth,
And we will sing with gladness
The harvest-home of earth!

[Episcopal Recorder.

Religious.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Christianity.

All men have an interest in it. Wherever we find a being, depraved in his character, sinful in his actions, and wretched in his condition, there we find one who has concern in it. Among its numerous membership, society has not an individual, for whose ear, it has no soothing promise—for whose heart, it has no healing balm; for whose home it has no brightning smile, and for whose future, it has no illuminating ray. The partialities of fortune it does not know—the distinctions of Aristocratic pride, it does not respect. Contemplating our entire race in the same light, it offers to every thirsting lip, the cup of holy joy, and opens before every inquiring eye, the prospect lit up with a radiance, that Eden, in her fairest hours never saw. Who will say, that this ought not so to be! We receive into our lungs, the same natural air. Why should we not breathe the same spiritual atmosphere? The natural rain falls—alike upon the fields of the rich and the poor; Why should not the showers of divine grace descend with the same liberality? Intended by its glorious anthor to operate universally, christianity has been formed, plain and intelligible. It is suited to the humblest intellect. While but few can find their way through the labyrinth of science, guided though they be by the Lamp of Philosophy, the most ignorant can obtain a knowledge of its practical branches. Did it require years of intense study, long confinement and profound thought, to give a man an insight into the system of religion, its end would be thwarted. Unbless'd by its gifts, life would flow on as dark—and turbid stream—and eternity would rush upon us in the most alarming aspect. And why? Because such is the situation of the majority of mankind: such the weakness of their minds & the engagements of business, that they could not become familiar with it. Hence its admirable simplicity. Divested of the thick & heavy drapery which has been hung around other systems, it appears before us in a neat and elegant attire. True, it proceeds from a throne that is girt with "clouds and darkness," yet nevertheless, it is clear in all its essential principles, and satisfactory in all its prominent doctrines, over its lofty gateway, Heaven's own hand has written, "a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." The BIBLE proves this truth. Where is the person who can read it and not understand the nature of Christianity. Is there any mystery in it?

That this subject may be fully understood, God himself has explained it. He has assumed the character of a teacher, to instruct the world in what it consists. Would you then know what true Christianity is? come with me to the Bible. —It is "as the voice of the Almighty when he speaketh," Whose voice is heard in but faint whispers in the peals of thunder which rend the air, and shake our earth. Go, to the Philosopher, if you would learn the wisdom of the earth. Go to the historian, if you would know what has occurred since the birth of time. Go sit at Nature's feet, if you would learn her laws:—But come to the Bible, if you would become acqnainted with evangelical religion. O pure, and excellent fountain, at which, so many in Heaven have drunk—of which so many how on earth are drinking, to thee, will we bend our foosteps. Oh Blessed Sovereign, be thou our Preceptor. G. S. W.

Freedom, Beaver Co., Pa., Oct. 5th, 1847.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

WEST AFRICA.

FROM REV. MR. WILSON'S SURVEY OF THE MISSION.

There has been much mortality among the Mpongwe people during the past year, (more than has ever been known before.) the principal part of which is to be ascribed to intemperance and other excesses in past years; showing that what we are to do for this and other branches of the African family, ought to be done with as little delay as possible. It is a painful fact that the tribes on the western coast are gradually disappearing; and it is still more painful, as well as undeniably true, to reflect that the means of their destruction have been furnished by our own and other Christian nations! The great day of account will reveal, it may be, that the number of the victims of intemperance in Africa greatly exceeds those of the slave trade. The intervention of missionary influence alone, it is believed, will avert these calamities.

Formerly the Mpongwe people were surrounded on all sides by the Shekani tribe. These, by means of petty wars, intemperance, and the slave trade, very nearly exhausted themselves; and about fifteen or twenty years ago, they were displaced by the Bakali people. The latter have taken possession of all the tributary streams of the Gaboon, both north and south; but their largest and principal settlements are in the region of country which I visited. Their settlements are numerous and large. Six or eight of them might be visited in a single day, the smallest of which perhaps would not contain less than four or five hundred inhabitants. Here I found, what is seldom seen immediately on the sea coast, a large number of very aged men and women. This can be accounted for only by the supposition that they have recently emerged from the interior, and have not as yet been brought into contact with the blighting influence, which modern commerce exerts upon pagan tribes. These people, though heathen in the fullest sense of the term, & frequently at war among themselves, were civil and kind to me, and listened with the utmost attention to the preaching of the Word, which they had never heard before. A missionary might live in safety among them, and find scope for labor every day of his life. In one neighborhood he would be surrounded with eight or ten thousand souls; and he might find double that number by making excursions of twelve or fifteen miles in other directions. The Bakali dialect differs somewhat from the Mpongwe; but it might be acquired with comparative ease, since the principles of the latter have been understood and reduced to writing.

The Kama people, like the Bakali, have recently emerged from the interior, and have established themselves on the sea coast for the advantages and conveniences of trade. They do not live together in compact villages, like the tribes of Western Africa generally; but are scattered in every direction over the country; so that I found it difficult to form any satisfactory estimate of their population. From what I saw, however, and what I could learn through others, I suppose there must be as many as twenty-five thousand inhabitants residing on or within a few miles of the beach. Besides these, the tribes immediately in the interior, and to the distance of one or two hundred miles, are represented as being very numerous; and they all speak the Mpongwe language.

As a people they are somewhat less advanced in civilization than the natives on the Gaboon.—They have frequent wars among themselves, and have been a good deal engaged in supplying slaves for the Cape Lopez market. I was received with kindness, and found that they would be greatly pleased to have a missionary reside among them.

The King, whose authority here is absolute, assured me that his people would come together and form one large town, if a missionary would reside among them. He gave me his son to be educated in our school at the Gaboon. The lad remained with us several months; but, proving to be a dull and vicious boy, he has been recently returned to his father. A judicious and experienced missionary might dwell among these people without risk of violence, and do immense good; and it is most ardently to be desired that the place may be occupied as speedily as possible. The trade of the place consists in ivory, gum, wax, and mats of the most beautiful and tasteful workmanship which I have seen in Africa.

The Batanga people, like the other two, have been but little known to white men, until within the last fifteen or twenty years. They are, therefore, what may be called unsophisticated natives, that is, heathen of the deepest dye, but as yet untainted by the vices of civilized countries. Their physical features differ somewhat from the tribes along the coast, and approximate, I should think, to the descriptions given of the Caffre and other tribes of South Africa, their complexion being a dark brown, and not the deep black of most of the coast natives.

I regretted very much that I could not speak their language, so as to find out something about the origin of the tribe, and the region of country from which their ancestors had emigrated.—This language belongs to the one great family which undoubtedly prevails over the whole of the southern division of the African continent; but as a dialect it differs essentially from the Mpongwe. I have a vocabulary and a series of colloquial sentences in this tongue, that would be serviceable to a missionary who should think of locating himself among them.

The Batanga people are numerous, and live in small villages at the distance of not more than two or 3 hundred yards from each other. From what I saw, and from what I learned through others, I suppose that their population is not less than twenty-five thousand, all of them settled on the beach, the extreme villages being not more than ten or twelve miles apart.

The Batanga people, though they have many cruel and savage practices among them, are mild and civil in their intercourse with strangers; and they would be glad to have a missionary reside among them, especially as they are very desirous of learning to speak the English language. A judicious missionary, acquainted with African character, might live and labor among them with much comfort to himself and without risk of violence.

The place is much frequented by the Gaboon people, who perform the voyage by means of native boats in two or three days. They speak of the Buanga people as remarkably honest; and it is only within four or five years past that the latter have received rum in barter for their country products. A taste for this, however, has been acquired; and if the influence of Christianity shall not be speedily thrown around them, they will be exposed to the same calamities that have overtaken the older tribes on the coast. Judging from the aspect of the country, and the healthy appearance of the people, I should say that no portion of Western Africa is more salubrious.

Although there can be no doubt that all parts of the African coast are more or less prejudical to European constitutions, still there can be as little doubt that some places are much more so than others. There are well founded reasons to believe that the southern coast (beyond the Bight or Benin) is more healthy than the northern.—In our own mission family there has been only one death; and those membes of the mission who have tried both parts of the coast, are unanimous in the opinion that they now enjoy better health than formerly. We have had thrown upon our care, at different times, since we have resided at the Gaboon, as many as ten or twelve foreigners sick with fever, all of whom have had it mildly, and not one has died. The French have made an experiment on a much larger scale; and their statistics show clearly that the Gaboon, with the exception of Goree, is altogether the most healthy point occupied by them on the coast.

No missionary however, need expect to escape entirely the influence of the African climate, even at this place; but we apprehend, as a general thing, that it will be mild in its character; and with the experience acquired in the treatment of the fever, he may encounter it now without serious risk of life. Although he may never enjoy what would be called robust health in America, he will have strength enough, provided he is willing to exercise such self-denial as the missionary work calls for, to do immense good in effecting the salvation of this benighted people. Men of the world can and do live and labor on all parts of the coast; and until the friends of the Redeemer shall have acquired hardihood and courage to look these dangers in the face, they will justly be chargeable with cowardice and irresolution.

We have recently made large collections of vocabularies of words of the different dialects on this part of the coast, especially of those spoken between the Bight of Biafra, and Benguela; and we find that they are not only related to each other. but by comparing them with such vocabularies as we have of the languages of the Cape of Good Hope, Mozambique, and other parts of the eastern coast, we learn, that though differing from each other materially as dialects, yet that they all undoubtedly belong to one general family. The orthography of the Zulu, as furnished in the journals of our brethren laboring among that tribe, not only bears a strong resemblance to the Mpongwe; but many of their proper names, as Dingaan, Umpandi, and others, are common to them and the Gaboon people.

But the most remarkable coincidence we have met with, is the close affinity between the Mpongwe and the Sowhylee, (or Sawahili, or Swahere,) the language spoken by the aboriginal inhabitants of the island & coast of Zanzibar. We have recently procured a vocabulary of this dialect from a native of Zanzibar, brought from the eastern to the western coast of Africa by an American trading vessel. From this man we obtained a vocabulary of more than two hundred words, as well as a few colloquial sentences. Of these a small number of words, as might naturally be expected, were evidently of Arabic origin; but of the remainder nearly one-fourth were identically the same, or differed very slightly. During the time these words were taken down, several Mpongwe men happened to be present, and the utmost astonishment was manifested by both parties on discovering the close affinity of their languages.—Had this Sowhylee man remained in the Gaboon two or three weeks he would have spoken the Mpongwe with perfect ease.

I find by referring to the communication from Mr. Burgess while at Zanzibar, and published in the Herald of 1839, that most of the names of places mentioned by him as lying in the interior from Zanzibar, are Mpongwe words. From a slave now residing in the Gaboon, and who was brought several hundred miles from the interior, I learned that he had heard of white men residing on the eastern coast, who were undoubtedly the Arabs of Zanzibar.

These statements have been made for the purpose of suggesting the expediency of establishing a mission among the Sowhylee tribe on the coast of Zanzibar. Mr. Burgess thinks that an American missionary would enjoy the protection of the Imaum of Muscat; that no opposition would be made to the introduction of Christianity among the Sowhylee people, and that the country would not be unhealthy. Now if a station should be established there, and the one at Gaboon be continued, it would be perfectly reasonable to expect that a line of missions might be extended from one of these points to the other, in less than twenty years, and thus lay open one of the most interesting and extensive fields of missionary enterprise that can be found on the continent. The Imaum, as stated by Mr. Burgess, sends annual expeditions several hundred miles into the interior which might be accompanied by missionaries. From this point, guides could be obtained to go as much farther; and from the similarity of languages prevailing on the whole route, we do not see any serious difficulty in realizing the idea just expressed.

The Faithful Rebuke.—An elder of the church in ——, New York, a few years ago owned a distillery and manufactured ardent spirits. The elder was an active christian, and seemed quite awake to the benevolent efforts of the day. His pastor was grieved that so worthy a man should be engaged in a business which brought temporal and eternal ruin upon his fellow men, and resolved to give him faithful warning. While visiting the elder at his house, the elder looked to the grave yard and said, "I love to look there it seems to be the way to heaven." "Yes," said the pastor, "and that," pointing to the distillery, "is the way to hell." It was a word in season; and in a few weeks the distillery was leveled to the ground.

Ministerial.

From the Methodist Protestant.

Preachers and Preaching.

I know a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, formerly of the Philadelphia, but now of the N. York Conference, who was born in Caroline County on the Eastern Shore of Maryland; and who served his apprenticeship to the tailoring business in Greensborough in that county. When he commenced he had but little education, and of course being but a boy, he had small preaching abilities. He afterwards became a popular preacher. Some years ago when stationed in Philadelphia with a young and growing family he was waited upon by a congregation of another denomination, and offered one thousand dollars per annum, a house and the liberty to preach his own doctrine if he would join them. He replied that on a certain designated occasion he would appear before the committee appointed to wait upon him, or before the congregation. At the time appointed he went to the place of meeting and said in substance, "Brethren, I have received your liberal proposition and have considered it, and am now before you to give my answer, which must be in the negative. When a poor orphan boy, the Methodists took me from the shop-board of a tailor, educated me, bore with my infirmities, furnished me with a horse, saddle-bags, &c., and became my nursing fathers and mothers when I was of little service to them. Under these circumstances if I had no other objections, I think it would be dishonorable in me to leave them now that I can be of service to them, and although I do not receive as much as you generously offer me, I am sure you will approve of the motives which actuate me." Here was a man of right principles and of true honor. He is not alone. I have known several other ministers who have done the same thing, and I have no doubt we have scores in our own church who would reject a similar offer. They have not entered the ministry for filthy lucre, but from principle. I think an offer of the kind is an insult to any minister, and is an impeachment of his integrity. It is the duty of every church to support its minister; and much more might be accomplished by our circuits and stations if they would properly consider the importance of the matter, and could be induced to feel that affection and respect for their pastors, which their important services and their sacrifices should inspire. There is probably not an individual in the Church who could not give more than he does. When I see a man acting a niggardly, and parsimonious part towards his minister I set it down, he cares more for his money than for the Gospel; and that he is destitute of that enlightened Christian feeling which properly appreciates the high calling of the minister and of love to the Saviour who has called him to the work. I have known men who seemed to grudge more what they gave the minister than what they gave the showman, tobacconist, &c. Now there are many men in the church who give more for tobacco, snuff, cigars, &c., than for the preaching of the gospel. There are those who can fare sumptuously every day, ride in fine carriages, & buy costly clothing and furniture, who when asked for money to pay their minister deal out a few dollars only, and think themselves wonderfully liberal. There are others who to advance their political party will give more freely than to the cause of God.

We have no right, however, to complain of the members spending in tobocco what should be given to the minister, when we see the minister himself spending what is given him in tobacco and cigars. Some ministers think that smoking is serviceable to them, others I am sure injure their health by the use of tobacco. To me it looks very unministerial to see a minister with a quid of tobacco or a cigar in his mouth. It does not look much like self-denial, and yet some of our most pious and able ministers indulge in this way. They of course do not see the matter as I do. I may be wrong and they right. I sometimes fear from the observations which I make that there are "some ministers and laymen" among us, who feel very little interest in the church, or for the salvation of souls. If we felt as much as we ought to feel, it seems to me that we should always manifest a deep concern and should pray more frequently and more earnestly in private for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in our congregations. If we attend preaching statedly, we seem to care very little whether we ourselves are revived, or sinners awakened. In a word, many of us are less spiritual and less devout in all the means of grace than we ought to be. This is the great cause why we are so barren ourselves and see so little success in the preaching of the Word. There are too many, who preach themselves instead of Christ, and who preach other things besides the gospel. The plain and searching sermons of Wesley, Fletcher and the old time Methodist preachers will not go down in this age of refinement; but they certainly were attended with better results than modern preaching. and I should be pleased to see our ministers following their example in plain, pointed, close and zealous preaching, accompanied by holy living, I believe our ministers will compare favorably with the ministers in any other church in these respects. There are few in all the churches who take these men as examples and who preach with as much success.

P. B. H.

Ladies' Department.

THE APPRENTICE GIRL.

The ware-rooms of Madame Camille, one of our most fashionable Parisian milliners, had one day received an additional apprentice. Her name was Gabrielle. Her father was a mason, and like too many of the working classes, drank on Sunday what he had earned during the week.—Her mother did the best she could to support her family, and found it a hard matter with the little she earned.

Gabrielle had suffered such misery from her cradle, that she had never known that youthful spring which usually makes to children the mere consciousness of existence a joy.

"Mamma, what a nice thing it is to be alive!" once said a child to her mother as she bounded before her. Gabrielle was sixteen, and knew not what a smile was. Her fair but faded cheek bore an expression of suffering and quiet resignation, which was more affecting than any open demonstration of grief. The child contrasted the house of her mistress—the abode of order, economy, and, consequently, of ease and comfort—with her own home where reigned every kind of wretchedness that poverty and disorderly habits could produce, and where reproaches—most just, it is true, and, consequently, the more painful—gave rise to mutual recrimination between husband and wife. One evening, among others, the wife was complaining that the mason had not given her all he earned.

"I should have nothing to drink if I did," replied the husband.

The dispute was beginning to get warm; Gabrielle whispered to her father—

"I give my mother half of what I earn, father, to buy clothes for my brothers and sisters; I will give you the other half for drink."

"Thank you, my child," said the father, who accordingly took the money from his daughter, and went out.

But this man, who could drink without any scruple the fruit of his own labor, felt a kind of remorse in expending at the tavern the money which had been earned by his daugher; and when he drew from his pocket the hard earned pieces which the slight, delicate hand of his daughter had placed in his, the sound of them, as they jingled on the counter, went to his very heart, and that evening, for a wonder, he returned home sober. How much may be accomplished by kind looks and words, when all remonstrances fail! A trifling act of kindness, with a look of affection had smitten the feelings of the hitherto reckless father.

The following evening, after having, in a similar manner, received the half of Gabrielle's earnings, the mason went out, but he had hardly taken a few steps, when he came back.

"Gabrielle," said he "come, and we will take a walk in the country."

Gabrielle started up with alacrity. "You are not going to the tavern, father?" said she to him.

"Is it with a young girl like you? Do you think me a brute?" said the man. The heart, after all, is the best teacher of what is becoming.

Gabrielle knew—how to read, and during their walk she related to her father a number of little stories, which amused him, and made him forget the tavern. The next week the mason's family had enough to eat, and the week after, from the united earnings of the father and daughter, the children were able to be sent to school! In short, at the end of a month, the aspect of this dwelling, formerly the abode of misery, tears, and quarrels, was quite altered; and the companions of the mason, missing him from his old haunt, began jeering him; but he told them what his daughter had done.

"So good a daughter ought to make a good wife," cried a rich miller who had been listening to him. "I have an only son, and right glad would I be if you would give her to him. Good sense, gentleness, and modesty are better in the poor man's house than riches."

And immediately, without even enquiring whether Gabrielle was ugly or pretty, he demanded her in marriage for his son.

Gabrielle is now the wife of a rich miller.—She is the mother of children, and a blessing to her husband's family, as she had been to her own. Those lips, which had never uttered words but of patient gentleness and sense beyond her age, are no longer strangers to smiles, and the rosy hue of health again tinges the cheek which had faded under early hardship and over toil. Gabrielle is still alive.

WOMAN'S LOT.

Oh! say not waman's lot is hard,
Her path a path of sorrow;
To-day, perchance, some joy debarr'd
May yield more joy to-morrow.

It is not hard—it cannot be,
To speak in tones of gladness,
To hush the sigh of misery,
And soothe the brow of sadness.

It is not hard sweet flowers to spread,
To strew the path with roses,
To smooth the couch and rest the head,
Where some loved friend reposes.

It is not hard, to trim the hearth
For brothers home returning;
To wake the songs of harmless mirth,
When winter fires are burning.

It is not hard a sister's love
To pay with love as tender;
When cares perplex, and trials prove,
A sister's help to render.

It is not hard when troubles come,
And doubts and fears distressing,
To shelter in a father's home,
And feel a mother's blessing.

It is not hard, when storms arise
Mid darkness and dejection,
To look to heaven with trusting eyes,
And ask its kind protection.

Then say not woman's lot is hard,
Her path the path of sorrow;
To-day, perchance, some joy debarr'd
May yield sweet peace to-morrow.

Young Men's Department.

A Story of Gambling.

We have already given one or two illustrations of the sad effects of gambling. Their publication has, we have reason to believe, not been without salutary effects. The vice is, generally speaking, practised in secret, and therefore it is, that the ruin, despair, crime, and suicide, which it so frequently causes, escape public notice—and surviving relatives and friends of the victims being anxious to draw the veil of oblivion over the errors and infirmities of the tempted and the lost. We have, however, heard of another case, which seems to us full of admonition. It bears, too, more particularly upon the error in which so many indulge, that no harm can arise from card-playing merely for amusements or with a trifle only at stake.

A few years since, Mr. Green, the reformed gambler, took passage on board a steamboat at Louisville, bound for New Orleans. A short time after the boat pushed off, it was discovered that there were no less than twenty gamblers on board, and much dissatisfaction was expressed, because so many had chosen the same boat. It was soon agreed that ten or fifteen should return ashore at the first opportunity, and wait for another boat. Shortly after, this determination was carried into effect, and it was while Mr. Green was standing on the hurricane deck, noticing the landing of a portion of his old friends, that his attention was arrested by a young man, looking anxiously upon the departing gamblers. He was pale and agitated, and a tear-drop glistened in his eye. His whole appearance was so remarkable, that even Green became excited and interested. He sought the youth, and asked him whither he was going? He replied that he "knew not where," and as if to shun further notice, left the deck, and descended into the cabin.

Green, still more curious, followed him, and by the expression of sympathy, finally induced him to unbosom himself. He said that his first reply was correct—that he really did not know whither he was going. He was the son of reputable parents in Boston, and had left that city a few weeks before for the purpose of visiting Louisville, "which place," he continued, "we have just passed." The reasons for this course were sad ones. He had a sister at Louisville, who has married and removed thither, while he was yet a child. The death of that sister's husband had induced her to write for her brother to come on, to protect her in her widowhood, and assist in settling up the estate. His parents provided him with all the necessaries for the journey, and gave him permission to tarry a few days at New York and Philadelphia, should he think proper, and also gave him about two hundred dollars in money. All went smoothly and pleasantly until he arrived in Philadelphia. Here he took lodgings at a leading hotel, and soon formed an acquaintance with two young men of genteel exterior, plausible manners, and captivating address. Accompanied by them, he, during the day, visited several of the leading institutions, and at night accepted an invitation to play a game of whist, the only game of cards with which he was familiar.

Several days and evenings were occupied in a similar manner. He then determined to continue his journey, which he did, by taking passage in one of the lines for Pittsburgh. On appearing at the depot the next morning, he was delighted to find his two companions. They also had business West, and they regarded it as a pleasure to have so agreeable a companion. After exhausting the ordinary topics of the day, the game of whist was again thought of and renewed. They first played for the cards, then for liquor, and finally for small sums of money. The youth became excited, and ere they reached the iron city, he had lost every dollar that belonged to him, with the exception of a sum just sufficient to pay his passage from Pittsburgh to Louisville. But again the strangers made their appearance on board an Ohio river steamer, & in the hope of recovering what he had lost, the deluded young man played again, when his gold watch was the sacrifice. On arriving at Cincinnati he was nearly mad. He then bethought himself of a package which his mother had confided to him for his sister. He sought for it in his trunk, found and opened it. It contained a necklace as a love-gift, and an unsealed letter, in which was enclosed a bank note for $100.

Still tempted by the demon of gambling, and still anxious to regain what he had lost, he returned to his vile companions and whist. He played hour after hour, lost the money, and then staked and lost the necklace. At this point, the horrors of his situation were indescribable. Louisville was at hand, but how could he meet his sister. How could he explain his folly, his infatuation, and his crime? He had left home with a good name, on a mission of sacred duty, and he was now a thief and a robbor. He had misemployed funds given under hallowed circumstances, and his condition was indeed desperate. Confused and perplexed, he at last determined to rush from the boat, leave the rifled package at the house of his sister, return and follow the fortunes of the gamblers, who had tempted and betrayed him, in the hope that they would not be so heartless as to throw him off. But this hope was of short duration, for they were among the party that left the boat as above described, in consequence of there being too many of the fraternity on board.

It was while they were returning that he was noticed by Green, and that hence a tear forced itself to his eye, when he realized the loneliness and wretchedness of his condition. He was an outcast and a robber—had become so in a few days, from having ventured upon what he called an innocent game of whist, & thus he truly said, in reply to the question that had been put to him, that he knew not whither he was going. Green advised him to return to his sister and make a frank confession—but his heart failed him—he had not the moral nerve. He could not meet the being he had so bitterly wronged. He gratefully accepted a slight loan from Greene, and soon after departed.

Two years rolled by. Green was again on the Mississippi, a passenger on the steamer Mediterranean, on her way from Orleans to Louisville. An accident happened by which she was induced to stop near Plaquemine. While there, a fellow-passenger remarked that he had just witnessed a horrible sight upon the forward deck of the boat.

"Ah!" exclaimsd Green—and immediately proceeded to the spot designated. He there beheld five men in chains—convicts, on their way from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, where the State Penitentiary of Louisiana is located.—"Among them was the wretched youth whose unfortunate journey from Boston to Louisville, we have here so hasily described!" He had but a few days before been convicted of forgery, and sentenced to the State Prison for five years! This, gentle reader, is no fiction, but a true story, and the moral it conveys as to the danger of gambling, cannot be mistaken.—Philad. Inquirer.

Principle.

Never confide in the principle of a timid man. He who has no courage cannot be said to have principle; he may be disposed to virtue, and may prefer good to evil, but he is in the sport of chance, and the slave of circumstances. What avails the best inclinations, if resolution be wanting to put them in practice. A feeble and irresolute man who means well, is more dangerous than an audacious and confirmed villain. You know the latter and are on guard against him; you rely upon the good intentions of the former and discover too late, like the son of Israel, he is an unstable as water, and shall not excel. A timid man can never become great; if he possess talent he cannot apply it; he is trampled opon by the envious and awed by the swaggering; he is thrust from the direct path which alone leads to honor and fame, by every aspirant who possesses more spirit than himself.

To Keep Apples for Winter.—Put them in casks or bins, in layers well covered with dry sand; each layer being covered. This preserves them from the air, from moisture, and from frost; it prevents their perishing by their own perspiration, their moisture being absorbed by the sand; at the same time it preserves the flavor of the apples, and prevents their wilting. Pippens have been kept in this manner sound and fresh, till midsummer; and how much longer they would have kept is not known. Any kind of sand will answer, but it must be perfectly dry.

An effectual remedy for the various diseases of minkind is, simple living.

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Clearfield co., Pa., Sept. 19, 1847.

Br. Bassett: I wish to inform our brethren, through your paper, how we are getting along on this (Susquehanna) circuit. We held our camp meeting commencing the 10th of September, and we had quite a reviving time. We were assisted with the labors of Brothers H. Palmer, J. C. Hazlett, and S. M. Hazlett, who labored effectually and to the satisfaction of all their hearers; and best of all, the power of God attended the word, and souls were brought to see the danger to which they were exposed. We had inclement weather, part of the time. It commenced raining on Sabbath, and continued all night. Monday morning, we held a prayer meeting; and blessed be the name of God, he poured upon us his Holy Spirit. The lukewarm were revived, and backsliders were reclaimed, and the membership of the church gloriously strengthend with "might in the inward man." On Monday night some seven or eight came forward to be prayed for, one or two of whom found peace and pardon in believing in the Savior. On Tuesday, after preaching by Brother J. C. Hazlett at 11 o'clock, the mourners were called, and some came forward, one of whom experienced the pardoning mercy of God. In the afternoon of the same day, Br. V. Lucas came and preached for us at candle-lighting. Brother J. C. Hazlett followed in exhortation. We continued all night in prayer with souls that were deeply affected on account of their sins. The number converted, and restored is 23,—all of which were brought in on Tuesday night, save two or three. Nine gave us their names, and others intend to do so. I trust that this is the commencement of good days, on this circuit. May the good Lord prosper the church here more abundantly.

Yours in the bonds of christian fellowship,
MARTIN STEWART.

From the Methodist Protestant.

NORTH CAROLINA DISTRICT.

Brother Reese,—We have just closed a meeting at Hickory Grove, which was protracted ten days. It was a gracious time; for the Lord revived his work, much to the joy of the Church and the good of the community. Gray-headed men and women, young men and maidens, were seen prostrate at the alter of prayer, and the surrounding grove rang with their cries for mercy and their exstatic shouting of joy. There were, perhaps, forty original conversions, and may be twelve or fifteen reclaimed. These have not all joined the Church, but forty-eight came forward right on the spot and joined with us. We are enclined to the belief that every one who has not joined yet will do so. Early in the meeting the Lord's Supper was administered to many thankful communicants. Afterwards the ordinance of Baptism was administered to more than thirty persons, in the presence of an attentive congregation. Thus the Lord has visited this part of the circuit with this most gracious visitation.

Let me not omit to mention also, that at Double Springs Campmeeting there were twenty conversions: only seven united with us. Being unwell during this meeting, I did not ascertain the cause why more of them did not join. Perhaps a door was not opened untill they had left the ground.

Let me state, moreover, that I have assisted the brethren at their campmeetings this season on Yadkin, Randolph and Davidson Circuits; in each of which many things are encouraging: but in Davidson Circuit especially our cause is rapidly gaining ground. This circuit is in the very midst of the richest part of the gold district of North Carolina. Much dilligence is manifested here in gathering the precious metal; but when gathered many of them make it subserve the purposes of our more precious religion.

C. F. Harris.

Guilford Ct. N. C., Oct. 7, 1848.

From the Methodist Protestant.

MARYLAND DISTRICT.

Western Station, Baltimore Oct. 12*th.*

Dear Br. Reese,—As it may be cheering to the friends of the Church abroad to hear what the Lord is doing for us here, we are induced to give a brief account of the meeting which we have been holding for the past five weeks, continuing every night. For two weeks past we have been greatly favored of the Lord, by the signal manifestations of his presence and power in the congregations. On Sabbath week last, at the communion service, we had one of the most delightful seasons we ever witnessed. Every heart was full, and many were enabled to rejoice in hope of coming glory. Up to this time about forty have united with us in Church fellowship among whom are twenty-six heads of families of respectability and influence, such as can be depended on. We expect some ten or twelve more to join us; indeed we are receiving members every day. During the progress of our meeting we have been very busily engaged in visiting and praying with the families who come to and are connected with the Church. Much has been done by us in this way. We are more than ever convinced of the great good that can be accomplished and the influence which may be exerted by pastoral visiting when attended to properly. The prospects are still very encouraging for a continuance of this good work, and our prayer is—O Lord, continue to revive thy work, and pour out thy spirit upon us. The Sabbath-school connected with the Church, is at present in a flourising condition; and upon the whole we are prospering. The Lord is with us—to him be all the glory.

Affectionately yours.

J. Varden, Supt.
P. L. Wilson, Asst.

Conference Proceedings.

IOWA CONFERENCE.

The Iowa Annual Conference met in Winchester, Van Buren county, Iowa, on the 8th of September, 1847, to hold its second session. A portion of holy writ was read and prayer by the President, Brother Patterson, Conference organized by electing Dr. Adoni Job Parrish Secretary pro. tem., who afterwards was permanently elected.

APPOINTMENTS.

William Patterson, President.
Tipton ct.,—A. Caldwell.
Iowa City ct.,—O. W. Kellogg.
Winchester ct.,—R. Miller.
Fort Desmoin mission,—Wm. Busick.
Dubuque mission,—To be supplied.
Oskaloosa mission,—To be supplied.
Levi Freece—Transferred to the unstationed list.
G. S. Pierson and W. K. Talbot, removed to Ill.

Whereas, There has been such an Institution known as the Snethen Seminary, and from the best information we can obtain said Institution has ceased to exist, from the fact that its professor, W. K. Talbot, who was appointed by the last Iowa Annual Conference for its professor, has left the state, and been absent nearly 9 months, and the said Institution being without professor, officers, students, or house; Therefore, Resolved, this Conference does not recognize any such Institution as being under its control or patronage.

NUMBERS IN SOCIETY.

Tipton circuit,	76
Iowa City circuit,	30
Winchester circuit,	86
Oskaloosa mission,	20
Fort Desmoin mission,	30
Total,	242

CONFERENCE STEWARD'S REPORT.

	Claim.	Rec'd.	Deficit.
O. W. Kellogg,	$200	$50	$150 00
R. Miller,	200	24	170 00
A. Caldwell,	200	133	66 33
W. Patterson, half services,	130	45 91	86 00

The next Conference to be held at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar county, Iowa, to commence on the 2d Wednesday in September next. In about six weeks we will be able to report a brick parsonage, we are commencing it now.

Brother Bassett, I have attended 12 or 15 sessions of Conferences, and I never saw a more harmonious one. The brethren accepted their fields of labor with a determination to go to work like true Evangelists in the cause of their divine Master.

We held a camp meeting in connection with the Conference, and the power of God was there to wound and to heal. Glory to his name, he has not forgotten us in the far off west. Though we are weak here, as yet, we have confidence in the living God, and hope yet to see glorious times.

Yours in the bonds of the gospel,
R. MILLER, Pub. Com.

Written for the Western Recorder.

GENNESEE CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: I presume you will be gratified to learn something of the doings of the Gennesee Conference during its session in this place, the past week. There has been a full attendance of its members, and the business has been transacted in the most friendly and christian-like spirit.—The ministers bring a good report from their respective fields of labor; and the Conference Steward's report shows that the church is wakening up to the subject of supporting her ministry, after a more liberal manner than she has in days of yore.

I have time only to give you the statistics of membership, &c., with the appointments for tho ensuing year, which, if you receive in time for your Calendar, will be at your service.

Numbers in society,	1,098
Unstationed ministers & preachers,	15
Meeting houses,	6
Money raised in support of ministry,	$3,438

Rev. WM. WILLIAMS, President.
Chautaurque and New Albion ct., L. Sweetland.
Aurora ct., R. Pennell, Sup't.; and Jesse Merrit, Sup. Assistant.
Batavia and Wyoming, S. M. Short.
Ogden and Holly, Simon Burt.
Kendall and Clarkson, B. P. Short.
Lyons and Walworth, O. C. Payne.
Sparta and Cohocton, E. Brownson.
Gennesee and Groveland, Wm. Emmons.
Mt. Morris, Isaac Fister.
Portage Mission, Lewis Whitehead.
Niagara ct., Joab Streeter.
Elba Station, E. A. Wheat.
Almond and Jasper, A. Kingsley.
Greece, J. W. Davis.
Carlisle and Leicester, A. Robinson.
Royalton Mission, D. McLeeland.
Carlton, ct., to be supplied.
Daniel Ireland, Conference Missionary.
A. Leavings, and T. J. Lee, left in the hands of the President.

Great peace and unanimity characterised the proceedings of the Conference. The presence and power of God has been manifested during its session.

Yours, in haste,
E. A. WHEAT.

Lindon, N. Y., Oct. 9, 1846.

WESTERN REGORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 21, 1847.

Exchanges.—Brethren of the press to the east of this point, who favor us with their exchange, will greatly oblige us by having their papers directed for us to Putnam, instead of Zanesville.

Unfair.—It is unfair to order a discontinuance, after several numbers of the new volume have been sent to a subscriber. Notice should be given to the publisher in time, when a discontinuance is desired, otherwise the subscriber is responsible for another volume of the paper.

Cincinnati Correspondence.—Why does not our friend write from the Queen City? We hope we shall have from him something for our next paper, if it is only how comes on that temperance movement.

Out of his Latitude.—It is said that General Flores, President of the Republic of Ecuador, South America, is making a visit to the United States. An exchange says he was in Baltimore last week. If he would but spend the winter, we could show him what is never seen in his country, men walking on the water.

Deaths by Lightning.—We learn of several disasters in different places which occurred during the severe thunder-storm of Friday night, the 1st inst. The Clermont County Sun states that a Mr. R. Hawkins, of Cluff creek, was going to Cincinnati with his team, and when a little beyond the Union Bridge over the Little Miami, and in the act of walking and driving, he was struck by lightning, and instantly killed. One of his horses was nearly killed by the same shock. Several other persons were in company at the time, some of whom returned with the corpse to his family, he having left home in health but two hours previous. Other exchanges state that a Mr. Emerson was instantly killed near Kingston, Ross county. He was in the act of lighting a candle at the fire, when the electric fluid descended the chimney, and killed him. A barn, belonging to Dr. A. Watts, near Chillicothe, was struck by lightning and consumed, with valuable contents. Loss, $3,000. At Cir cleville, also, a stable was struck, and consumed, with a valuable horse.

African M. E. Church.—An Annual Conference of this denomination is in session in Zanesville, Bishop Quinn presiding. Two of their ministers, very intelligent men, preached last Sabbath in the M. P. Church.

Chrch Singing.—Church music is an important and interesting part of public worship. It should be well conducted. Of course, those who understand it well should take the lead. For this reason, we have been in favor of choirs in churches. They should consist of devout and pious persons of both sexes. It always pleases us well to see the singing of a congregation led by a judicious, and well conducted choir. But as in all other things, there are apt to be faults in connection with the custom of choir singing. A principla fault, and a great one we consider it to be, is that in many churches, the choir not only leads or conducts the singing, but actually performs about all the singing that is done. The choir does its duty—acts well its part, whilst the congregation merely witnesses it, as a kind of performance, standing or sitting as the case may be, without at all taking part in singing the praises of God. This thing ought not so to be. And we should say that choirs had better be discontinued than that an important part of religious devotions should be entirely given up to a few. And we are not surprised that where this is the case, some should be so warmly opposed in their feelings to the use of choirs, as to discard them altogether. On this ground many painful dissensions and alienations have occurred in churches in different places. We do not hold the choirs responsible for this fault in congregations, and the train of evils it sometimes produces. We consider the church and congregation in fault, that they do not vocally and distinctly, and habitually join in the singing. "Let the people praise thee, O God, let ALL the people praise thee." And we have been led to think that the officiating minister, is sometimes in part responsible for the evil complained of. We have heard a worthy minister request the singers or the choir, to sing something of their own selection, whilst the contribution was being taken up, or whilst something else was being attended to, instead of calling upon the congregation to sing, and the choir simply to lead the singing. We have witnessed the like on various occasions, in different places. Yet the ministers intended no impropriety in such case. We wish only to direct their attention respectfully to this matter, not doubting that they will see with us the propriety and importance of calling upon our congregations, as well as the leaders, to worship God in the exercise of singing to his praise.

We have been led to make these remarks, by observing notices in eastern papers of an important movement for a reform in choir singing. We rejoice to learn of the movement. And we are glad that it has originated with such a man as L. Mason, of Boston, who is chief amongst the composers & teachers of Sacred Music, upon the American continent. His influence in connection with this movement will be great. He takes the ground that a reform is called for in church music. He says that at present it is kept up with great expense and toil, and does not answer the purposes for which singing the praises of God was designed. "On the part of the choir" it says "it is display. On the part of the audience it is a pleasing exhibition or a matter of criticism." He insists upon the utility, and practicability of congregational singing, and says he does not doubt that within two or three years it will be generally adopted. Mr. Mason some time since delivered a public lecture in Baston on this subject, in a church where the reform had already commenced.

Just rebuke.—The following pointed remarks, reproving a too common irreverence for Sacred Writ, are from the pen of Dr. Bailey, of the National Era. We have repeatedly been shocked to find such specimens of profanity, as the one quoted below, going the rounds of the newspapers. We could not give it place, only to express the sense we have of its enormity.

Profanity.—"Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, here we are?"—Job.

"Yes sir-ee."—Prof. Morse.—[Exchange Paper.

To say nothing of the foolish falsehood of this attempt at wit, the profanity is shocking,, unless, indeed, we believe Revelation to be a lie. The paragraph quoted from Job, is a question which is represented as being asked by the Almighty. "Canst thou," he demands of Job, send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, here we are?" The answer is totally wanting in wit, because both false and by association grossly profane.

Editors, if they have no reverence themselves, ought to pay some regard to the feelings of their readers. The practice of coining paltry witticisms out of the sayings of Holy Writ, is most reprehensible. Some time since we noticed in several papers the republication of a parody on the Ten Commandments, representing a wife as giving certain instructions to her husband. No man who believed, we will not say in the Divine authority of the Bible, but in the exalted holiness of those commandments, the eternal sacredness of their principles, could venture thus to trifle with them. There are some sacred things which even a well-mannered infidelity would not touch irreverently; and among these are those commandments which Christ has summed up in two great laws, which Infidels, as well as Christians, acknowledge as of supreme obligation.

The Inundations.—We have devoted considerable space this week, to accounts of the great and extensive freshet in Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, as it will be of interest to many if not all our readers.

Progress of the Thanksgiving Day.—We stated heretofore that the governors of N. Hampshire and Missouri, had fixed upon November 25, to be observed in their respective States, as Thanksgiving Day. We now add that the governors of Massachusetts, and New York, have also designated the same day to be observed in their respective States. The Editor of the Baltimore Sun suggests that Gov. Pratt of Maryland, likewise should fix upon the 25th. And in favor of the Thanksgiving he further states that the pumpkin crop is excellent. We suppose the editor of the Sun considers pumpkin pies essential to a Thanksgiving. In Ohio also, we might add, pumpkins are plenty and ten thousand other occasions for gratitude. We trust that the Thanksgiving will not be forgotten.

Bible cause—Interesting scene.—The "Cumberland Presbyterian," published at Uniontown, Pa., gives an account of a recent visit of Rev. Dr. Levings, to that place, as an agent for the American Bible Society. On a Sabbath evening, he held forth in an eloquent manner, on the value of the bible, to a large audience, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the close of the sermon, he proposed that the congregation make the pastor, Rev. Mr. Babcock, a life member of the Bible Society,—it was done at once. One after another, the Rev. Messrs. Owings, pastor of the Presbyterian congregation; Lowry, of the Cumberland Presbyterian; Penny, of the Baptist; Watson, of Methodist Protestant congregation, and Rev. Mr. Brice, Editor of the Cumberland Presbyterian, were proposed to be made life members. The mixed congregation, comprising members and friends of the various congregations named, uniting heartily in the good work, accomplished it handsomely, within about an hour, by making up the sum of $30, for each of the six ministers, $180, in all. Another meeting was held on Monday night, at which, Rev. Mr. Swayzey, a Presiding Elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was made a life member, thus increasing the contribution of the citizens to $210. The Editor of the C. Presbyterian adds:

It was a scene of exciting pleasure to witness the friends and members of the various denominations uniting in such a christian-like manner, without respect to sect, to send the word of life to benighted men. And what an example have we here of attachment to the truth, and esteem for the ministers of Christ.

Such a happy result is the effect, no doubt, to some degree, of causes which have been operating in the community during a few months past; and these ought to be made known to the world.

The ministers of the various denominations in this village have been holding social meetings, monthly, for prayer and religious conversation and other religious exercises. Union prayer meetings have also been held in the several churches. These things have brought both ministers and people to judge one another not by their names but by their faith in a common Saviour; and when God in his providence called on them to come up to his help against the mighty, they responded by united and cheerful obedience. And we sincerely hope that the ministers meetings, and the union prayer meetings may never be abandoned.

Acknowledgment.—We are indebted to the following named brethren, for furnishing us statistics of their respective Annual Conferences, for the purposes of our Annual Register.

Rev. T. F. Norris, of the Boston Conference.

Rev. W. M. H. Smith, of the N. Jersey Conference.

Rev. W. W. Sterriker, of the Onondaga Conference.

Rev. J. H. Honour, of the South Carolina Conference.

Rev. M. W. Smith, of the Florida Conference.

Rev. B. F. Duggan, of the Tennessee Conference.

Rev. J. Clarke, of the Illinois Conference.

Rev. R. Miller, of the Iowa Conference.

Rev. C. H. Williams, formerly of Indiana Conference.

Rev. E. A. Wheat, of the Genesee Conference.

Rev. D. Bagley, of the North Illinois Conference.

Election Day.—The Election, on Tuesday of last week, passed off very quietly in our village. The large and populous township of Springfield, has all its voting done in this place. Yet we witnessed no disorder, profanity, or intemperance on the election day. One good reason for this we love to tell—there are no doggeries in our town, no house at all, licensed or unlicensed where drams are sold, and we trust no disposition amongst any of the citizens to patronize such establishments. We observed, a few days ago, a forlorn looking youngster, connected with a family of movers, or rovers, enquiring at a grocery, for whisky to replenish his jug. When told he would find none in the place, he seemed to consider himself trifled with, and felt sure he would obtain some at next place, or up street. At every grocery and storehouse, however, he was turned empty away. A poor chance here for dram drinkers. But we love to live in a village where there is neither buying, selling nor drinking of drams.

Pataskala.—We learn by our worthy Presbyterian minister of this place, that the Presbytery including the churches in these parts, and heretofore called Licking Presbytery, from the large branch of the Muskingum, so called, which enters that river near this point, is hereafter to be called the Presbytery of Pataskala, (accent on second syllable,) thus restoring the ancient Indian name of that stream. We love the musical sound of these aboriginal names of rivers and are in favor of retaining them, as interesting mementos of a former race which has passed away. And we should be gratified to see the name of the County of Licking, and the stream of Licking, as well as the Presbytery of Licking, changed to Pataskala. What says our friend Cist, of Cincinnati?

Who beats the Yankees?—Our readers will recollect that a few months ago, through the "Olive Branch," we were entertained with some account of the process by which the Bostonians extend the area of their city. Their ingenuity and enterprise is most astonishing, as will be seen by the subjoined statement which we find in the last number of the Olive Branch.

Made Land in Boston.—Brother Bassett of the Western Recorder was quite interested in an article we wrote some time since on 'making land.' We can now state to him more accurately the amount of 'made land' in this city. We learn from a sermon delivered by the Rev. Mr. Rogers, that while the City of Boston proper originally contained but 600 acres of land, it now embraces 1300; so that 700 acres have been artificially added by the spade, and most of this within compartively a very few years. It therefore appears that more than one half of our City has been 'manufactured!' And our machinery is still in operatiyn, extending the area of the city of notions. So Brother Bassett, if any of your Western cities lack for room, send them this way and we will put an extra border to them at once.

Grand Lodge of Ohio.—This body is holding its annual session in Zanesville. Gentlemen are in attendance, we are informed, from all parts of the State. We have been favored with calls from a number of brethren from a distance. A great procession came off yesterday, and a public oration.

Distressed Mormons.—We see in a late number of the Washington Union, a call for a public meeting in that city "to consider and devise measures towards the relief of a large body of the Mormon people, now encamped in a remote section of Iowa, and severely suffering for want of the necessaries of life." The call is signed by eight of the principal clergyman of the city.

News of the Week.

[From the Diario Del Gobierno of Sept. 10th.]

Proclamations of Santa Anna.---Mexican Incentives to Desertion.

Headquarters, Orizava, April—1847.

Know all men, That Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, President of the United States of Mexico and Commander-in-chief of the Mexican armies, has been duly authorized to make the following concessions to all and every one of the persons now in the American army who will present themselves before me or any of the commanding officers of the Mexican forces, viz:

1. Every soldier in the American army who appears before me or any of the commanding officers of the Mexican armies is to receive immediately $10 cash, if coming without arms, and a larger amount if he is armed, in order to cover the cost of the arms he may bring.

2. Every person who deserts the American army, followed by one hundred men, is entitled to receive, as soon as he presents himself with his men, $500 cash, besides the $10 to which every one of the soldiers is entitled, as well as the extra allowance in case they be armed.

3. He who deserts with two hundred men has right to claim and shall be paid immediately $1000 cash, and so on at the rate of $500 for every hundred men; or the proportional amount if the number be under one 100, without including the $10 allowed to every soldier, nor the cost of arms and ammunitions, all of which will invariably be paid besides.

4. All and every one of the soldiers in the American army who will desert & appear before me or any of the commanding officers of the Mexican forces, as aforesaid, besides the above mentioned gratifications in cash, are hereby entitled to a claim and will immediately receive from me or any of the commanding officers a document or bond by which the propriety of a grant of land consisting of two hundred square arces will be insured to them, as well as to their families or heirs. The division of such grants will be made as soon as the present war is over.

5. The officers in the American army are not only entitled to the aforesaid document or bond, but the number of acres in addition to the two hundred allowed to the soldiers will be computed in proportion to the respective grades they hold.

6. Those who desert the American army and enter the Mexican service are to continue in it during the present campaign, and those of the same nation are to remain together if they chose, and under the immediate command of their own officers, who will continue in the same grades they held in the American army.

7. All those persons who come over to the Mexican armies shall be considered rewarded and promoted in the same way as the Mexicans and according to their services in the present campaign.

The preceding articles shall be duly published in order that the Mexican authorities may act in conformity thereto.

ANTONIO LOPEZ DE SANTA ANNA.

Mexicans to Catholic Irishmen.

Irishmen!—Listen to the words of your brothers, hear the accents of a Catholic people.

Could Mexicans imagine that the sons of Ireland, that noble land of the religious and the brave, would be seen amongst their enemies?

Well known it is that Irishmen are a noble race; well known it is that in their own country many of them have not even bread to give to their children.

These are the chief motives that induce Irishmen to abandon their beloved country and visit the shores of the new world.

But was it not natural to expect that the distressed Irishmen who fly from hunger would take refuge in this Catholic country, where they might have met with a hearty welcome and been looked upon as brothers, had they not come as cruel and unjust invaders?

Sons of Ireland! have you forgotten that in any Spanish country it is sufficient to claim Ireland as your home to meet with a friendly reception from authorities as well as citizens.

Is religion no longer the strongest of all human bonds?

What! can you fight by the side of those who put fire to your temples in Boston and Philadelphia? Did you witness such dreadful crimes and sacrileges without making a solemn vow to our Lord?

If you are Catholics, the same as we, if you follow the doctrines of our Saviour, why are you seen, sword in hand, murdering your brethren, why are you the antagonists of those who defend their country and your own God?

Are Catholic Irshmen to be the destroyers of Catholic temples, the murderers of Catholic priests, and the founders of heretical rites in this pious nation?

Irishmen! You were expected to be just, because you are the countrymen of that truly great and eloquent man, O'Connel, who has devoted his whole life to defend your rights, and finally, because you are said to be good and sincere Catholics.

Why, then, do you rank among our wicked enemies?

Is it because you wish to have a grant of land that you may call your own?

But what can the most powerful armies do against a whole nation?

By conquest you can take cities and towns, but never possess two feet of ground unmolested as long as there is a Mexican. The last of Mexicans is determined to fight without release for his country and his God.

But our hospitality and good will towards you tenders you what by force you can never possess or enjoy: as much property in land as you may require, and this under the pledge of our honor and our holy religion.

Come over to us; you will be received under the laws of that truly Christian hospitality and good faith which Irish guests are entitled to expect and obtain from a Catholic nation.

Our sincere offers have already been realized with many of your countrymen, who are living as our own brothers among us.

May Mexicans and Irishmen, united by the sacred tie of religion and benevolence, form only one people!

General Quarters in the Penon,
August 15, 1847.

The President of the Mexican Republic to the troops engaged in the army of the U. States of America.

The circumstances of war have brought you to the beautiful valley of Mexico, in the midst of a wealthy and fertile country. The American Government engaged you to fight against a country from which you have received no harm, your companions have after the battle received and shall only receive the contempt of the United States and the scorn of the nations of civilized Europe that, quite surprised, see that that Government seek engagements for their battles in the same manner as they look for beasts to draw their carriages.

In the name of the nation I represent, and whose authority I exercise, I offer you a reward, if deserting the American standard you present yourself like friends to a nation that offers you rich fields and large tracts of land, which being cultivated by your industry, shall crown you with happiness and convenience.

The Mexican nation only look upon you as some deceived foreigners, and hereby stretch out to you a friendly hand, offer you the felicity and fertility of their territory. Here there is no distinction of races; here, indeed, there is liberty and not slavery; nature here plentifully sheds its favors, and it is in your power to unjoy them. Rely upon what I offer you in the name of a nation; present yourselves like friends, and you shall have country, home, lands, the happiness which is enjoyed in a country of mild and humane customs; civilization, humanity, and not fear, address you through me.

ANTONIO LOPES DE SANTA ANNA.

The City of Michigan.—Never, since the days of the Genii, has there been a more sudden creation of a city in a forest, than has occurred in the case of the "City of Michigan," the future Capital of the Peninsula State. At the time when the law passed changing the location of the seat of government from Detroit to section No. 9 in the town of Lansing, some four months since, there was but one log house and the frame for a saw mill on the section.

The editor of the Detroit Free Press has recently paid a "flying visit" to the new seat of government, and says that "now there cannot be less than 150 tenements, and a population of 500 souls from various portions of that State, Ohio, New York and New England States, and many of them men of considerable means. He counted eleven dry goods and grocery stores, two blacksmith shops, two shoe shops, one tailor shop and various other mechanical shops in the two villages. One of the most prominent features in the inhabitants, which he noticed, was that every man was at work—no idlers were to be seen. The arrivals of 'fortune seekers,' or land lookers,' were large, each day, and many purchses being constantly made." The public buildings are represented as progressing with great rapidity, and will be ready for the State Departments by the middle of December at the farthest.

The Female Army of Switzerland.—We have mentioned in a previous number the two regiments of the women of the Canton of Uri, but we find in a French paper a notice of them, which we translate literally: "The two battallions numbering fourteen hunderd females in military dress, present an aspect at the same time formidible and captivating. In their evolutions and discipline they are drilled to perfection. Curiously enough, superiority of form and beauty has been very much the reason of difference of grade; the handsomest are of the advance guard, and this post distinction and danger seems willingly conceeded them by their companions, who are less favored by nature. Some classification has been guided by temperament also. The more vivid and fighty have been enrolled as voltiguers, or light horse—the more phlegmatic as grenadiers. Those who have figures of more embonpoint are in the central body; those of slighter froms are statianed at the wings. The coarse and rude are enrolled as dragoons and cantinieres. The creation of this corps (which with its discipline and enthusiasm, seems likely, at the first throe of the coming political movement of Europe, to take possession of the Helvetian soil) is an exercise of the powerful genius of Salis-Soglio, who has reserved to himself the general command.

Rain Storm.

This region of country was visited last night with a terrific storm, causing considerable destruction of property, and, we learn, loss of life.—The rain was accompanied at intervals by severe claps of thunder and flashes of lightning, and it is said that two persons were killed by the lightning stroke on the Capitol Hill. The railway culverts on either side of the village of Bladensburg, in this vicinity, with a portion of the railway embankment near it, have been washed away, the water standing in the village streets up to the 2nd story of the houses. The flood in and about Fredericksburg, Virginia, is said by telegraph to have been as serious. In Georgetown, of this District, much valuable property—flour, wood, &c.—has been washed into the Potomac; and this morning in the attempt to rescue some portion of the floating mass, three men, a white person and a negro, are said to have been drowned. The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal is more or less injured in Georgetown and above—the injury at its terminus being principally confined to the basin.

Since the above was written, we find by the following communication from our obliging Baltimore correspondent, that the telegraphic connexion between this city and Baltimore continues open:

By Magnetic Telegraph.

Baltimore, Oct. 8—5 p. m.

The flood last night has cut us off from all connexion, except by telegraph. With the west we have no communication; and there will probably be none for several days, as the bridges are all reported to be swept away. The bridges on the Washington railroad at the Savage river, just erected at a cost of seven thousand dollars, has been swept off; and we learn the dam at FIVE Mills, on the Franklin road, about three miles from the city, has also been swept off. The mail from the north is in, but brings nothing new. The storm last night also did considerable damage in the city—many portions near the falls have been flooded to the depth of five or six feet, and hundreds of the cellars are filled with water. The mills on the various watercourses near, were all damaged more or less.—Washington Union.

Explosion.—On Saturday morning, between one and two o'clock, the head of one of the boilers at the Rolling Mill of Stephens, Shoenberger & Co., of this city, exploded, and was carried some hundred and fifty feet, tearing off a portion of the roof over the furnaces, and severely scalding Robert Watts and slightly injuring several others of the workmen. We learn that the explosion was owing to some imperfection in the boiler head, and no blame whatever is attached to the engineer.—Wheeling Times.

From the Baltimore Sun of October 9.

THE GREAT FRESHET.

Extensive Destruction in Maryland and Virginia.

The moderate rains that have prevailed for several days past, on Thursday night increased to a perfect torrent which swelled the water in Jones' Falls higher than it has been known since 1836. Many of the lower portions of the city were inundated. The neighborhood of Holliday and Saratoga streets were flooded to the depth of three or four feet, completely blocking up the way, and cutting off approach to the central police office, except by water.

At Whyte's distillery considerable damage was done; some of the large vats of ferventing warts were overflowed, and the spirit was drowned in the mighty water.

The trestle work placed under the temporary bridge for the accommodation of the railroad across the Falls, at Monument street, was broken and partly carried away.

The corner of Messrs. A. & W. Denmead's iron foundery, which had been exposed by the excavation of the tail-race of their new mill, was undermined, and the northern wall considerably injured. A portion of the brick arching over the race, from which the wooden centres had been removed, gave way under the action of the water.

The wall lately built along the Falls, between Monument and Madison streets, was somewhat sprung, but probably will withstand the pressure of the bank.

In various parts of the city, cellars were filled, subjecting the owners to much loss and inconvenience. Along Centre Market Space, the water even came into the first floors of some of the buildings, and such was the case along the line of many of the city wharves. In low situations in east Pratt Street, and at numerous places in East Baltimore, the cellars and basements of the houses were flooded, on account of the great accumulation of water in the streets. Individual losses are perhaps small, but the aggregate will make a considerable amount. The water rose in Harrison street, between Gay and Fayette streets, so as to make the street impassible on foot.

The lightning was very vivid and the thunder loud and startling, but we have not heard of any damage being done by the electric fluid.

The quantity of rain which fell, we thought equal to that at the time of the great flood some years ago, and the probability is that the damage would have been as great in the city, if the stone bridges had not been removed, and their places supplied by bridges of a single span.

At the Lanville factory the water rose in the cotton house, doing considerable damage; a portion of the wood pile was carried off by the flood, in endeavoring to save which Mr. Sanphen was washed into the stream and narrowly escaped drowning.

We took a trip up the Falls in the morning train of cars, and found that more or less damage had been done to all the establishments along the stream. The family of the keeper of the first toll-gate had to make a precipitous retreat from their dwelling, the water rising so as to completely surround it. The foot-bridges at the different factories, &c., were washed away; considerable damage was done to the corn fields in the low bottoms, in some of which, where the corn had been cut and stacked, it was washed entirely away. Considerable damage was also done to fences, &c.

At the Washington factory a quantity of cord wood and some of the fences were washed away; more or less damage was also done at all the mills along the course of the stream;—we are, however, happy to state that none of the dams appeared to have been injured, although there may have been injuries sustained, that will not be evident until the waters subside.

The water has been higher on the route of the Baltimore and Susquehanna railroad than has ever been known. Much damage has been done by the freshet in the Gunpowder Falls. The cars from Wrightsville, however, came through, on yesterday, in good time, although the Philadelphia train failed to connect with them at the Columbia bridge. The flood has therefore, no doubt, extended on the other side of the Susquehanna river, which, we understand, was rising rapidly on yesterday.

On the line of the Washington rail road, and the country adjoining it, the damage has been immense. Captain Slack, the energetic conductor on the Washington road, left Washington yesterday morning with the train and proceeded as far as the deep cut beyond Bladensburg, occasionally interrupted by washings on the road. When he arrived at this point he found the track covered with sand to a considerable depth. The labor to remove the sand occupied nearly an hour, when the train again started and reached the Eastern Branch, at Bladensburg. Warning was here given by persons on the opposite side of the bridge, not to proceed, and the train halted. The engine was stopped but about fifteen minutes, when the entire bridge fell into the stream. The escape was a narrow one, as had they proceeded, in all probability the bridge would have fallen and carried the cars with it, involving great destruction of life. Finding it impossible to proceed, the train was sent back to Washington, under the charge of an assistant. Captain Slack determined to proceed, and obtaining a skiff he crossed the Eastern Branch. After walking some distance, with some difficulty he procured a horse, and getting over broken culverts, &c., he finally reached the Pautuxent, near Savage factory.—Here he found the rail road bridge over that stream gone—entirely destroyed. Finding no other mode of crossing, with a friend, he built a raft, and launched himself upon the turbulent stream—he crossed in safety, after being carried a considerable distance down by the current. Leaving this point he proceeded to the Annapolis junction in time to take the cars, and came on to Baltimore. The sum total of damage to the rail road is the loss of two fine bridges and four culverts, one of which is in reality a bridge. The estimated loss we do not know, but it will take some days to render the road in a condition for travel. Besides the loss of the bridges, the road has been, in many places, badly washed, damaging it greatly.

Captain Slack also informs us that several of the bridges on the turnpike to Washington have been carried away, rendering it impossible to get to Washington by that route.

We are told that the destruction to the factories and farms on all the streams has been immense. Trees were blown down, in all directions, and in some cases whole orchards were prostrated. At the Savage factory, one of the dams gave way, and great loss was sustained—the main dam was only saved by the water rushing through the race, and making a track for itself. At the Covington iron works, on the Annapolis road, there was also great destruction—the water rose and reached one of the furnaces, and coming in contact with the heated mass in the furnace, caused it to blow up. On the various farms, cattle were swept away and thousands of panels of fence were washed off. It is stated that the streams have never been known to be higher in that section, and that the rain fell in a perfect torrent, uninterruptedly, for nearly eight hours. We expect to hear of further and more disastrous accounts from the lower counties.

We understand that the mill dam at Ilchester, near Ellicotts' Mills, has been carried away; likewise the dam at the Five Mills, on the Franklin turnpike.

On the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road, to Cumberland, the apprehension is that there has also been great damage done. Up to the hour of going to press last night, the train from Cumberland, due at six o'clock, had not arrived. The burthen train from Frederick, due yesterday at one o'clock, did not arrive until near five o'clock, having been detained by the depth of water on the track, which put out the fire of the locomotive. The report they brought was that the Potomac was rapidly rising, and that it was within a few feet of the bridge at Harper's Ferry; and that the same was the case at the Monocacy bridge, the water being but a few inches from the bridge. All the lowlands were overflowed, of course involving great loss to the farmers bordering on the river. It is altogether likely that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal will be much damaged.

Further Particulars.

Since the issue of our paper on Saturday, we have been enabled to gather some particulars of the effect of the flood on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to Cumberland. The train for Cumberland left Baltimore on Thursday morning in charge of Captain Owens, and proceeded on without interruption until it came to Patterson's creek, about eight miles this side of Cumberland, where the water was first encountered. The watchman at the bridge reported that one of the trestles of the bridge had been carried away, and Captain Owens did not deem it safe to cross with the train. The water then covered the track. He informed the passengers of the situation of affairs, and then detached the locomotive and tender and sent it across. Planks were fixed so that the passengers could walk over, and they all passed the bridge. The next object was to get the cars across; this was done by attaching ropes to them, and pulling them over.

All this being completed, the passengers were seated, and arrived safely in Cumberland, a little behind the usual time. It is due to Capt. Owens to say that the passengers, for this display of energy connected with prudence, gave him a vote of thanks, and compelled him to receive other testimonials of remembrance and respect.

On Friday morning, Captain Owens started with his return train for Baltimore. When he arrived at the Great Cacapon Bridge, one hundred and thirty-three miles from Baltimore, he was met by passengers, who informed him that there was from six to eight feet of water on the track from that point to Black Rock. He detached the engine, and proceeded some distance, but had to return, the water putting the fire out of the locomotive. The passengers were informed of the fact, and that they would have to make the best of it until the water subsided. Some demur was made to this, but finally all appeared to be contented with that which was induced by the force of circumstances. This was about ten o'clock in the morning, and they remained here until five o'clock in the afternoon. The water having then fallen considerably, Captain Owens started the train and proceeded to a house a few miles on the road, where refreshments were obtained for the passengers. This was only accomplished by great labor, in removing drift wood, &c. from the track. The refreshments over, the train proceeded to Hancock, having to advance cautiously, removing logs, which were so large, that in some instances the engine was detached and the logs removed by steam power. The train arrived at Hancock on Saturday morning at four o'clock, where it was stopped until daylight. It then proceeded, in the same manner, removing obstructions in its way, until it met the train of Friday, from Baltimore, at Sleepy Creek, it having encountered the same difficulty at Black Rock.—Upon the meeting of the trains, there was, of course, congratulations on the part of those interested, and each proceeded on its way, the road being clear. Captain Owens' train, which was due on Friday evening, reached here on Saturday night, the regular train following a short time after.

We are informed that the damage to the road is comparatively slight—no bridges were carried away—the road is washed considerably in some places, but nothing has transpired to delay the regular transmission of passengers. The conductor of the train which arrived yesterday evening at the regular hour, states that the water had subsided so far as to enable them to see the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, which had been entirely submerged. He noticed but one break of any importance, and that was near the Point of Rocks. There a break had been made of about twenty-five yards, and the embankment was washed away level with the bottom of the canal. Workmen were, however, engaged in repairing it.

On the National, or Cumberland road, we have heard of no bridges being carried away. Stages with passengers arrived here on Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, from Frederick. The Monocacy river was very high and angry in its appearance. Of the damage on its banks we have no account.

On the Washington railroad every effort is being made to repair it so as to convey the mails. The back mail of Friday was brought on by the bay route in the steamer Augusta. The mail due yesterday morning was brought through by the conductor, Captain Slack, arriving in time to connect with the 9 o'clock train for Philadelphia.—In the mean time, passengers from the east find ready conveyance to the south in the steamboats which leave here daily for various points on the southern waters.

The neighborhood along the Green Spring Branch of Jones' Falls suffered severely. The corn had been cut and stacked in a great many fields bordering on the stream, and large quantities were swept off. We have also been informed that numbers of sheep and other cattle have been drowned. Messrs. Bausman and Wilhelm, who were grazing a number of sheep on the farm of F. Key, Esq., on the Patapsco Falls, losst a large portion of their flocks. On the Gunpowder Falls the damage to property was very great—the works of the Warren Factory were considerably injured. The copper works, on this stream, were also much damaged. A loaded wagon was swept away from the neighborhood of this stream, and when found it was about five miles distant, and lodged fifteen feet from the ground, in a tree.

At the village of Franklin the abutment of the bridge was considerably damaged; the dam of the grist mills was carried away. The bridge on the turnpike road between this city and Franklin was also carried away. The communication with that place is now by the cross road from the Frederick turnpike at Fairview.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

REISTERSTOWN, Oct. 8, '47.

Last night we were visited by one of those awful storms which, to be dreaded, "needs but be seen." About 11 o'clock the clouds began to thicken, until the whole heavens were obscured by one impenetrable shroud of black, and at a somewhat later period it broke forth in all its fury, accompanied by torrents of rain, the most vivid lightning, and the deep-toned artillery of the heavens. All the streams this morning were swollen to a very unusual extent, and the lands, crops and buildings on the Patapsco very seriously injured. A part of the Ivy factory is swept away. The entire dam of a grist mill, on a creek near there is gone. One man had three hundred sheep in an enclosure on the stream, one half of which are gone; another has lost (by estimate) one hundred barrels of corn. Trees, rails, hay-stacks, & every thing that would float, were seen sweeping by. A mammoth chestnut tree, that has stood the storms of centuries, near this place, was literally torn to atoms by an electric shock from the clouds. The damage sustained cannot at present be estimated. We have had several days' rain, and from present appearances, shall have a continuation of it, much to the injury of the crops—buckwheat particularly, all of which is yet in the shock. Yours,

MUSTAPHA.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

HARPER'S FERRY ARMORY, Oct. 9, '47.

GENTLEMEN: The Cumberland cars of yesterday, have not yet arrived; the water near Martinsburg being some feet above the railroad track and some of the bridges above being carried away, so rumor has it. As I predicted, at 4 o'clock, P. M., of yesterday, the streets were filled with water, access being made to dwellings by means of boats and ladders to upper stories. The water had risen seven inches beyond the mark of 1843, (at one o'clock this morning,) which was three and a half feet. It is now falling, though slowly.

The armory buildings are entirely surrounded by water three to four feet in depth. The lime house has just burnt. The government will be a loser of about $3000, whilst the loses of citizens will be much more. It is stated that the Chesapeake and Ohio canal company will sustain an immense loss—some say $50,000. Their towpath is entirely covered. N.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WINCHESTER, Va., Oct. 8, '47.

I write in haste, to inform you of one of the greatest calamities that ever befel our town. We are in the midst of destruction. For the last few days we have been visited by rains, and yesterday in particular we had a very hard one. Last night, at dusk, the water began to rise, and by 8 o'clock our whole town was filled with the devouring element. Our merchants are very heavy losers; some of them have lost nearly all in the grocery line, as their cellars were all well filled with their fall purchases. Indeed, in many of our stores the water rose above the counters.—Our dry goods men have also suffered. The Farmers' Bank, churches, and private dwellings, are in a most deplorable condition. Our tanners are almost ruined; they have lost all; and many families are this morning destitute of food. In one case, the only one yet heard of, two women had to be drawn from the basement window, the water coming in so fast that before they could be taken out it was up to their necks. I have heard of one house being washed away. Cattle and hogs were dashing down Water street, unable to resist the current; trees uprooted, and a vast amount of property destroyed which cannot now be estimated. I have heard of no lives being lost. Never will the past night be forgotten. So vivid was the lightning, and so loud the thunder, and then to hear the cries of distress, was appalling indeed. It was a memorable night in the annals of Winchester.

Yours, in haste, W. M.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WILLIAMSPORT, Md., Oct. 9, '47.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The Potomac river and Conococheague creek are at this time higher than they have been for a hundred years. The oldest citizens have no recollection of having seen such a freshet. It has been raing almost incessantly since last Wednesday morning. The water has inundated thousands of acres of grain sown upon the river bottoms. Thousands of bushels of corn have been passing down during the day, houses, stables, pig-sties, hogs, cows, timber, lumber, saw logs, rails, pumpkins, &c. The devastation cannot be calculated. The canal is totally under water—nothing of the acqueduct but its iron railing is visible. It is to be feared the canal is injured. L. J. G.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Oct. 9, 9 P. M.

The Destructive Freshet—Loss of Life and extensive damage at Georgetown—Boats in the streets of Washington—Crutchett's Lamp unshaken

The mail leaving at ten to-night, for Baltimore, I send the following particulars relative to the freshet:

In Georgetown, but two persons appear to have been drowned, Mr. Jacob Peasnor, a baker, who was married but two weeks since—his father lost his life during the freshet a few years ago.—Basil Waters, colored, formerly a slave of Jeremiah Orme, lately in the employ of Mr. Woodward. Their bodies have not been recovered, supposed to be under the bridge.

Mr. McCutchen has lost 275 cords of wood; King & Pickrell, Wheatley & Walker, and Jos. Libbey, lumber merchants, supposed loss $2,000 each; E. Lyons, eleven hundred barrels of flour; J. D. Reed, 90 sacks salt; Messrs. John Dickson, J. Ratcliff, and J. Hopkins, heavy losses by wood drifting off. Loss to the Canal cannot yet be ascertained.

In Washington, all the wood and lumber merchants have lost greatly. On D street boats were used—corner of D and 10th streets, a large row-boat, filled with boys, was rowed along finely.—The entire causeway, from the south end of Long Bridge to the junction of the Alexandria turnpike, including Jackson City, is completely under water. Part of the wall of the Long Bridge is torn down. Hundreds of persons have been busy in collecting and hauling drift-wood, and still the quantity does not seem to decrease. Crutchett's lamp remains unmoved.

No damage done in Alexandria.

RAILROAD DANGERS.—There is danger in the last carriage of a railroad train, as well as the first. On the Manchester and Leeds Railway, September 18, near Sowerby bridge station, repeated concussions, by the wheels passing over the gravel of the permanent way and the sleepers, apprised the engine driver and the guards that the train had met with some accident, and on looking to the rear, they perceived that the last car, a first class one, was off the rails. As speedily as possible it was brought to a stoppage, but by that time the carriage had struck the abutments of some of the bridges with such force as nearly to demolish it, throwing several of the unfortunate passengers out, and killing one or two.

JEWS IN LONDON.—Dr. Alder, the new Chief Rabbi in London, has caused it to be intimated that no member of the Jewish persuasion who is the keeper of an improper house, will be permitted to attend the Synagogue, or be acknowledged as one of the people.

YANKEE THRIFT.—In Boston the city authorities get $8,000 per year from the contractors for the privilege of collecting, and applying to their own purposes, the house offal of the entire town.

IMPRISONMENT OF ALEXANDER CAMPBELL.—This distinguished Theologian has lately been imprisoned in Glasgow, Scotland, on a charge of libel. Mr. C. it is well known, went to Europe some time since, and his letters have been published in the Millenial Harbinger. He has been preaching in Scotland; but an excitement was created against him by placards being posted up denouncing him as a slave-holder, and an advocate of Slavery. His meetings were disturbed and broken up in a riotous manner; and he was forced to define his position. The following is a passage from his address: "I affirm the deep and solemn conviction, that any christian man who exacts more from master and slave, than the duties enjoined upon each towards the other, as these duties are developed and defined in the Holy Scriptures, as a term of communion in the Christian Church, does that which neither Jesus Christ nor any of his Apostles has authorized him to do, and makes himself a transgressor of the law of Christ."

After this a Mr. Robertson, stated to have formerly been a Baptist Clergyman, and at present an active member of the Anti-Slavery Society, challenged Mr. Campbell to a debate. He consented provided, that the time for the discussion should be made to suit his previous appointment for preaching, and that Mr. Robertson, having been excluded from the Baptist Church, should appear with credentials from the Anti-Slavery Society. Mr. Robertson took offence at the tenor of Mr. Campbell's reply, instituted a suit against him for a libel, and had him committed to prison. A letter from Glasgow says:

"Brother Campbell I have not yet seen, but we expect him here next Lord's Day, to meet with us at Dungannon. He was to have been in Cookstown on last Lord's Day, but he has been sadly persecuted in Scotland by the Anti-Slavery party, and was thrown into prison in Glasgow on the charge of libel by the Secretary of the Anti-Slavery Society, and after being there for a week was liberated on last Saturday night on bail, till the case was decided. You will likely have the full account in the Millenial Harbinger."

We gather the above particulars from the Protestant Unionist, of this city, whose Editor, Mr. Scott, is a warm personal friend of Mr. Campbell, with whom he concurs in religious sentiments. From what we can learn, we are of opinion that an outrage has been perpetrated on Mr. Campbell, the whole extent of which will only be known by Mr. C.'s own account of it in his next letter to the Harbinger.—Pitts. Com. Journal.

A SUDDEN AND MELANCHOLY DEATH.—Mr. Charles Wallace, of Allegheny, the gentleman injured some time since by a fall from his carriage, died very suddenly yesterday morning, at his residence, in that city. He had been to market, and purchased for his family, and eaten a very hearty breakfast, and he was seated before the fire when he first complained of feeling ill, and in a few minutes expired without a groan, upon his chair. Mr. W. leaves a large family.—Pitts. Com. Journal.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT AND DEATH.—Mr. Luther Gould, of Fairfield, Connecticut, met with a shocking death on Tuesday last, from the explosion of a lot of powder placed under a rock on which he was sitting preparing a blast. By some means fire was communicated to it. His body was thrown over a tree forty feet in height.

CASUALTY.—We learn from the Chestertown (Kent county) News, that Mrs. Munjar, an aged lady, living in Quaker Neck, fell into the fire on Monday week, and was so badly injured that she died next day.

TANNERY BURNT.—The large and extensive tannery, near Emmitsburg, in Fredericks county, Maryland, belonging to Colonel Eichelberger, of Frederick, was consumed by fire on Tuesday night last, together with all the stock, working materials, &c. Loss said to be heavy.

Notices.

Wayne Ct., Musk. Con.—Brother Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at Waynesburg.

C. T. KINGSBURY, Sup't.

Bainbridge Ct., Ohio Dis.—Our first quarterly meeting will commence on the 13th of Nov., at Cove Spring meeting-house. We invite fathers Dobbins and Hughey, Brothers W. Pelan, C. H. Williams, and others who can attend, we shall be happy to see. S. P. KEZERTA, Sup't.

Frederic Ct., Musk. Con.—Bro. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at the Huntsman appointment, that being the time and place of our first quarterly meeting.

J. S. THRAP, Sup't.

Zanesville Ct.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Springfield Chapel, commencing on Saturday, 6th November, at 11 o'clock.

E. S. HOAGLAND, Sup't.

BR. BASSETT: Please say to the President, Br. Clancy, that after receiving the appointment to the Belvue circuit, as soon as I was able, I rode down to see the brethren, and next Saturday is the day appointed for the called quarterly Conference. Further information will be given soon. The health both of myself and family, is improving. A. S. ROBINSON.

Oct. 7, 1847.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Lewis	Circuit,	October,	24th,	1847.
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Port William	"	Nov.	6th,	1847.
Springfield	"	"	13th,	"
Union	"	"	20th,	"
Darby	mission,	"	27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,		"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Spingfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

Liberty	ct.	Nov.	6–7	1847.
Madison	"	"	13–14	"
Flat Rock	"	"	20–21	"
White Lick	"	"	27–28	"
White River	"	Dec.	4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	"	11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of app't s

Frederick	circuit,	1st Sunday	November.
Licking	"	2d "	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d "	"
Coshocton	"	4th "	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st "	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts. I think it proper to say, that I will meet my appointment on the Granger circuit, at the Society near Br. Swan's:—Would the 4th Saturday and Sunday of October be too early for the 1st Quarterly Meeting?

For reasons of a very satisfactory character, (upon his aplication to me the morning after the rise of Conference) Br. C. Caddy was released from the Bellview circuit. No supply, as yet, for said ct. GEO. CLANCY.

OBITUARY.

DIED, suddenly in this place on Tuesday last, MRS. CATHARINE EWING, aged 58. She was a native of Monongahela county, Virginia, but for nearly 40 years a resident of Putnam.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

P. M.—Sarahsville,	O.	B. F. Duggan,	Ky.
P. M.—Newark.	"	P. M. Beverly,	Va.
A. S. Robinson,	"	J. Scott,	"
Y. Z.,	"	W. Reeves,	Pa.
A. Channell,	"	S. Morrison,	Ia.
Garretson Brown,	"	J. Cowl,	Pa.
E. P. Steadman, 1 sub.	"	M. Stewart,	"
N. A. Baker,	"	J R Johnson 2 subs	Ill.
D. B. D. Jr.,	"	E. A. Wheat,	N.Y.
J. S. Thrap,	"	E. L. Woody,	Ky.
S. P. Kezerta,	"	R. Miller,	Io.
T. Hanna,	"	Geo. Evans,	Ia.
C. T. Kingsbury,	"	D. Bagley,	Ill.
John Burns,	"	J. Nutty,	O.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts
J. P. Dilley,	C. Arndt,	8	52	2	00
J. C. Guthrie & Son,		9	52	2	00
S. Morrison,	E. F. Clark,	9	32	4	00
Gerretson Brown,		9	42	2	00
E. P. Steadman,	Wm. Babcock,	9	52	2	00
W. S. Stansipher,		8	52	2	00
W. Maynard,	John Thrap,	9	20	2	00
J. F. Bane,		9	52	2	00
J. Nutty,	E. Stibbens,	7	52	1	00

Br. Cowl, the pay for the parchments was received. All right.

James Burns, Brownsville, O., is credited for one year, through his son, Br. John Burns.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

Advertisements.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October, with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

Pupils will likewise have the benefit of Professor Munson's instruction in vocal music, without incurring any additional expense.

The advantages thus furnished by the Seminary for young ladies to acquire a truly liberal education, are superior to those of most institutions in the country, and it is to be presumed that many will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term,	28 Weeks.
Summer "	16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term,	$12 00.
Summer "	$8 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term,	$6 00.
Summer "	$4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.

Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

LATEST ARRIVAL OF NEW GOODS.

WILLIAM P. LARGE,

Has the pleasure of calling the attention of the public to a large and splendid assortment of Foreign Domestic Fall and Winter Goods, purchased at the lowest cash prices, which he is now receiving and opening,—consisting, in part, of the following articles of Dress Goods, &c., Plaid, Striped, Fancy, and Shaded Cashmeres.

Fancy Mouslin de Laines, Caledonia Plaids, Plain plaid and striped Alpacas, Silk Warp and Real do. A large stock of French, Scotch, Changeable, Earlston, Manchester and Domestic Ginghams. A large and well selected supply of FANCY PRINTS from 6 cents up. Plaid Cloakings.

SHAWLS OF VARIOUS DESCRIPTIONS.

An extensive assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Flannels, Linseys, &c., &c. Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, Queensware, Hats, Caps, Groceries, Dye-Stuffs, Paints, Hardware, and so many other desirable goods, that it is too tedious to enumerate; which are in the market, cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! Notwithstanding some of my neighbors admit their former brags of CHEAP mean just nothing at all, I am not willing to be so understood, but will sell VERY LOW for cash, or good trade.

I want it especially understood, that I am not to be undersold by any person. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods.

Putnam, September 30, 1847.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN, BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum co., Ohio, on the 1st of October. 1847.

A	M
Atkinson, Joseph B.	Mendenhall, Mr. John
Augh, Mary Ann	M'Knight, William
B	Miller, Isaac
Boyd, John	Mitchell, George
Bendure, George	McCalister, Mr. Nelson
Brooke, Esq., M. D.	McFeters, J. B.
Barr, John	Man, Mr. Robert
C	Moore, Mr.
Campbell, George	Mitchell, Esq., J. B.
Calhoun, Mrs. Jane M.	Manhall, Miss Mary E.
Courdals, Mr. Elias W.	P
D	Pratt, Abraham
Dorsey, Miss Hannah	Puff, Mrs. Sarah
Devolve, Washington	Prentis, Mr. A. P.
Deitrick, Joseph	R
E	Riley, Mary E.
Ellis, Miss Amanda	Richardson, Wm.
F	Roberts, Mr. Thomas
France, John	Reynolds, Roxana
Freeman, Able	Roush, Henry
Forbes, Edward	S
G	Scanland, Benjamin
Genthrie, Mrs. F. C.	Scott, James L.
Goble, J.	Scadmand, Mr.
H	Sherwood, Miss Mary C.
Hosler, George	Sweeny, Joseph
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.	Showers, Elizabeth
Hoffman, Mr. Jeremiah K.	Smith, Asa C.
Hood, Charles F.	T
J	Tupper, Rachel S.
Jennings, Miss Sarah	Timmel, Mr. F.
James, Elizabeth	W
Johnson, Mr. J. J.	Watson, Jane
L	Woodruff, David
Limel, Joshua	Wilson, Johnson

J. ELDER, P. M.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congresssional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number nontaining sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe,	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books

POET'S CORNER.

From Neal's Sat. Gazette.

ALWAYS READY.

BY ALICE O. LEE.

Well chosen thy motto, aye, write it with pride,
And thro' all thy life be its precepts thy guide,
Always firm, always ready, and true to thy trust,
So live till thy head lieth low in the dust.

"Always ready" to give to the friend who hath need,
To rear up the orphan, the homeless to feed;
And so in thy wants will hearts open to thee;
No life from reverses and sorrow is free.

"Always ready" to comfort the heart that's opprest,
Forget not the mourner, though thou hast been blest;
And then if the friend whom thou lovest should die,
Support for thy spirit will come from on high.

A heart "always ready" temptation to shun—
Whate'er be thy fault, whate'er thou hast done,
Be ready, be willing, thy sin to confess;
And thus with repentance thy burden is less.

A mind "always ready" to learn in thy course,
Some wisdom to gather, tho' humble the course,
Remember that "knowledge is power," and brings
Truths worthy of note from the lowliest things.

For reverses "be ready"—life is all change,
And tho' oft some evil thy plans may derange—
Be watchful, nor sink when the future is dark,
'Never fail,' tho' misfortunes thy pathway should mark.

And then "always ready" when fortune shall smile,
Let not the elation thy spirit beguile,
"By pride fell an angel"—prosperity then
Proves oft'ner a curse than a blessing to men.

"Always ready" for duty whate'er it may be;
Never shrink from the path that is open to thee;
And tho' oft with hardships that path may abound,
With success at the goal thine efforts are crown'd.

Be ready for Death, when the message shall come,
Then 'tis but a summons to carry thee home,
And when his cold hand on thy brow shall be laid,
Thou wilt smile as the land thou leavest shall fade.

Well chosen thy motto! ay, write it with pride,
And through all thy life be its precepts thy guide;
Always firm, always ready, and true to thy trust;
So live till thy head is laid low in the dust.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XII.

On Friday, 5th of February, 1830, I bade adieu to my family, and set out again for Tanner's creek, Indiana; it was a very cold day; I rode thirty-six miles to Cincinnati,—got there about eight o'clock at night, and was so completely overcome with the cold and fatigue, that I could not go on the next day. So I remained in the city, and took some medicine, until Saturday 13, and though yet very unwell, I rode to Brother Langdon's, and preached at night: here a class of nine members, of what is called the Methodist Society, are gathered up and organised, who have been for some time as sheep without a shepherd.

Saturday, 20th, though very unwell, rode to New Richmond,—met class on Sunday morning,—had a precious season,—preached at three o'clock to a mixed assembly, though very attentive; one little boy joined the church. By request I crossed over the Ohio River and preached to a crowded house, and it was desired by some that I should state the causes of the division in the church. I did so. A local preacher charged me with misrepresenting. I demanded of him to state wherein. He was at a loss, for a while, but after a pause, said that it was not true that a preacher in charge had it in his power to expel any member he pleased. I then proved to him that I was correct.

Monday, 22d, I was so unwell my friends advised me to go home if I felt able, and rest until I was well. After getting a Brother to fill two appointments for me, I started to ride fifty miles home, and made out to get there the next day.—Found my dear family all well, and industriously employed to support themselves and me, for I received but very little for my toil, and privations of the comforts I might have enjoyed at home with my family; but alas! it does appear that too many of our brethren believe that the preachers must bear all the burthen, and expense to spread and defend the religious rights of the people. O, Lord! save us from covetousness which is idolatry. Rested at home until the 5th of March, then started for my quarterly-meeting at Brother Ready's. Preached at Brother Leming's that night.

Saturday, 6th, rode five miles, and commenced our quarterly-meeting without any preacher to assist me. But thanks be to God, he is always near and is a present help in time of need. Sinners were convicted and two professed to find peace with God. We had a glorious feast at the Lord's table. Many of our Episcopal brethren came forward and partook with us. A great amount of religious bigotry was removed this day. After preaching at eleven o'clock, I opened the door for the reception of members, and two came forward. After visiting my family, I set out on the 12th to visit my English class on Tanner's creek, again; but was taken so poorly before I got out of the city, and seeing a heavy rain coming up, I thought it most prudent to stay. I was very unwell all day, but went in the evening to see Brother Robinson's dying son, and here I had my faith strengthened, in seeing a young man triumph over the last enemy. His mother had just commenced bleeding at the lungs, and called to her son to look at the blood; he looked, and exclaimed, "O mother, you and I will soon be in heaven together!" and then began to shout aloud the praises of God, and to talk of the beauties of heaven. He died on the Friday following, praising God to the last, and his mother soon followed, happy and victorious through faith in Jesus. I preached with great liberty on Sunday morning in Sixth Street Church to a large congregation, and God blessed the word to many souls. Brother W. Young preached at night, and I gave an exhortation, and believing God was at work, I invited mourners to the altar, and two came, and both found peace with God before they rose from their knees.

On Monday, 15th, I felt better and went on to Tanner's Creek, but when I got there I was hardly able to get into the house, but was able to preach to a few who came through the rain on Tuesday evening.

On Friday, 19th, I returned to Cincinnati, and had the pleasure of being introduced to that beloved, venerable, devoted, and eloquent Minister of Christ, Nicholas Snethen. I can assure you, that I felt very little in every respect, compared with him, yet I took courage in thinking that if I was faithful, I might have as many sheaves in a coming day as my beloved Snethen.

The Budget.

A Note of Warning.

"In every age of the world, and in every state of society, men are beset by the same dangers, and have to contend with the same difficulties.—The forms of temptation may indeed be changed, but the end to be effected is the same; and it must be so, because the power of evil is in blind and senseless energy, unconsciously controlled and guided by external circumstances, but a personal agent, acting with deep and settled design, having a definite end, swerving not one moment from the pursuit of it, and bringing to bear upon it the might of an Archangel nature,——fallen, indeed, and shorn of the glory of truth, but still powerful, still wise, still steadfast in purpose; a purpose evil now, as once it was good; the end changed, the means analogous, so far as evil can be analogous to good.

The nature, too, on which he works, remains unchanged. Man is man still, be his circumstances what they may. Christians of this generation, are, in their essence, much what Christians of the last generation were. Man's tempter need not look about for his weak points: he knows them well already. Many changes truly have we seen: every body is aware of this; little else is talked about. Oh, blind man! oh, easily deceived, and quickly drawn aside from thyself to things around thee! The mass of men are unchanged: all are unchanged in a sense. Still men love to be at ease; they love to have their own way: they shrink from the narrow road: they love not to swim against the stream: and they are in the world still. The world, too, is unchanged: still it acts upon the earthly part of those who are in it, and it must be overcome. Nor is that, now, a light and easy task, which was so difficult as to call forth the mighty energy of a regenerate will. That has not become a matter of course, which once required the undivided exertions of a whole life. Ourselves remain the same: in the same world we live, and he who plots against us is the same. Our dangers and difficulties are the same, only more to be dreaded because appearing under a new aspect: we are vulnerable exactly where we always were, but the form of the weapon being changed, we are thrown off our guard.

From Zion's Herald.

New Movement in Switzerland.

We referred last week to the reformatory movement in Switzerland. A correspondent of the Dutch Schnellpost, New York, after describing the designs of the Reformers as stated by us last week, remarks that their capital purpose is the revision of the articles of confederation, and the consolidation of the cantons into single Swiss republic, on the plan of the United States. In order to do this they find it necessary to expel the Jesuits, and suppress the league of the Catholic Cantons, for from these come the only serious domestic opposition.

The proposed re-constitution of the confederation will be of the highest importance. The constitution of the republic, as appointed by the "Holy Alliance" of 1815, seems studiedly adapted to weaken the government and render it a nullity among the powers of Europe. It is, in fact, but a system of distinct, petty republics, with different and conflicting constitutions, different tariffs, different coinage, different religions, &c. The Catholics of the entire republic are scarcely one-third of the population, yet in some cantons they prohibit the marriage of Protestants with Catholics, deprive the former of eligibility to office, require passports of them, and even deny them the right of residence. The Protestants, it is true, reciprocate some of these discourtesies, but it is they who now propose to do them all away, and to form a Swiss unity and nationality that will at once give to Switzerland the franchise of freedom at home, and the influence of a strong state abroad.

The cause of popular liberty and of the Protestant faith, (both of which may God prosper the world over) seems to us deeply concerned in this movement.

Some of the English papers speak out emphatically for it. The London Chronicle says: "Switzerland is, in fact, a European Yankeeism, a miniature United States, not severed from Europe by the friendly breadth of the Atlantic, but entrenched on a fortress of impregnable rock, amid the frontier and debateable ground of European liberty and despotism.

In that position, in spite of all her perpetual internal divisions, she has maintained her unity and independence for five centuries. All Europe, and no country more than England, is deeply indebted to her for many a precious precept and example. The overthrow of feudalism, and assertion of man's right to self-government, as a thinking and responsible agent, were first commenced by Switzerland. There could be no better title to the gratitude of mankind, or claim for support when Switzerland is right, and for forbearance when she is wrong. Europe has not forgotten it. England, above all, will not forget it.

The question how far the federal constitution of Switzerland requires or admits of amendment, is one of which foreign statesmen cannot correctly judge, and in which they have no right to interfere. The degree to which the constitutions of the cantons have been altered since 1831, may necessitate a re-constitution of the federal system, to an extent of which none but natives can know the urgency. We would gladly see the formation of the new constitution committed to parties of more moderate opinions, and more likely to conciliate the support of all the cantons than the present dictatorial canton. But, we repeat, it is not our wishes, nor the wishes of any foreign State, but the will of the Swiss people, which, after it has unmistakeably declared itself, will have to be carried into effect. The position of Switzerland is unique in Europe; the internal remedies she requires may be so likewise; but come what will, the independence of Switzerland must be preserved inviolate."

Lord Palmerston has declared that England will not sanction any improper interference with the domestic affairs of the republic, and we notice that the treacherous Guizot, who had written encouragement to the Catholic party, has had to make explanations in the French Chambers, qualifying away his original intentions. We shall look for further information with eager interest, and shall not be surprised to witness extensive results from these incipient events.

Children's Department.

From the Lowell Offering.

They that seek me early shall find me.

Cast aside those gems which shine
On thy snow-white neck and brow,
Take the pearl of greatest price,
For thy guide and portion now.

Thou hast tried the world and found
Vanity engraven there,
Death has crushed thy fairest hopes,
And deceit has laid its snare.

Thou hast tried the friends of earth,
And hast found them faithless, too;
Turn then to the friend above,
Who is ever just and true.

When affliction's stormy hour
Comes to break the bruised reed,
He will show His glorious power,
He will prove a friend indeed.

Casting all thy care on Him,
He will care for thee and thine;
Then in brighter worlds above
Thou with Him shall ever shine.

There to tune the song of praise.
Through unceasing years of time;
Holier pleasures be enjoyed,
Purer happiness be thine.

Brighter gems shall deck thee then
Than India's wealth hath ever told;
Thy hand shall strike a heavenly lyre,
Thy brow shall wear a crown of gold.

From the Cumberland Presbyterian.

Letters to Children.

Dear young friends, I promised to tell you in this letter more about the cruel customs of the heathen. You sometimes feel very sorry for a little boy or girl when its father dies and is buried in the cold grave. But when the Father of a little heathen dies, the people make a large fire and put him into it, and then take the poor weeping mother and burn her alive in the same fire. Oh how sorry the little children must be to see their father and mother burning in the great fire. How very lonesome they must be. They have no father nor mother, no Bible to read; no Sabbath School to attend, and no christian friend to pray for them and instruct them how to be good.

The London Christian Observer says that in 1799, only 48 years ago, 22 females were burnt alive with the dead body of Unutio a Brahmin. The fire was kept burning 3 days. When the women arrived, a ceremony was performed and they threw themselves into the blazing fire.

The Brahmins are very wicked and ignorant. Sometimes they have a great many wives. We read of one Brahmin who had married 40 wives and all but 18 had died before him. On this occasion a fire 10 or 12 yards in length was prepared, into which the remaining 27 threw themselves and were burnt to death, leaving more than 40 little children without father or mother.

In Bengal in only 9 years, from 1815 to 1824, 5997 women were burnt as I have described, oh how many little orphan children were left without father or mother.

But I must tell you something about the cruel sufferings and death they inflict upon their children.

Mr. Kingsburg who has travelled among the Cherokees, says that hundreds of helpless children have been murdered by them. Sometimes the mother digs a grave when the child is very young and buries it alive.

Sometimes she kills it by stamping it on the breast, by strangling, or knocking it on the head.

It is not long since a missionary saw a Hindoo woman cast her child, 3 or 4 years old, into the river Ganges as an offering to the goddess. The little child caught hold of a raft of Bamboos that happened to be floating by, and cried to its mother for help: But the cruel mother was so determined that the child should not escape, she plunged into the water, tore it away from the raft, broke its neck, and hurled its lifeless corpse into the middle of the current, by which it was soon drifted out of sight.

The Rev. Mr. Stewart has been in India: He says that when a heathen child is sick the mother will not endure the trouble of taking care of it. She stifles its cries, hurries it into a grave already prepared, and tramples to a level the earth under which the offspring of her bosom is struggling in the agonies of death.

The Rev. Wm. Ward says, it is supposed that 10,000 have been murdered in the province of Bengal in one month. They were offered in sacrifice to the Ganges, burnt alive, hung up in baskets on trees to be devoured by ants and birds of prey or exposed to be torn to pieces by crocodiles, jackalls and tigers.

Rev. Mr. Ellis says that the barbarity in the south Sea Islands was dreadful. There a warrior might be seen tossing little children and infants, into the air, and catching them on the point of his spear, where they expire in agonies. Another might be seen dragging in savage triumph five or six little helpless children by a chord, which he passed through their heads from ear to ear. Oh how true it is that 'their sorrows are multiplied that hasten after another God.'"

Dear children, how thankful you ought to be, that you have kind mothers to pray for you and take care of you when you are sick.—And how thankful you ought to be that you live in a christian country where the people have the Bible to read, and know that it is wrong to kill children, and burn parents in great funeral fires. Oh how much you ought to strive to send missionaries and the Bible to these poor heathen. But I must tell you more about their cruelty in my next letter. PETER PARLEY.

Artistical.

Lewis's Improved Locomotive.

It possesses several peculiar and distinctive features. There is attached a pair of wheels in front, and a like pair in rear of the driving wheels, at the extreme ends of the engine frame, as a substitute for the 'truck' arrangement now in use; their diameter about 3½ ft., with a double flange. The outside flange will be about one-half the depth of the inner one, and is strictly a guard flange, and never touches the rail except in time of danger of the engine being thrown off the rails. To be able to use a double flange advantageously, it was necessary to give the wheels a separate as well as a united motion. To move on a curve of very short radius, the wheels act with a pivot motion on the rails, and without an increase of friction against them from the guard flanges as each wheel revolves separately in a shield.—Each guard flange is a protection against running off the rails. For instance, if an obstruction should be in the way of the left hand wheel, large enough to throw it off the rail to the left, the guard flange on the right hand wheel is brought up against the rail. In like manner, the left hand wheel is a guard to the right hand one, and these front wheels united are guards or protections to the driving wheels, causing them to pass in safety any obstruction which the guard wheels have gone over.

These rear and front wheels are denominated 'Protection and Burden Wheels.' They are capable of sustaining one half the weight of the engine, with only four driving wheels. They are, however, often relieved of a part of their weight by having it transferred to the driving wheels, in starting a 'train' when the rails are wet, or in ascending an unfavorable grading, after which, the weight is properly and quickly restored to the guard wheels by a simple contrivance, somewhat similar to a steering apparatus of a steamboat, and is as much at the command of the engineer, as his steam valve. There will also be attached a dial plate to indicate the amount of weight transferred.

These guard flanges offer no impediment in running over the 'frogs' or 'points,' taking the 'turnnuts' or difficult 'crossings' with the same ease and facility of the common locomotive, and with far greater speed and safety.

Among the many thousands of persons at the late Fair, to whom this machine was shown, no doubt there were many scientific and practical railroad gentlemen, who could obtain but a cursory view and description of it. To such, as well as others, an opportunity is now offered of examining the machine in private, with suitable drawings and explanations, and on application to the Quincy House in Brattle Street, the proprietor will explain the modus operandi of the machine to all such scientific gentlemen who will favor him with a call.—Boston Olive Branch.

New Method of Boring Artesian Wells.

An intelligent artisan named Fauvel, at Perpignan, in France, noticed that in several cases of boring for water with solid iron rods, so soon as the spring was tapped all the triturated particles were brought up without the use of the augur. He inferred, therefore, that if the boring could be effected by a hollow tube, about two inches less in diameter than the width of the augur communicating with an injecting force pump by a flexible tube, from the surface, the same result would follow by this application of mechanical power, as resulted from the natural power of the rising column. Being a poor man, it was long before he could get an interest taken in his invention. At last his fellow workmen clubbed together and assisted him in his enterprise, and success attended him in his first experiment. He can bore as much as by the old system in one half the time. Fauvel has now orders for about 200 Artesian wells, and he has carried one 6 inches in diameter, to the depth of 540 feet.

Agricultural.

For those that have no Cellar.

MESSRS. EDITORS Two years ago, living in that particular state called single blessedness I had raised a small lot of vegetables, and having no cellar on account of the lowness of the ground, I concluded to devote them to an experiment, which might perhaps benefit somebody else. I had holes dug about 2 feet deep, and in these I put squashes, pumpkins, beets, turneps, onions, rutabagas, and cabages, heads up and heads down. In laying them down, I avoided as much as I could to bring them in contact with each other, and filled the space between with the excavated soil up to 6 inches from the top, and then I covered the holes with straw up to the level of the ground. During the winter I satisfied myself that the whole vegetables and earth were frozen stiff, and in the spring following it was some time before the whole was thawed out, I then found it in the following condition:

Squases, rotten.
Pumkins, do.
Beets, Turnips, carrots, rutabagas, in excellent condition, more tender than I ever tasted any before.
Onions had increased 50 per cent, in size, and were juicy and delicious.
Cabbages (with stumps) heads down, almost all rotten.
Cabbages (with stumps) heads up, fresh and good.

This experiment merely an imitation of nature shows that in many instances it would be better to preserve at least a part of the vegetables in a similar way than in a poor cellar. A good dry cellar is a great convenience, but a poor cellar is not only useless, but it is always a source of disease to those who live above it.—P. Farmer.

CAUSTIC.

Jefferson, Wis., July, 1846.

Miscellaneous.

Special Providences.

"At Waterloo," said Napoleon, "I ought to have been victorious. The chances were a hundred to one in my favor. But Ney, the bravest of the brave, at the head of forty-two thousand Frenchmen, suffered himself to be delayed whole day by some thousand of hussar troops. Had it not been for this inexplicable inactivity, the English army would have been taken flagrante delicto and annihilated without striking a blow. Grouchy, with forty thousand men, suffered Bulow and Blucher to escape from him; and, finally, a heavy shower of rain, made the ground so soft that it was impossible for the French to commence the attack at daybreak. Had I been able to commence early, Wellington's army would have been trodden down in the defiles of the forest before the Prussians could have had time to arrive. It were otherwise lost without resource."

The above passage from Montholon's History, will do as well as any other as a text for a few remarks upon General and Special Providences. There was a time in our life—it was shortly after reading that admirable work, in many respects Comb's "Constitution of Man"—that we abjured entirely the doctrine of Special or Particular Providences, as being narrow and bigoted, and contrary to the nature of things. But as we have grown older, we have in this, as in many other respects, gradually floated back into the faith of our childhood; and doctrines, received in the infancy of the mind upon authority, and rejected as unsound by the presumptuous spirit of youth, have become again the cherished faith of more mature years, as being most in accordance with revea ed truth, and the deductions of sound reason.

The doctrine of Combe is, that the world is governed by general laws, and such alone. He divides these laws into the three great divisions of the physical, intellectual and moral; and alleges that obedience to the requirements of either, receives its appropriate reward. For instance, he says that a bad man who should go to sea in a vessel constructed in accordance with the physical and material laws of the universe, sound-timbered and well-rigged, would most probably arrive in safety at his destined port; while a good man, who, living in obedience to the moral laws of the universe, neglects the due observance of the physical laws, by embarking in a frail and shattered vessel, will probably go to the bottom in the first severe storm he encounters. In other words, that an observance of the moral law will not compensate for a violation of the physical; or a violation of the moral, lessen that bodily security attained by an observance of the physical law.

Now we do not deny—which would be absurd—the truth of the greater part of this doctrine of Mr. Comb's. We believe, also, that the world is governed by General Laws; but we go further, and add to this system of General Laws, a system of Special Providences in accordance with these General Laws. For General Laws and Special Providences are by no means necessarily antagonistical to each other. We do not suppose that the Most High interferes in the affairs of men, by reversing the law of gravitation, or decreeing, as of old, that the sun should "stand still on Gibeon, and the moon in the valley of Ajalon;" but we do not only suppose, but firmly believe, that such interferences of the Divine Power, are frequent, if not constant, working in accordance with the nature of things, the cause of truth and righteousness, and in answer to the fervent prayers of men.

As an illustration of our meaning as to the manner in which this intervention takes place, we may instance, (to compare great things with small,) the steam engine, or any other piece of mechanism. We will suppose a rail-road engine going at the rate of twenty miles an hour, and a wagon crossing the track before it at such a distance and rate, that if the speed of the engine be not lessened, the wagon must inevitably be broken to pieces. Now we do not imagine the interference of the Creator in the affairs of the world, to be comparable to hat of a man who, in the case just alluded to, should prevent the collision by flinging a log on the track, which should lift the approaching engine from the rails, and dash it against or over a neighboring embankment but rather to the skillful hand of the engineer, who, by a special interference, in accordance with the general principles upon which the steam engine is constructed, should decrease its speed, and thus give time for the wagon to pass over before it in safety.

Now there is nothing more certain than that History abounds with instances where, to all appearance, the whole course of events in kingdoms and ages, has been changed by the smallest causes. A whimsical idea, springing up in the mind of a monarch, seemingly without cause' as in the case of Ninus, has led to a change of rulers, and often to a consequent radical change of measures. Rome was preserved by the cackling of a goose. The sight of the chaste Lucretia by a licentious Prince, led to the expulsion of the Tarquins from Rome, and the establishment of the Republic.—The conspiracy of Cataline was defeated by the disgust of a woman with her lover. The Emperor Adrian chanced to see Titus Antonius leading his infirm old father to the senate—he instantly adopted him, and after the death of Adrian, Titus ascended the imperial throne. A little boy's chancing to find a slip paper in the apartment of Commodus, on which the names of certain persons were inscribed as condemned to death, led to the assassination of that tyrant. These, with many other instances, may be adduced, we do not say as special providences, but in order to show how easily special providences might be engrafted, as it were, upon the general laws of the universe, in accordance with the nature of things.

But, why need we search for other instances on the pages of history, when we have one already before us, so admirably illustrative and conclusive. Read again, dear reader, the quotation with which we begun this article. Napoleon said rightly, "At Waterloo I ought to have been victorious: the chances were a hundred to one in my favor." And looking at this world merely as a huge machine, which the Most High having made and put in operation, no longer interferes with—a world governed by General Laws alone where no other answer ever comes to the most fervent prayer than the stern, relentless crashing and grinding of huge machinery; where there is no Great Author and Governor regarding even "the fall of the sparrow," no Almighty Father with ear ever open, no eternally near and ever present God—looking, we say, at the world in this light, Napoleon ought to have succeeded, and would have succeeded. But the young Republican had become the Despot—a war begun in defence of the just rignts and sovereignty of France, had been perverted into a war for universal empire—and Europe rising in the majesty of insulted nations, Europe's people—not Europe's aristocracy and kings alone—flung out the great Despot from her shores, caging him like a wild beast, whose thirst for blood it was dangerous to regard as stated, within the rocky barriers of St. Helena.

"God always helps the heavy battalions!" was the ironical saying of one of Napoleon's great Marshal—but how was it, then, that Ney, "the bravest of the brave," at the head of 42,000 men, suffered himself to be delayed a whole day by about a thousand hussars? If God, and truth, and right are nothing, and "the heavy battalions" everything, how can this be explained? Napoleon calls it "inexplicable inactivity." Yes, just such "inexplibable inactivity," having its origin in a feeling of deadness, a something coming over even the strongest and most energetic minds, and momentarily dulling their brightness, is what has lost many a battle, occasionally a revolution and an empire. But, putting aside the "inexplicable inactivity" of Ney, how shall we explain the equally singular inactivity of Grouchy—a mystery which has never yet, and probably never will be satisfactorily solved. And, to crown all, a heavy shower of rain made the ground so soft that it was impossible for the French to commence the attack at daybreak—and time was given for Blucher and his Prussians to arrive just at the perilous moment of the fight, leaving no hope for Napoleon but in one last desperate, terrible charge, which rolled against the British line in successive waves as of an ocean of fire, only to be rolled back, broken, blackened, and shattered—and Waterloo was lost!

But there is one point more, to which we desire to call the reader's particular attention, in connection with the doctrine of Special Providences—it is this:—A denial of this doctrine involves the denial of the potency, in any case, of prayer. Combe consistently and openly takes the ground, that prayer is of no use or value except in its effect upon the mind of the individual who puts up the supplication. He thinks it absurd to suppose that the prayer of a man can have any effect upon the determination of God. And yet he would have people pray, and thinks highly of prayer, as a means to temper the mind, to patience, and to acquiescense in God's will. But, it seems to us, to pray that the Almighty would do thus and, believing that He is not "a God hearing prayer," and that our supplications by no possibility can have any effect upon the course of events, is the veriest mockery. And we feel confident that if religiously minded people generally believed with Mr. Combe that their prayers could by no possibility have the least weight or effect; in one word, if the belief in the doctrine of Special Providences no longer geneally obtained; that prayer would be nearly universally discarded as a mockery and an absurdity.—Sat. Ev. Post.

Physiognomy.

This science was once as popular, as Phrenology. Lavater had his disciples, who were enthusiastic admirers of his system, and at the present day there are many who still firmly believe in his theory. While at the same time there is not one but is impressed favorably or unfavorably with the physiognomy of a person at first sight. It has been said that the face is the index of the mind, but this assersion wants facts to prove it. A beautiful countenance is no evidence of a good heart or a kind disposition, but often times the very reverse. Nero was of a beautiful countenance, and the Marchioness de Brenvillers the celebrated poisoner, had an insinuating address and lovely features—Yet although Physiognomy, by the wise design of Providence, could not be reduced to a science, there is still some truth in its general feature which are:—

1. The signs of long life, are strong teeth, a sanguine temperament, middle stature, large deep, and ruddy lines in the hand, large muscles, stooping shoulders, full chest, firm flesh, clear complexion, slow growth, wide ears, large eyelids, &c.

1. A good genius may be expected from thin skin, middle stature, blue bright eyes, fair complexion, straight and pretty strong hair, and affable aspect, the eye brows joined, moderation in mirth, an open cheerful countenance, the temples a little concave, &c.

3. A good memory is commonly attached to those persons who are smaller, yet better formed in the upper than the lower parts, not fat but fleshy of a fair delicate skin, with the pool of the head uncovered, crooked nose, teeth thick set, large ears with much cartilage.

4. A good imagination and thoughtful disposition is distinguished by a large prominent forehead, a fixed and attentive look, slow respiration, and an inclination of the head.

5. Strength of mind is signified by light curled hair, a small body, shining eyes, but a little depressed, a grave intensive voice, bushy beard, large broad back and shoulders.

Advertisements.

NEW GOODS.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,

Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! cheap!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

Sept. 15, 1847. [4t.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,			-	$1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	-	3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st

With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50

Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadeldhia.

FRRDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.

NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.

Mar. 18, '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 4. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, OCTOBER 28, 1847. WHOLE NO. 420.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

From the Episcopal Recorder.

EDEN OF LOVE.

How sweet to reflect on those joys that await me,
In yon blissful region the haven of rest,
Where glorified spirits, with welcome, shall greet me
And lead me to mansions prepared for the blest!
Encircled in light, and with glory enshrouded,
My happiness perfect,— my mind's sky unclouded,
I'll bathe in the ocean of pleasure unbounded
And range with delight, through the Eden of Love.

While angelic legions, with harps tun'd celestial,
Harmoniously join in the concert of praise,
The saints, as they flock from the regions terrestrial,
With loud hallelujahs, their voices shall raise.
While songs to the Lamb, shall re-echo through heav'n,
My soul will respond—"To Immanuel be given
All glory, all honor, all might and dominion,
Who brought us through grace to the Eden of Love'

Then hail! blessed state, Hail! ye songsters of glory!
Ye harpers of bliss! soon I'll meet you above,
And join your full choir in rehearsing the story,
"Salvation from sorrow through Jesus' love,"
Though prisoned on earth, yet, by anticipation
Already my soul feels a sweet prelibation
Of joys that await me when freed from probation—
My heart's now in heaven, the Eden of Love:

H.

Ministerial.

From the Methodist Protestant.

LONG SERMONS.

It is seldom you can find a minister who will not justify himself in preaching long sermons; and there is, perhaps, no point on which, as a class, ministers are more sensitive of reproof.—In others, they can very readily see this defect; but when they are made personally the subjects, it is regarded as an evidence of a low state of religion in the individual who presumes to complain that the sermons are too long.

"Men," say they "will go to political meetings, and listen for hours to the flash of oratory of a stump-speaker, whose only object is to excite party feeling—and you hear no complaint that the speeches are too long. Others will go to the theatre and remain until mid-night to witness the termination of a play, and you hear no complaint that the piece is too long. But let a minisier detain his congregation with the important truths of Holy Living, and he will not have passed the threshhold of the sanctuary before he will receive a hint from this brother and an open declaration from that brother, that his congregation would be much better pleased if in future the services were abreviated."

Still this is no evidence that long preaching is to be commended. There are, we admit, men of very superior attainments who may address an audience for an hour and a half, or two hours, and not excite complaint; but men of ordinary ability, who have nothing very new to communicate, will invariably find their usefulness lessened by such a course. Whenever a minister is convinced of this, he should abandon the practice at once.

The object of every minister of the Gospel should be usefulness in his vocation. Whatever promotes this object, whether it please men or not, should be promptly and energetically carried out in his life and ministerial habits. Whatever will lessen this usefulness, whether it harmonise with his inclinations or not, should be avoided.—The question then arises, by which method may the object of preaching be the better secured, by long preaching, or by short preaching?

At political meetings appeals are generally made, by successive orators, to the passions of men; and under the intoxicating excitement, they will stand for hours without complaint. So at the theatre: there is a constant play upon the passions; men will laugh and cry, by turns, from early eve until mid-night. But the preacher has something else to do than play with the passions of his audience. He aims not only to awaken, to alarm, but to instruct men to consider. He is a teacher, rather than an actor; and who does not know that instruction, to be profitable, must be limitedin its extent, and appropriate to the condition of the pupil?

The fault of long preaching, not unfrequently, arises, we think, from an unwillingness to leave a discourse in what the preacher thinks an unfinished state. A great deal more has been said, perhaps, on the earlier portions of the effort than was intended, and the desire to finish predominates over the admonitions of the clock. This is very apt to occur in extemporary preaching. Only a short time ago, a preacher whom we know, found upon looking at his watch, that he had occupied just forty minutes in discoursing upon the several heads arising out of his first position. He was right in the middle of his discourse, as he had arranged it. What was to be done? Was there no ambition to present a finished discourse, in the desire to go on, which he instinctively realized? Perhaps there was. After-reflection, however, approved of the course taken, which was an immediate close, by a rapid glance at what might be presented on another occasion, and an enforcement of the subject as far as it had been discussed.

The most impressive discourses are not always those that are most elaborated. It does not follow that an impressive speaker necessarily deepens impression by prolonging his observations. On the contrary, it not unfrequently occurs that the general impression of a discourse is lessened by its continuance beyond a certain length.—Who has not witnessed this again and again? Mr. Wesley did not fail to notice it as he advanced in years. In the earlier part of his ministerial life, it is said, he was long and loud in his pulpit performances. But in his later years he seldom occupied more than thirty minutes, and there is no doubt that the impression of his efforts was greatly augmented by this change.

General consent has established the length of a discourse to be from forty-five to sixty minutes. Where more time than this is consumed, an audience under ordinary circumstances will become weary. Nor is it always evidence of a disrelish for the truths communicated that such weariness is manifested. Family arrangements having been made in expectation of a definite absence, when it is prolonged beyond the prescribed limits, restlessness will be sure to follow. Long-winded preachers should remember that domestic affairs—young children at home—sick members of families—servants, and other classes of persons—may demand a becoming brevity in the exercises. We believe that many a mother, is denied the privilege of commemorating the death of the Lord for months, by the inconsiderate length of the sermons that usually precede the communion service. Protracted meeting efforts and sacramental sermons, it seems to us should never exceed thirty-five or forty minutes; yet we have known them extended to an hour & a half!

"Would you have me hurry through the services?" says the preacher. No—not at all.—Let what is said, be said with solemnity and earnestness, and sincerity. There is no need of hurry in a meeting where with the varied exercises of singing, reading and prayer, some three quarters of an hour are appropriated to the preaching of the word. But as you would avoid "vain repetition"—as you would avoid an unnecessary expenditure of time and breath—as you would avoid exemplifying in your own person the adage that "in much speaking there is much folly"—as you would avoid the frustration of all your efforts to do good—study, not to preach too long!

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

MADRAS.

Extract of a letter from the Mission, April 3, 1847.

In the prospectus for a railroad from Madras to Arcot, lately issued, we have the following statement, apparently from authentic records: "The population of the city of Madras, the second in India in importance, amounted in 1822 to 462,051. In 1842 it had increased to upwards of 700,000, and is still increasing. This increase, so considerable, in so short a space of time, has arisen from various causes, chiefly political, "many of which have tended to reduce the importance of the cities in the interior, and centralize the population on the cities of the coast."

Here, then, in this city alone, are more than twice as many souls as in New York, five times the number in Boston, more than three times as many as are to be found in the district of Jaffna, and seven times the population of the Sandwich Islands; yet there are not a dozen missionaries devoted to their salvation! How does this compare with the places mentioned, or with many others? Is there equality?

But it may be said that as it is a city, it is not so favorable a place for missionary labor as these and other fields, and, therefore, cannot claim equal attention. To this it might be sufficient to reply that it is a part of the inheritance promised to our Savior, and is to be subdued to Him, whether there be more or less promise of early success. Besides, as the heart of the presidency, it has influence upon all the extremities. Should the country places become to some extent Christian, and yet the city remain heathen, the reaction from this centre of influence would greatly obstruct the progress of truth. We may, no doubt, act from the country upon the city, but more effectually from the city upon the country; or, rather, both should be moved upon at the same time. Whether there is a prospect that a given amount of labor will tell more upon the city or the country, must depend somewhat upon the proportion of the laborers to the work to be done. If two or three missionaries only are placed in a large town they may be as nothing in the crowd, and their efforts may seem to be lost. Yet if they work faithfully in any neighborhood with the same people, though surrounded by multitudes of others, the leaven of their influence will gradually spread, (especially if the number of laborers be in any proportion to the numbers labored for,) even into tho mass of the population. But if we grant that by having their influence more diffused there is less prospect of producing immediate and visible effects, it is not, therefore, the less important as a preparatory work, which can be done no where else, and for which there must be many missionaries, who had better be of several societies.

Mr. Drew, a judicious missionary of the London Missionary Society, who returned from England to Madras by way of Bombay and the Western coast, less than a year since, and who visited the German, London Church, and American missions in the southern part of the Peninsula, has stated more than once, in public and in private, that though he saw much at Travancore, Tinnevelly, Madura, and other places, which was pleasing and encouraging, he considers Madras a more eligible field than either of them. We may, not, perhaps, think that it is so for immediate fruit; but we think it second in importance to neither of those, all things considered, if we look to future years, and duly estimate the influence of any real impression made at the head quarters of opposition.

The present state of Calcutta, compared with what it was a few years ago, is in point to show the importance of concentrating a good degree of labor upon a large place. There are, it is supposed, not less than one thousand educated young men in Calcutta, fully convinced of the truth and claims of Christianity, though hindered as yet from professing it by a fear of persecution. The number of such persons under instruction in English is estimated at five thousand. The attendance on stated preaching in different parts of the city, is said to be often large; and the converts, if not numerous, are yet respectable in number. There has been much less done in Madras of late years, though it was earlier occupied; but the change here has also been great, even since we first knew the place. We cannot now go into details.

The facilities presented consist in the encouragement given by the government to education (in mission as well as other schools) by offering to educated pupils situations of trust and emolument, formerly engrossed by the brahmins, but now open to the best qualified of all castes; in the general diffusion of some knowledge of Christianity; in the spirit of inquiry which the progress of education and the operations of the press, with teaching and preaching, have excited; and even in the violent opposition which has been manifested. as it has arisen principally from the contact of Christianity with Brahminism. All these are so many facilities for prosecuting our work.

You may be aware that an anti-missionary society has been organized among the natives of Madras. It employs a press in printing small tracts and a newspaper, (and these are widely distributed,) it has established several opposition free schools, here and there; it has in its service sundry tract distributors and declaimers against Christianity, who imitate missionaries in their manner of speaking and preaching; and it sends out agents for similar purposes into the country. It was this instrumentality which excited the outbreak in Tinnevelly, and at various other places opposition has been occasioned in a similar way. The influence of the society is felt in different parts of the country; which fact shows the importance of meeting it in the place from which it issues. No where else can this enemy be contended with so successfully. With others we are doing something according to our ability, in this conflict. A little book of eighty-four pages, (in reply to one of their principal tracts, inveighing against Christianity, and urging many of the infidel objections of Voltaire, Paine, and others,) has been prepared and printed. It is much inquired after, and is doing good.

This opposition may be regarded on the whole as encouraging; as it shows that the truth has taken hold of the native mind. Tracts and books, the missionaries say, are generally received with great avidity; and if preaching places could be opened in different localities, many would flock to them.

The importance of the press here as the instrument of diffusing scriptural truth whether in English or the native languages, can hardly be over-estimated. Our brethren of other societies are aware of its value, and one and another have frequently and gratefully said "What should we do in Madras without the American press." We have heretofore presented this subject, and, therefore only allude to it passing; but we may say that had the Church Mission press been sold to a private printer, as was in contemplation, the whole printing for the Bible and tract societies of Madras, to speak of no other, would have been probably about one third higher than it now is, and have been executed slowly and in an irregular manner. But for this mission, so far as we can judge. the entire Tamil Bible in one volume, printed at the joint expense of the Madras Bible Society and the American Bible Society & also the Tamil New Testament with references, printed in the same way, would not have been published. An impulse is given by the mission, in various ways, to the operations of the press, among others by the active distribution of its productions; and a stronger body is needed for this purpose, as well as to prepare suitable books for publication. In the want of living agents to go through the length and breadth of the land, the importance of supplying the deficiency, as far as possible, by these silent messengers cannot well be overrated.

We must plead for the means to make the printing establishment really and permanently efficient. We do not speak of what is expected of us in regard to school books, tho' this is very important, or even the great work of bringing out the contemplated Tamil and English Dictionary, which will occupy some years, but simply of religious publications. They alone require more strength than we have at command, and their necessity cannot be denied. Without them the missionary is much like the mechanic without his tools. Help us, then, brethren, that we may be able to help those whom you send into the field, not forgetting even missionaries from other bodies, The Madura mission looks to us for the greater part of its Scriptures, if not also for its tracts and other religious books.

Young Men's Department.

"Mind your Business."

Yes, mind own your business, tho' you should be told to do so by some snarling, illnatured creature; it is a bit of advice not less valuable on account of its frequent misapplication. "Mind your business," we say; if you hear of some evil report about an acquaintance or a friend, don't be running all over the town, and piously repeating it wherever you go, when perhaps you feel very little interest whether it be true or not—and indeed if it were true the less you said about it the better, both for your friend and yourself. If it were untrue, you could do nothing towards eradicating it by continual y repeating it, and you would thus be doing your friend an injury instead of a kindness.

Mind your own business, don't intrude yourself into other people's affairs, which in no way concern you. You will never be thanked for so doing, but will be certain to become offensive and contemptible, not only to the worthy and influential, but to every one with whom you may have intercourse.—Mind your own business—don't be sticking your nose and fingers into every other person's trade or profession, but your own—expatiating upon principles, about which you know nothing, and suggesting plans to be adopted by those who know a great deal more about their business, and how to conduct it, than you can possibly tell them. By so doing you will only expose your own ignorance and presumption, where you may have flattered yourself that you have been thought smart and ingenious. Mind your own business—don't imagine that because you are an adept at some particular pursuit, nay, that because you have even extraordinary attainments in some department of human enterprise, that you are, therefore, entitled and expected to instruct all the rest of mankind. A scullion could have taught Sir Isaac Newton how to make soup, and a chimney-sweep might have instructed Lord Byron how to rid a room of smoke, and prevent his Lordship from smothering when all the resources of his mighty intellect might have been exhausted, and failed to accomplish so simple an object, notwithstanding he could soar so high into the clouds as to "Stand on the loftiest peak of Fame's dread mountain;" to "talk with the thunder," and to play fantastic tricks with the lightning.

Mind your own business. Don't be patrolling the streets without any purpose to accomplish; dodging into a hundred different places in a day, while your own affairs are totally neglected. By so doing you will acquire the reputation of being that most despicable character, known in modern times by the name of "Loafer." Yes, we say, mind your own business. Don't think that you dignify labor by engaging in it; on the contary, it dignifies you. The intellectual and physical powers of man require activity and exercise.—Their nobility is in proportion to their vigorous and united exertion. Without exercise they become as a collection of stagnant water, and are no more to be admired than any other deformity or perversion of nature.—Neither must you think that intellectual labor, only, is to be admired and extolled. Every pursuit which promotes the well-being of mankind, is in itself, worthy and noble. Intellectual labor is but a part of that system which must be carried out in advancing and elevating the human race, indeed it may be safely asserted that what is commonly called manual labor is the most noble pursuit. It combines both intellectual and physical exertion. Intellect suggests what the body executes. The true standard of human excellence is the equilibrium maintained between the intellectual and physical system, and when the one preponderates over the other, it is always attended with more or less injurious consequences.

Mind your own business, for if you don't mind it, you may be certain that it won't mind you, and the result will be that nobody else will mind you, and you will wander through the world a degraded and unhonored being. The only way in which you will be minded will be that when you are dead every body will mind you, for being a person who minded every person's business but his own—a useless being to yourself and a libel on your race.

Narrative.

The Outside Passenger.

Some years ago, a young lady who was going into a northern county, took a seat in the stage coach. For many miles she rode alone; but there was enough to amuse her in the scenery through which she passed, and in the pleasing anticipations that occupied her mind. She had been engaged as governess for the grand-children of an earl, and was now travelling to his seat. At mid-day the coach stopped at an inn, where dinner was provided, and she alighted and sat down at the table. An elderly man followed, and sat down also. The young lady arose, rang the bell, and addressing the waiter, said, "Here is an outside passenger. I cannot dine with an outside passenger." The stranger bowed, saying, "I beg your pardon, madam, I can go into another room," and immediately retired. The coach soon afterwards resumed its course, and the passengers their places.

At length the coach stopped at the gate leading to the castle to which the young lady was going; but there was not such prompt attention as she expected. All eyes seemed directed to the outside passenger, who was preparing to dismount. She beckoned, and was answered, "As soon as we have attended to his lordship, we will come to you." A few words of explanation ensued, when, to her dismay, she found that the outside passenger, with whom she had thought it beneath her to dine, was not only a nobleman, but that very nobleman in whose family she had hoped to be an inmate. What could she do? How could she bear the interview? She felt really ill, and the apology she sent for her non-appearing that evening, was more than pretence.

The venerable peer was a considerate person, who knew the way in which the Scripture speaks of the going down of the sun.—"We must not allow the night to pass thus," said he to the countess; "you must send for her, and we must talk to her before bed-time." He reasoned with the foolish girl, insisted on the impropriety of the state of mind that it evinced, assured her that nothing could induce him to allow his children to be taught such notions, rufused to accept any apology that did not go the length of acknowledging that the thought was wrong—and when the right impression appeared to be produced, gave her his hand.

The Lord of all, before whose judgment seat every human being must hereafter stand, was for a seasion in the world, and the world knew him not. When He was on the earth, the Son of God was but an outside passenger.—With what consternation will many of those who treated him with disdain, recognize in the Almighty Judge of quick and dead, the despised itinerant from Galilee, whom they scorned and derided! And as it was with him, so it is with his living representatives.—By far the greater number of those who belong to the court of the Prince of princes, have been outside passengers. What will be the feelings of many who have treated them contemptuously, when they hear the words—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me!"

Happy would it be for the churches of Christ, if all who belong to them were to remember habitually that they also have a Master who is in heaven, and that nothing is more clearley deducible from his instructions, than that every one who desires to enjoy his favor, should be ready at all times to exercise courtesy towards an outside passenger.—London Baptist Magazine.

The three Mechanics.

Seven years ago, if you had entered a mechanic's shop in the village of———, you would have seen three young men engaged in the same employment, and apparently with the same prospects. They were about the same age—were all employed by the same individual—all boarded in the same family—all possessed equal advantages; and neither of them had a title to an inheritance beyond this world.

But even then, if you had entered the secret chambers of their hearts, or stopped to inquire minutely into their moral state, you would have found a wide difference between them.

The family where they boarded was interested in the Sabbath School, in temperance efforts, and in other kindred operations; and each of these youths was solicited to interest himself in these safeguards of morality and virtue. One of them, after much solicitation, put his name to the temperance pledge, and attended regularly on the instruction of the Sabbath School. Another advocated the cause of temperance, and occasionally attended the Sabbath School; but he thought he was too old to be a member of the school. The third ridiculed the Sabbath School, and all who attended to its instructions; and as to temperance, he thought it very unnecessary to make such a parade about that. He could keep from drinking, without 'pledging' himself to abstain from it.

It was not long before the one who belonged to the Sabbath School became interested in the truths he there learned; and, notwithstanding his efforts at mirth and gaiety with his companions, betrayed to their eagle eyes, that there was heaviness at his heart. One day, while together in the shop, the eldest remarked, "I will tell you what it is, E———, you are serious; and if there should be a revival here, you would be among the converts." He made but little reply, merely saying, "It might be well for us all if we were serious" when a torrent of abuse was thrown out against religion and its instructions.

Although the place was blessed with a revival at that time, yet this young man alone sought the Saviour: and it was not long before he was willing openly to acknowledge that he had put his trust in Him.

As I intimated at the beginning, seven years have since passed away. The youth who joined the temperance society & Sabbath School, feeling a great desire to proclaim to others the Saviour he had found, soon commenced a course of study preparatory for the ministry, and has now a bright prospect before him of extensive usefulness.

The one who vascillated—sometimes attending the Sabbath school, and proclaiming himself the friend of temperance, and sometimes appearing indifferent—lost the confidence of his employers, proved unsuccessful in business, and has wasted what little he had gained, in amusements and rioting.

The other one pursued a direct, downward course. To profaneness, he soon added intemperance; and notwithstanding the warnings of his friends, and the earnest entreaties of a pious brother, he gave himself up to continued dissipation and a drunkard's grave has just closed over him.

The foregoing sketch should stimulate all who are in any way connected with youth, to influence them, as far as possible, to engage in those operations, which are designed for the promotion of morality and virtue. The young man mentioned, who is now in college has frequently been heard to remark, that had it not been for the constant yet judicious entreaties of a Sabbath School teacher, he should not have joined that institution, and might now be following in the devious paths of his companions.

This sketch should also lead the young not to be weakly and foolishly ashamed of morality and religion, but gladly to entrench themselves about with the wholesome restraints of both; to trust in the Lord with all their hearts, and lean not to their own understanding.—Mountain Gleaner.

Ladies' Department.

How to keep off Old Age.

A SUGGESTION TO YOUNG LADIES.

Intellectual culture is no doubt the best and the strongest barrier which the young can rear against the insidious advances of premature old age. Mental discipline is eminently healthful and life-sustaining. We speak not of excessive application, but of diligent and persevering culture and exercise of mind. The following remarks on the subject, by the Rev. Mr. Winslow, are commended to the consideration of all concerned, and especially to young ladies.

The premature old age observed in the appearance and infirmities of many ladies in our country is not the result of too much study. We do not begin to study in this country as they do in Germany, nor as many do in England and France.—It is a common thing among the educated ladies of Germany, to find those who can read and speak three or four different languages, and are extensively versed in mathematics and natural philosophy.

It is clearly proved that the high cultivation of the intellect is favorable to protracted usefulness and long life. Highly educated men and women, on an average, live longer, and enjoy more even and pure health, than those of little or no culture. The mind is life—the very essence of life, and where there is most of mind, other things equal, there is most of that which imparts life and vigor to the body. It is believed that thousands in this country annually die some twenty years sooner than they would, had they bestowed a higher cultivation upon their intellect. We must be more intellectual and less sensual—more of that which dies not, and less of that which dies—if we would invigorate and prolong whatever of us is immortal. It is said to be better to wear out than to rust out. The truth is, after all, very few in this country can claim the honor of wearing out, intellectually. But hundreds are daily dying through mental rust. Why does the man of business languish and die so soon on retiring to enjoy in idleness his gains? Just because the life-giving power, the mind, ceases to act. Rust, stagnation, disease, gloomy spirits and death, must inevitably come. The perpetual tug and excitement of business, as it is done in this country, frequently overtasks and breaks down the mind; not so much by the intellectual labor, as by the excitement attending it. Now the study of the languages, sciences, &c., and the putting forth of the mental energies in the form of written thoughts for the world, afford just that kind of mental effort which is most favorable to long and vigorous life. Accordingly, literary and scientific men are, as a class, long-lived. If our females would give up their dissipations, renounce their novels and their indolence, put away their inglorious rust, and their vainglorious excitements together—and rise higher on the scale of intellectual thinking, spiritual beings, they might secure to themselves and to their children a far more healthy, youthful, prolonged earthly existence, than most of them now enjoy.

Agricultural.

Fine Fruit.

Cooper Apple.—This is the best Fall apple for my soil and situation, that I have any experience with. I have the Rambo, Pound Royal or Holland Pippin, Marietta Spitzenberger, and some other varieties of fall fruit, but neither the boys nor the old folks will touch any other apple when they can get the Cooper. It is good from the first of October to the first of December, but will keep a month longer, though not without considerable abatement of its flavor. The tree is a great bearer, and the apples large and perfect. I have tasted two specimens recently, of the Gravenstien of Germany, which Mr. Downing says "is one of the finest apples of the north of Europe," and according to my taste and judgment the Cooper is as far ahead of it, as the German apple is of the herd of common seedlings. The Cooper is not described in any of the books, under that name, nor any other that I can see; but it is in the list of grafts sent out from Connecticut in 1795, to Wm. R. Putnam, still residing in Washington county*. And the principal reason, no doubt, why it has not had a more extensive cultivation, is owing to the rage among fruit culturists and nurserymen for eastern or imported kinds.

White Doyenne Pear.—This Pear is called the Virgalieu at New York, the St. Michael at Boston, and the Butter Pear at Philadelphia. It is among the very best autumn pears, although this year, from some cause, the fruit is comparatively imperfect in taste as well as most other kinds. It is the only grafted variety, out of several sorts that I planted eighteen years ago, which is proof against the blight. And for its power to resist that fatal disease, as well as for its excellent flavor, and great bearing qualities, it cannot be too highly prized.

We have ascertained to our own satisfaction, from a number of experiments, that plethory, or an over charge of fluids, is at least the remote† cause of blight in pear trees. We planted, eighteen years since, a number of 'seedling' pear stocks on poor, hard, dry points or banks, at different elevations from the water course, where they have had but slow growth, and there has not yet been a case of blight amongst them, while the very same kinds, to the number of ten or a dozen, planted on rich soil, where they had a rapid growth, all disappeared with the blight, some twelve years since. My old Doyenne tree is in the richest situation I could put it, but its growth is slow, thus securing from the character of the tree, the same principle the others do from soil and situation. Then, according to those experiments, if we would guard against the blight, we must put our trees in soils that will give them but a moderate growth, or select such kinds as the White Doyenne, or Seckle, which are slow growers, naturally, even in rich soil.

C. SPRINGER.

*See Downing's Horticulturist for April '47.

†Whether it be the frosts acting on this overcharge of fluids, attending a rapid growth, according to Mr. Downing's theory of "frozen sap blight;" or whether it be the scorching beams of the sun falling immediately on the plethoric branches of the tree, or some other agent of nature, which is the 'immediate' cause of this fatal malady, we do not understand the subject well enough to determine.

Children's Department.

The Boy and Man.

BY REV. JOHN S. C. ABBOTT.

A few days ago, there was, in the city of Boston, a portrait painter, whose name was Mr. Copley. He did not succeed well in his business, and concluded to go to England, to try his fortunes there. He had a little son, whom he took with him, whose name was John Singleton Copley.

John was a very studious boy and made such rapid progress in his studies that his father sent him to College. There he applied himself so closely to his books, and became so distinguished a scholar, that his instructors predicted that he would make a very eminent man.

After he had graduated, he studied law. And when he entered upon the practice of his profession his mind was so richly disciplined by his previous diligence, he almost immediately gained celebrity. One or two cases of great importance being entrusted to him, he managed them with so much wisdom and skill as to attract the admiration of the whole British nation.

The King and his cabinet, seeing what a learned man he was, and how much influence he had acquired, felt it to be important to secure his services for the government. They, therefore, raised him from one post of honor to another, till he was created Lord High Chancellor of England, the very highest post of honor to which any subject can attain; So that John Singleton Copley is now Lord Lyndhurst, Lord High Chancellor of England. About sixty years ago, he was a little boy in Boston. His father was a poor portrait painter, hardly able to get his daily bread. Now, John is at the head of the nobility of England; one of the most distinguished men in talent and power, in the House of Lords, with reverence and respect by the whole civilized world. This is the reward of industry. The studious boy becomes the useful and respected man.

Had John S. Copley spent his school-boy days in idleness, he probably would have passed his manhood in poverty and shame. But he studied in school, when other young men were wasting their time; he adopted for his motto, 'Ultra pregere,' (Press onward,)—and how rich has been his reward.

You, my young friends, are now laying the foundation for your future life. You are every day at school, deciding the question, whether you will be useful and respected in life, or whether your manhood shall be passed in mourning over the follies of mis-spent boyhood.

Early Piety.

There was a young man, well-known to the writer, who had very great talents. He could speak on almost every subject but one. He read many books, knew many languages, and thought a great deal on all he heard and saw. Yet strange to say, he never or seldom spoke of God. He never loved, nor sought him. He had finished his education, he had travelled to distant lands, and had gathered great stores of learning, when consumption came. It pleased God, in his mercy, to grant him a long period of illness, and in the early stage of his disease, God taught him the uselessness of all the learning which he had spent his life in gaining, compared with the knowledge revealed in Scripture, the knowledge of the one true God, and of Jesus Christ, his Son, the only Saviour of sinners. Now, his high intellect and proud heart were subdued. He bowed humbly before God, and, in the meek disposition of a little child, prayed for the teaching of God's spirit, and God heard and answered his prayers. One day just before his death, a friend was reading to him the twenty-third Psalm. The dying young man listened as he read these words,—"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and staff they comfort me," Psalm. xxiii. 4. "Stay," said the invalid, "stay; yes, God is with me, but, I think, the valley would not have been so dark had I sought him earlier!"

Railroad Accident.—On Friday afternoon, a woman named McGuire, about sixty-five years old, was killed on the Reading railroad on the outskirts of Philadelphia. She was gathering coal on the track.

The Storm.—At Philadelphia on Friday, the rain flooded all the streets in the lower part of the city, and caused the tide to rise to an unusual height, overflowing a number of the wharves.—Saturday, the wind was high and cold.

Religious Intelligence.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Paintersville, Greene co., O., Oct. 20, 1847.

Br. Bassett: I arrived on my field of labor the Sabbath week after the rise of Conference, and have found things in quite a prosperous condition. The classes appear to be in a good state of organization, and peace and brotherly love appear to reign throughout our borders.* The church is looking, praying, and I trust, living for prosperity this Conference year, which may be our happy lot for Christ's sake.

Our Presidential visit to this circuit will be expected at this place, (Paintersville) on the 6th of November. Preaching to commence at 11 o'clock, A. M. Our first quarterly meeting for this (Port William) circuit, will be held at East Grove meeting house, commencing on Saturday, the 13th of November, at 11 o'clock, A. M. We request the assistance of Brs. Dobbins, Hughey, Channel, White, Rose, Evans, Warrington, and Ewans, with all others who can make it convenient to attend. Come, brethren, and help us.

W. G. FOWLER.

* That is the way for a minister to make allusions to his predecessors.—[Ed. W. R.

WABASH DISTRICT.

Miami Reserve, Ia., Oct. 12, 1847.

Br. Bassett: Through the mercy of God, I am still spared in the land of the living, though somewhat destitute and sorrowful. I have had a great deal of affliction in my family. I have lost, first a daughter, fifteen days old, and then my dear companion, Lucinda Jane Alter, left the shores af time, September 20th, 1847, aged 35 years.

She has gone, I doubt not, to the climes of the blest,
Where all sorrow shall cease, and the weary find rest.

We closed the fourth quarterly meeting of Cicero circuit, last Sabbath evening, at Brother Kyger's, in the Miami Reserve. We had a very interesting meeting. Several came forward to implore the assistance of the people of God, by their prayers, and six united themselves with the Church. The prospect appears more flattering than ever before in this part of the country.—We are looking forward for better seasons. May the great Head of the Church hasten the time.

JOHN ALTER.

Conference Proceedings.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

Members of the Conference.

MINISTERS.	DELEGATES.
W. W. Paul,	Jno. Ewbank,
S. Morrison,	W. B. Campbell,
T. S. Stilwell*	L. Barton,
G. Wheatley,	W. C. Davis,
Thos. Shipp,	J. Burton,
H. Collings,	A. Empson,
J. Edmiston,	A. Collins,
B. Wilson,*	O. Barker,
J. M. Pettycrew,*	D. T. Harrison
D. Hanna,	Wm. Smith,
S. Solomon,*	W M Chambers,
H. Brenton,*	Lewis Ellis,
P. Clingler,	Abner Lines,
J. Sevier,
J. D. Madearis,
G. Baxter.

*Those having this mark were absent.

Exhibit of Conference Steward.

Cts. & St's.	Ministers names	amount received.
President,	THOS. SHIPP,	$34,43
Tanners Creek Ct.	W. W. Paul,	94,50
Madison, "	G. Wheatley,	18,35
Charleston, "	D. Hanna,	satisfied.
Sugar Creek, "	J. Edmiston,	77,50
Flat Rock, "	C. H. Williams.	45,23
White River, "	W. B. Evans, 5mo.	50,72
" "	Wm. Barnet, 7mo.	104,60
" "	J D Madearis, ass't.	no claim
Mill Creek, "	H. Collings, 6mo.	48,30
Washington, "	B. Wilson,	20,00
" "	T S Stilwell, ass't.	no claim
Stotts Creek, "	G. W. Cain, 3mo.	20,45
White Lick, "	S. Solomon,	14,58
Laughery miss. "	J. M. Pettycrew,	no report
Driftwood, "	James Sevier, 6mo.	50,00
Conf. Missionary	P Clingler,	29,49

Conference Collection.

Re'd from Madison ct.	$1,65	paid to P. Clingler,	$4,20
" " " Logan creek ct.	10,95	G W Cain	4,20
where Conference held,		B. Wilson,	4,20
	$12,60		$12,60

JOHN EWBANK, Conf. Steward.

APPOINTMENTS OF THE INDIANA CONF. M. P. CHURCH, 1847.

President, THOMAS SHIPP.

Tanner's Creek Ct.—James Edmiston.
Madison Ct.—to be supplied.
Liberty Ct.—Geo. W. Cain.
Sugar Creek Ct.—Harvy Collings.
Flatrock Ct. —to be supplied.
White River Ct.—Wm. Barnet.
Mill Creek Ct.—Henry Brenton.
Washington Ct.—James Sevier, T. S. Stilwell sup. ass't.
Stotts Creek Ct.—P. Clingler.
White Lick Ct.—J. D. Madearis.
Driftwood Miss.—G. Wheatley.
Ottervillage "—D. Hanna.
Conference Missionary,—S. Morrison.
Home Missionary,—G. Baxter.

Transferred to the Ohio District, Wm B. Evans, & C. H. Williams.

Transferred to the Wabash District, A. L. Collings.

To be employed, J. K. Dawson, and I. Gardner.

Left without appointments at their own request, B. Wilson, S. Solomon.

The case of W. W. Paul referred to the next Annual Conference, he not being present.

Referred for investigation, J. M. Pettycrew.

THOS. SHIPP, S. MORRISON, H. COLLINGS, J. BURTON, J. EWBANK, } Stationing Committee.

Report of Committee on Boundaries.

Cts. & Stations.		No. of Members.
Tanner's Creek	Ct.	90
Madison	"	100
Liberty	"	133
Sugar Creek	"	340
Flat Rock	"	138
White River	"	226
Mill Creek	"	158
Washington	"	150
Stotts Creek	"	140
White Lick	"	60
Ottervillage Miss.		20
Driftwood Miss.		45

Madison circuit changed so as to embrace Madison city, thence with the Lexington road to Green Brier, thence with the old Charleston road to Charleston, by New Washington, thence to Silver Creek by the road to Salem, thence with said creek to the Ohio River.

Charleston circuit changed, to be called Liberty circuit, to embrace all that part of Charleston and Madison circuits not embraced in the Madison circuit, and Ottervillage Mission.

Laughery Mission changed, and called Ottervillage Mission to embrace all west of Laughery Creek, to the road leading from Lawrenceburgh to Napoleon, thence to Xenia, thence to Vernon, thence with the Versailles road to Graham Creek, thence with the Paper Mill road to Pressburgh, thence to Madison circuit.

Received into the Itinerancy.

Wm. Barnet, G. W. Cain, I. Gardner, A. L. Collings, J. K. Dawson.

George Baxter, returned the transfer he took last year and was recognized a member of this Conference.

Elected to Elder's orders, James Sevier.

Elected to Deacon's orders, Wm. Barnet, G. W. Cain, I Gardner.

The following Brethren were constituted district Committee, Samuel Morrison, Harvy Collings, Thos. Alexander, Ministers, and Wm. C. Davis, John Burton, and Lewis Ellis; Laymen.

After a pleasant and interesting session of five days Conference adjourned on Monday evening, October 4th, 1847, to meet next session on the first Wednesday in October 1848, in Pleasant Grove Meeting-house, in Putnam county, Ia., 10 o'clock A. M.

S. MORRISON, WM. SMITH, } Publishing Committee.

(Remainder next week.)

Reported for the Western Recorder.

NORTH ILLINOIS CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: The North Illinois An. Conference, held its fourth session pursuant to appointment. It was well attended. The blessings of Providence were poured upon those in attendance in a powerful manner. It was a harmonious reviving time. All went to their charges refreshed and much encouraged. I send the following statistics for the purposes of your Annual Register. DANIEL BAGLEY.

Houses of worship, 4 supposed worth	$2,100
Parsonages none.
Stations none.
Circuits and Missions,	17
Number of Itinerants,	24
Unstationed Ministers and Preachers,	10
Number of Members,	550

LIST OF APPOINTMENTS.

P. J. STRONG, President.

Rufus Richardson, Conference Missionary.
Bureau Ct.—John Brook.
Princeton Ct.—R. Rice.
Fox River Ct.—G. S. Peirson.
Somonauk Ct.—F. N. Witherspoon, Supt. Ezra Comby Asst.
Rock River Ct.—D. Young.
Lafayette Ct.—M. Jared.
Cherry Grove Ct.—D. Bagley.
Honey Creek Ct.—Wm. E. Martin.
Canton Ct.—S. Dilly.
Tazwell Ct.—J. L. Nesmith.
Magnolia Ct.—J. Fowler.
Troy Grove Miss.—Wm. H. Miller.
Plumb Creek Miss.—B. C. Johnson.
Wisconsin Miss.—Cochran.
Andover Miss.—Hiram Wright.
Mason Miss.—D. Beeman.
Buffalo Miss.—to be supplied.

A. Woolston, W. F. West, Wm. B. Jordam, } In the hands of the President.

Edward Mercer, John Williamson, } Superannuated.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 28, 1847.

ANNUAL REGISTER, 1848.

This publication is now out of press. Those who have ordered parcels, will, we trust, soon receive them. Meanwhile, every subscriber for the "Western Recorder," who pays $2 in advance for Vol. 9, shall receive a copy by mail.—We sell them this year at $3 per hundred,—50 cents per dozen.

Exchanges.—Brethren of the press to the east of this point, who favor us with their exchange, will greatly oblige us by having their papers directed for us to Putnam, instead of Zanesville.

Sacred Melodeon.—We are requested to state that this work is kept for sale at the Book Store of George Conclin, Cincinnati. By the way, we have recently received for sale at this office, an additional supply.

☞Our Philadelphia correspondent has our thanks for the interest he takes in behalf of our paper. We intend pursuing his recommendation.

☞The Quarterly-meeting of the Methodist E. Church, in this place, will be held on next Saturday and Sabbath.

Rev. T. H. Stockton.—We learn that this Brother has accepted a call to serve the Sixth Street Methodist Protestant Church, Cincinnati, and is making his arrangements to remove to that city immediately.

Another Catholic Church.—We see it stated that Bishop Purcell has purchased a beautiful lot on the hill at Springfield, Ohio, for the erection of a church. We know who ought to have had that lot. But the Catholic brethren do not sleep.

Disaster at Nashville.—On the 12th inst. during a violent thunder storm, the electric fluid descended and struck the Magazine in the north west part of the city of Nashville, Tenn. A tremendous, and most destructive explosion immediately ensued. A number of lives were lost, we do not learn how many. Many buildings were shattered to fragments; it is said that as many as one hundred buildings were more or less dilapidated. The Nashville C. Advocate states that our old friend Henkle, one of the editors is among the sufferers, having had his house much injured, and much of his furniture totally ruined. We are glad to infer the personal safety of himself and family.

African Methodist E. Church.—The Ohio Conference of the African M. E. Church, has just closed its session in Zanesville. We believe the brethren have had an interesting time, and that a considerable religious interest was excited during the occasion. We have had a conversation with two or three of their number, and have been gratified to receive some items of information in reference to their branch of the church. We were informed that the African M. E. Church embraces nearly 40,000 members. They have six Annual Conferences, viz: Baltimore Conference, including Maryland, District of Columbia, Delaware and parts of Pennsylvania and Virginia; Philadelphia Conference, embracing part of Pennsylvania and New Jersey; New York Conference, comprising New York and the New England States; Ohio Conference, including Ohio, Michigan, and Western Pennsylvania; Indiana Conference, embracing Indiana, Ill., Kentucky, Missouri, and Tennessee; and the Canada Conference, in Canada. They have two bishops, who preside in their An. Conferences, Morris Brown, and Wm. Paul Quinn. They had a third bishop, Waters by name, who died at Baltimore in April last. We are gratified to learn that our brethren of color have undertaken to establish a Literary Institution. It is to be located in Franklin county, a few miles from Columbus. Success to their enterprise.

Since the above was in type, we have had a call from Rev. M. J. Wilkinson, member of the Ohio Conference, the authorized agent of the Literary Institution, on the part of the Conference. He exhibited to us his testimonials of character and of his appointment, which are entirely satisfactory. One bears the signatures of Rev. Dr. Hoge, of Columbus, and Hon. A. S. Decker, Mayor of that city. Another, the signatures of Hon. C. Delano, and Hon. J. R. Giddings, members of Congress. The subscription book of Mr. Wilkinson, was also submitted to our inspection. It gives evidence of great industry on the part of the Agent, and shows also that his success has been quite encouraging.—He has taken several extensive tours, for the purpose of obtaining subscriptions and donations in behalf of the contemplated school. What has been obtained is for the most part contributed by the people of color, in numerous places in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.—It is but recently that he has begun to call upon friends among the whites for aid, and some considerable amount has been obtained from them.

The property which has been procured for the purposes of the Institution lies in Franklin county, Ohio, about 12 miles west of Columbus, and two miles north of the National Road. It was bought of L. Starling, Esq., of Columbus, Clerk of Franklin county. It embraces a tract of 172 acres of excellent land, with some improvement. For this property the sum of $1720 is to be paid, with interest. Of this, three annual instalments have already been paid, and there remains but one, to be paid in the year 1848, which with the interest amounts to rising $700. It is the object of the Agent, and which he is zealously prosecuting, to obtain the amount, against it shall come due. He will visit various places in the duties of his agency, and present the claims of the object before the friends of a neglected portion of community. Being fully convinced of his integrity, as well as his qualifications for the trust confided to him, and also feeling a deep interest in the object in which he is engaged, we commend him to the friendly attention of all upon whom he may call. And we trust that a generous community will liberally aid in the enterprise, that our colored friends may be enabled promptly to meet the payment hereafter coming due on the property, & to establish an institution of learning, which will greatly and permanently promote the enlightenment & improvement of that portion of community.

Death of our minister to Caina.—The Saturday Courier announces the death of Hon. Alexander Everett, the American Commissioner to China. He died in Canton on the 29th of June, having arrived in that city with his family, but a few days before. The loss of Mr. Everett will be felt in an extensive circle in this country. He was formerly for many years a distinguished member of Congress from Massachusetts.

To kill fleas.—Successful, but bad experiment.—At Nashville Tennessee, recently a man working in a cabinet shop was annoyed by these troublesome insects. To get rid of them, he set fire to shavings strewed over the earthen flooring. The fire communicated to the buildings, which was consumed with the fleas, and before its progress could be arrested some seven or eight other buildings were also destroyed. Better try some other plan, next time.

Carnage—Carnage!—The Baltimore Sun of the 22d inst. contains a list of the killed, wounded and missing, in the recent engagements near the walls of the city of Mexico. The list fills nearly three columns in small type, and solid! Total killed, wounded and missing, 1623. And yet, this tale of blood is not told! When and where it shall close, Heaven only can divine.

Lectures.—We learn by the Columbian Fountain that Rev. L. R. Reese, is delivering a course of Sabbath evening lectures on the evidences of revealed religion, in the 9th street M. P. Church, Washington, D. C.

More D. D's.—The degree of D. D. was conferred upon Rev. R. M Lee, Editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, and Rev. Samuel W. Spear, of Natchez, Miss., by the Transylvania University, at its last commencement.

Christian Society of Brotherly love.—Br. W. S. Stockton of Philadelphia informs us in a private letter, that this society is "coming on bravely." Frequent accessions to its number are received. He thinks it is "just the thing needed."

Saturday Courier.—Much has been said in all the newspapers but ours, in reference to a misunderstanding and legal suit between the heirs of one of the former publishers, and Mr. M'Maken his surviving partner, and present publisher of the Courier. We see that that popular sheet holds on, the even tenor of its way, as though nothing had happened. Its ample pages, are weekly embellished with neat engravings, and it looks, for all the world, like a very prosperous affair. Philadelphia, Andrew M'Maken, $2 per year, two copies for $5.

Great Cruelty.

The Baltimore correspondent of the National Era, Dr. Snodgrass, in the last number of that paper, relates the following merciless outrages, perpetrated recently in that vicinity. They must be of rare occurrence in Maryland, and we doubt not as abhorrent to the feeling of its citizens generally, as to our own and those of our readers.

The more merciful inhabitants of a portion of Baltimore county have had their feelings greatly harrowed, recently, by brutal cruelties perpetrated upon certain colored people in their neighborhood. A number of slaves, owned by one of the Delegates elect to the Legislature, lately absconded, whereupon, the last remaining slave of his next neighbor was accused of aiding them. Although there was not a particle of proof, his master hired a couple of constables to arrest him at his work, handcuff him, and convey him to this city for sale—probably glad of a pretext therefor, as often is the case! He himself took care to be close at hand; and the colored man's spirit refusing to submit to the degradation proposed, though perfectly willing, as he declared, to go with the constables, was fallen upon by one from whom his undeviating good conduct deserved far different treatment, and beaten in the most awful manner; so much so, that his life was almost despaired of for a time! Having been thus subdued by his tormenters, he was brought to town, and sold to one of those slave dealers to whom bloody scars are nothing new. But the vengeance of Slaveocratic Tyranny did not stop here. They next accused a free colored man in the neighborhood of aiding the escape of the fugitives, and dragged him off to a magistrate. There not being sufficient proof against him, the magistrate refused to commit him to prison. Of course, he now stood honorably discharged; but not so, said his heartless persecutors! They dragged him to another magistrate, who proved supple enough to commit him, in accordance with their wishes, and he was dragged on to town, & lodged in jail, to await his trial. His case has awakened a great deal of sympathy, and he will be provided with such counsel as the emergency requires. Little doubt is expressed by those conversant with the facts as to his acquittal. His trial will be a seaching ordeal for those who have undertaken thus to victimize him, to appease their fiendish wrath. J. E. S.

British Conference.—We have seen an abstract of the Annual Conference of the Wesleyan Methodists, held in August last. They report a decrease within the last year in Great Britain, Ireland, and foreign stations, of 4749. The far greater portion of this decrease has taken place in Ireland.

American Pulpit.—The October number of this useful work has come to hand. It contains, 1. Sermon by Rev. Dr. Bates, Congregational minister of Dudley, Massachusetts, on Spiritual Conversion. 2. Sermon by Rev. Sidney Dean, M. E. minister of Norwich Falls, Conn., on the Past, Present, & Future State of the Church. 3. Three sketches of Sermons. 4. A ministerial miscellany. The Pulpit is a cheap as well as good work. $1 per annum, in advance. Address Samuel Chism, Worcester, Mass.

Ladies' National Magazine.—We have received the November number of this publication. It contains a good mezzotint, representing Christiana and Mercy in the Valley of the Shadow of Death, and the usual Fashion plate. C. J. Peterson, publisher, Philadelphia, $2 per annum.

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: I was pleased to see in your paper, an article upon the propriety of the congregation joining in singing, as a part of worship.—I fully concur with you, that it ought to be insisted on, as a duty; and am pleased with most of the observations you made upon the subject, with regard to the duty of choirs and congregations, but there is one opinion expressed, with which I disagree, viz: "We do not hold the choirs responsible for this fault in congregations, and the train of evils it sometimes produces." It is true it might admit of an argument, whether they were originally the persons to be blamed, as derilict in duty. Certainly pastors who neglect to enforce the duty of both choir and congregation uniting, or connive at the usurpation of the choristers, or the Ruling Elders or other officers, whose business it is to take care "that all things be done decently and in order," suffer persons, making no pretensions to religion, to lead in that part of worship, are to be blamed; but my observation leads me to the conclusion, that the choirs (or the leaders of them,) desire to exclude the congregation from participating in this part of worship; and set tunes, with which the congregation are unacquainted, for that purpose, and change them so frequently, that they may not interfere with the melody, by their awkward performance. It is no uncommon thing, for those who lead singing, openly to avow their wishes, that their music should not be spoiled by the singing of the congregation; at least such has been the case with several congregations where I have been acquainted. If pious and talented persons could always be found to lead in singing, such things would be rare; but such is not the fact, and the singing is frequently entrusted to those who are illy qualified to sing the praises of our Creator and Redeemer "With the spirit and with the understanding also." One remedy appears to me, to be, the frequent recurrence to the subject by the pastors of the churches, enlightening the minds of the whole congregation. Let such tunes as the choir desire to introduce, be submitted to the pastor, elders and other officers, and when approved of, let the congregation be notified that such tunes will be added to the list of those from which selections for worship will be made, and then, if the congregations refuse to acquaint themselves with them, they will be without excuse; but as it is, there seems to me, to be great abuse of the privileges we enjoy, and little hope of a reformation.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

Putnam O., Oct. 25, 1847.

News of the Week.

The Unsuccessful Negotiation.

The result of the late negotiation with Mexico, every American heart, we should think, that is not saturated with the cruelest depravity, must deeply deplore. Where the blame of the failure rests, it is the business of every American, as a responsible party in this war, candidly and impartially to inquire. As religious journalists, and as ministers of the gospel we feel it our duty to meddle with politics just so far as politics meddles with the dearest interests of humanity and morality which we are set to guard. That we ought to surrender the citadel of virtue to the demand of depraved politicians, is an arrogance and absurdity to which, God helping us, we will not give place, no not for an hour. In remonstrating against this war—its inception and prosecution—we are pleading the cause of God and religion—a cause infinitely above that of political party. With party schemes we have nothing to do. Were President Polk and his cabinet the only responsible agents in this business, we might leave the duty of remonstrating to those who have access to them. But this war is the work of the nation, which must bear the guilt and divine retribution it is likely to incur—a guilt and retribution in which others than the members of a single party will be obliged to share. It becomes every one of us to look well to our ways and see that we have no responsible participation in it.—Watchman of the Valley.

The Trist Negotiation.

The National Intelligencer of the 4th instant, contains the documents relating to the late negotiations between Mr. Trist and the Mexican Commissioners. The American Project, after declaring peace and providing for the exchange of prisoners, and the evacuation of all captured places, &c., defines the boundary line as follows:—

"Art. 4. The dividing line between the two Republics will commence in the Gulf of Mexico, three leagues from land in front of the mouth of the Rio Grande; thence along the middle of said river to a point where it touches the southern line of New Mexico; thence westward along the southern limit of New Mexico, to the south-west angle of the same; thence northward along the western line of New Mexico to where the same is cut by the first branch of the river Gila; if it be not cut by any branch of said river, then to a point in said line nearest the said branch; and thence in a direct line to the same, and downward by the middle of said branch of the said river Gila, until it empties into the Rio Colorado; and thence downwards by the middle of the Colorado and by the middle of the Gulf of California to the Pacific Ocean."

This includes all between the Nueces and the Rio Grande, New Mexico and both Californias. In consideration of this the United States agreed to abandon all indemnity for the expenses of the war, and to pay the indemnities, claimed for Mexican spoliations, prior to the 13th of May, 1846, not to exceed Three Millions of Dollars, in addition to those already ascertained by former conventions. The United States also acquires the right of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

The Mexican Commissioners were Herrera, Monjardiu, and Garay, who were authorized merely to hear and report the American propositions.

The basis, upon which the Ministerial Council proposed that the negotiations might proceed, included,

1. A recognition of the Independence of Texas, for an indemnity, confining it to its old limits and excluding the territory between the Nueces and the Rio Grande.

2. The withdrawal of all forces to be a condition, precedent, to all negotiation as to further acquisition of Mexican Territory.

3. A permission to make Upper California a subject of negotiation, but a refusal of a line upon the parallel of 26 degrees.

7. An indemnification for the port of San Francisco, and for all damages and expenses of the war.

8. An engagement on the part of the United States not to permit Slavery in any new territory acquired.

9. A guarantee of the treaty by some third power.

This is a summary of the provisions, which were twenty-one in all.

Mr. Trist's Project being considered, the Ministers addded to the preceding instructions a refusal of the right of way across the Isthmus, and of a remission of the duties upon goods imported, during the American occupation.

The Mexican Commissioners threw up their powers, on the ground of their inadequacy.

The New Orleans Picayune gives the substance of the Mexican ultimatum. They offered the following boundary:

"Art. 4. The dividing line between the two Republics shall commence in the Gulf of Mexico, three leagues from land, in front, from the southern mouth of the Bay of Corpus Christi, to run in a straight line through said bay to the mouth of the Rio de las Nueces; to follow thence the course of that river to its source; from the source of the Nueces a straight line will be traced to the actual frontier of New Mexico in the east south-east part. It will thence follow the actual frontier of New Mexico by the east, north and west at New Mexico, until it meets latitude 37, which will serve as the boundary of the two Republics, from the point at which it touches the frontier of New Mexico to the Pacific. The Government of Mexico agrees not to found any new establishment or colonies in the space of land which lies between the Rio Grande and the Nueces."

This was to be in consideration of a sum of money, a release of all claims upon Mexico, an agreement on our part to make no further annexations of Mexican territory, and a payment of damage suffered in the war on their part. The manner of the breaking up of the negotiation is not told.

The Negotiation.

From the correspondence relating to the late unfortunate negotiation for peace, we select the following letter from the Mexican Commissioners, submitting to Mr. Trist the ultimatum of the Ministerial Council:

To His Excellency Senor D. Nicholas P. Trist, Commissioner, with full powers of the Government of the United States, near the Government of the Republic of Mexico.

House of Alfaro, at Chapaultepec, September 6, 1847.

The undersigned, Commissioners of the Mexican Republic, to form with you an agreement of peace, in placing in your hands the counter project which they have formed in accordance with the last instructions of their Government, deem it opportune to accompany it with the observations which this note contains, which which will serve to show more clearly the pacific disposition of Mexico in the contest which unfortunately divides both countries.

Article 4 of the project which you were pleased to deliver to us on the evening of the 27th ult., and which was discussed at our previous conferences, imports the cession of part of Mexico. 1st. The State of Texas. 2d. Of the territory without the limits of the said State, which extends to the left bank of the Bravo and to the southern boundary of New Mexico. 3d. All New Mexico. 4th. Of the two Californias.

The war which now exists has been caused solely on account of the State of Texas, to which the Republic of North America presents as a title the act of the same State, by which it annexed itself to the North American Confederacy, after having proclaimed its independence of Mexico. The Mexican Republic agreeing (as we have manifested to you that it does) on account of the owing indemnity, to the pretensions of the Government at Washington to the territory of Texas, the cause of the war has disappeared, and it should cease since all the reasons for continuing it have ceased to exist. In regard to the other articles comprehended in the 4th article of your project, until now the Republic of North America has urged no title to it, nor did we believe it possible that any would be alleged. It, then, could not acquire them but by right of conquest, or by that which would result from sale or cession, to which it would now force Mexico. But as we are persuaded that the republic of Washington would not only absolutely repel, but would hold in odium the first of these titles; and as, on the other hand, it would be a new thing that war should be made upon a people for the simple reason that it refuses to sell a territory which its neighbor wishes to purchase; we hope from the justice of the Government and people of North America, that the great modification which we have to propose of the cession of territory (without the State of Texas) which is claimed in the said article 4, will not be considered a motive for continuing the war which the worthy general of the North American forces has justly characterized as unnatural.

In our conferences we have declared to you that Mexico cannot cede the belt of land comprehended between the left bank of the Bravo and the right of the Nueces. The reason of this is, not only the full certainty that the stated territory never has belonged to the State of Texas, but that it is of great value, considered in itself. It is that this zone with the Bravo at its back forms the natural frontier of Mexico, as much in a military as in a commercial point of view; and of no people should it be claimed, nor should any people consent to abandon such a frontier. But in order to remove all cause of dissention for the future, the Government of Mexico binds itself not to found new settlements or establish new colonies in the space between the two rivers; in this manner preserving it in the depopulated state in which it now exists, presenting equal security to both Republics. The preservation of this territory is according to our instructions a condition sine qua non of peace. Sentiments of honor and delicacy (which your noble character will cause you to estimate properly) more than a calculation of interest, prevent our government from consenting to the dismemberment of New Mexico. On this point we believe it to be superfluous to add anything to what we have already stated to you in our conferences.

The cession of Lower California, little profitable to North America, offers great embarrassments, considering the position of that peninsula, opposite our coasts of Sonoro, from which it is separated by the Gulf of Cortes.

You have given to our observations on this subject their true value, and we have learned with satisfaction that you have been convinced by them.

Besides the preservation of Lower California, it would be necessary for Mexico to retain a portion of the Upper; otherwise, that peninsula would remain without land communication with the remainder of the Republic, which would always be a great embarrassment, especially for a non maritime power such as Mexico. The cession of the part of Upper California offered by our Government (for the compensation) will not bring to the United States merely fertile lands and intact mineral wealth, but presents the advantage of an uninterrupted communication with its territories of Oregon. The wisdom of the government of Washington, and the energy of the American people, will know how to draw abundant fruits from the acquisition which we now offer them.

In Article 8 of your project, the cession of a free passage by the Isthmus of Tahauntepec to the southern sea is claimed in favor of the North Americans. We have verbally stated to you that some years have elapsed since the government gave a privilege of this kind to a particular individual, who afterwards transferred it with the authority of the same government to English subjects, of whose right Mexico cannot dispose.—You will not complain, therefore, that in this point we cannot accede to the desires of your government.

We have entered into this ingenuous explanation of the motives of the Republic for not ceding all the territory beyond the boundaries of Texas which is required of it, because we desire that the Government and North American people should be convinced that our partial negative does not proceed from sentiments of aversion generated by the events of this war, or by what it has caused Mexico to suffer, but only from considerations dictated by reason and justice; and which would equally influence it at any time with the most friendly people, and in the midst of relations of the strictest amity. The other alterations which you will find in our counter project are of less importance, and we believe that to them you will find no important objection. The contents of Article 12 have been already spoken of in your country; we flatter ourselves that your Government will not refuse to contract an obligation so conformable to honor, and to the harmony in which two neighboring people should live.

Peace between the two countries will be most solemnly established, if a foreign power, (England,) which has in the present contest nobly interposed its good offices, would now consent to guaranty the faithful observance of the treaty which may be entered into. The Government of Mexico understands that it would be convenient to solicit this guarantee.

Our Government has commanded us to recommend to you that your decision upon the counter project which we have the honor to submit to you, should be communicated within three days.

The salutary work of peace cannot, in our opinion, come to a happy termination, if each one of the contending parties should not resolve to abandon some of its original pretensions.—This has in all cases happened, and all nations have not hesitated in such cases to make great sacrifices to extinguish the desolating flame of war.—Mexico and the United States have especial reasons for acting in this manner. Not without sorrow ought we to confess that we are giving to humanity scandalous examples of two Christian people, of two Republics, in the view of all the monarchies, who, for a dispute concerning boundaries, mutually do themselves all the injury that is possible, when we have more land than is sufficient to populate and cultivate in the beautiful hemisphere in which Providence has cast our lot. We venture to recommend these considerations to your Excellency before you make any difinitive resolution on our propositions. We do ourselves the honor to offer to you our attention and respect. [Signed]

JOSE JOAQUIN DE HERRERA,
BERNARDO COUTO,
IGNACIO MORA Y. VILLAMIL,
MIGUEL ARTRISTAIN.

From Bicknell's Reporter.

The Valley of the Mississippi--Its Extent and Territory.

A deeply interesting article descriptive of the Valley of the Mississippi, was published in the last number of De Bow's Commercial Register. It is too long for our columns, but a brief abstract of its facts and statements will be read with interest. The writer sets out by describing what is included in the Mississippi basin or valley. Taking a position on the Gulf of Mexico, at the mouth of the Atchafalaya river in Louisiana, the perimeter or boundray-line will run north-westward to the 40th degree of latitude in the Rocky Mountains, from whence issue the sources of the Platte, Rio Grande, and Colorado; from this point along the Rocky Mountains, to the sources of Missouri river to the head of Red river branch of the Assiniboin; around the sources of the Mississippi proper to the head of the Kankakee, branch of Illinois river; between the confluents of the Canadian sea and those of Ohio, to the extreme source of Allegheny river; along the dividing line of water source between the sources of streams flowing towards the Atlantic and into the Ohio; between the confluents of Mobile and Tennessee river; between the sources discharged into the Mississippi & those of Mobile & Pearl rivers, to the mouth of Mississippi river; from the mouth of the Mississippi, to the outlet of Atchafalaya. Length of the whole outline 6100 miles. Any good map will show these points.

EXTENT OF THE MISSISSIPPI VALLE

	Square miles.
Valley of the Ohio,	200,000
" " Mississippi Proper,	180,000
" " Missouri,	500,000
" " Lower Mississippi,	330,000
Area,	1,210,000

The population of these vast territories was, in 1800, 482,777, having increased about one and a half per cent, per annum since 1790. In 1810 it amounted to 1,090,158, having doubled in ten years; in 1820, 2,217,464, having doubled again; in 1830, 3,672.569, or about seven to the square mile; in 1840, 5,302,918, or ten to the square mile. In these items the western portions of New York, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, are not included. If they be added for 1840, the total western population may be set down at 7,948,789, or fourteen to the square mile. The following table, prepared by Mr. Darby for the use of government, is computed on the supposition that the decennial increase from 1830 to 1840, has since been preserved:

POPULATION OF THE GREAT CENTRAL BASIN IN 1847.

Western New York,	506,000
Western Pennsylvania,	564,600
Western Virginia,	222,300
Kentucky,	834,970
Tennessee,	857.590
Alabama,	759,500
Mississippi,	459.070
Louisiana,	434,100
Arkansas,	161,600
Missouri,	529,000
Illinois,	867,000
Indiana,	891.566
Ohio,	1,862,400
Michigan,	321,000
Iowa,	*60,000
Wisconsin,	*50,000
Total,	8,925,696

Being about eighteen to the square mile, or one-ninth the density of Great Britain, Portugal, Spain, and France. The whole population of the United States at that period being computed at 21,174,557.

*Greatly short of the reality.

ANOTHER STEAMBOAT ACCIDENT.—On the night of the 6th inst. the steamboat Moneda was run into by the steamer Western, from Nashville, bound for Cincinnati. The Moneda sunk in two minutes after she was struck, The passengers had generally retired to their berths, but were fortunately, all rescued, with the loss, however, of all their baggage and clothes.

FIRE AT LOUISVILLE.—The extensive livery stables of Mr. Henry Duncan were burnt at Louisville, Ky., on Thursday last, and from 11 to 14 horses perished in the flames. Loss about $5,000.

THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE.—Across the Niagara is no longer a fiction. It is to be located one mile and a half below the falls, and will be fine point from which to get a distuat view of the cataract. The distance across the river is 850 feet. The Bridge is to be built of wire, which at each end will be stretched over towers raising to the height of 70 feet. It is to have two carriage tracks and a railroad track between, and will, when completed be the finest piece of architecture of the kind in the world.

AN AFFLICTING OCCURENCE.—We learn from the Cumberland Civilian, that on Sunday morning last, one of the neighbors was attracted by the crying of a child in the house occupied by Mrs. Timothy B. Thomas, at Mount Savage. On breaking open the door, a horrible spectacle presented itself. Mrs. Thomas was dead in her bed, the body in a partial state of decomposition, and a poor little infant of five weeks lying at the breast, endeavoring to extract nourishment from the dried up fountains of its mother's corpse; while another child aged about 18 months, was siting on the floor, weeping from hunger and exhaustion.

Mrs. Thomas had probably been dead from Friday night. Her death was occasioned either by apoplexy or suffusion of water on the brain Her husband, Timothy B. Thomas, was for some time a miner in the service of the Mount Savage Company, and, upon the breaking up of the works, went to the west, probably to Ohio, to seek employment. The poor little children have fallen into good hands, and are doing well.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—Mr. Cyrus Gow was killed in Cohasset, Mass., on Monday last, by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of his father-in-law, Mr. Pierce.

From the Oberlin Evangelist.

Colored Orphan Asylum of Ohio.

In 1844, a few philanthropists in Cincinnati, foremost among whom were Mrs. Mott, a friend, and Mrs. Judge McLean, combined their efforts and established an asylum for the poor colored orphans of Ohio.

They purchased a large building in Cincinnati for one thousand dollars, which is nearly paid for, but which at this time, greatly needs repairs to the amount of four hundred dollars. In 1845 the asylum was chartered and put under the care of nine faithful Trustees.

At present there are only fifteen children in the Asylum, but a multitude are waiting for admission, and waiting only till the requisite means shall be put into the hands of the Trustees to take care of them.

In the management of the asylum a matron is employed, and paid one hundred dollars per annum for her services. Arrangements are made to have a school for the children, taught by a colored lady, at a salary of only one hundred dollars per annum.

Such briefly is their state and such their wants. The poor colored orphans of Ohio appeal to the philanthropists and christians of our country for aid. State patronage befriends all other orphans, but passes by these on the other side. Other Institutions for the blind, for the deaf and dumb, for the insane, finds friends and patrons;—Shall this alone—established for a class not less helpless and desolate than they, appeal to the friends of bleeding humanity in vain? Who so affectingly dependent on humane charity as they whom public sentiment cramps with disabilities and loads down with obloquy—for whom legislative care provides no instruction in their youth, and no succor in their poverty and sickness?

Such a class as this, existing in a christian land, must of course rest their cause on an appeal to the hearts of christian and philanthropic men and women throughout the country. Shall it be in vain?

P. S.—Money, provisions, articles of clothing, bedding, &c., will be thankfully received.

Visit of Dr. Burns.

Rev. Jabez Burns, D. D., of London, who in company with Rev. Dr. Goadby is on a mission of fraternal recognition from the General Baptists of England to the Free Will Baptists of the United States, recently spent two days with us, much to our pleasure and profit.

We are especially pleased with the idea of these fraternal missions. They cannot fail to renew and cement the precious bonds of universal Christian brotherhood. It is rare that the selection of commissioners for such an embassy of love falls upon men more fitted for sustaining its delightful responsibilities than in the present case, if we may judge from our brief acquaintance with Dr. Burns. His last address interested the audience most intensely, it being a most comprehensive and yet most graphic delineation of the movements of the public mind throughout Christendom on what he called the four great questions of the age,—the question of universal intelligence, the question of universal sobriety, the question of universal peace, and the question of universal freedom.

The view he presented of the state and progress of these great questions in Great Britain was fraught with lively interest, and must have left its impression of cheering hope for the future on every mind.

We take pleasure in commending Dr. Burns and his associate to the cordial sympathies and confidence of our readers, and of the christian public throughout this country.—Oberlin Evangelist.

DISCOVERY OF AN ANCIENT BUST.—An interesting discovery was made last month at Tunis. In clearing away a mound in the inner part of Carthage, to extract some stone for the repair of the quays at Goletta, the workmen found a colossal bust, which is supposed to represent Juno, in as perfect state of preservation as if it had just been sculptured.

OH FOR A RAILROAD.—Sixteen hundred barrels of flour go to New-Orleans to-day by the river, and two hundred barrels of pork,—all destined for the Eastern market, and all seeking an outlet at the East. From New-Orleans it will be necessary to send it to New-York or Pennsylvania again, perhaps, and at great cost, and over a distance of several thousand miles. A Railroad would save all this, and turn the commerce of the West in a new direction. We observe also, that large shipments are making to the East via Brownsville and Baltimore, and this, of course, in consequence of the damage to the canal. Our store keepers complain, too, that their goods are —nobody knows where,—somewhere on the canal, or under it. It is feared there are many of them beyond reach for the season.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

A CASE OF KIDNAPPING.—Washington, September 29, 1847.—A few years ago, a gentleman died in Alexandria, possessed of certain slaves, among them two children, who, by his will, were manumitted. Their mother "bound them out" to an individual of this city, named Thomas, we understand, who transferred them for a consideration to a "soul driver." Under suspicious circumstances, this fellow was lately arrested, with the children, at Memphis, Tennessee, simultaneously, almost, with the arrest of Thomas, who is held over in this city to answer. His colleague, with the kidnapped children, is expected, will also be brought forward to answer here at the coming term of the Criminal Court. Neither the laws nor the public opinion of this community will suffer such stealing of free negroes to go unpunished. Any winking or blinking at such transactions as this, will only increase the danger to be apprehended from the Abolitionists in retaliation.—Correspodence N. Y. Herald.

THE COLORED MEN'S CONVENTION, which closed its sessions in this city on Saturday last, was highly creditable to its members, and very gratifying to many of our citizens. The propriety which their proceedings were conducted, the array of talent, the judicious views, and general information exhibited in their public discussions, would not have disgraced a convention of the highest magnates in our country. Seldom indeed, have we listened to better speakers, more ready, eloquent and skilful debaters, than are Messrs. Douglass, Garnet, Smith, and several others (colored men) who took part in the discussion at Morris Place Hall.—Troy Telegraph.

STATISTICS OF EMIGRATION.—The New York Commissioners of Emigration have made their final report to the Legislature, commencing on the 5th of May last. Since that date, 101,546 emigrants have arrived at New York, of whom 43,208 were from Germany, 10,820 from Ireland, 6,501 from England and Wales, the balance from other countries. The commissiors have received in commutation money $101,109, and $520 in fines; and their disbursement have been $30,585, leaving a balance to indemnify the city and State against future expenses for the same immigrants of $71,092.

COPPER ORE.—It is said that six hundred tons of copper ore are shortly to be shipped to Boston, from the depot of the Polk county, Tenn., and Cherokee coun, N. C., mines, which a company of Germans are engaged in working. This ore is said to be exceedingly rich.

MISSIONARIES FOR CHINA.—Rev. H. Hickok, and Rev. S. Maclay, and Mrs. Hickok, sent out under the Board of the Methodist E. Church, sailed for China, from New York, on Wednesday. Their destination is Fuhichou, a city of some five hundred thousand inhabitants, about five degrees north of Canton.

SACRIFICE OF LIFE BY THE WAR.—The officers of the army and those who have the means of ascertaining the loss sustained by our army since the commencement of the Mexican war, put it down, says the Telegraph, at 20,000 men, whose bodies mingle with the soil of Mexico. The mortality or sacrifice of life at the present time, is estimated at "fifty soldiers a day!"

MONROE CITY.—At the last session of the Iowa Legislaure, commissioners were appointed to select a site for a new seat of Government of that State. They have made a selection and named it Monroe City. It is in Jasper county between the Des Moines and Skunk Rivers.

PRECEPT AND PRACTICE.—A Teetotal Carman of New York city, after presenting upon his business cards his name, "George C. Hall,"—the number of his cart, "3012"—and his residence, "No. 54 Elizabeth street"—adds the following quadruplet as his carmanic creed and motto, viz:

Old Alcohol I will not cart,
But all things else with all my heart;
Old Dick and I now have good dinners,
Come sign the pledge ye drinking sinners.

TWO WORTHIES.—Mr. Davis, the benevolent Burlington county Quaker, who has offered employment and found places for so many poor immigrants, called on the New York Alms House Commissioner for fifty women, whom he is ready to supply with constant employment. A few benevolent citizens in the adjacent States might in this way do much towards diffusing the worthy portion of these immigrants among our older settlements.—Newark Adv.

MAKING BRICK BY MACHINERY.—A striking evidence of the value of American genius in the invention of labor-saving machines. In one yard, near Boston, there are now at work twenty machines of which ten are at work one day and the other ten on the next. These are operated each by four men. A steam engine is employed to prepare the clay. This establishment has made one hundred thousand bricks every day for many days past, and that is a regular day's work, ending at 4 o'clock P. M. each day.

These machines are Alfred Hall's patent. The more they are tried, the more do they increase in favor among those who best understand the business.

There are two other yards at work by the same owner in a similar way. The patentee, Mr. Hall, resides at Perth Amboy, New Jersey.—N. York Tribune.

STATE BANK OF INDIANA.—We learn from the Cincinnati Chronicle, that the Directory of this Bank intend to call in their old issues of Fives, Tens, and Twenties, and replace them with new issues, from plates that have just been engraved by Rawdon, Wright & Hatch. From the description given by the Chronicle, we judge that the new notes will present specimens of engraving as yet unsurpassed in the United States. We are rejoiced to hear that the old notes, upon which there are so many counterfeits, are to be called in. Many an honest man has lost money by their false semblances.—Zanesville Courier.

GROWTH OF THE WEST.—The Iowa Seminel says that a colony of Hollanders, amounting to about 1000 have purchased two entire townships in Marion county. They bring their own mechanics and artisans with them, and have selected the site for a town. About 3000, more are expected to join them by next spring.

For upwards of a year past, a strange lady has been in the habit of making a periodical visit to the Tombs and Alms House, for the purpose of hunting up and providing employment for the more unfortunate women of these institutions. The Commissiner informed us that she has done much good, and it is a singular fact, that he has never yet been able to ascertain her name. She is a middle-aged lady, and evidently of a good family. We caught a glimpse of her countenance this morning, and were deeply impressed with its Christian-like loveliness.—New York Expreas.

STEALING A GRAVE!—We had always supposed that a Grave, the last receptacle of man, was rather too grave a matter to be stolen or trifled with. But in this we have been mistaken. as a letter from an officer in the Virginia Regiment informs us that an occurrence of that kind recently took place near Saltillo. A Texas Ranger died in Saltillo, and a Mexican had dug his grave, receiving six dollars for his labor. About the same time a man in the North Carolina Regiment died, and two of his brethren in arms were sent out to dig his final resting-place; but seeing one open and ready for the reception of a corpse, they hastened back and hurried their corpse into the grave of the Texan; the funeral escort of the latter appearing in sight, as the North Carolinians were leaving, after having been guilty of the singular theft—"stealing a grave!"

TO ASCERTAIN A HORSE'S AGE.—Every horse has six teeth above and below—before three years old he sheds his middle ones—at three he sheds one more each side of the central teeth—at four he sheds the two corner and last of the fore teeth. Between four and five the horse cuts his under tusks, at five he will cut his upper tusks, at which time his mouth will be complete. At six the grooves and hollows will begin to fill up a little—at seven the grooves will be nigh filled up, except the corner teeth, leaving little brown spots where dark brown spots formerly were. At eight the whole of the hollows and grooves are filled up. At nine there is very often seen a small bill to the outside corner teeth—the point of the tusk is worn off, and the part that was concave begins to fill up and become rounding—the squares of the central teeth begin to disappear, and the gums leave them small and narrow at the top.

THE OLD TEA-KETTLE.—"Don't throw away that old tea-kettle, I say," said Aunt Patty Parley. "It is one of the most useful articles in the pot closet. When you have a cracked tea-kettle, then you have the very best thing in the world for cooking potatoes. Wash them, cut off the ends where the eyes are thick, and then put them on in the tea-kettle, without any water, and hang them over a moderate fire, and in half an hour or so, you will have your potatoes baked, dried, and mealy, and just the very thing for a good dinner. The nose of the kettle allows all the moisture of the vegetable to escape, and a cracked tea-kettle is indispensable to good eating."

Notices.

Monongalia ct., Pitts. District.—BR. BASSETT: Please inform our worthy President, that the point of visitation on this circuit, will be at Thomas Maple's new Frame church. We are looking up to the God of our Fathers, that he will favor our Zion, and baptise the entire membership with the holy reformation fire, and that it may spread over the entire hills, and up and down the valleys, till one mighty anthem may echo from mountain to mountain.—Brother Brown, come with the whole armor on.

Yours, as ever, in the bonds of christian fellowship,
ELI MARTIN, Sup't.

Belvue ct., Musk. Con.—BR. BASSETT: I would say to Brother Clancy, our President, that having visited Belvue circuit, it has been agreed, on terms satisfactory both to the brethren and myself, that I shall take charge of said circuit. His approbation of the arrangement is now requested. A. S. ROBINSON.

Wayne Ct., Musk. Con.—Brother Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at Waynesburg. C. T. KINGSBURY, Sup't.

Bainbridge Ct., Ohio Dis.—Our first quarterly meeting will commence on the 13th of Nov., at Cove Spring meeting-house. We invite fathers Dobbins and Hughey, Brothers W. Pelan, C. H. Williams, and others who can attend, we shall be happy to see. S. P. KEZERTA, Sup't.

Frederic Ct., Musk. Con.—Bro. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at the Huntsman appointment, that being the time and place of our first quarterly meeting.
J. S. THRAP, Sup't.

Zanesville Ct.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Springfield Chapel, commencing on Saturday, 6th November, at 11 o'clock.
E. S. HOAGLAND, Sup't.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Lewis	Circuit,	October,	24th,	1847.
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.
Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of app'ts

Frederick	circuit,	1st Sunday	November.
Licking	"	2d	"	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d	"	"
Coshocton	"	4th	"	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st	"	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts. I think it proper to say, that I will meet my appointment on the Granger circuit, at the Society near Br. Swan's:—Would the 4th Saturday and Sunday of October be too early for the 1st Quarterly Meeting?

For reasons of a very satisfactory character, (upon his aplication to me the morning after the rise of Conference) Br. C. Caddy was released from the Bellview circuit No supply, as yet, for said ct. GEO. CLANCY.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Port William	"	Nov.	6th,	1847.
Springfield	"	"	13th,	"
Union	"	"	20th,	"
Darby	mission,	"	27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,		"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Spingfield.
Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

Liberty	ct.	Nov.	6–7	1847.
Madison	"	"	13–14	"
Flat Rock	"	"	20–21	"
White Lick	"	"	27–28	"
White River	"	Dec.	4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	"	11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

P. M. Hendrysburg,	O.	Wm. Smith,	Ia.
G. W. Hull,	"	John Alter, 2 sub.	"
A. S. Robinson,	"	J. Waite,	Ill.
C Carter, 1 sub.	"	W. B. Mack, 2, 1 sub.	Mich.
J. B. Peat,	"	E. Martin,	Pa.
W. G. Fowler,	"	W. S. Stockton,	"
T. Ellis,	"	W. Reeves, 2 subs.	Pa.
J. H Thomas,	"	S. Sydenstricker,	Va.
J. W. Case,	"
G. G. Collins,	Va.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts
G. W. Hull,		9	13	2 00
J. Alter,	A. Kyger,	9	26	1 00
"	J. C. Endicott,	9	26	1 00
Dr. J. Hildreth,		9	52	2 00
J. C. Sidle,	W. Hamilton,	9	26	3 00
"	J. Stout	8	52	1 00
W. Reeves,	J. B. Roberts,	9	52	2 00
"	Wm. Barnhill,	8	52	2 00
J. H. Thomas,	A. Snyder,	9	52	2 00
Th. Calhoon,		9	52	2 00
J. W. Case,	Geo. Frazure,	9	52	2 00
"	B Longsworth,	9	52	2 00

Br. Morrison, E. F. C. credited two full years for his remittance.

We inform Br. S. Sydenstricker, Va., that the sum of $5 was paid us for him by Br. G. N. For $4 of this sum we have credited him in full for vols. 7 and 8. The remaining $1 was due to Br. Springer on vol. 6, and has been paid over to him. Br. S. will observe that we are in the habit of crediting moneys paid to our predecessor separately from those paid to present publisher. This explanation we trust will make all right and satisfactory. If not, let us hear again.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On Wednesday evening, Sept, 29th, 1847, by Rev. W. Reeves, Mr. JNO. WELLS to Miss MATILDA HULL, all of Pitsburgh, Pennsylvania.

——On Thursday morning, October 14th instant, by the same, Mr. SAMUEL JOHNSTON, to Mrs. MARY A. RIDGLEY, all of Pitsburgh, Pennsylvania.

DEATHS.

DIED—At Boston, on the 10th instant, Hon. Artemas Ward, formerly a Chief Justice, aged 84 years.

——At New York, on the 9th inst., Mr. A. D. Paterson, editor of the Anglo American.

——Also, at New York, John Aspinwall, Esq., an active member of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society from its organization in 1816.

——At Aurora, Ia., Oct. 2d, Prof. John B. Teasdale, of Franklin College, Ia.

——At his residence in Huntsville, Butler co., Ohio, on the 17th inst., Rev. Wm. Parish, of the Ohio Conference, M. E. Church.

The Markets.

LATEST DATES.

[CORRECTED WEEKLY.]

PUTNAM & ZANESVILLE.—Flour $5a50—Wheat, 90c.—Corn, 23@25c.,—Oats, 18c.—Zanesville Courier.

CINCINNATI.—Flour $4,75,—Wheat 90c,—Oats 25c,—Corn 30@31c. Beef Cattle $4,50@$4,75 ℔ cwt.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PITTSBURGH.—Flour $4,97½@$4,06¼,—Wheat 90c,—Corn 38@40c,—Oats 25c.—Commercial Journal.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour $5,75@$5,87½—Wheat $1,25@$1,30—Corn, 68@70c.—Oats, 45@49c.

BALTIMORE.—Flour $5,87@6,00—Wheat, $1,32@1,35, Corn 66@70c,—Oats, 40@43c.—Balt. Sun.

NEW YORK.—Flour $5,75@5,81¼—Wheat $1,16@1,25—Corn 65@66c—Oats 45@47c—Rye 81@82c.

Advertisements.

Notice.—At our instance, an Attachment was this day issued, by Wm. H. Moore, a Justice of the Peace, of Springfield township, Muskingum co., Ohio, against the effects of Henson Bagley, a non-resident of said county, dated this 19th day of Oct., 1847.
LARGE, BOATMAN, & Co.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,
Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October, with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

Pupils will likewise have the benefit of Professor Munson's instruction in vocal music, without incurring any additional expense.

The advantages thus furnished by the Seminary for young ladies to acquire a truly liberal education, are superior to those of most institutions in the country, and it is to be presumed that many will avail themselves of the privileges thus brought within their reach.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term,	28 Weeks.
Summer "	16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term,	$12 00.
Summer "	$8 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term,	$6 00.
Summer "	$4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.
Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

LATEST ARRIVAL OF NEW GOODS.

WILLIAM P. LARGE,

Has the pleasure of calling the attention of the public to a large and splendid assortment of Foreign Domestic Fall and Winter Goods, purchased at the lowest cash prices, which he is now receiving and opening,—consisting, in part, of the following articles of Dress Goods, &c., Plaid, Striped, Fancy, and Shaded Cashmeres.

Fancy Mouslin de Laines, Caledonia Plaids, Plain plaid and striped Alpacas, Silk Warp and Real do. A large stock of French, Scotch, Changeable, Earlston, Manchester and Domestic Ginghams. A large and well selected supply of FANCY PRINTS from 6 cents up. Plaid Cloakings.

SHAWLS OF VARIOUS DESCRIPTIONS.

An extensive assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Flannels, Linseys, &c., &c. Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, Queensware, Hats, Caps, Groceries, Dye-Stuffs, Paints, Hardware, and so many other desirable goods, that it is too tedious to enumerate; which are in the market, cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! Notwithstanding some of my neighbors admit their former brays of CHEAP mean just nothing at all, I am not willing to be so understood, but will sell VERY LOW for cash, or good trade.

I want it especially understood, that I am not to be undersold by any person. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods.
Putnam, September 30, 1847.

☞NEW GOODS.☜

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,

Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A. A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,
No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.
Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum co., Ohio, on the 1st of October, 1847.

A		M
Atkinson, Joseph B.		Mendenhall, Mr. John
Augh, Mary Ann		M'Knight, William
B		Miller, Isaac
Boyd, John		Mitchell, George
Bendure, George		Mc alister, Mr. Nelson
Brooke, Esq., M. D.		McFeters, J. B.
Barr, John		Man, Mr. Robert
		Moore, Mr.
Campbell, George		Mitchell, Esq., J. B.
Calhoun, Mrs. Jane M.		Manhall, Miss Mary E.
Courdals, Mr. Elias W.		P
D		Pratt, Abraham
Dorsey, Miss Hannah		Puff, Mrs. Sarah
Devolve, Washington		Prentis, Mr. A. P.
Deitrick, Joseph		R
E		Riley, Mary E.
Ellis, Miss Amanda		Richardson, Wm.
F		Roberts, Mr. Thomas
France, John		Reynolds, Roxana
Freeman, Able		Roush, Henry
Forbes, Edward		S
G		Scanland, Benjamin
Genthrie, Mrs. F.		Scott, James L.
Goble, J.		Scadmand, Mr.
H		Sherwood, Miss Mary C.
Hosler, George		Sweeny, Joseph
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.		Showers, Elizabeth
Hoffman, Mr. Jeremiah K.		Smith, Asa C.
Hood, Charles F.		T
J		Tupper, Rachel S.
Jennings, Miss Sarah		Timmel, Mr. F.
James, Elizabeth		W
Johnson, Mr. J. J.		Watson, Jane
L		Woodruff, David
Limel, Joshua		Wilson, Johnson

J. ELDER, P. M.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congresssional Globe and Appendix,

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their

POET'S CORNER.

THE THORN IN THE FLESH:

2 COR. XII, 7.

BY THE REV. JOSHUA MARSDEN.

A thorn in the flesh, and yet it bore a rose,
Which every hour its sweetness did disclose,
And still put forth new buds, and blushed, and bloomed,
On the bush burning bright, but unconsumed.
But many a sigh escaped me, for the wound
Was painful, and it festered all around,
While patience, like a Hebrew, on the night
Of Egypt's doom, and Israel's paschal rite,
Seemed all in haste to make a quick retreat,
With staff in hand, and sandals on her feet;
But mercy called her back to my support,
Just as she gained the spirit's outer court,
And then I felt a little comforted,
Yea, thrice I bowed my knee, and raised my head,
And still I prayed and prayed, nor ceased my suit
Till each impatient rebel thought was mute;
For He who by the bloody pillar stood,
Dropped in the fester two rich drops of blood:
And quick as that life cordial touched the part,
A thrill of exstacy went through my heart.
My faith, which till that moment could not stand,
Revived, and took the promise by the hand,
Yea, they were married in that very hour,
And faith brought full salvation as her dower.
Now, come what will to me of pain or woe,
To Christ for instant grace and strength I go:
I rest on Him the weight of all my care,
To him I pour my heart's full tide of prayer;
His merit is my bulwark, there I rest,
His smile the sunshine of my drooping breast;
My springs are all in him alone, and I
Am often cheered, though all around is dry;
From that dear fountain all my comfort flows;
On that sweet balm tree my salvation grows;
There drops my myrrh, there blooms my cassia rare,
My Gilead balm, my life elixir there
Forever flows, to heal my wounded flesh,
When in some new disease it bleeds afresh.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XIII.

On Tuesday, 23d, I was still very unwell, but started to my appointment, and was stopped by high waters, and finding that I was still getting worse, I went to the City, took medicines, rested two or three days, and then went home, and remained in a feeble state, until the 20th of April. I attended Brother Haughten's quarterly meeting on the previous Sabbath, at Belbrook; he informed me that Brother Snider was attending to my appointments, as Brothers Haughten and English were travelling on the first circuit I had formed, and my house was included in it, and their families were included in my circuit. I made arrangements with Brother English to change one round, as my feeble state of health would not admit of my taking such long rides, and the measles having commenced in my family, I wished to be nearer home. So I spent the two weeks on Xenia Circuit, and had some precious seasons.

On the 14th of May, I set out for my own appointments. Saturday, preached at Brother Langdon's at night,—the word reached the hearts of sinners. Sixteenth, rode to Brother Handfords; the Lord sent his arrows—sinners wept and prayed. Spent a few minutes in class, one or two found peace with God. Praise the Lord for converting power. Three joined the church. I took dinner, rode nine miles, and preached at Brother Ready's at four o'clock, then rode five miles and preached again at night in Newbury, in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Here the Trustees had held a council about my preaching in their house. One of them said that there were some in former times, forbid to cast out devils, because those who cast them out, followed not with us. Yes, said another, and we dont want McGuire to come here to cast out devils. However, they left it to Brother Lenning, as he had principally built the house, and another appointment was made for me, but very few of the old brethren attended. I had made arrangements to preach three times this day, in order to redeem time to go home and see my sick family. I went home on Monday 17th, and stayed until the 21st, then set out again leaving some of my family very unwell with the measles.

Saturday, 22d, rode to New Richmond; Sunday morning, preached to a large assembly,—the Lord blessed the word,—sinners wept and trembled,—saints rejoiced. One sister, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, could not refrain till I was done preaching, but shouted aloud, glory to God. I crossed the river and preached again in Kentucky to a crowded house, then returned to New Richmond and attended a prayer meeting that night.

Monday, 24th, rode to Felicity, where a number had been desirous to see me. An appointment was made, and I preached Tuesday 22d, to a goodly number. A Presbyterian minister being present, offered his church for my next appointment, and invited me to come and see him, whenever it was convenient. Dr. Newton rode with me in the afternoon nine miles to Br. Flake's.—Preached again the next day, and two joined the church. Then rode with Brother P. Clingler, (who came on to travel with me a few days) to Brother Shroaf's. Preached there the next day. There are now nineteen in class here,—only 8 at first.

Friday, 28th, preached at Esquire Higgin's,—God sent the word home to the hearts of some sinners. Preached again at five o'clock and the power of the Lord attended the word. Five came forward to be prayed for, and we had a shout in the camp. Glory be to God for convicting and converting grace.

And now fearing that an account of every days' labor may not be profitable or interesting, I will just state that on the 3d of June, I set off for Tanner's Creek, and passing through Cincinnati, I tried to get a preacher to go with me, as this was the third quarterly meeting, but all were engaged. I went to Brother Edward's, a United Brethren preacher, and got him to go with me; we arrived there on Saturday, 5th of June, and had a very profitable time. Three more joined from the Methodist Episcopal Church. I will now close this Number, by stating, first: that when I look back eighteen years, at the toils and the exposures to the inclemency of the weather and the pulpit labors, sometimes three sermons a day, miles apart, I am astonished that I yet live; and now on the verge of entering on my seventieth year, my lungs are sound and strong. Secondly: I can truly say that notwithstanding the oppositions I have met with from some of my old side brethren, I have no hatred, but want to meet them in heaven.

Written for the Western Recorder.

On Bigotry.

In the list of those vices that disgrace human nature, and sow the seeds of discord in the world, Bigotry, I presume, ought to stand foremost. Several other vices, that are characterised by more shocking epithets, only effect individuals; and many of their effects are not lasting, but those produced by this demon are universal and permanent. From childhood to youth, from youth to manhood, and from manhood to old age, it continually besets us, and with its Protean wiles, endeavors to keep us from the truth. It opposes the improvement of our faculties, retards the advancement of Sciences, renders the Arts more tedious, strikes at the root of every generous principle, or sentiment, and by by such practices proves its origin correct.

Were I asked the pedigree of this vice, I should call it the offspring of pride and ignorance, and the sister of superstition: and reckon its offspring to be malice, revenge, cruelty, and abuse, with its other numerous descendants. I think myself justified in pronouncing it to be a persuasion founded on the caprice, that our sentiments are infallibly right, hence all that opposes must consequently be wrong. It would be no difficult matter to exemplify every assertion advanced; but I only beg patience until I point out some of the bad consequences that result from this vice in the religious world: for it is astonishing that, that which was designed to make us happy in an other world, should, by our continual disputes make us miserable in this. Now it is my firm conviction that these differences are the products of Bigotry.

When this demon once poisons the christian's breast, it sets him at enmity with every other denomination. Every sect, and every contrary opinion, must feel the lash of his bitter opposition. When it gets possession of a professor, it must first show itself in a determined opposition to the doctrines and usages of other denominations. And hence any blemish must be magnified to unpardonable errors, and if the Constitution or Discipline, or, any clause of either admit of double meaning, it must wear the worst signification possible. No considerate person, I dare say will think that I have gone too far in what I have advanced.

For my own part, I think that, taking truth by the hand, I might go farther. Were a person to compare the conduct that I have taken notice of, with that prescribed by Christ and his Apostles, he could not help condemning the former as anti-christian. The spirit of the gospel is a spirit of benignity, benovolence and love. A man guided by this spirit, will be gentle and forgiving to his enemies, patient and mild with his opposers, reverent to his superiors, affable to his equals, condescending to his inferiors, and full of sympathy for distress. He will (agreeably to the Apostle's instruction) never be found contending about trifles: But with the celebrated John Locke adopt the following motto or other of a like christian character, viz: "In essentials agreement, in non-essentials liberty,—in ALL THINGS CHARITY." He will delight in reconciling parties, removing misunderstandings, and promoting peace and unity, and concord among his fellow-beings. Whatever brings glory to God and happiness to his brethren will be his delight. Nay if he but suppresses faction, and prevents discord, he will feel himself more happily employed than in any other pursuit: or even to all creature preferment.

Now I admit he may chose his own sect, and adhere to it with rational steadiness, in spite of every opposer: but he will not blindly insist on his creed being the touch stone of faith nor his notions about forms essential to salvation. If he enters into controversy with another, all his arguments will be drawn from scripture reason, & experience; his conduct will be free, and open, genuine truth the only weapon, wielded in love. O, I fear that many are deceived by bigotry, under the appearance of zeal.—Of all bigots, these most deserve our pity and advice. I would wish a person of this stamp to take notice that the basis of the gospel is truth; that truth and reason are never at enmity; and consequently, that, what is contrary to reason is at war with the gospel of Jesus. This admitted, I ask is it reasonable for a man to let his attachment to one sect destroy his love for the rest of his brethren? —Yes to this question, would be anti-christian. No, would save us from seduction by the demon under false appearances.

But in conclusion, I will assume the boldness to notice, the conduct of Jehu to Rechab's son, you may find it in the 10 chapt. of 2nd. Kings. But one more is given by the Saviour, in the gospel according to St. Mark, ninth chapt. These two instances, I hope will prove what I have advanced, recommend mutual forbearance and universal love and silence the doubts of the opposer.

O that the spirit of charity may universally supersede all strifes, and bickerings: and then shall Zion evince that christians are going forth to possess the land under the banner of gospel reconciliation. O Lord, save the Meth. Prot. Church and all the churches from this most potent shaft of the dragon of the pit.

G. S. W.

Beaver, Pa., 1847.

The Budget.

POETRY.

"In proportion as poetry finds a response in the human heart, will be its share in enlightening and in improving the race. What an influence has poetry had over humanity! How the inner chords of the affections have responded when their strings have been touched by its aspirations! How the tear of sympathy has started at its pictures of want and woe! How the heart has bounded to its strains of joy, and beat with ecstacy at its out-pourings of passionate feeling! The calm repose of infancy, the noble dignity of manhood, the bright radiance of the flower-clad earth, the splendor of the summer skies, the clear pure light of morning, and the crimson tint of evenings parting glow,—home and its sacred precincts, heaven and its holy joy,—all these has it beautified and idealized, and given a new lustre to that which we before deemed best and truest.—The port, the prophet of the ideal, how great his power—how mighty his influence—how exalted his responsibilities! Not as the spoiled child of genius must he employ his talents, nor idly use it to gain the applause and favor of the world: for another office was this gift designed. Those fleet glances of infinitude were given him in trust for humanity, to teach that thought only is enduring, and leads to the most practical results, and that this apparently solid and adamantine universe alone is perishable and unreal.

THE ATONEMENT.—The blood of Christ is a stream; whereof all men may drink; an ocean in which all men may bathe. It wants not value to remove our sins, if we want not faith to embrace and to plead it. As no sickness was strong enough against the battery of his powerful word when he was in the world; so no guilt is strong enough against the power of his blood, if the terms upon which it is offered by God be accepted by us. It is absolutely sufficient in itself, so that if every son of Adam, from Adam himself to the last man that shall issue from him by natural descent, should by faith sue out the benefit of it, it would be conferred upon them. God hath no need to stretch his wisdom, to contrive another price, nor Christ any need to re-assume the form of a servant, to act the part of a bloody sacrifice any more.—CHARNOCK.

"THE NIGHT COMETH IN WHICH NO MAN CAN WORK."—The mind, too, is subject to eclipse.—Characters have existed whose souls were luminous as the sun in the firmament, and the brilliancy of whose intelligence, compared with that of other men, was as the brightness of seven days. In their writings, in their conversations, in their discourses, rays were admitted which cheered, and charmed, and even dazzled. But while we have stood wondering, a sudden and dark cloud has cast its shade over these splendors, and enveloped all this glory in the gloom of night.—Wrapt in frenzy, or deeply sunk in despair, their useful energies have been suspended or annihilated. With trembling sympathy and silent submission we have gazed on the mind in ruins, till we have inwardly sighed and said, "The night cometh in which no man can work."—REV. GEO. CLAYTON.

BODILY INFIRMITIES, like breaks in a wall, have often become avenues through which the light of heaven has entered to the soul, and made the imprisoned inmates long for release.—DR. WATTS.

Explanatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

BR. BASSETT: I furnish, at the request of Br. Springer, the original, and entire resolution passed by the Muskingum Conference touching the duty of Stewards and Superintendents, in reference to the Conference collections.

Brother Springer offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That it be hereafter the duty of each Superintendent of a circuit or station, to take up a Conference collection, or have it done, in the societies of their respective charges, to be brought to the Annual Conference, to supply the deficiencies of its itinerant preachers, &c.; and that he be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of this duty.

After considerable discussion, the above resolution, was amended and passed, as follows:

Resolved, That it shall be hereafter the duty of each Superintendent of a circuit or station, to arraign before their Quarterly Conference, the Stewards of their respective charges, who may refuse, or neglect to take up the Annual Conference collection; and that he be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of this his duty.

The tone of Brother Callahan's notice, "to all whom it may concern,' may require a word of explanation from me. Brother C.'s letter, of which he speaks, was handed to the committee on Documents, whose duty it was to read, and refer to their appropriate committees. The committee, however, after reading and directing on the back of letters, laid the whole bundle on the table; they were then placed in the drawer of the table for safety, and the Secretary knew not, that there was one word from Brother Callahan, until after the Stationing Committee had reported. So that he does not feel responsible for the honorable repose that Brother Callahan's letter had in his drawer.

We might also state, that it is probable, had the letter been before the Stationing Committee, that it could not consistently have made the case different from what it is, for the following reasons:

1. I believe it has been a rule with Stationing Committees, to comply with the request of delegates as near as they could. So when a delegate names several preachers, to give them the first named if they can consistently, if the first request cannot be granted, then turn to the second, and so on, in the order in which they were named, understanding the preference of the delegate to be expressed by this order. Now, we have to say, in justification of the Committee, that the Brother appointed to Zanesville circuit, was named before Brother Callahan. And—

2. That Brother Callahan was the only one named by the Delegate from Pennville circuit, that the Committee could appoint to that charge, and unless some one of the Brothers named, were appointed to that circuit, the circuit was to be left unsupplied. The committee was assured by the delegate, that Brother Callahan would be well sustained on Pennville circuit, and they were of the opinion, that Brother Callahan was the man to sustain the circuit.

JOHN BURNS, Sec'y

Mt. Pleasant, Oct. 18, 1847.

Miscellaneous.

FROM THE NATIONAL ERA.

Abolition in Tunis--Slavery in the U. S.

The last number of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Reporter contains abstracts from the Parliamentary papers on the slave trade, recently published, consisting of the correspondence between Sir Thomas Reade, British Consul at Tunis, and Lord Aberdeen, together with copies of the correspondence between the Consul and His Highness the Bey of Tunis, with respect to the breaking up of the slave marts, and the abolition of slavery in Tunis.

From these documents it appears that, in 1841, the Bey commenced that great work of reform, which has immortalized his name, by prohibiting the exportation of slaves, or their importation from the interior. On the 8th 12th month, 1842, he declared all children born after that date free. This was followed by the suppression of the great Tunisian bazaar for the sale of slaves.—Acting under his orders, the Bey's orders proceeded to the place where for centuries blacks and whites had been bartered for like cattle, drove out the detestable traffickers, and, to express in a solemn and emphatic manner the abhorrence in which their rulers held the commerce in human beings, pulled down and destroyed the huge market-houses.

In these noble movements—all of which were attended with great difficulty, owing to the fixed prejudices and long-established customs of his Mohammedan subjects—the Bey was encouraged and supported by the counsels and official influence of Sir Thomas Reade and the Abolitionists of England. At the Anti-Slavery Convention in London, in 1843, a committee, of which Lewis Tappan, of New York, was chairman, prepared an address, in behalf of the Abolitionists of Europe and America, congratulating the Bey on his praiseworthy reforms, and entreating him to carry out his benevolent purpose in the entire abolition of slavery in his dominions. This document, signed by the venerable Thomas Clarkson, was forwarded to the Bey through the British Consul. The effect of its timely word may be learned from the letter of the Bey himself, dated on the 25th of Moharem Elkram, 1262, (January 22, 1846:)

"Our resolutions were likewise strengthened, and we felt a real satisfaction at the accord which existed between our sentiments and those expressed by the ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY, which ennobles itself by upholding the dignity of mankind, in the letter we received on its part, and which we answered on Rabbih 1st, 1258.

"This affair never ceased to be the object, of our attention, as well as the central point of our consideration; and we have thought proper to publish, that we have abolished slavery in all our dominions; for we consider all slaves existing in our territory as being free, and do not recognize the legality of their being kept as property.

"We have sent some notaries to the sanctuary of Sidy Mahrez, in town, and to the sanctuary of Ezzawya Elboucria, in the suburb of Bab Essuika, as well as that of Sidy Mousour, in the suburb of Bab Elgezirah, with the object of writing, in favor of such slaves as should present themselves to them, a document constituting them free, on our part, and which (document) shall be presented to us for the apposition of our seal; and no right of property on their persons shall be alleged by their masters."

A circular was addressed by the Bey, on the day after the date of the above extract, to the consuls of all nations in his dominions, informing them of the total abolition of human slavery in Tunis. We subjoin the translation of that addressed to Sir T. Reade:

"From the Servant of God, the Mushir Ahmed Basha Bey, Prince of the Tuisian Dominions, to our ally, Sir Thomas Reade, Consul General of the British Government in Tunis:

"The servitude imposed on a part of the human kind whom God has created is a very cruel thing, and our heart shrinks from it.

"It never ceased to be the object of our attention for years past, which we employed in adopting such proper means as could bring us to its extirpation, as is well known to you.

"Now, therefore, we have thought proper to publish that we have abolished men's slavery in all our dominions, inasmuch as we regard all slaves who are on our territory as free, and do not recognize the legality of their being kept as property.

"We have sent the necessary orders to all the Governors of our Tuisian Kingdom, and inform you thereof, in order that you may know that all slaves that shall touch our territory, by sea or by land, shall become free.

"May you live under the protection of God!

"Written in Moharrem, 1262, (January 23d, 1846.)"

In communicating this circular to his Government, Sir Thomas Reade makes the following remarks in reference to the philanthropic course of the Bey:

"Slow though his march might have appeared, caution was a necessity imposed upon His Highness by the conflicting interests of the slaveholders, which were eventually, as well as by the prejudices implanted by religious precept in the mind of every Mussulman against any innovation in point of slavery; and considering all the difficulties he had to meet, I can only say, that the least of his measures on this question was a courageous attempt in the cause of humanity."

To a citizen of the United States, it is a very mortifying reflection, that while a Mohammedan Prince has been thus engaged in the noble task of freeing the slaves in his dominions, our Republican and Christian Government has been assiduously employed in the slave-system, protecting the slave-market, and preventing the progress of emancipation. While, in his diplomatic correspondence, the Bey of Tunis was speaking the language of humanity and freedom, President Tyler, through his Cabinet, was arguing in favor of human bondage, and deprecating emancipation in a neighboring Republic as an evil of the most serious magnitude. While the guards of the Bey, clothed with his authority, have razed to their foundations the horrible slave-markets of Tunis, the Presidents of our Republics have pledged themselves to prevent the passage of a bill for the abolition of the slave-jails in its capital.

In the debate on the reception of petitions for the abolition of slavery and the slave trade in the District of Columbia, in 1836, the present Secretary of the Treasury declared, that if slavery should be abolished in the District, no Southern man could legislate there. Fairly overwhelmed with the enormity of the measure proposed by the Abolitionists, he exclaimed in tones of tragic solemnity, "Oh my country! are we American Senators, in this the Senate Chamber of the American Union in which we are compelled to debate such a proposition as this!" Is the Crescent to be the symbol of freedom, and the Cross of slavery? Shall the priests of the Bible defend and sanction oppression and inhumanity, which the priests of the Koran can no longer justify?

Once more we ask, in all earnestness and solemnity, a question of the gravest import. Let it ring in the ears of all Christendom:

SHALL THE BIBLE ENSLAVE THE WORLD?

J. G. W.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

The Boston correspondent of the New York Evangelist gives an interesting account of a visit which he recently made at the house of the venerable statesman. He says:—

I found him much reduced in point of strength and activity from what he was a year ago, before the alarming illness he had last Fall. He was also much overcome by the heat, which was quite severe at the time. But his general health is comfortable, his spirits cheerful, and his intellectual powers bright and vigorous. He has a great deal of company, being an object of such widespread interest, both to our countrymen and to foreigners. His memory of historical events, which has always been so remarkable a feature of his mind, is apparently as minute and exact as it ever was. Nor is his familiarity with passing events apparently diminished, though he himself observes that there are now but few classes of occurrences that attract his attention sufficiently to fasten themselves in his memory.

The present condition of the country, the war with Mexico, and the question of Slavery, of course, occupy much of his thoughts and his conversation. He gave it as his opinion that a nominal peace will take place shortly after General Scott arrives at the City of Mexico—that some party will be found or can be placed in possession of the Government with whom a treaty can be made, including a cession of as much territory as our Government thinks prudent to take, and the payment of as much money, to be scrambled for by the Mexican chiefs, as our Government dares to give. * * * *

The people of the United States will be interested—and generally pleased—to learn that Mr. Adams expects to be at his post in Congress at the opening of the session. The delicate health of Mrs. Adams requires a milder climate for winter than Massachusetts, and Mr. Adams himself thinks he shall winter more comfortably at Washington than at Quincy. Beside, he feels that he is bound, by duty to his constituents, to be found at his post as long as he has any remnant of strength that he can employ in their service. He observed that the only national question on which he now feels any deep interest is that of Slavery, with the Mexican War, its adjunct. On this, his patriotic anxieties are intense and unceasing. He has had a great longing to see the question of Slavery brought to issue in his day. When he read Mr. Calhoun's late declaration that "the issue is before us and it must be met," Mr. Adams said he exclaimed aloud, "God grant that I may see it!"

In conversation, he dwelt much on the importance of bringing out the power of the Christian religion against Slavery. He says nothing else will answer—no other principle but the spirit of religion and the power of conscience can ever bring about the voluntary and peaceful emancipation of the slaves of this country. He watches with deep interest every movement among religious bodies which tends to withdraw from Slavery the evident countenance, or at least the acquiescent endurance, which the churches have long given to the institution.

An hour spent in drawing wisdom and patriotism from such a full fountain, could not but be profitable and interesting in a high degree. Serus in cælum redeat—long may the life of the patriot sage be preserved among us, as the Mentor of our statesmen and the model of youth! is the spontaneous exclamation of every true heart that visits at this shine of patriotic devotion.

VARIETY.

Wonderful Feat.

A brick building at the corner of Tremont and Bromfield streets, Boston, was moved eleven or twelve feet, including the cellar and cellar-walls, upon a temporary railway, by means of jack-screws. The building was estimated at two hundred tons in weight, but scarcely a jar was felt in the process of moving—not so much as the rolling of a barrel of flour upon the floor—and the contents of the grocery, for which it was used, were not removed, but the ordinary business continued all the while without interruption. This is the first feat of the kind ever accomplished, and, as may readily be imagined, was a work of much difficulty. The process was first to dig the new cellar and lay a foundation wall to correspond with the old one. Upon this wall two iron bars were affixed, several inches apart, over which the building was to move on small iron rollers. Underneath the old wall a similar preparation was made. The difficulty of moving was made greater by the unevenness of the stones composing the wall, many of which were taken out, and their places substituted with others of a smooth surface. Six screws were used in the operation.

Fire at Richmond.

The Richmond Inquirer, of Tuesday, contains the particulars of the destructive fire, on Sunday morning, which originated in the Gallego mills.

There was contained in the mills 900 bls. flour and 10,000 bushels wheat, which, together with the mill and lumber house, were entirely destroyed. Pretty well insured in the Richmond and Northern offices—variously reported at from 70 to $140,000, nearly sufficient to cover loss. The books and papers were saved, and the proprietors are making arrangements to grind in a few days at Rutherford's mills, James river.

The fire then communicated, at the northeast end of the mills, to the Shockoe tobacco warehouse, which, with twenty five hogsheads of inferior tobacco, of little value, was destroyed.

The fire next extended to the block of buildings in the rear of the mills, commencing with two tenements occupied by Alfred T. Harris, commission merchant, who lost a small stock of tobacco. The tenements were destroyed. Mr. Harris saved his books.

The store occupied by J. A. Robinson, commission merchant, was destroyed; books and papers saved; loss $1,500, mostly flour—insured.

The tenement occupied by James Butterworth's tin and sheet iron factory, the two upper stories destroyed; stock damaged three or four hundred dollars by removal and water.

Mr. Branch's grocery, goods removed; the upper part occupied by Wm. Myer, whose property was also saved by removal; the building entirely destroyed. The adjoining house, occupied by A. Myer, as a clothing store, destroyed, but succeeded in getting the goods out of the upper part of the adjoining tenement, occupied as a a residence by Patrick Johnson, loss about $200; house consumed.

The next two tenements, corner of 13th and Carey streets, occupied by Wm. Williams, as an auction and commission store, were destroyed, together with a large amount of goods; Mr Williams was insured for $20,000, which will cover his loss.

The two buildings in the rear of Mr. Williams', occupied by Winfree & Shephard, and Ford & Wilson, were also destroyed. The occupants succeeded in removing the greater portion of their goods. Loss of each small.

All the stores destroyed were three-story bricks; the mills, 7 or 8 stories high each, and the lumber house 4 or 5 stories high.

The fire commenced at 5 o'clock, A. M. and was not subdued till noon.

The loss is estimated at from $350,000 to $400,000, of which $20,000 is insured in the Mutual Insurance Company and $13,500 in the Fire Association of Richmond.—Balt. Sun.

Runaway Apprentices.

Of late years it is difficult for mechanics to procure good journeymen. There is no scarcity of a certain kind; but finished workmen—men who have received a proper education in a particular art—are not often found seeking employment. The cause of this is very evident. Apprentices do not serve out their time. It is idle to suppose that any body can learn a trade in one, two, or three years, although there are but few apprentices who do not think they are perfect in their trade after one year's service; and for the slightest cause leave their "boss," and start off as "jour or half jour." As far as our observation has extended, we have never known a runaway apprentice to succeed well in after life; and in nine cases out of ten they become dissipated, indolent and depraved—of no service to God or man. We are aware that some masters are arbitrary, exacting and ill natured; but it is far better for an apprentice to submit to even supposed wrongs and indignities, than to run away. By serving out your time you receive a good name and require a knowledge of great value. You are then a man in the true sense of the term, master of your business and conscious of having performed your duty both to yourself and boss. But on the contrary, if you leave your employer for some trifling offence you not only sacrifice your honor but all the future success in life. Mechanics do themselves a great injury by employing runaway apprentices. If they would make it an undeviating rule never to employ a runaway, we should not hear of so many dissatisfied apprentices, nor so many Jack "jours." By employing runaways, encouragement is given to all apprentices to leave their places.

STRANGE FACTS—In the Boston Journal we find an account of the doings of the meeting of Naturalists here, which says—'It has been long known that two rays of light may be so thrown on each other as to produce darkness. Professor Henry showed that two rays of heat may be so combined as to produce cold.'—Olive Branch.

Advertisements.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.
LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.
PUBLISHED BY THE
American Sunday School Union,
146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,
AND OVER
500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,
On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,
EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES, ILLUSTRATIONS, BIOGRAPHIES, DOMESTIC DUTIES, PARENTAL RELATIONS, MISSIONS, BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES, TEMPERANCE, DUTIES OF CHILDREN, PRAYER, NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary, Bible Geography, Teacher taught, Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols, Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols, Union Questions, 12 vols. &c.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,
Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,
Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,
IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.
V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.
With case $25—without case, $22,50.
VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,
Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,
Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,
A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-		$1 00
20 copies	do.	do. -	3 00
40 copies	do.	do. -	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, 17,50
Philadelphia.
Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.
FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadeldhia.
FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.
☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.
Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.
NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.
LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.
Mar. '81 '47

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 5. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, NOVEMBER 4, 1847. WHOLE NO. 421.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO.
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.
A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.
JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars withiu the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agents can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed."—John 6: 27.

Written for the Western Recorder.

HYMN.

Labor, but not for food
The body to sustain;
Nor think earth's perishable good
Can compensate thy pain.

But labor to secure
The bread of life divine,
And thou shall live forevermore;
O make this treasure thine.

This bread, in Christ revealed,
To all is freely given;
For Him hath God the Father sealed
The Almoner of heaven.

O hasten to be fed,
Ye hungry spirits haste!
Christ only hath this living bread,
And spreads a free repast. J. G. W.

Ministerial.

Working Ministers.

The number of persons who can justly claim this title is comparatively small. They are occasionally to be met with, however, and the sight of them is exceedingly cheering. Such men have their characteristics, which are not easily mistaken. They are always ready to do what duty dictates to be done, be the labor public or private, pleasant or unpleasant. If the field to be occupied and tilled is a hard one, that circumstance is quite likely to increase their ardor for the work. The sin of Jonah, who fled from his duty, does not cleave to them. They never trouble themselves about the question who is to be greatest, but prefer to show their own title to that distinction by doing work worthy of the greatest. It is not an uncommon thing for men to imagine that they would make first-rate leaders, and to refuse to do anything if they are not put into that station. Not so the true working minister. He understands the teaching of our Saviour, that the greatest is to be the servant of all, and prefers the gratification of deserving the name of a great one, to the mere possession of the title. There have been a few illustrious examples of this class. Richard Baxter was one. Though long a sufferer from ill health, he found time to prepare for his numerous public exercises, to visit and catechise the families of his congregation, and to write during the short period of fourteen years, nearly sixty different works, many of them quarto volumes of considerable size. Such working ministers are needed at the present day—men who are not afraid to take responsibility, and go forward where they see work to be done. Such men will always find a field, and whatever field they may occupy will soon flourish and bring forth fruit.—Sub. Recorder.

Fresh Air on the Sabbath.

If a house of worship is shut up at the close of the services on one Sabbath, and only opened at the hour of meeting on the next, it results,

1. That the air within is bad. It is to a great extent the same that was breathed by the people the week before. It lacks the principle of life and elasticity. Hence,

2. It induces drowsiness in the congregation; and renders the services comparatively barren of good.

3. Feeble persons, especially women, are led to complain that it tires them to attend meeting; and therefore spend the day at home oftener than they otherwise would.

4. The minister finds it harder work to speak; is exhausted, perhaps, before the end of his day's labors; and the next day feals 'Monday-ish.'

Therefore,

1. The house should remain open for several hours after the close of each meeting, so as to become filled with fresh air. Or if, on account of the weather, or for any other cause, this may not be done, it should be thoroughly ventilated on Monday, or the first fair day.

2. The house should be opened for several hours on Saturday. Even pure air shut up in a close room soon becomes unfit for human use. There should, therefore, be a thorough change before the Sabbath. Or, if that cannot be done, the house should be opened at sunrise on the Sabbath. And if ventilated on Saturday, it should also be opened on the Sabbath two or three hours before the commencement of public worship.

Country congregations are composed of persons, who, as a body, enjoy through the week the free pure air, and considerable exercise. Give them a dead, infected atmosphere to breathe, and make them sit still in it, and they feel the change, although they may not understand it.—Vt. Chronicle.

The first congregation of Free-Will Baptists in America was formed at New Durham, N. H., 30th of June, 1780. They now number 1107 congregations, 1015 ministers, and 55,232 communicants.

In Philadelphia County, the annual draft on the purse of the people, for the support of the paupers, is two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and a short time since, nineteen out of every twenty inmates of the Alms-House were drunkards!

Ladies' Department.

Health of Females.

No one who has been abroad can fail to notice the physical feebleness of American women in the higher classes, in comparison with the women of England or the continent. With equal intellect, sprightliness and health in childhood and early youth, and with more of beauty, at the very time when the health should be the most firm, the intellect brightest, and beauty in the ascendant, as he has seen in other lands, the observer remarks the American women to have failed. An intelligent physician observed the other day 'that every fourth woman kept her good health till she was forty; every four hundreth woman her good looks.' Without insisting upon the truth of so broad an assertion, the fact is universally admitted that American women become prematurely old. Allowing all that has been said about the influence of climate, diet, early cares, &c., in producing this, there is still much wanting—much that is unsolved, in bringing about so universal and disastrous a result. I believe this will be found to be in injudicious early education, and in this almost alone. The childhood of English and French women is spent in play.—The girlhood in physical and mental exercises combined, the former always taking the precedence, and always insisted upon even if it be to the entire neglect of the other.

The English girl spends more than one-half of her waking hours in physical amusement, that is, in amusements which tend to develope, & invigorate, and riper. the bodily powers. She rides, walks, drives, rows upon the water, runs, dances, plays, swings, jumps the rope, throws the ball, hurls the quoit, draws the bow, keeps up the shuttlecock, and all this without having it forever impressed upon her mind that she is thereby wasting her time. She does this every day until it becomes a habit, which she will follow up thro' life. Her frame, as a necessary consequence, is larger, her muscular system better developed, the nervous system in subordination to her physical, her strength more enduring, and the whole tone of her mind healthier. She may not know as much at the age of seventeen as does the American girl; and as a general thing she does not; but the growth of her intellect has been stimulated by no hot-house culture, and though maturity comes later it will last proportionally longer.—Eight hours each day of mental application, for girls between the ages of ten and nineteen years, to ten hours each day as is required at the school of which I have spoken, with two hours for meals, one for religious duties, and the remainder for sleeping and physical exercise, are enough to break down the strongest constitution.

Stimuli may enable the physical energies to supply what is needed until the end of the course—the stimuli of competition, ambition, praise, reward, and constantly aroused enthusiasm; but where then is the stock of health which should have been laid up during these years for a whole life? Exhausted—gone. The frame not half developed, the muscular powers feeble, the strength infantile, the vital system impaired, the nerves shattered, with what prospect for a wife or a mother does the girl enter upon life?—New York Spectator.

Remedies against Moths.

It is an old custom with some housewives to throw into their drawers, every year, a number of fir cones, under the idea that their strong resinous smell might keep away the moth. Now, as the odor of these is due to turpentine, it occurred to Reaumur to try the effect of this volatile liquid. He rubbed one side of a piece of cloth with turpentine; and put some grubs on the other; the next morning they were all dead, and strange to say, had voluntarily abandoned their sheaths. On smearing some paper slighly with oil, and putting this into a bottle with some of gurbs, the weakest were immediately killed; the most vigorous struggled violently for two or three hours, quitted their sheaths, and died in convulsions. It was soon abundantly evident that the vapor of oil or spirits of turpentine acts as a terrible poison to the grubs. Perhaps it may be said that even this remedy is worse than the disease, but, as Reaumer justly observes, we can keep away from a newly painted room, or leave off for a few days a coat from which stains have been removed by turpentine, why therefore can we not once a year keep away for a day or two from rooms that have been fumigated with turpentine?

It is, surprising how small a quantity of turpentine is required; a small piece of paper or linen just moistened therewith, and put into the wardrobe or drawers a single day, two or three times a year, is a sufficient preservation against moths. A small quantity of turpentine dissolved in a little spirits of wine (the vapor of which is also fatal to the moth) will entirely remove the offensive odor, and yet be a sufficient preservative. The fumes of burning paper, wool, linen, feathers, and of leather, are also effectual, for the insects perish in any thick smoke; but the most effectual smoke is that of tobacco. A coat smelling but slightly of tobacco is sufficient to preserve a whole drawer.—We trust our fair readers will not scold us for thus affording their husbands or lovers an additional excuse for perpetrating a bad habit. The vapor of turpentine and the smoke of tobacco are also effectual in driving away flies, spiders, ants, earwigs, bugs, and fleas. The latter tormentors are so abundant on the continent as frequently to deprive the weary traveller of his night's rest. If he would provide himself with a phial, containing turpentine and spirits of wine in equal parts, and would sprinkle a few drops over the sheets and coverlid before retiring to rest, he will probably have reason to be grateful for the hint. Foreigners are in the habit of smoking in their bed-rooms—a habit which excites surprise and disgust in England; it will now be seen, however, that there is a reason for the practice.—Sharpe's London Magazine.

An American merchant at the Cape of Good Hope, has within twelve years sold a hundred thousand Yankee ploughs, chiefly to the Dutch for the use of their vineyards.

Hon. Charles Townsend is just deceased in Buffalo, aged 92. He was settled there before the war, when every house except one was laid in ashes by the British troops.

It is little known, that the farther we go South, until we reach the equator, the more the rain increases. Thus, at St. Petersburg, there falls annually, 17 1-2 inches of rain; while at Vera Cruz there falls nearly 64 inches. The explanation of this is that, in warm climates, evaporation proceeds more vigorously; hence more vapors and clouds arise, and of consequence there are more showers.

Artistical.

The Drummond Light.

Since the commencement of the present century, through the rapid extension of the science of chemistry, vast improvements have taken place in the methods employed for artificial illumination. Thus, the general introduction of gas lights in most of our large cities, has furnished a light for streets and dwellings, much superior to that previously obtained from oil or candles. The argand lamp has been introduced, and with the aid of parabolic reflectors, has been successfully applied to light-house illumination. The Blue, Drummond, and French lights, with many others, have been given to the world, and have respectively won for themselves a large share of public favor. Of these, the one known, from its inventor, as the "Drummond Light," probably ranks the first. In 1824, Lieut. Drummond, then engaged in a Government survey of Ireland, in which it was frequently desirable to take the respective bearings of points, some 70 or 80 miles distant, felt the want of a light for communicating such information, that could be visible at a greater distance than any yet known. The firing of rockets, and similar means that were usually resorted to, could only be employed to advantage where the stations were not widely separated, and when the atmosphere was quite clear from any haze, which was seldom the case. It had for a long time been known that lime with some of the other earths, became very luminous when exposed to an intense heat, such for instance, as that obtained by combining a jet of oxygen gas with the flame of spirits of wine; but the happy idea of rendering this property of the earths subservient to practical purposes, was reserved for Lieut. Drummond. After a series of experiments, he found that by throwing the united flame of spirits of wine, and oxygen gas upon a ball of lime, only three-eights of an inch in diameter, a light was obtained of such brilliancy as to be fully equal to that emitted from thirteen Argand burners; almost too intense for the eye to bear. Of later years, it has undergone a slight modification, hydrogen gas having been substituted for the spirits of wine, as being less expensive, and perhaps otherwise preferable. The apparatus is very simple; it consists of two gasometers, in which the respective gases are generated; from thence proceeds two tubes, which unite, near the ball, so as to form, there, but one. The gas is conveyed by these tubes to the ball of lime, and there ignited; and with the ball is connected an arrangement for replenishing the balls as fast as consumed if desirable, a parabolic reflector is added, thus rendering it complete. This light was found to answer admirably the purpose for which it was designed—for signals, to be given at great distances. In several trials made with it to test its power, it was distinctly seen as a clear, white, vived light, at a distance exceeding 70 miles; thus placing its claim to superiority over all others, beyond dispute.

A Harvesting Barrow.—The Democratic Pacifique notices a newly patented harvesting machine invented by Adolphe Nourvaire of Langwy (Moselle,) which, it says, will supersede the use of the sickle on the Continent, and make an immense saving not only of labor but of the grain, much of which is now lost by the weather in the slow mode of harvesting. This machine it calls the Harvesting Barrow (Brouetts moissonneuse.) "A single man," it says, "propels with ease the harvesting barrow on all fields, whatever unevenness they present. The impulsive force which he gives it, passing directly from the wheels to the cutters, causes them to cut the grain stalks and any parasitic plants that may be mixed with them. Its work is wonderfully perfect—the stubble is cut short and at an even height, and what is very important is that the machine can be repaired by the common wheelwrights and blacksmiths of a village; and beside, the sharpening of the blades can be done by the workman himself as easily as he sharpens his scythe."

Young Men's Department.

Anecdote of Stephen Girard.

Mr. Girard had a favorite clerk, one who every way pleased him, and who, when at the age of twenty-one years, expected Mr. Girard to say something to him in regard to his future prospects, and perhaps lend him a helping hand in starting him in the world. But Mr. Girard said nothing, carefully avoiding the subject of his escape from minority. At length after the lapse of some weeks, the clerk mustered courage enough to address Mr. Girard on the subject.

"I suppose, sir," said the clerk, "I am now free; and I thought I would say something to you as to my future course. What do you think I had better do?"

"Yes, I know you are free," said Mr. Girard, "and my advice to you is, go and learn the cooper's trade."

This announcement well nigh threw the clerk off his track, but recovering his equilibrium, he said if Mr. Girard was in earnest he would do so.

"I am in earnest," said Mr. Girard; and the clerk rather hesitatingly sought one of the best coopers, agreed upon the terms of apprenticeship, and went at it in earnest. In process of time the young cooper became master of his trade, and could make as good a barrel as any other cooper. He went and told Mr. Girard that he had graduated with all the honors of the craft and was ready to be set up in business, at which the old man seemed much gratified and told him to make three of the best barrels he could get up. The young cooper selected the choicest materials, and soon put in shape and finished his three barrels and wheeled them up to the old man's counting-room. Mr. Girard said the barrels were first rate and demanded the price.

'One dollar' said the clerk, 'is as low as I can live by.'

"Cheap enough," said his employer, "make out your bill and present it."

And now comes the cream of the whole: Mr. Girard drew a check for $20,000, and handing it to the clerk-cooper, closed with these words:

"There take that and invest it in the best possible way, and if you are unfortunate and lose it you have a good trade to fall back upon which will afford you a good living at all times."—New Bedford Bulletin.

Population.—We understand that the recent enumeration of inhabitants shows between six and seven thousand inhabitants "within the borough limits" of Zanesville.—Zanes. Gaz.

Children's Department.

Faith in God.

I wish to tell you, in a few words, what good faith does us.

1. It makes us obey and serve God.

No one will serve God by leaving off sin and doing his will, unless he has faith to believe that he will reward all who are good, and punish all who remain wicked. Who would get any good from the Bible, if they have not faith in it? Who would try to govern the temper, the tongue, the words, and the thoughts, if they did not believe that God will bring every secret thing unto judgment? No one. But if we believe what God has told us in his Word, we shall be very careful to do what God commands us to do. The sailor goes away on the great waters, and works hard and faithfully, because he has faith to believe the captain will pay him. So we must have faith in the promises of God, if we would serve him and please him.

2. Faith makes us do good.

The apostles went every where preaching the gospel, though they were hated, and stoned, and put in prison, and put to death, because they believed God, and had faith in his Word, that whoever will not, shall be lost for ever. It is the faith which led them to endure such sufferings, that leads good men now to go to the heathen, and preach to them, and die among them. It is faith in God that leads good men to preach, to have Bible Societies, and to make great efforts, and take great pains, to have all men every where know, and believe, and obey the Bible. It is this faith which leads the praying mother to come to the bed of her little child, and hear him say his prayers before he shuts his eyes in sleep. It is faith that comforts the dying mother as she leaves this world, and leaves her dear children behind without any mother. I once visited a dying mother, who had this faith in Christ; and after she had called her children around her bed, and had taken each one by the hand, and had given each her advice and her blessing, and had bidden them farewell, and was then too much exhausted to speak aloud.

"She made a sign
To bring her babe; 'twas brought, and by her placed.
She looked upon its face, that neither smiled
Nor wept, nor knew who gazed upon it; and laid
Her hand upon its little breast, and sought
For it---with look that seemed to penetrate
The heavens---unutterable blessings---such
As God to dying parents only granted
For infants left behind them in the wind.
'God bless my child!' we heard her say, and heard
No more; and, faithful to his promise, stood,
Prepared to walk with her through death's dark vale.
And now her eyes grew bright, and brighter still,---
Too bright for ours to look upon, suffused
With many tears,---and closed without a cloud.
They set as sets the morning star, which goes
Not down behind the darkened west, nor hides
Obscured among the tempests of the sky,---
But melts away into the light of heaven!"

Todd's Lectures to Children.

Narrative.

Incidents and Fragments.

"Sick and ye visited me."

About the 10th or 12th of September, Bishop Paine came on board a Steam Boat at Memphis, on his way to Kentucky. Nearly every boat from New Orleans had on board persons suffering with yellow fever, and though no such case was acknowledged to exist on the boat in question, the Bishop kept a "sharp look out" for indications of that kind. At a late hour that night, he saw a man belonging to the boat go rather stealthily to a state room and hastily open and close the door—passing something in without entering. His suspicions were now awake, but he could get no information that night. Next morning he demanded to know if there was not a sick man on board; the answer was evasive, but he pressed the question categorically until finally it was confessed that there was a sick man, said to be a Catholic priest from New Orleans, ill in the state room in question. The Bishop requested to see him, but was put off with excuses; he urged the matter, and finally declared he would see him. His importunity and resolute stand gave him success; the door was opened, and from it issued a sickening stench which for a moment drove him back; but he rallied and made his entrance, and found a miserable being apparently at the point of death, who had been for twenty-four hours begging in vain for even a cup of cold water to be handed to him. But what was the good Bishop's surprise, when instead of some suffering stranger, he found that victim of disease and neglect to be Rev. Joseph Cross, of Poydras Street Methodist Church, New Orleans! The Bishop had him well taken care of, becoming himself his nurse, and by proper attention the patient speedily recovered. Professor Cross believes that but for the Bishop's kind interposition in his behalf, that he could not have recovered. The Bishop resolved at all risks to succor a stranger, but unexpectedly found himself saving the life of a friend.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Anecdote of D'Alembert.—D'Alembert was the son of a celebrated lady of high rank, who to conceal her indiscretion, caused him to be exposed on the steps of the church of St. Roch.—Here he was found by a poor woman, who earned her livelihood by her needle. She adopted him, maintained him by the produce of her labor, and placed him in the College of Montaign. The young man profited by the instructions received, so that, like Pascal, he made new discoveries in geometry in his fifteenth year. His name soon became known all over Europe and the learned courted the society of the young student of Montaign. Such was the fame he acquired by his early talents, that the lady at last began to be proud of having given birth to such a son. Vanity wrought what the voice of nature was incable of effecting. She one day repaired to the College, and requested to see the youth. He came. "I am your mother," said she. "You my mother, madam? You are mistaken; I have no mother, but her who took care of me in my infancy." He turned his back on her, and never saw her more, but continued the affectionate and dutiful son of the seamstress, and repaid with interest in her old age the cares she had bestowed on his childhood.

Three persons, says an exchange, in Dorset, Vermont, on the 1st of January, undertook to see who would present the pastor of their parish the largest load of wood—the one who brought the smallest, to pay a handsome forfeiture. The competitors accordingly furnished the loads, the one measuring 'five,' the other 'ten,' and the last, 'twenty-five' cords of hard wood!

Miscellaneous.

[We insert, as requested, the following article from the Christian World, and of course append the reply of the Editor of the Methodist Protestant. We are exceedingly sorry for the occurrence of this circumstance between the dear brethren concerned. Ed. W. R.]

"The Methodist Protestant."

It is well known that W. S. Stockton was one of the first pioneers of reform in the Methodist Episcopal Church; that he afterwards became one of the chief founders of the Methodist Protestant Church; and that the latter body has ever since acknowledged him as one of its truest supporters. It is also known that his son, the writer of this article, has spent his whole ministerial life—in the itinerancy of this church. Both father and son remain in the fellowship, just as they were from the beginning, having no other design, expectation, or thought, than still to remain in it—unless, indeed, there should be a departure of the majority, which is not to be anticipated, from the principles of Christian honor.

We (T. H. S.) have some desire, on these accounts, that the Confederacy shall understand the recent course of the "Methodist Protestant" toward us. We will state the facts briefly, and hope that the "Western Recorder" will republish them. Before doing this, however, we will copy a passage from the "Southern Christian Advocate," of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to show the impression made upon strangers by the writers of the "Methodist Protestant."

"If we understand the affair correctly, (and from the editorial comments of the "Methodist Protestant" we suppose we are right in our conjectures) this new society is meant to dissolve the ecclesiastical relations of the parties with the church of which they were formerly members." "Indeed some of the Protestant Methodists do not scruple to say, that it is the commencement of war upon all organized Christianity which has thrown around it the protection of government. The movement is considered as especially threatening to the welfare of their church."

Let Methodist Protestants look at this! Let the Maryland, Pittsburgh, Muskingum, and Ohio Annual Conferences which have commended and encouraged our enterprise, look at it! Let our personal friends and acquaintance, of the ministry and membership generally, look at it! They know our spirit—our way—our works: let them all look, and judge!

What does the "Advocate" report? 1. That we have originated a society which "is meant to dissolve our "ecclesiastical relations." 2. That some of our brethren do not scruple to say, it is the commencement of war upon all organized Christianity which has thrown around it the protection of government." 3. That these brethren consider the movement as "especially threatening to the welfare" of our own church.

Where did the "Advocate" find this intelligence? Was it in some low vehicle of ignorance and malice; Such a supposition would be an insult to that paper. No: it received its impressions from the "Methodist Protestant!"

Why has the organ of our church thus treated us? We know not. Conscience may yet be constrained to tell. If not, be sure the invisible ink in which the secret is written will be brought out by the heat of the Judgment!

But some may inquire:—"Why did you not correct the misrepresentations of the 'Protestant,' in its own columns, over your own name? Had you no love for the church?—no love for those who have so long loved you?—no concern for your reputation, the inheritance of your children?"

We claim attention to our answer. It will make the ears of honest men tingle. We sought an opportunity to do so—once—twice—thrice! replied to the editor, to his correspodent, and to the editor again: and, after various delays, were finally, deliberately, wilfully, coolly, and most impudently denied admission! Really! we could scarcely believe our senses. "Do you think the editor alludes to your communication?" inquired our father. "Certainly not," said I: "he could not treat us quite so cavaliery as that!" But he did, for all.

Some, doubtless, will be anxious to know the reasons for conduct so strange. We refer them to the Book Concern. Let the authorities there, if they have any reasons which they think fit to see the light, present them; and we will speedily dispose of them to the entire satisfaction of every man of good sense and good morals.

We have had our letters returned to us. The friend who was kind enough to collect them, has written to us at different stages of the affair, as follows:—"It is hopeless for you to expect any thing approximating justice from the powers that be." And again:—"Dear Brother, you have been connected with the wrong church; or, rather, the Church has fallen into the wrong hands." And again:—"You are done for in the M. P. C., and it is useless to contend with your destiny." This brother has suffered as much as we have. He is quiet. He has given up. He is virtually out of the Church, and his congregation with him. He thinks that a public controversy, to use his own word, "cheapens" every body connected with it "in the public respect." So do we. But what of that? Must not a Christian sometimes consent even to be "cheapened in the public respect" in behalf of Christ and his cause? We confess that the only unpleasant thoughts which have ever crossed our mind, in relation to this brother, have arisen from his submission. Such submission is not in us. We would prefer that our last breath might utter something like this: "Come Lord Jesus! come quickly!" but the next to the last should sound somewhat thus: "Ye that love the Lord; hate evil!" "Resist the devil; and he will flee from you!" If the Church had fallen "into the wrong hands," it would seem to us a duty to try to put it into the right hands. But what is the Methodist Protestant Church? Is the Methodist Protestant newspaper the Methodist Protestant Church? We grant that the newspaper has "fallen into the wrong hands." We foresaw that it would prove so. We warned the last General Conference of the mischief it was about to produce, by the committal of the paper to the management of zealot partizans. Moreover, the Conference heard, for itself, the present Chairman of the Book Committee avow from the altar the detestable sentiment that it is the duty of the editor of the Church organ to defend the Church right or wrong!—and heard his immediate colleague justify and maintain the same position! Still—for one only reason, because those "wrong hands" alone, proffered the money that was required—the paper was yielded to their trust! Alas! that the interests of truth and righteousness should thus be sacrificed! But the newspaper is not the Church. We do not grant that the Church has yet "fallen into the wrong hands." The remembrance of the spirit and action of that same General Conference, in another case, is enough to assure us of the prevalency of good principle, notwithstanding the sad mistake in relation to the paper. Yet the General Conference is not the Church; nor are the Electoral College which it represents, the Church; nor are the Stations or Circuits, which they represent, the Church; but rather, the Church is composed of the individual Societies, or the whole people in their primary assemblies. We believe that these include as many persons honestly, earnestly, and even sternly, if need be, devoted to the principles of mutual rights, religious liberty, and Bible Christianity, as can be found in any equal population in any Church on earth. Let us see what they will do.

We stated that our letters have been returned to us. We have not room for them here. Neither do we wish to have any thing to do with Methodist Protestant affairs in this paper—if we can help it. We have had some thought, however, of starting the "Methodist Protestant Letter-Press" again—on purpose to attend to these interests. This would be a neat and cheap publication, easily circulated, and requiring but little time to read it. Meanwhile, we expect to visit the Pittsburgh Annual Conference, and may visit some of the others. Next Spring, if we live, we must try to get to the Maryland Conference, again,—to which the Book Committee are responsible in the absence of the General Conference. Wherever we go, we will take our "suppressed correspondence" with us; and whoever wishes to see it, or hear it; whether an individual, a Society, or a Conference may do so. We tell it all in advance. We have no secrets; no private correspondence; no objects, save those we proclaim to the world. We give our enemies, if we have any, all the advanges of us they could desire. And we will see, by the blessing of Providence, if a simple exposure of wrong-doing in the Methodist Protestant Church is not sufficient to put down the wrong-doers.

Remarks of the Editor of the Methodist Protestant.

We are truly sorry that our brother presents himself in so unloving a spirit. Apart from this, we have not the slightest objection to give publicity to the above. And we do not hesitate to say that our convictions still are, that the tendency of Bro. Stockton's scheme is the disorganization of the Methodist Protestant Church, and that it has our unqualified disapprobation. Nor do we believe that any Conference in the bounds of our work has ever sanctioned or recommended it, in its present detail and form. "Christian union" they are always ready to promote; but if we are not mistaken Bro. Stockton will find that his "Society of Brotherly Love," in its present aspect, is quite another matter.

Our readers may be ready to inquire "Why was not Bro. Stockton permitted to correct the alleged misrepresentations?" The reply to this question will be found in the letters themselves! We ask no further justification of our course for the present than the letters themselves. So far as we are concerned there was no objection to publish them. But the truth is we loved Bro. Stockton too much—and the Church of our mutual choice too much, to permit them to appear. This may sound strangely to those who have not seen the suppressed communications! But wherever they are shown they will speak for us. It would be scarcely fair here to particularize their contents; but whoever may examine them will find that they were suppressed less from a disposition to oppose T. H. S. than from a determination to prevent him from doing himself injury, by assuming positions unworthy of him, and which would have presented him in a light entirely unfavorably to those who do not know his excellencies as we know them. As we shall answer for it at the Bar of God, we solemnly declare this to have been our chief reasons for the course pursued, and we therefore have no other vindications at this time to present than that which the letters themselves exhibit. We shall have no objection to meet Bro. S. face to face at the Maryland Annual Conference; before which we shall, if necessary, attempt with the utmost confidence of success, a vindication of our course towards this new 'Society of Brotherly Love.'

Had our brother confined himself to an explanation of the principles of his favorite scheme—had he contented himself with correcting what he deemed misrepresentation in us, most cheerfully would we have inserted his communications. But he could not make the distinction which every controvertist should make between himself and the subject discussed—he could not understand the difference between his position as a Minister of the Methodist Protestant Church and his position as Editor of the Weekly Christian World. With the latter alone we had to do in our remarks. It was not the man, but the scheme with which we were contending; and surely it was not necessary that in vindicating his 'scheme' he should assail with unmerited contempt the Book Concern, the Constitution and Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church, and the motives of all who think differently from him. Several of those whom he recognizes as his strongest personal friends besought us to avoid, if possible, for the sake of brother T. H. S. himself, the publication of his very first article. Papers from other sources opposed to brother T. H. S.'s views were also declined.

What a pity that a scheme of "brotherly love" should have given rise to so much warmth in the breast of that good brother who seems so desirous to see all Christians love one another! That a difference of opinion should thus arouse one who so strenuously advocates the right of "private judgment!" Really, human nature is a strange affair! Among its very best specimens what trifles will discover its littleness? We incline to the opinion that there is no such thing as a really great man.

Kendall says, "those who have never seen the prickly pear as it grows in Mexico, can hardly credit the stories of the immense size which it attains. I have seen the trunks of some of them at least two feet in diameter, growing ten feet in height without a limb, and then branching off in every direction."

A servant girl in St. Louis was accused of stealing her mistress' jewelry. This charge so wrought upon her that she committed suicide. A few days afterwards the woman found her jewelry where she had herself placed it!

Religious Intelligence.

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

LIVINGSTON CIRCUIT, Oct. 15, 1847.

BR. BASSETT:

I will now write a few lines to you respecting the prospect of Livingston circuit. The work for the last year has been advancing, and there is a call for more labor. I have been sent on this work again this year, and if my life and health is spared, I hope to be the happy instrument in the hands of God of kindling the little fire to a mighty flame. The member-ship the last year has increased one half in number, and there is a prospect of organizing some more new societies. Our quarterly meetings have been very interesting, and I trust many good impressions made on the minds of the people. Our president is universally beloved in this region of country. He has proved a father to me in affliction. I never can forget his kindness, and I hope God will reward him in the kingdom of Heaven, I feel to bless God that though we have had affliction, it is as well with us as it is. My soul has been feeding at the fountain. I feel as though I have been growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. Saving faith in Christ when on a sick bed, is a great consolation. But I hope soon again to stand on the walls of Zion, and blow the gospel trumpet, and wield the sword of the Spirit in the name of the Great Head of the church, a full and a free salvation in connection with mutual rights and christian liberty, is what the people like on this circuit.

My hand is growing weak and I must close.

Pray for us that the "word of the Lord may have free course, run and be glorified," even as it is with you. And may the God of peace bless you and yours in your laudable undertaking in spreading light and truth abroad in the world.

I remain your sincere friend and fellow laborer in the vinyard of God. Farewell.

J. B. JEWEL, Sup.

Conference Proceedings.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

Further extracts from the Minutes.

Houses of worship, list of unst'd ministers and preachers.

Tanners Creek ct—3, J. Proctor, Jr., M.
Madison ct—2, W. J. Holcomb, M.
Liberty ct—2, C. Ruddle, T. Bland, M.
Sugar Creek ct—4, S. Overstreet, G. W. Simmonds, P.
Flat Rock ct—3, J. Williams, W. B. Adams, A. R. Bartlett, R. Chambers, M., H. Wharton, W. F. Paris, P.
White River ct—1, J. Thompson, M., T. H. Howard, G. Isenower, P.
Mill Creek ct—4, A. Picket.
Stotts Creek ct—T. Alexander, M., J. Thompson, P.
Driftwood Mission—D. T. Harrison.

Friday afternoon session, October 1st, Brother Wm. Smith asked and obtained leave to read the following:

Inasmuch as we conceive it to be our duty to encourage and perpetuate every good institution for the advancement of Religion, Education and good Morals in community, therefore, Resolved, that every member of this Annual Conference be requested to use his influence in the Sabbath School cause, so as to have an efficient Sunday School established in every neighborhood, if practicable, throughout our entire District.

Resolved, that inasmuch as we still conceive the system of Slavery to be a great moral evil, and knowing that some of the members of the Methodist Protestant Church are living in the habitual practice of the same, and having petitioned the preceding General Conferences to take some action on the same to no effect, on account of legal barriers in the Constitutional Articles, therefore we recommend the call of a General Convention in order that some provision may be made whereby any member continuing the practice of the system of slave-holding may be expelled from our beloved Methodist Protestant Church.

Resolved, that we are assured that the Bible and Missionary Societies are very efficient auxiliaries for the advancement of true piety, we therefore recommend to all the members of the Methodist Protestant Church to render all the aid in their power to encourage the same.

Resolved, that we believe the Washingtonian institution to be a good organization, therefore, Recommended, that every lover of sobriety and good morals engage heartily in the encouragement of the same by precept and example.

Brother Smith after reading, moved their reception, which motion was lost.

Monday afternoon Brother Burton asked and obtained leave to have the same paper read in Conference, after which he, Burton, moved the reception, which motion carried.

On motion of Brother Wheatley they were considered by items.

Brother Wheatley moved the adoption of the first, after some discussion the yeas and nays were called, resulted as follows, (the opposition to it being, that a similar resolution was passed at our last Annual Conference, they considered this a repitition of the same,) yeas—G. Wheatley, T. Shipp, J. Edmiston, P. Clingler, I. Gardner, G. W. Cain, John Ewbank, J. Burton, D. T. Harrison, William Smith,—10. Nays—H. Collings, D. Hanna, J. Sevier, G. Baxter, W. Barnet, L. Barton, A. Empston, A. Collins, O. Barker, L. Ellis,—10.

B. Ewbank moved the adoption of the second, whereupon the vote was taken by yeas and nays without discussion. Yeas—G. Wheatley, P. Clingler, G. Baxter, J. Ewbank, I. Burton, Wm. Smith,—6. Nays—T. Shipp, H. Collings, J. Edmiston, D. Hanna, J. Seviere, W. Barnet, I. Gardner, G. W. Cain, L. Barton, W. C. Davis, A. Empston, A. Collins, O. Barker, D. T. Harrison, L. Ellis,—15.

Brother Seviere moved the adoption of the 3d, carried unanimously.

On motion of the same the 4th was adopted.

The result of the whole was, the first was a tie vote, the second lost, the third and fourth adopted. The reason that the names of some of the members of Conference are not recorded in the votes on these resolutions, they had previously asked and obtained leave of absence and were gone home.

WM. SMITH, Sec.

Tanners Creek, Oct. 14, 1847.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.

The annual session of the Methodist Protestant Church, of the Michigan District, commenced at Leoni on Tuesday, October 5th, 1847. An able introductory Sermon was delivered by Rev. Aaron Row, after which the Conference proceeded to their usual business.

The following appointments were made:

W. B. MACK, President.

Adrean C't.—J. S. Hasletine.
Bellview—Thomas New.
Barre—To be supplied.
Eaton—P. Castle.
Flint—L. A. Warren.
Franklin—Joseph Pomlret.
Grand Rapids—To be supplied.
Hillsdale—To be supplied.
Ingham and Washtenaw—B. Bayne, and J. A. Parks.
Jackson—To be supplied.
Lapeer—Samuel Hall.
Laport—James Gay.
Livingston—J. B. Jewell.
Lagrange—A. B. Button.
Suben Mission—E. Fulkison.
Marshall—George Lawree.
Macomb.—R. C. Lanning.
Niles—J. R. Stephenson.
Orchard Lake—Robert Bamford.
Prairie Ronde—To be supplied.
St. Joseph—To be supplied.
Van Buren.—A. Row.
Valparaiso—Marcus Munn.
Samuel Laphone, agent for the Leoni Institute.
L. Smith, C. Blake, and S. Fairchilds, Superannuated.
D. C. Oaks, Conference Missionary.
O. Earls, Abel White, H. H. Johnson, J. B. Frisbee, and W. Handrex, left in hands of the President.

LIST OF DELEGATES.

Henry Barrage, A. Cook, N. R. Colvin, Wm. Thomas, Henry Clemons, Wm. Densmore, Levi Spaulding, D. H. Miller, Joseph Woodman, A. White, George Smith, J. Newhouse, Charles Cotton, and N. A. Newton.

The following Resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That in view of the great deficiency in the payment of the salaries of our members, we earnestly recommend the adoption of the Subscription System, and enjoin it upon our Class leaders and Stewards to circulate subscriptions in their respective preaching places, for the support of the Gospel.

Resolved, That whereas, the last annual Conference did, by resolution, declare themselves Free & Independent of any ecclesiastical combination with the monster Slavery,—and did recommend the holding of a Convention as soon as practicable for the purpose of framing our present Constitution and Discipline, more in accordance with the good principles of the Gospel, and did elect delegates to said Convention, should one be called, &c.; therefore

Resolved, That we hereby renew all of our former resolutions, sentiments, and doings against the monster Slavery, and in favor of the entire emancipation of the oppressed,—and that we will unitedly and in all lawful and consistant measures, show our abhorance and just indignation against oppression and the oppressor.

Resolved, That the Agents and the Trustees of our contemplated Seminary in Leoni, be authorised to effect a union with the Wesleyan Methodists in erecting a Seminary, provided a union can be effected upon honorable, consistant, and correct principles.

Resolved, That the next Annual Conference be held at the village of Adrian, Michigan, to commence on the last Wednesday of September next, at ten o'clock A. M.

D. H. MILLER, Clerk.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

WABASH CONFERENCE.

Extracts of the Minutes of the Wabash Conference, M. P. Church.

The Annual Conference of the Wabash District, held its second session at Paxton's Schoolhouse in Frankfort Circuit. Commencing Wednesday, October 13th, 1847, and closed on the Monday following. O. E. Hundley preached the opening sermon. Joseph Shipp was re-elected President, and J. C. Wright, Secretary.

The following list of Members was made out from the Journal. J. Shipp, G. Williams, J. C. Wright, J. Alter,* H. Beal, W. Williams,* A. Parris,* J. McLean,* P. Smith,* G. Evans,* F. Long, R. G. H. Hanna, T. S. Falkinburge, S. W. Widney, F. Outcalt,* Z. Garrison,* D. Patee, G. L. Bodell,* Probationers, R. R. Bayly, M. H. Mott, L. Swazy.

Delegates, as returned. Wm. Morrison, J. W. Hooper,* S. Duling,* A. D. Whitford, N. T. Catterlin, W. Free, S. French,* J. Deffenbaugh, S. Grunden, J. Rice, J. Gee,* A. Notestine,* D. Richmond,* H. Sutherland. Those marked * were not present.

Admitted into the Itinerancy. R. Worth and Wm. Colwell. Readmitted, O. E. Hundly, and D. Wadkins.

Elected to Elders Orders and ordained, D. Wadkins.

Elected to Deacon's Orders and ordained, L. Swazy.

Report of Conference Steward.

Circuits.	Preachers.	Claim.	Amt. re'd.	Deficit.
Wabash ct.			no report
Crawfordsville	T S Falkinburge		$70,00
Union	J. C. Wright		no further report.
Logahsport	H. Beal	90,00	44,98
Frankfort	R. R. Bayly	41,00	50,00
Cicero	D. Patee		no further report
Middletown	G. Evans	40,00	30,00	10,00
Deerfield	F. Outcalt		no report
St Joseph ct. & Columbia miss.	W. Williams / G Williams	150,00	no report 150,00
Mississinawa	J. C Wright	50,00	35,00	15,00
St Marys miss.	Z. Garrison	100·00	58,00	42,00
Rock River	F. Long		no report
Wildcat	S W Widney		satisfied
Fallcreek	A. Parris		no report.

No's in Society, and list of unst. Ministers & Preachers.

Crawfordsville—112, H. Long.
Union—70.
Logansport—58.
Frankfort—120.
Cicero—124.
Middletown—212.
St. Joseph & Columbia—190, S. Lomis, J. A. Boyce.
Mississinawa—98, E. Conn.
Wild Cat—6.
Wabash, Deerfield, St. Mary's, Rock River, and Fall Creek, no report.

The Committee on boundaries reported the following alterations.

1. The Mississinawa ct. so enlarged as to embrace Wildcat Mission.

2. The St. Joseph ct. is so enlarged as to embrace that part of St. Marys Mission lying in Allen county.

3. Deerfield ct. is so enlarged as to embrace the balance of St. Marys Mission.

Report of the Stationing Committee.

APPOINTMENTS.

J. SHIPP, President.

Deerfield Ct.—T. S. Falkinburge.
Middletown Ct. & Fallcreek Miss.—J. C. Wright, Wm. Collwell.
St. Joseph Ct—O. E. Hundley, Wm. Williams, M. H. Mott, sup. asst.
Logansport & Wabash Ct.—H. Beal.
Frankfort Ct.—G. Williams.
Crawfordsville Ct.—D. Wadkins.
Union Ct.—L. Swazy.
Mississinawa Ct.—D. Patee.
Cicero Ct.—S. W. Widney, S. Alter sup. ass't.
Columbia Mission—R. Worth.

Left in the hands of the President, R. R. Bayly, P. Smith, F. Long, F. Outcalt, Z. Garrison, J. Briggs.

Superannuated, G. Evans.

Transferred to unstationed list at his own request, R. G. H. Hanna.

Withdrawn, J. McLean.

A. Parris, transferred to the Illinois Conference.

G. L. Bodell was referred to the President last Conference, but in consequence of informality, there being no action in the case, is continued referred.

The following preamble and resolution were adopted in reference to the case of Br. J. Briggs, Whereas, the name of Br. J. Briggs was inadvertently transferred to the unstationed list at our last Conference. Therefore resolved, that his name be again entered on the Itinerant list.

The following resolutions were passed regulating the election of delegates in the Wabash District.

Resolved 1st. that the election of delegates on circuits, be held in the classes by the Stewards or Leaders between the 3rd. and 4th. Quarterly Meetings.

2nd. That the superintendent shall give or cause to be given at least two weeks notice of said election at all the classes.

3rd. That all the votes given in each society shall be cast on the same day and within one hour from the time of opening of the election and that the votes there and then given shall be sealed up and sent to the Quarterly Conference and if it be found that there is no election the Quarterly Conference shall be competent to elect out of the three (condidates) having the highest number of votes.

N. B. this resolution shall not be so construed as to require all the classes to vote on the same day.

The committee (on the communication from the Indiana Conference in reference to the Ludlow claim) presented the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

Resolved 1st. that this Conference recognise the general agency of Thos. Ewbank for this as well as the Indiana Conference.

Resolved 2nd. that Br. N. T. Catterlin be appointed agent for this Conference, to collect and pay over such moneys, and other means to the general agent as may come into his hands for the above specified object.

Resolved 3rd. that this Conference appoint the Stewards, Ministers and Delegates, agents to receive and pay over such means as may come into their hands to the said N. T. Catterlin, or to his successor to be applied to the above purpose.

Resolved 4th. that the ministers and delegates are hereby instructed to lay the matter before their respective Quarterly Conferences at their first session requesting their co-operation.

The Conference passed the following preamble and resolutions on the Bible and Tract societies. Whereas it is the duty of the christian church as a body and individually to aid and encourage every enterprise and institution that has a tendency to advance the cause of Christianity, and roll on the happy period "when all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest:" and whereas, we consider the American Bible and Tract Societies eminently calculated to promote these glorious objects. Therefore,

Resolved, 1st. by the Wabash Annual Conference, M. P. Church, that we heartily approve the efforts of the American Bible Society to place a coppy of the Sacred Scriptures in the hands of every family in the United States, and that we individually aid and encourage this good institution as far as circumstances will admit.

Resolved 2nd. that we also cordialy approve the endeavors of the American Tract Society to circulate religious knowledge and spread a holy influence by means of cheap and excellent religious books and tracts, and that we will also aid and encourage this sacred enterprise as far as practicable.

The following in relation to Sabbath Schools were adopted.

Whereas the youth of our land are destined in future to sway the Destiny of both Church & State, and the weal or wo of both hang (to a great extent) on the moral culture of the rising generation, and whereas the American Sunday School Union offer the most efficient means of training up the children of our country in the way that they should go, Therefore,

Resolved, That the superintendent of each circuit and Mission in this District be required to organise Sabbath Schools auxilary to the Amer. Sunday School Union, within the bounds of every class and neighborhood where they preach and report the number of Schools—Teachers—Children in attendance, and libraries to the next An. Conference.

The following passed by a unanimous rising vote, Resolved that the thanks of this body be tendered to the people of this vicinity for their generous hospitality manifested in sustaining this Conference.

On motion the Conference adopted for the government of Missions in this District the law found in Discipline of 1843 for the government of Missions under the head of home missions.

The Standing District committee, H. Beal, S. W. Widney, Itinerants; Wm. Morrison, S. Grunden, Laymen; R. G. H. Hanna, unstationed Elder.

Br. Edmonson from the Indiana Conference was with us, and invited to an honorary seat.

The Protestant will please coppy.

J. C. WRIGHT, S. W. WIDNEY, } Publishing Committee.

The next Conference is to be held at Middletown, commencing the third Wednesday in Oct. 1848.—Committee.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 4, 1847.

ANNUAL REGISTER, 1848.

This publication is now out of press. Those who have ordered parcels, will, we trust, soon receive them. Meanwhile, every subscriber for the "Western Recorder," who pays $2 in advance for Vol. 9, shall receive a copy by mail.—We sell them this year at $3 per hundred,—50 cents per dozen.

EXCHANGES.—Brethren of the press to the east of this point, who favor us with their exchange, will greatly oblige us by having their papers directed for us to Putnam, instead of Zanesville.

A brief Appeal, in behalf of the Western Recorder.

We deem it expedient just now to address a few words, especially to Meth. Protestants in the West in reference to the claims of our paper. Indeed we have been advised to do so by our seniors and superiors, who take an interest in the prosperity of our paper. We shall have to speak plainly. Is the publication of the Western Recorder desirable—is it necessary? Should it be patronised and sustained? Those who answer in the affirmative, must know that an enlargement of its patronage is imperiously needed.

A highly respectable church paper is published in Baltimore. We are glad to know that it has a two fold more extensive patronage than the Western Recorder has at present. Yet we conceive that the latter should be at least as well sustained as the former. In the great western valley is found nearly one half the entire membership of the Methodist Protestant Church. And notwithstanding the claims of the paper in Baltimore, which have never been called in question, a leading portion of our community have from our first organization, been of the opinion that the interests of the church require also the publication of a periodical in the West. And indeed we must be permitted to enquire how we could, as a religious community, do without such an organ of communication with the several Conferences, and Circuits, and Stations? Where can be found equal facilities, or any medium of any kind, as Methodist Protestants, so efficient for spreading information, obtaining co-operation, and exciting each other, as churches and individuals to love, labor and all goodness? As a means of spreading and defending truth, and sending it all through the fellowship in the west, is not the Western Recorder indispensably necessary to Methodist Protestants? Make it then, by sustaining it, an able defender and successful promoter of pure truth.

The enemy knows how to sow his tares by secular and infidel publications. The press is vigorously used by the enemies of God and his cause. It teems with publications of a filthy, poisonous, deadly, soul destroying character. It is frightful to contemplate the havoc thus made in our new western world. Surely, the churches—(and the Methodist Protestant Church should not be the least nor last—) should use the same mighty instrument; with equal, yea, greater vigor, to neutralize the effects of such publications, and to undeceive all they may; at the same time carrying light into all the families of our friends and fellowship, which have readers in them.

But how shall this good work of sustaining the Western Recorder, if good work it be, be fully accomplished? By the ministers, preachers, members and friends of the M. P. Church. They can do it. Who then will say, Let us give the publisher ONE THOUSAND NEW NAMES in three months? That number will do to begin with in the way of enlargement. Who says, Yea, this thing can be done; and as so far my influence and exertions can extend, shall be done. Whoever so says, and does as he says, deserves well of the church and the country.

We might refer to the action of several An. Conferences, which have been pleased, by the adoption of the most approving resolutions, to commend the Western Recorder to the general patronage of our community. This has been done by the Pittsburgh, Muskingum, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan Conferences. And though it may not be generally known, a similar expression of approval was given by the General Conference of 1846.

Then we believe it is the voice of our community generally, in the west, that the Western Recorder should be published. If then this is the case, should it not have a respectable patronage sufficient to sustain and establish it beyond the apprehension of embarrassment or failure? Within a few months past, we have enlarged the size of our paper, and expended four hundred dollars for new type and other apparatus for the purposes of our office, so that we are now prepared to turn out as respectable a sheet as is published by almost any religious denomination. And indeed, did our modesty permit, we might give scores of flattering opinions in reference to the general appearance, and value of our paper. Not only are we assured that it bears comparison with other religious newspapers, but a number give it the preference above some of the best, which we might name. Aye, and in several instances we have had the testimony of members of other denominations that the Western Recorder ranks amongst the best of family newspapers. Then the published testimony of numerous cotemporaries of the religious press, is too flattering to be quoted.

Shall then the Western Recorder be sustained—shall its subscription list be doubled? Or shall at least one thousand new subscribers be furnished us within three months? This can easily be done, and we will tell how it can be done, in much less time. We send a copy of the paper to about one hundred and fifty travelling preachers, nearly all of whom have it free for their agency. These brethren are distributed all over the country, but for the most part in this & adjoining Districts. Now, if each of those brethren will obtain for us from eight to ten new subscribers, it will double our subscription list at once. Or if each will obtain for us but seven it will make one thousand in all. And who says this cannot be done? A few of the ministers choose to pay for their paper, so as to be free from the obligation to act as agents. If such will obtain subscribers, and collect payments for us, we will gladly refund every man his dollar, for his agency would help us more than his money.

Brethren, shall this thing be done? Will you cheer us with a rapid ingathering of names to our list? How many of our brethren will do their part? With little exertion, in good & populous Circuits or Stations, more than the number specified could be obtained, and this would compensate for those in poorer circuits where so many may not be obtained. We beg leave to say that we are surprised that some ministers, who have good opportunities, do so little for the paper. A brother in a certain District, who has a large field, has collected for us just one dollar a year for 2 years past, whose predecessor used to collect from $30 to $60 per year for Br. Springer for the Western Recorder. This year, that brother will do nobly, we trust, and many others also.

We were cheered a few days ago in an interview with the brother recently appointed to charge of Zanesville Circuit. On his first visit to this place, he asked us for a list of our dues, expressing his intention (unsolicited) to obtain all within the bounds of his charge, and to get as many new subscribers as possible. We have no fear of getting too many, only we desire brethren to get only such as they believe will be good and responsible. Please obtain the pay in advance when practicable, or have assurances of it within three months, or at all events obtain it within the year. Brethren who do their part as agents, are entitled to their paper free, and shall also have our gratitude; and we shall cheerfully render some compensation or premium to those who do very well.

LEAGUE OF BROTHERHOOD.—In these war times, whilst the spirit of war is doing so much harm, it is pleasant to know that the cause is taking root in the hearts of many. It is little more than one year, since a peace pledge was originated, and signed by a little band, calling themselves a League of Universal Brothrhood. That remarkable man, Elihu Burritt, of Worcester, Massachusetts, identified himself with this philanthropic scheme, and has for several months been travelling as an apostle of the cause of brotherhood and peace. An excellent weekly religious paper, devoted to this enterprise, called the Christian Citizen, is published at Worcester, Massachusetts. Mr. Burritt, (though now absent in Europe,) is principal editor. For several months, the "Citizen" has presented each week, a double column of names to the pledge. Several hundred, are added each week. We see it stated in a late number of the paper referred to that not merely hundreds, or even thousands, but that several tens of thousands of names have been signed to this peace pledge in a single year, and these, not in a single country or state, but in all the free states of the American Union, in the Canadas, the West Indias, and in England, Ireland, Scotland and France.

By the way, we marvel that our friend Burritt, thus prolongs his stay across the water. We doubt not he is doing a great and good work in the British Isles, in France &c. But we think his services are needed here. Let the Learned Blacksmith take the tour of this country in the cause of Peace, and we apprehend he would do an immense amount of good. And we think that just now would be the proper time. May Heaven speed the cause of Peace.

Rev. J. H. Overstreet, a native of Virginia, emigrated to Kentucky in 1800, resided in Louisville, Ky. from 1812 to his death, which took place January 20, 1847, in the 65th year of his age. He seceded from the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1828, after having been a member of it from 1809. His last illness was protracted 6 mouths, during which he would frequently rejoice in God his Savior. He spoke freely to his friends of his approaching death, assuring them that he had nothing to fear, that he was redeemed and saved by the blood of the Lamb of God.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.—The Cincinnati Commercial announces the death of Mr. Benjamin Mason, an early settler of Cincinnati, on the 19th inst., aged about 76. He was much respected as a citizen and as a Christian. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.—We knew him well for thirty years past, and ever admired his correct and exemplary demeanor, as well as his amiable virtues.

ANOTHER FLOOD.—We regret to learn that the recent great rains have produced an inundation in the valley of the Little Miami, which has been seriously destructive to the property of farmers, and also to the public works. It is stated that the waters have been higher than at any period since the great flood of 1832. We have not met with many particulars.

APPLE TREES.—We are requested to state that a Catalogue of the extensive varieties of Apple Trees, kept for sale by George Dana and Son, at their nursery, Belpre, Washington county, O., can be seen by calling on G. N. Guthrie, of Putnam, or at the office of this paper. It is expected that a supply of the trees will shortly be placed in the hands of Mr. G. for sale.

REV. JAMES M'COY.—We regret to learn by a private letter from Brother John Burns, that this brother, a valuable unstationed minister of the Mt. Pleasant circuit, recently departed this life.—Brother M. was one of the earliest ministers of the Methodist Protestant Church in this state—was a member of the Ohio Conference at its first two sessions at Cincinnati. We cherish a grateful recollection of the time, when we used to find a welcome and pleasant home, at his residence, in the first year of our itinerating,—1830–31. We have received a biographical sketch of Br. M. from the pen of one of his sons, which shall be published in our next paper.

THANKSGIVIG DAY.—We continue to add to our list of States as we meet with the Governor's proclamations.

For November 25th:

New Hampshire,	Missouri,
Massachusetts,	New York,
Connecticut,	Maine,
Indiana,	Rhode Island,
Michigan,	Pennsylvania.

☞We tender our apology for the accidental omission last week of the quarterly meeting notice of Brother Baldwin, and the marriage notice of Brother Nutty.

THAT DAILY.—We see that the editor of the Zanesville Courier, after an experiment of about three months, has found it necessary for want of sufficient patronage to discontinue his daily issue. He has resumed the tri-weekly publication of the Courier. We are under obligations to Mr. Lyman for the use of his daily and tri-weekly, in exchange for our weekly. He has declined receiving compensation from us.

COLUMBIAN MAGAZINE.—We have received the November number of this attractive work. The illustrations are: The little Hero; The Schoolmaster returning home; The Fashion plate, and Original Music. As usual, the contents are entirely original, furnished by numerous able writers, chiefly ladies. Published by Ormsby and Hackett, New York. $3 per Annum. Two copies for $5. We failed to receive the October number of the Columbian—have not seen it.

ALEXANDER'S MESSENGER.—By a late fire in Philadelphia, the office of this paper was partially consumed, and the property of the publisher otherwise seriously damaged by water. The apparatus of the printing office was much damaged. The publisher states that though partially insured, his policy will not by several thousand dollars cover the loss he has sustained. Yet he adds that he is enabled to bear up against the misfortune. We are gratified to learn that the publication will not be interrupted. We see that numerous Philadelphia Publishers have more than sympathised in the loss of Mr. A. That's right.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—We have received the November number, of this beautiful work. It contains not less than 25 embellishments. Of these, The Cottage Musician, comes first, a mezzotint: then two beautiful colored views of Model Cottages. These are followed by Fashion Plates, Music, Ladies' Work Department, &c., &c. Sixty pages in this number. Amongst the contributors, are T. S. Author, A. Stephens, E. A. Poe, Mrs. Annan, and Miss Leslie. $3 per annum. L. A. Godey, Philadelphia.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. ORRIN GREGORY.

Death in whatever form it may come, and on whatever victim it may lay its irresistable grasp, is fraught with consequences of the most impressive character, and in the living is calculated to awaken sensations of seriousness and reflection. But when one of exalted character and moral worth is suddenly taken from us, those sensations are doubly impressive and interesting.

Though we cannot comprehend the mysterious Providence that suddenly takes from the walls of Zion one who to all human appearance has just arrived at a period when he could render the most efficient service—and when those services were most demanded, it becomes us to "be still and know that he is God."

These reflections have been elicited by the unexpected death of REV. ORRIN GREGORY, who departed this life March the 9th, 1847, after a short illness of four days.

The subject of this notice was born in Fairfield, Vermont, July 9th, 1807. At the age of 16 he removed with his parents to New York, and subsequently to the state of Michigan. Of his early life and religious impressions we know but little. It was not until in the 23d year of his age he fairly made up his mind to be religious—his convictions were pungent—his conversion sound an evangelical, and the evidences of his acceptance through Christ the beloved, clear, scriptural, and satisfactory.—April the 29th, 1830, he was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Durand. About this time he took a firm, decided stand in favor of the cause of God, and united in fellowship with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Shortly after his conversion he became seriously impressed that it was his duty to devote himself to the work of the ministry. For 11 years he struggled with these impressions, in consequence of which he was often under strong temptations and though strict in the observance of social, family, and secret devotions, he had but little spiritual enjoyment or close, intimate, communion with God.

In 1841 he was led to seek earnestly for the blessing of 'entire sanctification or perfect love.' At this moment his stubborn will yielded its assent to obey the call. He now deliberately united with the Methodist Protestant Church and immediately commenced the work of an Itinerant minister. For six months he travelled the Ingham circuit, within the bounds of which his family resided, and witnessed to a great extent the rich displays of the power of God in the salvation of sinners. His next appointment was to the Barry circuit, where it pleased God to make him and his colleague the honored instruments of the hopeful conversion of more than five hundred souls. The two subsequent years he spent on St. Joseph circuit—many were added to the church—but the second year (from causes we need not mention) was one of sore trial to our dear brother. His next field of labor was the South Bend circuit. This also was with him a year of great mental conflict and depression, but still God owned his labors by giving him souls as seals to his ministry. In the fall of 1846 he received his last appointment from his brethren. He was again placed on the Barry circuit. At the commencement of this year our dear brother made a full and entire consecration of himself to God and the church—the fruits of which were soon manifested in the effect produced by his close, powerful, and evangelical preaching in the awakening and conversion of sinners.

In the midst of a gracious revival at a protracted quarterly meeting, he left to visit his family, designing to return in a day or two and continue the effort, but on arriving at his home he was taken suddenly ill with the lung fever. The best medical aid was immediately obtained, but his disease baffled all human skill, terminating at once his labors and his sufferings.

During his short but fatal illness he possessed his soul in patience, frequently speaking with the utmost composure of his approaching departure, and his glorious prospects beyond the grave.

To him death had no sting, the grave no terrors, "all was well." With an inspired apostle he could say "thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—Taking an affectionate leave of his weeping family, commending them to the widow's God and the orphan's Father, after giving a few directions concerning his funeral, and selecting the place of his burial, he sweetly and triumphantly fell asleep in Jesus, leaving a widow and five children, together with a large circle of warm and sincere friends to mourn his premature and unexpected departure, but their loss is his infinite and eternal gain. To say our departed brother was without a failing would be doing him injustice, and the cause of God an injury, but they were more than balanced by his many virtues and excellent qualities.

He will long live in the grateful remembrance of the church of his adoption, and in the affections of the people among whom he has devoted his short but useful ministry. His talents as a preacher were respectable and useful—by close application to study he was making rapid improvement, and no doubt if his life had been spared he would soon have ranked among the first preachers of the age. M.

Schoolcraft, Mich., Oct. 18, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. G. R. WILLIAMS.

DIED—In the town of Lee, county of Calhoun, Michigan, in the month of February last, Rev. GEORGE R. WILLIAMS.

Mr. Williams was born in Bristol, Ontario co., New York, A. D. 1812., of religious parents, belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the age of four years—in consequence of the death of his father, was given to a Presbyterian Deacon, and by him brought up. He experienced religion at about 19 years of age, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was soon licensed to exort; and about two years after, was licensed to preach,—he married about the age of twenty-one, and after being in various places in the State of N. York, he and his family removed to Ohio, about the year 1839. About four years after taking license to preach he removed his relation from the M. E. church to the M. P. church, and labored in the State of Ohio, in the capacity of a Local and Itenerant preacher for about seven years, when he, with his family, removed to Michigan, joined the Michigan Conference in the year 1846, & was placed on Bellviw Circuit; he moved on his family, now consisting of a wife and six children, and commenced his labors as soon as possible and labored faithfully and with good success until he was attacked with the sickness which ended in his death. His last effort in his public ministry was holding a protracted meeting—which he closed and went to his appointment, about six miles distant, was taken sick before he had preached, and after a few day's severe sickness he yielded his soul up to God in the full hope of a blessed immortality. His strong faith in the promises of God enabled him to commit to the safe keeping and kind protection of his Heavenly Father, his companion and partner, and his endeared and affectionate children, with the confidant assurance that he would safely protect and guide them by the hand of an inscrutable providence: he was called away in the midst of his usefulness, and while we deeply feel and deplore his loss, we yet rejoice that our loss is his infinite gain. He died with his armour on, with his lamp trimmed & burning, and when we contemplate his peaceful and triumphant death, we may truly desire to live the life of the righteous, "that our last end may be like his." In life he maintained an unblemished character, and we trust that great is his reward in Heaven. His death was such as to afford the most satisfactory evidence that he now rests from his labors and his works do follow him. "The world passeth away, and the lusts thereof; but he that doeth the will of God, abideth forever." How fragrant is now his memory? being dead he yet speaketh. He points to the Lord Jesus Christ, as the glory and the all of our hope. Let his life and his death be improved by the living who are the dying! by friends that their friend may cheer them more in his father's house hereafter, where Death himself their Williams shall restore.

D. H. M.

Written for the Western Recorder.

JOSIAH BROWN.

BR. BASSETT: I was requested to write a few lines to inform the readers of your excellent paper of the death of Br. Josiah Brown, who died last June.

Br. Brown was raised in this county, (Broxton, Va.,) where he sought the Lord and found him to the joy and comfort of his soul, joined the M. P. Church, and was licensed to exort by said church, in which he labored with great acceptability, and bid fair to be useful. He was married last March to a daughter of Mr. McCartna's, who was only permitted to enjoy the friendship and happiness of her young companion but a few months, when that chord was cut asunder by death, and while the body was consigned to the narrow limits of the grave, that noble principle, the soul, took its everlasting flight to the paradise of God, while sister Brown is left behind to mourn the loss of her loving companion.

Br. Brown died of inflamation of the brain.

While pity prompts the rising sigh,
O, may this truth, imprest
With awful power,—I too, must die—
Sink deep in every breast.

WM. M. BETTS.

Flatwoods, Braxton county, Va., Sept. 23d, 1847.

News of the Week.

Burnt District.

With the expense of a great deal of labor and time, we have compiled the following table showing the number of buildings erected since the great fire of April, 1845. It comprises all descriptions of buildings, from first class hotels, warehouses, stores and manufactories, to ordinary private dwellings. And it may here be remarked that the greater proportion of the buildings are much larger, more commodious and much better adapted to business purposes than those destroyed by the fire. There are few cities in the Union of corresponding means where such rapid advancements have been made in business and in buildings as our own. It is a marvel to strangers, as it may be to us at home, how such rapid strides could be taken. The success of Pittsburgh, however, need be no secret. There are natural elements of wealth here, which but few States are favored with, and added to this private enterprise, second to no other place in the Union. A little more public spirit would make Pittsburgh all that is desirable either for business or for a residence.

Districts	Market & Ferry		Buil'ngs
Between 2d & 3d,	"	"	11
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	10
	Market and Wood
" D'nd a. & 4th,	"	"	14
" 3d & 4th,	"	"	22
" 2d & 3d,	"	"	23
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	40
" Water & 1st,	"	"	32
	Wood and Smithfield
" D'nd a. & 5th,	"	"	11
" D'nd a. & 4th,	"	"	45
" 3d & 4th,	"	"	31
" 2nd & 3d,	"	"	22
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	35
" Water & 1st,	"	"	21
	Smithfield & Grant
" D'nd & 4th,	"	"	24
" 3d & 4th,	"	"	33
" 2d & 3d,	"	"	44
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	31
" Water & 1st,	"	"	34
	Grant and Ross
" 3d & 4th,	"	"	22
" 2d & 3d,	"	"	23
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	15
" Water & 1st,	"	"	19
" River & Water,	"	"	3
	Ross and Canal
" River & Water,	"	"	12
" 1st & 2d,	"	"	6
" 3d & 4th,	"	"	10
" 4th & 5th,	"	"	4
Pipetown,			12
Total,			609

There are yet a number of vacant lots in the Burnt District, but the greater portion are occupied by buildings far superior to those destroyed.

No man could ask better evidence of the prosperity and business capacity of the "Iron City," than is given in the above table. Two years since one-half of the commercial and business portion of our city was in ruins. Now scarcely a trace of the devastation is to be seen. New, commodious add costly edifices have taken the place of those destroyed, business has been increased, population extended, and a steady advance in the value of Real Estate.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

The Central Railroad.

We learn with sincere pleasure that this great national work—so vitally important to our city—is going on with commendable zeal and energy under the supervision of its chief engineer, J. Edgar Thompson, Esq., whose fame has been so well earned by his successful operations on the extensive railroads of Georgia. We have conversed with one of the contractors for the great bridge over the Susquehanna. This noble structure will be 2700 feet in length. Its masonry of cut stone will be so massive as to defy the floods which have recently swept off all the bridges of the Juniata and Susquehanna. This gentleman has 214 hands at work, preparing an immense quantity of cut stone, from the extensive quarries opened in the immediate vicinity. All possible despatch will be given to its earliest completion, as the entire distance from Harrisburgh to Lewistown, nearly 60 miles will be ready to travel by that time if it is finished. As an evidence of the zeal with which the work has been prosecuted, we learn that two sections, of a mile each, have, for more than a month, been ready for the superstructure! In a few weeks the remaining distance nearly to the Allegheny will be put under contract. The surveys have been prosecuted with great care and ability, so as to secure the best possible route; and it is now quite probable that this can be effected several miles shorter than originally anticipated, by crossing the mountain at an easy grade without inclined planes.—Phil. Bulletin.

☞ Accounts from Greenland, state that thro' the whole of the country, excepting the far North, the lrst winter was one of unexampled mildness, and that very little snow fell. It was only for a few days in the second half of April that the cold was at all severe. The fisheries of the natives of Greenland were very successful; that of foreigners only moderately so. The last winter was also unusually mild in Iceland, especially at the North and the East. On the South and the Western parts of the Island, there were very frequent rains and very little snow. Iceland fishers have also been very productive.

Captain Christian Pauessen, commander of the three masted Danish ship Triton, just arrived from Santa Cruz at London, has discovered an island entirely unknown, situated at 30 degrees 9 minutes North latitude and 42 degrees 39 min. West longitude.—New Bedford Mercury.

The Magnetic Telegraph will be extended to Charleston, South Carolina, early in December. The registers are all up at Raleigh, Fayetteville, Cheraw, and Columbia, and operators stationed there to be in readiness for the commencement.

The Cholera.

The Great Scourge of humanity—a scourge more awful than ATILLA and his Huns—more terrible than the eruptions of a volcano—more devastating than the throes of an earthquake—the Great Scourge of the Cholera is at this moment advancing towards us with silent but indomitable rapidity, if we may believe the intelligence received almost daily from the frontiers of the Russian Empire. Its course is described as being northwesterly, and it is said to have already penetrated into the interior of Europe. GOD defend us from the agonies which desolated the world in 1832!

The Philadelphia American says—The above, from the London Sun of October 2d, the opening of a pretty long leader couched in language of similar character, expresses the feeling, almost amounting to panic, with which some of our European cotemporaries seem disposed to regard the continued progress of the Oriental pestilence, which threatens a renewal of the calamities of 1831–2. The Cholera is, in fact, once more in Europe, sweeping with all its ancient slowness of pace, but breadth of devastation, along its accustomed path, from east to west, and, as we have every reason to suppose that it will pass over Europe, and ultimately, disregarding the barrier of the Atlantic, reach our own shores, as in 1832, we have looked over our foreign files for notes of its progress, such as must naturally interest American readers.

The last intelligence that we have from England shows that the Cholera is already at Riga, on the Baltic, which seems to be the most easterly point it has reached, and from which it extends, in a line S. S. E. through Kieff (Kiew) to Trebizond, on the Black Sea, and, further south, through Asiatic Turkey, into Persia. It made its first appearance in Trebizond on the 8th of September, and in Riga on or before the 12th. Thirty cases were reported in Trebizond on the 11th, described as being "not very virulent." About the same number of cases, daily, are reported at Erzeroum, (near Trebizond,) where one-third the cases were fatal. The mortality in Russian towns is stated at two-thirds the number of cases. The disease had not reached Constandinople, where it was, however, almost daily expected, (a fatal case had occurred on the steam packet Sultan, coming from Trebizond, and where a quarantine of observation had been already established. Rigid quarantine regulations had been instituted at Genoa and Palermo; and they were talked of at Malta and Marseilles.

It is impossible to divest the mind of awe, and even terror, while brooding over the anticipated advent of a dreadful epidemic, in which so many will apprehend the direct judgment of God upon an age of light and wickedness. But the ignorant suffer with the wise, and the wise are called upon and permitted to lessen the affliction which would otherwise fall upon the masses with unequal weight. Experience has already proved that the resources of science in Europe and the United States are competent to the successful resistance of the East Indian plague, whose ravages were lessened, and, in many instances, prevented, during its former visitation, fifteen years ago; and now, with a better knowledge of it than was then enjoyed, we have every reason to believe that, should it visit us again, it will present few of its former terrors.

Nor is there, perhaps, any occasion to expect that its passage to the New World will be a speedy one. Looking back to the records of its former occurrence, (from which we may compute its rate of travel,) we find that it made its appearance in Eastern Russia in the fall of 1830: at Moscow, for example, on the 28th of September.

It was not until thirteen months afterwards that it reached England, (it broke out at Sunderland, on the 28th of October. 1831;) and it was not until the 9th of June, 1832, that it appeared at Quebec, upwards of twenty months after its appearance at Moscow. Anticipating for it a similar rate of progression now, (and experience shows a remarkable uniformity, generally speaking, in its advance,) there would seem little occasion to expect its appearance in England before next October, or in America before the summer of 1850.

Science and benevolence, however, are now busily engaged in watching its steps. Governments and municipalities stands in readiness to prepare, at a moment's warning, for its approach; and we may expect its coming hereafter, should it come, assured that it cannot take us by surprise and equally assured that all the resources of knowledge and humanity will be in requisition to deprive it of its dangers.

Waddy Thompson—Slavery.

Gen. Thompson lately addressd a public meeting at Greenville, S. C. on the slave question. He was as usual very ardent, if not violent, against the war and the Wilmot Proviso. As to the Proviso, he said:

"He believe the north would not recede from their position. Ten States, with votes enough to control the popular branch of congress and to elect a President of the United States, had taken their arrogant and insulting stand—and they were daily gaining strength. Last year 300,000 foreigners landed on our shores—not 2,000 of whom settled in the South—the rest spreading over the North and West, with imported sentiments hostile to our welfare. With Oregon and the expected accession of Mexican territory, added to the present non-slaveholding States, the number of free States would be ultimately numerous and strong enough to amend the Constitution & overthrow the institutions of the South."

He thought we had territory enough already, and that we should oppose any extention. The territory it was proposed to obtain from Mexico, was of little value, barren, shingled with Spanish and Mexican grants; and, if the Proviso was adopted, he thought slaves would not be taken there.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday a colored man named Nero Parmsley, aged about forty-five, a teamster in the employ of Mr. J. M. Sharpless, residing near Chester, Delaware County, had one of his legs broken and dreadfully crushed on Tuesday morning, by a stone falling upon it which had been thrown from a quarry, whilst it was being blasted. He was conveyed to the Hospital, and during the day he was compelled to submit to amputation of the limb.—Phil. Sat. Gleaner.

NEW ORLEANS.—The New Orleans Picayune of the 17th says: "The report of interments for the week past shows that the health of the city is gradually improving. The total number of interments was 109 against 133 the week previous. The interments from yellow fever were 41 against 48 the preceding week. The improvement has been greater the last two or three days than it was during the early part of the week. We have very confident hopes that very soon we shall not recognise the fever as an epidemic."

The line of Magnetic Telegraph is now complete between New York and Montreal, a distance of one thousand and twenty-one miles. Communications have been passed over the line with complete success. The connection of Boston with this line, at the Montreal end, will soon be made.

Condition of Ireland.

From the following extract of a letter received by the last steamer, it will be seen that the dangers and difficulties of Ireland are by no means entirely ended. The letter comes from the neighborhood of Derry, where the state of things is usually better than in the South or West.—Sat. Gleaner.

"We have nearly got the harvest over in this country; the crops in general are good, and there is a much larger quantity of grain than in former years; there was, however, but a small quantity of potatoes planted when compared with former years, and still the disease is among them, altho' not to the same extent as last year. I fear we shall have to struggle through another year of difficulty and distress, and be obliged to rely on your supplies of maize to a considerable extent. Prices, however, will be much lower than they have been averaging for the last year, and there will not be the same mania for speculation, nor the money to purchase with. You have seen no doubt the heavy failures which have taken place in London, Liverpool, and almost all the great trading towns. Derry has not escaped. The London house of Leslie, Alexander & Co., was intimately connected with Derry, the head of the firm having an estate in the county of £8000 a year. Its failures brought down the McIntires, and William Hazlett & Co., and last week John Munn was obliged to stop, his liabilities being upwards of £30,000."

Construction of Powder Magazines.

The Boston Transcript, after noticing the recent terrible accident at Nashville, makes the following suggestions as to the mode in which powder magazines should be constructed:

"Powder magazines should be constructed with walls of very heavy stones, well cemented and strongly fixed together, and with a slight wooden roof, slightly fastened to the walls, and separating of itself, into pieces about six feet square, as soon as lifted by the explosion. Had the powder magazine in Nashville been thus made, its terrible and destructive explosion would only have had the effect of throwing off the roof.—It would have done no more damage to its neighborhood than would a heavy cannon fired with its muzzle pointed upwards, and loaded only with powder and wad."

Common sense, no less than common humanity, certainly dictates, as the Transcript suggests, that the mode of constructing powder magazines, whether public or private, should be prescribed by a general law, conforming to this plan or some other equally good, and thus render their explosion harmless to all outside of the building.

PITTSBURGH.—The Philadelphia Ledger speaks of the 609 houses mentioned by us as having gone up since the fire, as evidence of a "wonderful resolution." The Ledger is mistaken in supposing this number to be all the buildings erected since the fire. We spoke of the number erected on the burnt district. The whole number erected since April 10, 1845, the day of the fire, is not less than two thousand, to which may be added all the houses which have gone up in Allegheny, Birmingham, Sligo, Manchester, and the neighborhood generally These thriving places are all part and parcel of Pittsburgh, and derive their chief elements of prosperity from the city.—Pitts. Gaz.

THE COAL TRADE.—One hundred and eighty-three coal boats have passed through the Locks of the Monongahela during the last rise, besides some fifty or sixty which floated over the comb of the dam. These boats, contain, on an average, 150 tons of coal, worth at the bank $2 per ton.

There has been about 37,000 tons shipped for the lower market during the recent freshet, and boats are yet daily starting. The following may be considered a fair estimate, at the home valuation, of this branch of Pittsburgh trade during the last five days:

Boats	Tonnage	Valuc
250	37,000 at $2 per ton,	$75,000
" Empty at	$200 each,	25,000
Total,		$100,000

The above will add largely to the amount of fall business of our city, but we apprehend it will not be adequate to the increasing demand for this article in the South and West.

The water is still in excellent stage for running coal, and we hope the opportunity will be embraced by all who are engaged in this trade, of getting their boats off at an early period this fall. —Pittsburgh Gazette.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—A Mr. Joseph Mitchell, residing near Charleston, Illinois, was instantaneously killed by lightning, a little before daylight, on the morning of Sunday, the 3d ult.—He was then lying in bed with his wife and child, but neither of the latter sustained much injury.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—The large and extensive card manufactory of Messrs. Isaac and Edward Crehore, at Milton Lower Mills, New Providence, Rhode Island, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning last at seven o'clock. There was a large stock of paper and cards, and much new valuable machinery in the factory, which shared the fate of the building. We are not able to state the entire loss, but it is supposed to be between 20,000 and $30,000. This was the only card factory in the New England States, and the business done was very large.

CHURCH BURNED.—The new Baptist Church on St. Francis Street, Mobile, was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday evening week, between 7 and 9 o'clock. It was one of the most elegant structures in the city, and was built at a great expense both of labor and money by a few individuals, aided to some extent by contributions. Supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

FOUR MILLIONS OF FRENCHMEN.—The New York Journal of Commerce contains a letter from Constantinople, dated on the first of last September, from which we cut the following:

"Yesterday a Frenchman meeting me in the street, said with great enthusiasm, 'Monsieur, we are three or four millions Frenchmen, who are going to embark for America, with a constitution, to form a separate State in the United States; but our whole scheme is based upon Christianity.—Our system is Fourierism, immensely improved, and our agent is already presenting the plan to the government in America.' You will know whether this accords with any movements you hear of in other directions."

The Pittsburgh Chronicle says that on Monday morning, as Mr. James McCully, flour dealer, of Wood street, was driving into the city in company with Mr. Kane, carpenter, they were both thrown from the buggy, and both very dangerously, and it is feared, fatally injured. Mr. M'Cully had one arm broken, skull badly fractured, and otherwise very much injured. He was taken up insensible, and still remained so late in the afternoon. But slight hopes are entertained of his recovery. Mr. Kane is lying in a very precarious state. It is very doubtful if either of them will survive the injuries.

The funeral of A. H. Everett, United States Commissioner to China, who died on the 29th of June at Canton, took place on the following day, and was attended by nearly the entire foreign community, and the officers of the various squadrons on the stations. The vessels of war displayed their flags at half mast, and minute guns were fired from the French frigate La Glorie.

Mr. Everett was a brother of Hon. Edward Everett, and a man of marked abilities: He commenced his diplomatic career as Secretary of Legation to St. Petersburgh, at the time John Quincy Adams was minister, and when Mr. A. became President, he made Mr. E. minister to Spain.—Mr. Everett has left two volumes of miscellaneous writings, which will be a lasting memorial of his talents both as a poet and the master of a clear vigorous prose style.—Pitts. Gaz.

BIRMINGHAM.—On Wednesday we paid a visit to Birmingham, and were rejoiced to witness the evidences of improvement made there since last spring. Many large dwellings, stores, &c., have been erected—the streets graded—Manufactories established, and business much extended. Every thing gives evidence of industry and prosperity. Very many buildings have been erected during the past summer on the side of the hill, and along the bank of the Monongahela, between Birmingham and the bridge,—and we venture the prediction, that but few years will pass o'er the space between those points will be densely crowded with Factories, warehouses, stores, workshops, offices, and private dwellings. It must be so, if the march of improvement continues in a ratio proportionate to the past season.—Pitts. Gaz.

AN EXPERIMENT came off, on the Canal at Washington city, on Saturday last, which the Union says, was quite successful in throwing Greek fire from an engine, (contracted for by Mr. Brown of Ohio,) to the top of a ship's mast, setting fire to combustibles fixed to it. The sum of $10,000 had been appropriated by Congress to test the efficacy of this engine.

NEW COUNTERFEIT.—Ones on the city of Allegheny, of the old plate, purporting to have been issued on the 7th day of July, 1847, signed, Henry Campbell, Mayor. In the one the o is reversed and much larger than the genuine; "out of any money in the treasury of the city for value received," is a round hand, unlike the genuine. The signatures are good, and the note is well calculated to deceive. There is no issue of July 7th, 1847.—Telegraph.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A young man named John Brady, a blacksmith, residing near fountain Inn, in this city, while out hunting, yesterday, near the Six Mile Ferry accidentally shot himself, when in the act of crossing a fence. We learn that he died instantly. His parents reside here.

Notices.

Leesburgh circuit, Muskingum District.—Our first Quarterly meeting will be held at Liberty Meeting house, three miles east of Uricksville, to commence on the 13th or November, to which we affectionately invite our Conference Missionary, Br. T. Potter, and all other brethren who can attend. We design to protract the meeting if circumstances permit. W. L. BALDWIN.

Monongalia ct., Pitts. District.—BR. BASSETT: Please inform our worthy President, that the point of visitation on this circuit, will be at Thomas Maple's new Frame church. We are looking up to the God of our Fathers, that he will favor our Zion, and baptise the entire membership with the holy reformation fire, and that it may spread over the entire hills, and up and down the valleys, till one mighty anthem may echo from mountain to mountain.—Brother Brown, come with the whole armor on.

Yours, as ever, in the bonds of christian fellowship,
ELI MARTIN, Sup't.

Wayne Ct., Musk. Con.—Brother Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at Waynesburg. C. T. KINGSBURY, Sup't.

Bainbridge Ct., Ohio Dis.—Our first quarterly meeting will commence on the 13th of Nov., at Cove Spring meeting-house. We invite fathers Dobbins and Hughey, Brothers W. Pelan, C. H. Williams, and others who can attend, we shall be happy to see. S. P. KEZERTA, Sup't.

Frederic Ct., Musk. Con.—Bro. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at the Huntsman appointment, that being the time and place of our first quarterly meeting.

J. S. THRAP, Sup't.

Zanesville Ct.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Springfield Chapel, commencing on Saturday, 6th November, at 11 o'clock.

E. S. HOAGLAND, Sup't.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Lewis	Circuit,	October, 24th,	1847.
Clarksburg	"	" 31st,	"
Evansville	"	November 7th,	"
Morgantown	"	" 14th,	"
Monongahela	"	" 21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	" 28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December 5th,	"
Home,	"	" 12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	" 19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT; Please insert the following list of app'ts

Frederick	circuit,	1st Sunday	November.
Licking	"	2d "	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d "	"
Coshocton	"	4th "	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st "	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts.

GEO. CLANCY.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Port William	"	Nov.	6th,	1847.
Springfield	"	"	13th,	"
Union	"	"	20th,	"
Darby	mission,	"	27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,		"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Spingfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

Liberty	ct.	Nov.	6–7	1847.
Madison	"	"	13–14	"
Flat Rock	"	"	20–21	"
White Lick	"	"	27–28	"
White River	"	Dec.	4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	"	11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On the 14th inst., near Oxford, Ohio, by Rev. J. Nutty, Mr. John W. Dorsey, to Miss Eliza Anne, daughter of Rev. E. Stibbens, all of Butler co., Ohio.

DEATHS.

DIED—At Mason, Warren county, Ohio, Oct. 1st, Dr. JONATHAN HOLCOMB, in the 86th year of his age. He was a native of Sheffield, Mass., a patriot of the Revolution, and a graduate of Yale College.

——At Clarksburg, Md., on the 5th inst., Dr. HORACE WILSON, formery a State Senator of Maryland.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. H. Hamilton,	O.	J. B. Jewell,	Mich.
T. Forshee,	"	D. H. Miller,	"
Watkins,	"	W. M. Betts,	Va.
John Burns,	"	A. J. Waren,	"
W. Remsburgh,	"	E. Bassett, 1 sub.	Ia.
G. M. Scott,	"	J. C. Wright,	"
P. M.—North Benton,	"	A. Cole,	Pa.
J. B. Peat, 2.	"	P. M.—Pleasant Ridge,	Ia.
A. M'Guire,	"	P. M. Red creek,	N. Y.
A. Channell,	"	R. Miller,	Ia.
J. Dalbey, Jr.	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts
J. H. Hamilton,	Geo. Henderson,	8	52	2 00
J. B. Jewell,	H. G. Hemingway,	8	38	1 00
"	Himself,	9	52	1 00
E. Bassett,	Miss N. C. Foster,	9	52	2 00
W. Remsburgh,	Is. Pierce,	9	52	3 00
A. M'Guire,		8	52	1 00
John Wilson,		9	52	1 00
A. Channell,		7	52	1 00

Br. J. Wronk, Va., is informed that we did not receive any payment from him at the Pittsburgh Conference, as he thinks we should. We see by our account that he was credited $2, on the 20th February last, by Br. G. Nester, which paid to 18th number of the present volume. Has he paid since?

Mr. Canterbury, of Ky., is informed that the paper sent to J. C. Wood, rec'd by Mr. Springer, the former publisher, was free.

Advertisements.

Road Notice.—Notice is hereby given that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, at their December session, praying for the location of a county road, commencing at a white-oak tree, near the east end of George M'Crooks' barn, on the county road leading from the falls of Licking to Crooks Bridge, known by the name of the "Dillon Road," running from thence a South-East direction, passing over lands owned by Robert Allen and George W. Rankin, to intersect the Zanesville and Maysville Turnpike near the Presbyterian Meeting House, known by the name of the Newton Church; the said Road to be laid on the same ground where there is now a Township road in use or as near as good ground can be had.

Newton Township, Oct. 30th, 1847.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

The winter term of this institution will commence on the 6th of October, with increased advantages.

In addition to the thorough instruction which will be given in the English branches by the former teachers, the German and Latin languages, having been embraced in the regular course of study, will be taught by Professor Timmel without extra charges, to all scholars who wish to pursue those branches.

All those branches which are necessary to qualify pupils for entering the First Class in the Seminary, are taught in the Primary Department.

Terms.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - 28 Weeks.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - 16 "

Tuition.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - $12 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - $8 00.

Primary Department.

Winter Term, - - - - - - - - - - $6 00.
Summer " - - - - - - - - - - $4 00.

Payable, in advance for the short term, one half in advance for the long term, and the ballance at the middle of the term. No deduction made from the price of tuition on account of absence unless occasioned by sickness.

☞ It is very important that scholars should enter at the commencement of the term.

Sept 30, 1847. A. A. GUTHRIE, Sec.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe, - - $2 00
For one copy of the Appendix - - - - 2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both - - 10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

POET'S CORNER.

"As evening dews are to the drooping flower, so are tears of repentance, to the sin-sick soul."

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE DROOPING FLOWER.

—o—

'Twas noon: I saw a tender flower
Drooping its lovely head;
And, thus, (I mused) in one short hour
This lovely plant is dead.

I saw that lovely plant once more
When I returned at even;
'Twas drooping, still, as 'twas before,
And wet with dews from heaven.

At noon I saw that plant again—
How changed in one short night!
Washed by the dews, like gentle rain,
'Twas fresh, 'twas fair, 'twas bright!

Thus, like the drooping flower, at noon,
I've seen the child of grief,
And thought her troubled soul would soon
In death find its relief.

Again, I saw that sin-sick one,
'Midst sorrows, doubts, and fears;
The roses from her cheeks were gone,
Her eyes were dim'd with tears.

But morn dispersed the shades of even—
Her sorrows fled away;
For JESUS spoke her sins forgiven,
And changed her night to day!

LOUIS.

Putnam, Ohio, October, 29, 1847.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

"FREE DISCUSSION."

BR. BASSETT: Under this head I find my name introduced in your excellent paper of 27th May, by Rev. C. Jeffries, in which article he says of me: "I beg leave to venture a few thoughts for my Brother's consideration." They have been considered—and the honest conviction of my mind is simply this: that that writer has not only done me gross injustice, but he has chosen for me positions, doctrines, and sayings, for which he has no warrant in reason or in truth; and it does seem passing strange, that any man knowing no more about my sentiments than is expressed in your paper of August 20th and 27th last, should bring me forward, and place me before your readers, with such sentiments in my mouth as Rev. C. Jeffries has done, particularly, after having called me "brother" in the preface. Why has he done this? The facts in the case justify it not! The rules of etiquette that should regulate the bearing of one gentleman towards another, forbid it. Why, then, has he done so? Perhaps he was like another one of his abolition brethren, had forgotten what I did write, and, therefore, thought I said thus and so. Well, I suppose ignorance is pardonable; but alas! if it be ignorance in this case, how it does pervert truth!

But, after all, Mr. Editor, is not this article of Rev. C. Jeffries a second edition of his speech before the General Conference? I am fully persuaded it is; at least, a goodly part of that speech, replete with folly and with ignorance—ignorance of slavery as it exists in the South—ignorance of its general effects upon society—ignorance of its origin, so far as America is concerned. I wish the writer had met my articles and answered my arguments, if possible; but it seems that he thinks his General Conference speech "is good for any thing," and, therefore, will answer "any thing." Now, Mr. Editor, I was born, educated, and raised in the South, consequently, I know more about Southern institutions than Rev. C. Jeffries, and he must be deplorably ignorant of the subject of slavery as it exists, if he believes what he writes. I would refer him to "Paulding's exposition of American Slavery," (a Northern writer,) for light upon that subject, but some men do not desire light. History informs me that when the Northern Slaveholding States were about to emancipate their slaves by the emancipation laws taking place, that before the laws went into effect, the "great mass of those slaves were carried South and sold" for cash. That money was pocketed and carried North. I should like to know who holds that money to-day. Have not some of these modern Abolition ranters inherited a part of it? Are they not living upon it, even now?—If so can you not convince them, Mr. Editor, that the interest of that money will send them to hell? When I ask who made the Southern States "a slave market," the answer comes back, "THE NORTH." When I ask who denounce the Southern States on account of slavery, the answer is still "THE NORTH." How strange does all this appear in the eyes of charity. But, Rev. C. Jeffries, has left the Methodist Protestant Church and united with "THE RADICAL CHURCH." Good—I say good. If his fears of going to hell by staying in the Methodist Protestant Church were so great (because some of the membership of that Church in the Southern States were connected with slavery) that the gales of Abolition could waft him out of the Church; I say good. This same "wind of doctrine" may yet change his present position. I understand he is Conference Missionary. If so I hope he will go "South," and labor for the "trodden-down," and prove his faith by his works; he will then begin to learn something, about which he knows almost nothing. In conclusion, sir, permit the author of the "poor, puerile production," to ask where it is, that God sums up the sins reaching unto heaven? Are they summed up in the 13th verse of 18th chapter of Revelations, in which the merchandise, (not sins) of "fine flour and wheat," stands in the same catalogue with "slaves and souls of men?" Surely, sir, your production must be logica indianaensis. The next writer I find that deserves a brush from my pen, is signed in your paper of the 15th ultimo, James Gay.

The misfortune of this Brother appears to be mostly this; having no particular argument to set forth, he attempts to write; having nothing to write upon, he attempts to write about what he had read; having forgotten what he had read, he writes more particularly about nothing, than any thing else, and sets before your readers one of the most complete dishes of nonsense I have seen. The production is so much like its author, that Brother Springer who knows an "Abolitionist" by his "track" could have named the writer if there had been no signature. Brother Gay feigns to discover "concessions" where none are made, and none intended. But he has plead forgetfulness of "language," and your readers will discover, he might with propriety have pleaded forgetfulness of ideas. Finally, after wandering through fancy's doubtful vale for some time, he finds me guilty of an "unguarded and unfounded attack upon Messrs. Birney and Tappan," and ventures an opinion as to the result of a comparison between "the moral worth" of those "illustrious men" and that of my humble self. Now, Brother Gay, I speak plainly to you; if I made an attack upon those characters, it was neither "unguarded" nor "unfounded;" no more so than on "Foster, Abbey Kelly," &c. That you should estimate "their moral worth," far greater than that of "Rev. J. Paris," I am fully prepared to concede, when I remember that you in an Abolition meeting at the Tabernacle in Cincinnati, supported resolutions declaring Rev. Charles Torrey who was found guilty of felony in a Court of Justice, and died a convict in the penitentiary of Maryland, "a martyr." The whole purport of those resolutions being to give that felon a good character. Sir, Abolition seems to know but few bounds, and is regulated by but little decency. A felon, a convict, "a martyr to the cause of liberty!" Alas!! alas!!! But, Brother Gay, how do you come on circulating "Bobolition" pamphlets? (I quote from Brother Whitfield, mind you.) I have read the one you handed to me,—"The Fellowship of Thieves," and I frankly confess to you, sir, that I believe it to be the most basely false, lying, and slanderous publication that I ever scanned. My own observations in the South demonstrate this, to the entire satisfaction of my own mind. But, I suppose, sir, you have been told it is true, and you believe it, therefore, though a minister of the gospel, you have the brazen assurance to circulate it. You have been engaged in this ungodly work—you dare not deny it—you gave me that bundle of falsehood and slanders, telling me it would give me "some light on Slavery." Your Bible never taught you to do such work. Such, sir, is more befitting Apolyon than a minister of the gospel. For God's sake, for Christ's sake, for your own soul's sake, quit your vain delusion, 'tis fanaticism, and come back to the ground on weich the Bible defines a minister's place to be. How do you get along with your Convention business, sir? Do you think you can get a goodly number to leave the Church with you? If the circulation of such pamphlets as "The Fellowship of Thieves" fails to "humbug" the members of the Church successfully, you had better call for two Conventions. If they are not sufficiently humbugged by the meeting of the first, you had better defer leaving the Church before trying a second, or else go over to "the Radical Church." In conclusion, Brother Gay, I fear you are given up to yourself. I mourn over the delusion of any man, though ever so sincere in that delusion, and fear you, with all your high professions, will never take the first step to benefit the "down-trodden race."

Respectfully,
Yours, in Christ,
J. PARISH.

Enfield, N. C., August, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. ASA SHINN.

MR. EDITOR: It has been observed by one, 'that they who have nothing to give, may often afford relief by imparting what they feel.'

Perhaps it will be admitted by all good men, who have become acquainted with Mr. Shinn as a philanthropist, as a Christian minister, and with his almost invaluable labors in defence of the faith of the gospel, and of the doctrines held by Armenian Methodists generally, that he is justly entitled to their warmest sympathies in his mental affliction.

While he is looked upon as dead, and the afflictions of his family more severe than if he was, he still lives in the bosom of many a warm hearted friend, who would freely minister to his and familiy's necessities, (for they are the same as far as human ministrations are concerned,) if the matter was properly brought before them, and in a way that would afford them an opportunity for doing so. This, perhaps, has been frequently done in some parts; but I think there has never been a general taking hold of the matter by the clergy, such as the immergency and justness of the case requires. Hence many who are both ready & willing, have, no doubt, been deprived of the opportunity to aid in this praiseworthy work. And besides, Mr. Editor; one act of kindness, unless very great, does not suffice to secure his family from the pinchings of necessity in their prolonged afflictions. This makes repeated and protracted efforts necessary on the part of the church to save them from embarrassment, and to render his situation as comfortable as possible.

He whose springs of benevolence should become dry on the first giving a few dimes for this, or for any other as truly benevolent purpose, as obviously so as this, has doubtless greatly misunderstood the principles of that charity, which suffereth long and is kind. Will not all the itinerants undertake in this behalf, and furnish the people with the opportunity of signing subscriptions having a certain time to run, and by receiving and transmitting amounts from those who are ready and willing to give? This would not, we think, be going beyond their duty; neither do we think that any would be going beyond the bounds of justice, if they should take subscriptions for his works on the Plan of Salvation, & on the Benevolence of the Supreme Being. But we are admonished to be careful in our attempts to extend the circulation of these works, for the world is not yet prepared to receive them. Strange notion this to be entertained by any intelligent, honest man.

Now we know not that whether any copies of these works remain unsold, either in the hands of his family, or on commission, but why should they be deprived of the pecuniary products of his works, and the world denied the benefit and moral instruction it might derive from its free circulation? Alas! for some men's pretensions to infallibility; they would fain dictate and control, authoritatively, their fellow's moral actions. The disposition manifested by a number of the clergy of both M. P's, and M. E's, directly after the publication of his late work, though it cannot be denied to be a fact simile extension of proof in support of the principles laid down in his former essay, evidently supposes the people utterly incapable of determining for themselves what is truth, and what is error.

Have the arguments presented in his late works, ever been met and set aside by other arguments more in accordance with truth? No.

Then were there ever anything pretending to bear the name of arguments brought against them.

We have seen none. Then by what reason has its circulation been presented?

Partly by a disposition in the people to be relieved from the trouble of examining the evidences of truth for themselves, and their willingness to believe the ipse dixit of others; and partly by the stratagem of that portion of the clergy, who thought, or pretended they thought the world unprepared for its reception, which amounts to nothing more nor less than constituting themselves the guardians of the people's faith.

But, perhaps, generations yet to be born, will rise up and call him blessed, in his vindication for the wrongs inflicted by the present, and appreciate the labors of the good man.

T. FORSHEE.

The Budget.

What does the World Want!

Why does the world lie prostrate under the power of a moral sickness which breaks out in loathsomeness over the whole surface of society? Why is its countenance ploughed up with the wrinkles of distress? Why roll its restless eyes, and heaves its laboring bosom? Is it not after truth—heaven-given truth? Can this be given it in too great abundance? Is it not this which will purge it of every grosser humor, and send a new and bounding life through all its veins? To our view, there is a fullness of significance in the Apostle's declaration, 'The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now . . . waiting for the adoption.' Behold the wide-spread desolation caused by disobedience to God's moral government! See how the deadly poison which has wrought our ruin permeates the whole frame of society, and perverts the choicest gift of paternal love into the heaviest and most afflictive evils. Civil government, designed to defend the defenceless, and protect the weak from the aggressions of the strong, is it not, in almost every nation, the first to trample upon all human rights, the last to redress the real grievances of the poor? And the Christian Church itself, has not pride turned it into an engine of tyranny & made it an intenser misery to mankind than any other institution under the sun? [Churches in the United States are not, and cannot be, included in this censure.] Humanity, enervated and trembling under the operation of the curse calls out for truth—for all truth which the Creator has vouchsafed to communicate for its advantage. Let those who have it, beware how they hold it back! Theirs is but a weak and worthless faith that fears to publish in every ear, what God has spoken in theirs. They know little of the power of right principles who hesitate to proclaim and enforce them, lest in doing so, they should do more harm than good. Let them rest assured that the social system will absorb, by a process more or less rapid, all that knowledge of the divine will which Christians can impart. They cannot overdo their work. Their labors are not likely, for some time to come, to overtake the evil which requires them. What they know, therefore, it were well that they dispensed with a liberal hand. All times should be with them the time of sowing—all truths derived from Scripture the seed to be scattered. Let them pour out of every kind, in imitation of that benevolence which has blessed them with every kind. Wherever error reigns, thither should they carry the truth which will confound and overturn it.

One more consideration we submit to the notice of the candid: It is not a little remarkable that not a single promise of the divine blessing is extended to the sagacious management of the trust committed to us. No stress is laid in Scripture upon the importance of exercising a prudent forethought as to the effects likely to follow from the exhibition of truth. No intimation is given of the necessity of a far-seeing statesmanship in our attempts to rid the world of error. We are cautioned against leaning to our own understanding—we are commanded to be fools that we may be wise—we are told that this is the victory which overcometh the world, even our faith. The cautious suppressions of any portion of the divine mind, dictated by whatever motive, can fall back for encouragement upon no promise, no pledge, with which Christ has condescended to bless his Church. To honesty of purpose, to the courage which braves all shame, to simple-hearted reliance upon the power of God's word, to industry, perseverance, fortitude, zeal, there are assurances given upon which they may confidently lean in the darkest hour of difficulty and danger.

[Eclectic Review.

Honor and Love.

How should we honor all men! How unworthy is every contemptuous expression towards any on our tongues! Is he to be dispised? Each man is the brother for whom Christ died. None may be indifferent or displeasing to us. We are our brother's keeper. The most distressed is most proximately our neighbor. We are debtors to all. We owe love one to another. Christian charity identifies its great principles with universal man,

Individual Responsibility.

Truth is independent of all authority save one; and it is always safer to ask for arguments than for names. No Christian should dare to take his convictions of religious duty on trust. Our faith must stand on the word of God, not men. It is due to our own consciences, due to divine truth, and due to the very persons whom we venerate, to claim for ourselves the right of private judgment, and to make good that claim by its exercise. It would be well if every man would bear in mind, 'That to his own master, he standeth or falleth.'

PARENTAL.

From the Mother's Magazine.

Forbearing Threatening.

BY PROFESSOR J. T. ALDEN, D. D.

'George, who broke this rake?' said Mr. Colman to his son, as he took up a rake, one of the bows of which was broken. George looked down and made no reply. He had been playing with the rake rather carelessly and had accidentally broken it. 'If you get it again,' said his father, taking the rake with him to the barn, 'I shall punish you severely, you may depend on it.'—It will be observed that he did not desire George to answer the question, nor did he inquire any blame had been incurred in breaking the rake.—He contented himself with uttering the above recorded threat in rather a harsh tone, and went to his work.

George felt a little uncomfortable for a moment; not because he cared anything about having broken the rake, or because he had any fear of punishment, but simply because his companWm. Hayford, had heard his father scold him.—'I shouldn't care anything about father's scolding,' he said to himself, 'if he would not scold before any body.'

He soon threw off the temporary depression that he felt, and engaged in playing with William with as much spirit as if nothing had happened.

In the course of the afternoon, they discovered two very large apples on a tree that stood near the barn. The apples were out of their reach, and on a limb which they could not shake sufficiently to bring the apples off. They then looked around for a pole to get them off with, but could not find any which they could manage.—'O dear,' said George, 'what have we been making all this fuss for? Why didn't we think of the rake? we can reach them with the rake.'—And away he went to the barn to get the rake.

'I thought of it,' said William, 'but you know what your father said he would do, if you took it again.'

'That's nothing,' said George.

'You must know best; but I should think a severe punishment was something.—Your father is in sight.'

'I know it, but do you suppose he would whip me for just taking the rake and punching off apples with it?'

'He said he would.'

'I know he did; but he says a great many things which he never does.'

'My father always does what he says. If he says I'll whip, whip it is, and no mistake about it.'

'I shouldn't like to have such a father.'

'Does your father never whip you?'

'Yes, once in a great while, when something has made him very cross, he will catch hold of a fellow and give it to him before he knows it; but this is only once in a great while. He says he will whip me for almost everything, but he never does it.'

By this time he had got the rake, and was trying to reach the apples, but the rake handle was not quite long enough. Just at this moment Mr. Colman came along. William expected to see him look angry, and to see George manifest some signs of fear, but he was disappointed in both expectations.

'What are you doing?' said Mr. Colman, as he saw George trying to reach up higher into the tree-top.

'I am trying to reach those apples,' said George.

'You must make haste and grow taller,' said his father, taking the rake out of his hand, and bringing down the apples. 'They are the first ones,' continued he, 'they are the first the graft has borne.'

'Don't you want one of them?' said George.

'I will take a piece of one,' said he opening his knife and dividing one. He then passed on, and never said a word about the rake, or about whipping George for getting it.

William was astonished. If his father had said he would punish him if he repeated any act he would as soon expect the sun to fail to rise as his father to fail to keep his word. But George (thought he) has no idea that his father will keep his word; he would be greatly surprised if he should; I don't know about such fathers. It is no wonder the teacher says George is not a very good boy to obey rules. It is no wonder he stops on his way home from school, though his father tells him to come straight home.

Soon after this the boys thought they would go to the saw-mill, and take a sail on the pond.—George's sister seeing him making preparations to go somewhere, asked him where he was going.

'I am going to the saw-mill.'

'Father said you should not go there again, when you came home so wet last time.'

'No, he did not.'

'Why, George, he did, I am sure.'

'I am sure he did not. He only said he would whip me if I went there again, and I will risk his doing that. Come on William.'

'Are you not disobeying your father in going?' said William, who had some doubts about the propriety of going himself, lest he should countenance disobedience.

'Why no; he didn't say I shouldn't go.'

'But he meant you shouldn't.'

'I can't help what he meant; I know what he said.'

'There he is, ask him if you may go, and then you will be sure all is riehl.'

He accordingly did so, and permission was readily granted. They had a very pleasant time at the mill. They found a raft ready made, on which they sailed till the sun began to get near the trees, when William said he must go home.

'Who said so?'

'Nobody.'

'Did your father say he would whip you if you didn't get home before sun-set?'

'No.'

Well, then, what's the use of going?'

'Because my father always expects me to come home by sun-set.'

'Do you suppose your father would whip you if you shouldn't get home then, when he didn't tell you you must come, and didn't tell you he would whip you if you didn't come?'

'No, I don't suppose he would.'

'Then I can't see why you need go.'

'Because when I know what my father wishes me to do, I ought to do it; I should disobey him if I didn't.'

'You have droll notions about obedience, I must say,'

It is certain that his notions of obedience were different from George's. To what was this fact owing? George's mind was quite as good as his, and his natural disposition quite as docile.—It was owing to the unfortunate habits of his father. What those habits were we have seen above.

A few evenings after the events above narrated took place, Mr. Colman, and William's father, and one or two other neighbors, were spending the evening together, and their conversation naturally turned on their children.

'You have a very obedient boy, Mr. Hayford,' said one.

'Yes, he seldom disobeys me. I have not much fault to find with him in that respect,' said Mr. Hayford.

'My boy has a very good disposition,' said Mr. Colman, 'but some how or other, he forgets to mind me, pretty often. I have to threaten him pretty hard, sometimes, to keep him in order.'

Now Mr. Colman's neighbors knew that this habit of hard threatening, and not executing the threat, was the reason why his son was not kept in order. They all thought it very strange that he should know so little about the real state of the case. Was it strange?—or rather was the fact a singular one?

First Anti-Slavery Meeting in the United States.

The National Era says the Attorney-General of the State of Louisiana has pronounced the Declaration of Independence "a humbug;" and Caleb Cushing, late of Massachusetts, has made the discovery, announced in his Fourth of July Oration, "in General Arista's garden," that the Revolutionary War was not a war for Liberty. That such were not the views of the men of the Revolution, seems sufficiently manifest. One of the evidences of their ideas of the nature and bearing of the Great Declaration, is to be found in the proceedings of a meeting held in Middlesex county, New Jersey, on the 4th of 7th month, 1783, the first anniversary of the signing of that instrument, after the close of the war.

The meeting took place in the township of Woodbridge. Great preparations had been made; an ox was roasted, and large numbers assembled to partake of it, and to listen to the orator of the day, Dr. Bloomfield, father of the late Governor Bloomfield, of New Jersey. At the appointed time the orator mounted the platform, followed by all his slaves, fourteen in number, seven of whom took places on his left, and seven on his right, while he addressed the multitude on the evil of Slavery. At the close of his speech, he turned to his slaves, stating that, inasmuch as we, as a nation, had declared all men equal, he could not, consistently, hold slaves. "Why," asked he, "should these, my fellow-citizens, be held in bondage? From this day they are free!"

In the midst of the applause which followed, the Doctor called up to him one somewhat advanced in years. "Hector," said he, "when you cannot support yourself, you are entitled to a maintenance from my property. When do you suppose you will need that maintenance?"

The delighted negro held up his left hand, and, with the right drew a line across the middle joint of his fingers: "Neber, massa, neber, so long as any of dese fingers are left above dese jints!"

"There, fellow-citizens," said the Doctor, "you see that liberty is as dear to the man of color as to you or me."

The air rang with applause, and the company separated, without a suggestion from any one that it would be an act of patriotism to Lynch the good Doctor for his fanaticism.

Necessity, if it cannot be altered, becomes resignation.

Most men judge so miserably; why would you be praised by a child?

Not to evil, but to myself, do I owe my pain. Epictetus was not unhappy.

HOW MUCH IS A "HORSE POWER?"—We have heard this question asked a great many times.—The Scientific American says:—"What is generally considered as constituting a "horse power" is a power sufficient to raise one hundred and thirty pounds one hundred feet in one minute."

During the year 1846, there were arrested for larceny by various officers in Boston, 112 minors. During the first nine months in the present year, there have been arrested for the same offence 110 minors.

Advertisements.

Notice.—At our instance, an Attachment was this day issued, by Wm. H. Moore, a Justice of the Peace, of Springfield township, Muskingum co., Ohio, against the effects of Henson Bagley, a non-resident of said county, dated this 19th day of Oct., 1847.

LARGE, BOATMAN, & Co.

☞NEW GOODS.☜

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co., Putnam,

Invite attention to the most extensive and desirable stock of

FALL AND WINTER GOODS

That they have ever had the pleasure of offering to their customers.

It is out of the question to enumerate the articles: it is sufficient to say, that our stock embraces more than the usual varieties of

Dry Goods,	Stationery,
Groceries,	Oils and Paints,
Hardware,	Leather,
Queesware,	Iron and Nails,
Boots and Shoes,	Glass,
Caps and Hats,	Salt, &c., &c.

In regard to prices we deem it needless to say much. The cry of cheap! CHEAP!!! CHEAP!!! has become almost universal, and as a general thing, means just nothing at all. It is often made most loudly by those who have the least experience, and the fewest facilities for doing business.

We believe we have the means, and we know we have the will, to do business on as good terms as any house West of the mountains.

Our present stock was purchased for cash, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York, by A. A. G., who spared neither time or pains in making his selections, and we hazard nothing in saying that for variety of patterns, richness of style, and quality of fabrics, our goods will compare with any in the country.

And as to prices, WE WILL NOT be undersold. Country produce of all kinds taken in payment.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journals and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept, 16, 1847. [3m.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &,

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School,

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums, from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $ 90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $ 92,50; and the whole in a neat case, $ 97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $ 33; without a case $ 30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $ 10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $ 25—without case, $ 22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $ 2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding, Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $ 5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$ 1 00
20 copies do. do.	-	3 00
40 copies do. do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st

With 25 catalogues and case, $ 20; without case, $ 17,50

Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN CORE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.

NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.

Mar. '81 '47

LATEST ARRIVAL OF NEW GOODS.

WILLIAM P. LARGE,

Has the pleasure of calling the attention of the public to a large and splendid assortment of Foreign Domestic Fall and Winter Goods, purchased at the lowest cash prices, which he is now receiving and opening,—consisting, in part, of the following articles of Dress Goods, &c., Plaid, Striped, Fancy, and Shaded Cashmeres.

Fancy Mouslin de Laines, Caledonia Plaids, Plain plaid and striped Alpacas, Silk Warp and Real do. A large stock of French, Scotch, Changeable, Earlston, Manchester and Domestic Ginghams. A large and well selected supply of FANCY PRINTS from 6 cents up. Plaid Cloakings.

SHAWLS OF VARIOUS DESCRIPTIONS.

An extensive assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinetts, Tweeds, Jeans, Flannels, Linseys, &c., &c. Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, Queensware, Hats, Caps, Groceries, Dye-Stuffs, Paints, Hardware, and so many other desirable goods, that it is too tedious to enumerate; which are in the market, cheap! CHEAP!! CHEAP!!! Notwithstanding some of my neighbors admit their former brags of CHEAP mean just nothing at all, I am not willing to be so understood, but will sell very LOW for cash, or good trade.

I want it especially understood, that I am not to be undersold by any person. All kinds of produce taken in exchange for goods.

Putnam, September 30, 1847.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN, BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 6. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, NOVEMBER 11, 1847. WHOLE NO. 422.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SERMON,

PREACHED AT ELDERSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA;

BY REV. WM. REEVES.

[Published by request of a public meeting.]

Philipians iv: 3. And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel.

Is not the present an age of inquiry? And is not careful inquiry consonant with Christianity? And in the most important sense of the saying, is not "the bible, and the Bible alone, the religion of Protestants?" And do we not all, as such, endorse the doctrine of individual responsibility? And does not that necessarily imply the recognition of individual right? Yea, more, if man is solemnly held accountable to God for himself, is it not his imperious duty to think and act for himself? Not that we would encourage any person to rush ruthlessly into the sacred enclosure of religious belief; neither do we regard it as sacrilegious to speak, and speak out plainly, what has been from patient inquiry at intervals, for years, his deep conviction of truth, and important truth, and truth calculated to benefit mankind. Provided, he does not "violate the laws of God, or the rights of his fellow man."—In justification of the faithful investigation of the truth of Christianity, and of the fearless expression of the belief thereof, St. Paul quotes from "the Martyrs Psalm," this significant saying. "I believed, and therefore have I spoken"; and adds, "we also believe, and therefore speak." And will any man affirm that the right to inquire for religious truth, was confined to the apostles? Would not that be, in effect, to say that responsibility also was restricted to them? And who can believe a sentiment so absurd! And though we esteem it wicked, wantonly to trifle with the tender sensibilities of the scrupulous, yet, if in the course of our religious researches, we should happen to cross the path of some favorite theorem, and come in contact with some stereotyped dogma, would it be infidel to believe? Not that truth stereotyped is any the less true; nor, on the other hand, is error though it be thus highly honored, any the less error.—Truth is not subject to such mutation, nor error liable to such incidental transformations.

It should seem that some religious sentiments, by a kind of general assent, without the labor of diligent inquiry, have been permitted to occupy a place in our credenda. And among these privileged, and long-cherished opinions, is the one before us; that a woman ought not preach the Gospel;—that it is positively forbidden in the Bible. The direct converse of which, we hope to establish in the following discourse; viz: That the Holy Scriptures sanction female preaching. And consequently, that it is the duty of professing christians to help, and not hinder them, in the discharge of this their solemn obligation. Nothing but the discussion of the question seems necessary, to insure many friends to the doctrine of the divine authority of the ministration of women.

In the prosecution of the plan proposed in this investigation, proof will be drawn from the Bible, the usages of the Primitive Church, learned Critics, Commentators, and Lexicographers. And here, once for all, let us say, that some of the authors quoted in this sermon, are not friends to female preaching; but so far from that fact destroying their testimony, it strengthens it; for this reason, because they are not so liable to the imputation of partiality: it exhibits also the face of the evidence on their minds, and their candor in confessing it. Patient and candid attention is sincerely solicited to the discussion of the following propositions:—

PROPOSITION I. There were prophetesses under the Old Testament dispensation.

PROP. II. In the Scriptures, the ministry of women is the subject of prophecy and of fulfilment.

PROP. III. Under the influence of the Holy Spirit, many women did preach the Gospel after the day of Pentecost.

PROP. IV. Women continued to preach in the Christian Church, long after the days of the apostles.

PROP. V. Women in our own day are held accountable to God for the improvement of their talents. And many of them have talents for preaching the Gospel.

PROP. VI. Female preachers are as manifestly called of God to the work of the ministry, as male preachers.

PROP. VII. In the apostolic and primitive church, those holy women who were called of God to the work of the ministry, were inducted into the sacred office by a regular and formal Ordination and that to "Elder's Orders."

PROP. VIII. Female ministers are honored in the Scriptures, with the same distinctive appellations as the male ministers, and were saluted as such.

PROP. IX. Female preachers were noticed by the apostle Paul, and were admonished and instructed by him as such.

PROP. X. We propose to answer some of the most prominent and important objections urged against the doctrine advocated in this discourse.

PROP. I. There were prophetesses under the Old Testament dispensation. And—

1. There were false ones. See Ezek. xiii: 17; Nehe. vi: 7. And therefore there were true ones. Just as sure as counterfeit coin is an evidence of the existence of the true, so certain it is, that the false prophetesses indicated the being of the prophetesses of the Lord.

2. But we have direct Scriptural proof of the existence of true prophetesses in the days of old. Miziam, Deborah, Hannah, Huldah, and Anna, were all most unquestionably, genuine prophetesses of the Lord. See Exod. xv: 20, Judges iv: 4, I Sam. ii: 1, 2 Kings, xxii: 14, 2 Chron. xxxiv: 22, and Luke ii: 36—38. These passages are all clear and conclusive evidences of the fact, that those women were as truly and literally the Lord's prophetesses, as inspiration itself can make it. So that, if we deny these facts, or reject the evidences of these passages, with equal propriety may we deny the facts and reject the evidences of the Lord's prophets.

3. (1.) And these prophetesses spake "in the name of the Lord." 2 Kings. xxii: 15, 16, 18. As did the prophets, in this respect, so did they. There was no difference. And if that circumstance or fact, is of vital importance in the establishment of the character of a true prophet, so also in this case. If one is true, so is the other. If there ever were true prophets, then were there also true prophetesses. The truth of both is established by the same evidence.—(2.) They were also the ministers, or preachers, of their day, Nehe. vi: 7, "And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach," &c. One important branch of prophetic duty, in the days of old, was to preach to the people. It is an egregious error to suppose, that the prophetic office comprised nothing more than merely the foretelling of future events. Was there no preaching in those days? If there was, who did it? There can be but one answer to this question; viz: the persons who filled the prophetical office, Isa. lviii: 1. "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins. (3.) As some people lay much stress upon the circumstance of a preacher being a regular Collegiate, it may not be amiss to remark that Huldah the prophetess, was evidently of that class. It is said, 2 Kings xxii: 14, that "She dwelt in Jerusalem in the College." We append a prelatical exposition of this passage—"The word which we translate "College," is in the margin of the Bible rendered, "the second part." For there were three walls about Jerusalem; within the first lived artificers and common people; within the second, persons of better sort, wise men, prophets, &c. And within the third was the mountain of the Lord. It is thought, then, that the sacred writer speaks of the middle part as the residence of Huldah." Bishop Patrick, as cited by Revs. D Oyly, B. D., and R. Mount, D. D., in their Church Commentary. Here then, according to this learned authority, if the 'college' in which Huldah resided, was not exactly like old Oxford, or old Yale, most undoubtedly it was the college of the Jewish Church, and the residence of "wise men, prophets," &c. (4.) And even priests consulted them, 2 Kings, xxii: 14, "So Hildiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achber, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah the prophetess," &c. Many persons appear to despise the religious instructions of women, but in many instances they are better qualified to impart it than many men, who assume the sole prerogative to teach the ways of the Lord. (5.) And at a time too, when there were living prophets. So that prophetesses were not a mere substitute, and resorted to as the only alternative, in seasons of great distress and destitution. But "resided" among the "prophets," and officiated with full authority, as their compeers in office. Commenting upon the fact of the priests repairing to Huldah for consultation, upon the important matter mentioned in 2 Kings, xxii:, a learned author says: "It certainly contributes much to her renown, that she was consulted on this weighty occasion, when both Jeremiah and Zephaniah, were prophets alive at the same time in Judah." Stackhouse, in D'Oyly, and Mant, before cited.

But some men may say, of what avail is all this--what have we to do with the Old Testament? Answer: If under the legal dispensation—when there was so much rigor exercised, and so much exactitude required of the people of God,—if then women were not forbidden of God, to officiate in the sacred office, but some of them were specially inspired to 'speak in the name of the Lord,' how much less shall they be proscribed and forbidden to officiate as the Lord's prophetesses, under the New Testament, when the Spirit is promised to be poured out more copiously, and all the disabilities of the legal dispensation are done away in Christ? This will be clearly visible in the discussion of the next proposition.

PROP. II. In the Scriptures, the ministry of women is the subject of prophecy and of fulfilment.

1. The first passages we notice on the point are the following: Psalm lxvii: 11,—Eph. iv: 89, "The Lord gave the word: great was the company of those who published it." That this passage prophecies of female preaching, the translation does not distinctly indicate. But the original, it is said, signifies it. In the "Female Advocate," published in London, by Rev. John Stamp, may be found the following: "In the original Hebrew it is, "Great was the company of the women publishers, or women evangelists." And the author adds that "Grotius explains Psalm lxviii: 11, Dominus dabat sermonem; id est, materiam lognendi uberem, nempe ut feminarum prædicantium (victorias,) multum agmen diceret, scilicet eaquæ segnunter." The Lord shall give the word, that is, plentiful matter of speaking; so that he would call those which follow the great army of preaching women, viz: Victories, or female conquerors.

That the Psalmist was speaking in prophecy of Gospel times, is indisputable; for St. Paul, in Eph. iv: 8, 9, cites v. 18 of this Psalm, and so applies it, "Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men," &c. "All this the apostle applies to the resurrection, ascension, and glory of Christ; though it has been doubted by some learned men, whether the Psalmist had this in view. I shall not dispute about this; it is enough for me, that the apostle under the inspiration of God, applied the verse in this way: and whatever David might intend, and of whatever event he might have written, we see plainly that the sense in which the apostle uses it, was the sense of the Spirit of God: for the Spirit, in the Old and New Testaments, is the same." Dr. A. Clarke. And lest any person should quibble respecting the import of the word "men," in the apostle and in the Psalmist, we make this one remark; to wit: that not the sex particularly, but the human race, is most obviously intended. Hence the Psalmist adds in the very same verse, evidently referring to the incarnation of the Messiah, our Immanuel God with us; "That the Lord God might dwell among them." Did He dwell among "men" alone? Were these "gifts" procured by His incarnation, and death, restricted to the male portion of our species? What ridiculous subterfuges 'men' will resort to, when argument fails them, to sustain their cherished theories.

2. Joel ii: 28, 29. "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit." This proof passage of the point in dispute is too plain to require lengthy exposition. And so generally admitted by commentators of almost every variety of theological sentiment, that it would be an easy matter to multiply quotations to any extent, in proof of the position assumed. A few remarks, however, may not be uninteresting or irrelevant. (1.) The subject matter of the blessing foretold for the nations, is the "out-pouring of the Spirit." That is, under the Gospel dispensation, there shall be a more general and copious effusion of the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, than was enjoyed under the law. Under the Old Testament, some mercy-drops fell upon Zion's sacred hill; but under the New Testament, there shall be showers of spiritual blessings, over all the vineyard of the Lord; and the channels of ordinances shall be filled with the reviving and sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit. Yea more; according to the prophet Isaiah, (xliv: 3,) the banks shall be overflown, and the whole land inundated with the water of life. He says, "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring," &c. (2.) The subjects of the prediction. And [1.] sons and daughters." Are not females here expressly included? Or will any, rather than relinquish their long cherished opinion, and prejudices, resort to some scheme of verbal translation, to convert all these "daughters" into "sons;" or do some other violence to the sacred Scripture, rather than yield to the obvious import of the Holy Spirit? [2.] Another class of both sexes, is also mentioned here,—"servants" and "handmaids." Evidently referring to the poor and to "domestics," or to persons of the lowest rank and condition even to slaves. The "Jewish doctors," it is said, say: "Prophecy does not reside on any but such as are wise, valaint, and rich, not upon the soul of a poor man, or a man in sorrow." Whatever amount of truth there may have been in this rabbinical opinion, under the legal dispensation, it is certain that all such disabilities are done away in Christ. St. Paul says, (Gal. iii: 28,) "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." (3.) The extent of this promised benefit:—"all flesh." Most indisputably, this phrase signifies the Gentiles, as well as the Jews.—That the Gospel, with all its peculiar promises and advantages, was designed for "all nations of men, who dwell on all the face of the earth."—And consequently, we are happily included in this universal blessing. (4.) And among the many unspeakable benefits of the effusion of the Spirit is, that many "sons and daughters shall prophesy." That is, preach the Gospel. That this is the true meaning of the word, we hope hereafter to prove, by abundant authority. In this place, let the sentiment be sustained by two chief commentators, of the Calvanistic and Wesleyanic orders of Protestant Christians. Matthew Henry, the prince of Calvinian commentators, says on this passage in Joel; "The Spirit shall be poured out upon some of each sex; not your sons only, but your daughters, shall prophesy; we read of four sisters in one family, that were prophetesses." . . . . "And they shall prophesy; they shall receive new discoveries of divine things, and that not for their own use only, but for the benefit of the church. They shall interpret Scripture, and speak of things secret, distant, and future," &c. Now if some of "each sex" in our day, not only of our "sons," but also of our "daughters," shall prophesy, shall "receive new discoveries of divine things," and that "not for their own use only, but for the benefit of the church also; and shall "speak of things, secret, &c., and "shall interpret Scripture" too, if this means not, in other words, that both male and female shall preach the Gospel, pray tell us what it means. And Dr. Clarke, in his lucid style, is still more plain. Hear this prince of Armenian commentators speak upon this passage. He says: "The gifts of teaching and instructing men, shall not be restricted to any one class or order of people. He shall call and qualify the men of His own choice; and shall take such out of all ranks, orders, degrees, and offices, in society. And He will pour out His Spirit upon them; and they shall be endowed with all the gifts and graces necessary to convert sinners, and build up the church of Christ on its most holy faith." And on this phrase, "your sons and your daughters shall prophesy," he says plainly, "shall preach, exhort, pray, and instruct, so as to benefit the church." This needs no comment.—(5.) And we have the additional testimony of St. Peter speaking by the spirit of inspiration, who applies this passage to the glorious effusion of the Spirit, after the resurrection of the Savior, on the ever-memorable day of Pentecost. See Acts, ii: 16—18, where he that runneth may read. For, as Dr. Clarke observes: "Nor is there any evidence that such an effusion took place, nor such effects were produced, from the days of this prophet till the day of Pentecost." So that, in fine, it is manifest that if some women, as well as men, had never preached the Gospel, this prophecy of Joel would never have been fulfilled.

PROP. III. Under the influence of the Holy Spirit, many women did preach the Gospel after the day of Pentecost. 1. It may be supposed by some, that if on that marvellous occasion at Pentecost, some women did in fact preach the Gospel, it is doubtful whether they ever did thus officiate afterwards. And to weaken the force of the above prophetic passage, some may resort to this criticism, to discriminate between a prophecy and a promise. And then insist that a 'prophecy' has but one instance of fulfilment. This futile subterfuge is easily exposed. For, to grant to our opponents, for the sake of argument, what is by no means indisputable in the premises, still their application of the rule in this case is demonstrably erroneous. For in Acts, i: 4, referring to the approaching effusion of the Spirit, the sacred writer designates this blessing—the "PROMISE of the Father," and adds, verse 5, "For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." And most obviously, the Holy Spirit is the standing promise of the entire New Testament dispensation. 2. And accordingly many women did preach the Gospel, after the day of Pentecost. This is evident from many passages of Scripture. Take the following. (1.) Acts, xxi: 9. And the same man [Philip the Evangelist] had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy." Here one man, and a pious minister of the Gospel, had the unspeakable pleasure and satisfaction of seeing "four" members of his family, and they all single young women, become proclaimers of the great truths of Christ and his salvation! What an interesting sight! And is it not spoken to their praise? And commentators generally agree that this and similar instances of female prophesying, after the day of Pentecost, were further proofs of the progressive fulfilment of the prophecy of Joel. And if four female preachers were found in one family, who can doubt the fact that many more then existed? And if then, why not now?

But is not the word prophesy to be restricted to the foretelling of future events? We hope presently to shew, by competent authority, and that in abundance, that it is not. Let this question, therefore, be answered for the present, by asking another, which is put by Dr. Clarke, viz: "If Philip's daughters might be prophetesses, why not teachers?" And teachers of christianity in the church, and in the community.

2. Rom. xvi: In this chapter there are many female ministers mentioned. In verse 1. "Phebe, a servant," or rather a "deaconess." For so the word is translated by Drs. Clarke, Macnight, and many other learned critics and commentators. That there were many deaconesses in the Christian Church, in the days of the Apostles, is surely undeniable. And the state of society, as it (then) existed in many countries rendered an order of female ministers necessary. History, in this case, it should seem, is the best commentary. And who that has ever read the history of Greece, and parts of Asia, and has observed the wretched degradation, and the silly coyness of the women, can believe that men preachers could have access to a female audience, in many places, in those days? Here we could easily furnish citations sufficient for a book. We will give a quotation from Drs. Dodd and Coke. "Cenchrea, a port belonging to the city of Corinth," and Corinth was a city of Greece, and according to the customs of that country, men could not well be allowed to perform those good offices to the women: for men to have visited and conversed with women, would have been counted a great indecency, and must have brought a scandal upon the Christian profession; as in Greece the women were treated in a manner very different, from the usages of the western parts of Europe. This appears from Cornelius Nepos, who observes in his preface; "A great many things in our customs are decent, which are thought scandalous among them: for which of the Romans thinks it a shame to take his spouse to a feast? Or whose wife keeps not in the first room of the house, and converses with company? Which is quite otherwise in Greece, where she is never admitted to a feast, unless of relations, and always keeps in a retired part of the house, which is called the woman's apartment, whither nobody comes, unless allied to her by near relation." This being the case, it is not improbable that some women of probity and good understanding, might be chosen to attend as "deaconesses upon their own sex." So it seems that the historical accounts of those countries,—of the seclusion of females from society generally, were sufficient to convince those commentators of the necessity of an order of women evangelists. And inspiration testifies that they were equally endued with the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, with the male ministers of their day. And the learned Dr. Macknight quotes and translates from the Apostolical Constitutions, thus: "Ordain also a deaconess who is faithful and holy, for the ministeries towards the women."—Verse 3. Priscilla is mentioned with her husband Aquila. This pious couple are of considerable note in the New Testament. The "eloquent" Apollos, though "mighty in the scriptures," and "was instructed in the way of the Lord, and also "fervent in the spirit:" yet this pious pair "took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly." See Acts, xviii: 24—26. And St. Paul, in the verse before us, mentions her name first, as if to indicate that she was not only the "better half," but also the 'better preacher' of the two. Verse 6. Mary is mentioned. She appears to have been very zealous in the good cause, and was in great repute among the apostles and brethren. Verse 12. Here we have three women ministers spoken of in one verse! Tryphena, Tryphosa, and Persis. Let Dr. Clarke comment a little here. He says: "[Tryphena and Tryphosa] Two holy women, who, it seems, were assistants to the apostle in his work; probably by exhorting, visiting the sick, &c. Persis was another woman, who, it seems, excelled the preceding; for, of her it is said, she labored much in the Lord. We learn from this, that Christian women, as well as men, labored in the ministry of the word. In those times of simplicity, all persons, whether men or women, who had received the knowledge of the truth, believed it to be their duty to propagate it to the uttermost of their power. Many have spent much useless labor in endeavoring to prove that these women did not preach. That there were prophetesses, as well as prophets, in the Christian church, we learn; and that a woman might pray or prophesy, provided she had her head covered, we know: and that whoever prophesied, spoke unto others to edification, exhortation, and comfort, St. Paul declares, 1 Cor. xiv: 3. And that no preacher can do more, every person must acknowledge; because to edify, exhort, and comfort, are the prime ends of the Gospel ministry. If women thus prophesied, then women preached."

Let us now prove at length, by authorities of the highest standing and acknowledged merit,—admitted as such by the candid of every creed, that the word prophesy is not restricted in its signification to merely foretelling of future events, but actually means to preach or proclaim the truths of the Gospel. This, it is confessed, has at least, the appearance of a work of supererogation; for the apostle Paul, in the quotation above, has put the question at rest forever. But as some people seem disposed to yield to human authority, even before the Bible, we proceed to give the testimony of learned men. So that our opposers shall be left without excuse, should they continue in their unbelief. (1.) PHILOLOGICAL Lexicographers. [1.] WALKER. Prophesy, "To utter predictions; to preach, a scriptural sense." [2.] WEBSTER. Prophesy, ... 3. "Preaching; public interpretation of Scripture; exhortation or instruction. Prov. xxxi.—Prophesy, 1. To utter prediction; to make declarations of events to come, Jer. xi: 2. In Scripture, to preach; to instruct in religious doctrines; to interpret or explain Scripture, or religious subjects; to exhort, 1 Cor. xiii.—[3.]. BOLLES. "To utter predictions; to preach."

(2.) THEOLOGICAL Lexicographers. [1.] BUCK'S Dictionary. "In the Old and New Testaments, the word is not always confined to the foretelling of future events. In several instances it is of the same importance with PREACHING, and denotes the faculty of illustrating and applying, to present practical purposes, the doctrines of prior revelation. Thus in Nehemiah it is said, "Thou hast appointed prophets to preach," chap. vi: v. 7; and whoever speaketh unto men to edification, exhortation, and comfort, is by St. Paul called a prophet, 1 Cor. xiv: 3."—[2.] CRABBE, in his "English Synonymes," after giving the word in French, Latin, and Greek, says, "all signify to tell, to expound, or declare what is to happen."

(3.) BIBLICAL Lexicographers. [1.] BROWN....(3.) The preaching of the Gospel, 1 Tim. iv: 14,—Rom. xii: 6. (4.) The gift of explaining obscure passages of Scripture, or of foretelling things to come. 1 Cor. xii: 19,—xiii: 8, &c.—[2.] WATSON, "A prophet, in the strict and proper sense, was one to whom the knowledge of secret things was revealed, that he might declare them to others, whether they were things past, or present, or to come.....Nevertheless, in a more lax or analogical sense, the title prophet is sometimes given to persons who had no such revelation, nor were properly inspired." And under the head of "PREACHING," he says, From the sacred records, says Robert Robison, we learn that when men began to associate for the purpose of worshiping the Deity, Enoch prophesied, Jude xiv: 15. [3.] COVEL, "PROPHECY, a foretelling of future events, prediction; but including also from the Hebrew the idea of prophetic revelations, declarations, exhortations, and warnings, uttered by the prophets while acting under Divine influence, as ambassadors of God, and interpreters of his mind and will. The word also signifies that prophetic spiritual gift which was imparted to the primitive teachers of the Church, 1 Cor. xii: 10."

HOWARD MALCOM, A. M., makes the following remarks upon the word "PROPHESY. (1) A declaration of future things. Nehe. vi: 12. (2) A declaration of hidden, obscure, and important things. Prov. xxx: 1. (3) The preaching of the Gospel. 1 Tim. iv: 14., Rom. xii: 6," &c. "PROPHET, one who foretells what is to come; a person inspired, and appointed by God to reveal his will, to warn of approaching judgment, to explain obscure passages of Scripture, or to make known the truths of the Bible, and urge men to obedience. 1 Cor. xiv: 26."

(4.) CONCORDANCES. [1] CRUDEN'S. Prophesy....."The term is also used by St. Paul, for explaining Scripture, preaching or speaking to the church in public. 1 Cor. xiv: 1, 3," &c. [2] BUTTERWORTH'S. A "prophet," says Mr. B., is "one who foretells future events. 1 Peter, i: 10. One who preaches. 1 Cor. xiv: 1," &c. (5.) COMMENTATORS. [1.] DR. A. CLARKE. On Acts, ii: 17.—"The word prophesy is not to be understood here as implying the knowledge and discovery of future events: but signifies to teach and proclaim the great truths of God, especially those which concern the redemption by Jesus Christ." And on 1 Cor. xiv: 3, he explains the word prophesieth, thus: "Has the gift of teaching;" and "teaching the way of God:" And quotes the learned WHITBY. [2.] Drs. DODD and COKE: "Thus they should be enabled to prophesy; either to foretell things to come, as Agabus, &c.; or to speak the truth of God to the edification of others," &c.—FOURTHLY, it signifies to expound or interpret Scripture; as in 1 Cor. xiv: 1..... "An address to others." [3.] BENSON. To prophesy. "To discourse about divine things in a way that will edify others." [4.] Revs. GEORGE D'OYLY, B. D., and RICHARD MANT, D. D., and learned authorities cited by them. "The word prophecy, signafies the gift of teaching, exhorting, and explaining Scripture." OSTENWALD, JOHN FREDERICK, a Protestant Divine of Neufchatel, in Switzerland. "To prophesy," according to BISHOP HALL, is to be enabled "by the Spirit of God, to teach and declare those things, which may be to the edification of the church." "To prophesy signafies to declare truths through the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit, whether by prediction or not." The word "prophet" has the like signification. It is thus used in 1 Cor. xiv: 29, 32, 37. Parkhurst.—[5.] MATTHEW HENRY, on Acts ii: 18. A Spirit of prophecy; by the Spirit they should be enabled to foretel things to come, and to preach the Gospel to every creature. This power shall be given without distinction of sex: not only your sons, but your daughters shall prophesy."....."Or in general, men and women"—[6.] Dr. MACKNIGHT, on the Epistles "Prophesying," says this profoundly learned man, "does not necessarily imply the foretelling of future events by inspiration, but most commonly signifies the speaking by inspiration to the edification of others. Philip's four daughters may have done so."—[7.] Rev. A. CAMPBELL. Prophesy. "A general name denoting the speaking by inspiration in a known tongue, to the instruction of the congregation."—Cited from Dr. MACKNIGHT, on 1 Cor. xiv: 3.—[8.] WESLEY, on 1 Cor. xiv: 1, "The word here does not mean foretelling things to come; but rather opening and applying the Scriptures." [9.] DIODATI, Rev. John, of Geneva, and cotemporary with Rev. John Calvin, who wrote about two centeries ago, analyses of the Canonical books of the Old and New Testaments, with "Annotations." On Acts ii: 17, "Shall prophesy," he says, "Shall have such grace and understanding as to declare the good will of God." And on 1 Cor. xiv: 2, he remarks, "Prophesy is a gift more excellent than that of strange tongues, for by it is communicated light and instruction to the Church, to the understanding of it, which ought to be the proper end of speaking; without which, speaking is but an unprofitable sound." On verse 3, "To edification," he says, "Namely, things which serve for the instruction, advancement, and confirmation of the faith," &c. [10.] BARNES, in his "Notes," gives great latitude of meaning to the word "Prophesy;" and in his exposition fully embraces our views of the term. In his remarks on Rom. xii: 6, respecting it, he says: "This word properly means to predict future events, but it also means to declare the divine will; to interpret the purpose of God; or to make known in ANY WAY THE TRUTH OF GOD, which is designed to INFLUENCE MEN."

In the above quotations, we have been careful to give the language of their respective authors, vervatim, et literatim, et punctuatim, though we have taken the liberty to emphasise some words. Here, then, we might safely rest the question at issue. Is there a point in the whole compass of Christian theology, more susceptible of demonstration? For it is directly and positively asserted by the Holy Spirit, that women shall prophesy: But according to authorities above cited, (and enough for both jury and witnesses, in any court, to sustain any case,) to prophesy is to preach, and preach the Gospel. What further testimony can any reasonable man require? If our opponents believe not from the evidence just adduced, would they be persuaded, though one should rise from the dead? At all events, testimony can have no effect upon their thinking faculties, if this be insufficient.

PROP. IV. Women continued to preach in the Christian Church, long after the days of the Apostles.

It is generally admitted, that the miracle-working power, or gift of the Spirit, ceased with the Apostolic age. And some who oppose female preaching may suppose, that with the cessation of that extraordinary gift of God, in the Christian Church, the gift of prophesying, or preaching, to women also ceased. But that is a great mistake, as we hope to prove. So far from it, that it appears they continued to officiate in their ministerial capacity, till the Church became corrupt, and then men ministers, from sordid and selfish considerations, and not because the Bible forbids it, sought to suppress it. And it is gratifying to the friends of female preaching, to find, that while the Christian Church retained its primitive purity, and simplicity, the ministrations of women received its affectionate sanction, and support. 1. The first author we shall adduce to support this proposition, is Dr. Benson, a profound Divine, and by no means prepossessed in favor of a woman ministry. In his Commentary on Joel ii: 28, he remarks: "The gift of prophesy was bestowed upon some women under the Old Testament.....But this gift was more frequently conferred upon that sex in the times of the New Testament. Thus we read of four daughters of Philip the evangelist, who prophesied. Acts xxi: 9; and Church History affords us several other instances; such as Perpetua and Felicitas, who were martyrs for the Christian faith; Potamiena, mentioned by Eusebius, Lib. iv., cap. 5, and others." These few women ministers mentioned by the Doctor, are a credit to the good cause, for false prophetesses, or those who would consult their own ease and temporal comfort, would not have become "martyrs for the Christian faith." We are glad Dr. Benson declares there were others also; for Eusebius mentions more. 2. The second witness called in this case, is no less a personage than the celebrated Dr. Macknight, who is acknowledged to be a thorough scholar, and a patient investigator of Bible truth. On Rom. xvi: 1, he says, "Pliny, too, mentions them (ministering women,) in his letter to Trajan. And speaks of two Christian females, put to the torture, who were called among the Christians, Ministræ." And commenting on several verses in 1 Tim. 5; speaking of these "widows," he says:—Father Clement of Alexandria, reckons widows among ecclesiastical persons, Pædag. Lib. iii: c. 12. "There are many precepts in Scripture, concerning those who were chosen, some for priests, others for bishops, others for deacons, others for widows."

3. From motives of convenience and brevity, the writer gladly avails himself of an extract from a work entitled "THE FEMALE ADVOCATE," by Rev. John Stump, a pious minister of the Primitive Methodist Church, Eng., and a zealous defender of the ministrations of women. The article was originally written by an able "Correspondent of the Manchester Times;" a part of which is only here given. The writer says: "The following brief extracts, from history, throw considerable light on this subject:—"About the year 327, there was a woman, as Socrates Scholasticus reports, by whom the Iberians were converted to the Christian faith, after the king and queen: the king preached Christ to the men, and the queen preached Him to the women." Was not that just as it should be? Was it not also fulfilling this Scripture,—"And kings shall be thy nursing-fathers, and (their) queens thy nursing-mothers?"—(Isa. xlix: 23.) But our author proceeds: "In the year 372," says Baroneous, "there was a queen of the Saracens, called Mauvia, who preached Christ to her subjects. In the year 499," says the same author, "there was a queen of the Franks, in Gallia, named Chrotildis, a Burgundian, by whom that nation was converted. In the year 583, flourished Ingundus, a queen of the Goths, in Spain, by whom her husband and subjects were converted, as Baronius affirms, whose words are, 'Ingundis began to preach to her husband, &c.'" What an excellent example for women, both in high and low life, in our own day. And mark their signal success! Again he says: "'In the year 591,' says Paulus Diaconus, according to the testimony of Baronius, "lived Theodolinda, a queen of the Longobards, in Italy, by whose preaching that nation was converted.' His words are, "Both the king himself, and his Longobard subjects, obtained great favor from God, by the preaching of Theodolinda, namely, their conversion to the Christian faith.' In the ninety-ninth canon of the counsel of Nice, held 325, women are reckoned among the clergy; the words as translated, are, "Concerning deaconesses, and all others who are accounted amongst the clergy." Dupin, in the second volume of his Ecclesiastical History, affirms 'that in the fourteenth century, there were deaconesses in almost all churches.' In the fifteenth canon of the conncil of Calcedon, commonly called, the fourth general council, assembled anno 451, is this passage. 'A deaconess is not to be ordained before she is forty years old.' About this time, the clergy degenerating from their former simplicity, but increasing in power, riches, and worldly grandeur, he was accounted happy who had a friend at court, whereby he might obtain some ecclesiastical preferment; great revenues, titles, and honors, became annexed to them, many were ambitious of obtaining them." And mark now, "Then the men, exiling the women by degrees, took the sole government of the church into their own hands, and assembling together, made what canons they pleased for their secular advantage, &c. Then were some published against the ordination of priestesses, and deaconesses, &c. From that synodical prohibition, we may reasonably conclude that such practices were then in use, for had there been no such customs, doubtless the councils would not have repeatedly prohibited them." Upon the above citation, it would afford the copier pleasure to comment, but perhaps it is better to forbear, and leave the reader to note for himself. Many other authors might be introduced, to sustain the proposition, but enough probably has been said upon this part of the subject. Let us therefore proceed to

PROP. V. That women in our own day are held accountable to God for the improvement of their talents. And many of them have talents for preaching the Gospel.—Shall we say at once, therefore they ought to improve those talents, and preach the Gospel?* For does not the proposition itself afford evidence sufficient for its support, at least to some minds? But some may question the truth of the minor member; and therefore, we proceed to furnish the proof. And 1. (1.) In regard to their physical and intellectual ability. [1.] Touching their physical ability, a word or two. There is a natural fitness requisite, which must be obvious to all, and which we regard as essential to the sacred office. We cannot believe that any person, man or woman, who has a natural physical deformity, which would render them ridiculous in public, can be called of God to officiate in that way. For God is consistent with himself in all his works and ways. But by this rule, women are no more liable to exclusion than men. And the organs of speech in the female, are surely equal to those of the other sex. While the voice, confessedly, is more charming than that of the male. So that in this she has the decided advantage. And with regard to the physical strength of women, to perform the various and arduous duties of the ministerial office, strange as it may sound to some, the writer, (though perhaps of ordinary bodily ability,) testifies to what he has seen, that regular itinerant female preachers, have walked circuits, more miles to an appointment, and preached oftener than he could do, the best day he ever saw! And yet continue to travel, through all seasons of the year, and in different parts of the country, on missions as well as circuits, for upwards of twenty years! And were he to give the number of miles some of them have walked to an appointment, on some Missionary fields of labor, perhaps his veracity might be questioned.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Buchanon Circuit, Oct. 26, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: I wish to say through the Recorder, that our camp-meeting closed on the 12th of October. Brother Brown was in attendance, and preached with his usual zeal. Brs. Clark, Helmick, Reger, Neesmith, Simpson and Nester, were also with us and did us good service. We had a good camp-meeting. Believers were built up and several professed pardon through the blood of Christ. Thank God for his mercies. There seems to be a lasting impression made on the community. Our prospect to all appearances for a good Conference year on this circuit is flattering. O that the Lord would carry on his work. As camp-meetings are something new in this country, it was thought before we commenced that there would be a great deal of bad behaviour; but be it said to to credit of this community, that I never saw better behaviour at a camp-meeting.

R. H. WALKER.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Litchfiel , Ohio, Oct. 29, 1846.

MR EDITOR: I met my appointment on the Wellsville circuit, in due time. My meeting was at the town of Wellsville. Rather a pleasant season. But the rail road fever—election interests; and I may add, a quite cold atmosphere, rather indisposed the great majority for any special spiritual enjoyment. So far as being well received and kindly treated by warm & worthy christian friends is concerned, I should think brother Ragan, pleasantly situated at Wellsville: Yet, in some respects, the prospects for religious prosperity are not very flattering.—May this dark cloud be soon driven back by divine power, and brother Ragan's highly appreciated ministerial labors prove instrumental in a revival of pure religion among the people of his charge, never to be forgotten! I returned home from this meeting on Monday evening, intending to start for Leesburg circuit, the latter part of the week; but, an unexpected disappointment in a horse I had bought, put it out of my power so to do. I will visit this circuit at some other time. I arrived at brother Swan's, (the place for my meeting for Granger circuit.) on Saturday ——inst. at about 12, noon—and was sorry to find Br. S. sick, and to learn that he was brought home sick from Conference, and had not yet recovered. The great falling of rain which had continued for a number of days, had made the travelling very bad, and the Canal location of our meeting, is soon rendered disagreeable in wet weather,—no one was in attendance from any other society, and but a few, of the Swan society, had convened: &c., &c. Truly (only I am proof against them,) I should have got the blues. Br. Moody arrived sometime in the afternoon, and cheered me with his good company. I tried to preach to a few, at candle-lighting; but on Sunday no one went to the place for meeting, in consequence of the ceaseless falling of rain from three in the morning, until after seven o'clock in the evening. The friends on this ct. are much disappointed that brother C. declined serving them. I am told he would have been well received on this circuit, and supported too: I obtained the consent of Br. Moody to call the officiary of the circuit together, and if he and they could agree, to serve them the remainder of the year. All with whom I conversed—seem pleased at the idea of brother M. serving the ct. On my way through the circuit, I called to see the family of brother Tracy. And I much regret to hear that good brother T. has had a violent attack of disease, since Conference. He had partially recovered and gone to his circuit. But as he had been absent three weeks, during which no tidings of him had come, his wife was fearful that all was not well. O may a kind Providence favor health to our excellent bro. Tracy!!

I still find religion at a low ebb, in this region. And how can it be otherwise, since Foster's and Abby's infidel cry of 'come-outer-ism' is so very popular with a great many (hitherto) loud sounding christian professors? Infidelity, well knowing that the church is, and always has been the nursery of christianity, as it hates Christ, has sought to tear down the church. It matters not what the pretence—"tear down the church." It is not remarkable that a man who denies both the virtue of the death of Christ & the inspiration of the Bible, should welcome any pretence for tearing down the church. Such men well know, that the spirit which "tears down the church" never will help build up the church. Then let professing christians only shout on the victory of the 'Foster clan' over the churches, upon pretence of 'doing good to the poor slave,' and what will the end be? Aye—aye—that's the question. Infidel France, may hint an answer.

Whatever truly ministers to the cause of the 'poor slave,' should be hailed by every lover of his species. The cause of the slave is a worthy cause. And shall it be disgraced with all the trash and abomination in the land? It ought not. The whole spirit of tearing down the churches and of 'come-outer-ism,' is not only injurious to the 'poor slave,' but hurtful in the extreme to all under its influence. Where this excitement prevails, what havoc has it made? The faith of how many has it shaken? The love of how many, is waxing cold? how many seem to have forgotten every other interest, their own souls—the souls of sinners around?—they seem to think and talk of little else, but the 'poor slave.' Can this be the work of grace? Would the "mind that is in Christ" operate thus? Never. The spirit that blinds a man to his own, and the spiritual interests of his neighbor, around him, was never a true friend to the 'poor slave.' The spirit that spreads such irreligious influence, as is every where met with, where this "come-outer-ism" prevails, never ministered any good to the slave. This spirit in its cry of 'come out of her my people,' ect.,—naturally begets in the public mind a hatred to the church, fills it with disgust at all church organization: when this is done, how naturally will the mind hate the worship of God and means of grace, which are preserved in the church, and there only? How fearfully then, must irreligious and practical infidelity prevail? When this excitement is exerting such a wretched influence upon the public mind at the North, right where it prevails, what good effect can it have upon either slave or master at the South? How many shout it back, "Physician heal thyself!!" Sinners at the North are as bad as sinners at the South, and need a "crucified Christ" just as much.—And infidelity takes away our all, for time and eternity; and is as much worse than slavery, as the soul is better than the body. Many in this region have left the Methodist Episcopal Church, and some have left the Methodist Protestant Church, and taken Foster's ground: of whom I would ask, "What part has he that believeth with an infidel?" True—some of them admit that Foster is an infidel, and deny that they are following him. But how is the fact? They have 'come out' as he advises—and have made common cause with him, against all the churches; they use his words—they manifest his spirit—&c. &c., and they need not deny that they are doing his work. May God arrest this destructive spirit!

Yours truly,

GEO. CLANCY.

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

Kingsbury, Ia. Oct. 26, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: Our late Conference was for the most part one of the most harmonious and interesting Conferences we have ever attended. The business chiefly was dispatched with great harmony and great activity. Our meeting through the Sabbath was one of deep interest, many wept, and more made to rejoice in the Lord our God. The Ordinations were exceedingly interesting, also the Communion season. The Congregational Minister assisted in the Ordinations and he and his people came with us to the Lord's table to commemorate the sufferings and death of the blessed Saviour. They also gave us the use of their church for the Session of the Conference, and opened their houses for the reception of the Members of Conference. May the good Lord reward them abundaily for their acts of brotherly kindness towards our little band.

JAMES GAY.

WABASH DISTRICT.

Northfield, Ia., Nov. 3, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: I herewith send you some further extracts from the Minutes of the Wabash Conference, and as there is undoubtedly some anxiety in other parts of our church relative to our progress in this District, I would say from the imperfect returns from several circuits, the number in society cannot now be known; there is however probably something of a decrease. Yet we have no doubt but the church is now stronger, and in a better condition than it was this time last year. As there is more union, more zeal, and more humility, with better prospects for the future, and an increased devotedness on the part of the Ministry. Our Conference which has just closed was one of peculiar interest, the utmost harmony prevailed throughout, with no jarring string to interrupt the general tranquillity. The divine presence was largely present from the commencement; sinners were convicted; believers strengthened and the preachers go to their fields of labor with warm hopes of better times for the ensuing year.

J. C. WRIGHT.

NORTH ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Weathersfield, Ill., Oct. 26, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: I have just returned from Lafayette, where the North Illinois Conference held its 4th Session. The Conference was more full in attendance than ever before, the Ministers and Delegates from the several circuits, were mostly present. The Conference was favored by the special and signal presence of the Great Head of the Church, from its commencement to its close. Harmony and good will prevailed among the brethren. All repaired to their fields of labor greatly encouraged. May the blessed Saviour accompany every preacher to his appointment.

M. JARED.

Conference Proceedings.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

WABASH CONFERENCE.

You will please publish the following resolutions from the Committee on Finance.

Resolved, 1st. That the first quarterly Conference of the year make an estimate of the probable expenses of the circuit or station, and apportion the same to the several classes according to their ability by a vote of a majority of the leaders present. When, in a book provided by each leader, each member shall subscribe what he is willing to pay for that year to be paid quarterly, Provided, that each leader may obtain subscriptions from persons that are not members who may be disposed to aid us.

Resolved, 2d. That each and every class-leader shall have a class steward elected (or act in that capacity himself,) who shall use his utmost exertion to obtain the amount apportioned to his class by subscription or otherwise.

Resolved, 3d. That any minister or preacher shall be exonerated from all service in his appointed field of labor if at the end of any quarter he is not fully paid his regular disciplinary allowance up to that time. Provided he notify the quarterly Conference of his intention to leave, and within three weeks after leaving, publish the reasons thereof in the Western Recorder, together with a copy of these resolutions.

Resolved, 4. That the President's salary be apportioned as follows for the following year.

Crawfordsville	circuit,	$18,00
Union	"	13,00
Logansport	"	10,00
Frankfort	"	22,00
Cicero	"	22,00
Mississinawa	"	17,00
Deerfield	"	18,00
St. Joseph	"	34.00
Middletown	"	36,00
Columbia	mission,	8.10
Fall Creek	"	3,60

The Wabash District has 22 Itinerants, 9 meeting-houses, 2 parsonages. The No. of members cannot now be ascertained.

J. C. WRIGHT, Pub. Com.

RAIL ROAD ACCIDENT.—On Friday evening of last week, the train of cars from Philadelphia encountered a heavy log, which was left in an oblique position upon the track, at the crossing near Naaman's Creek. The locomotive was broken to pieces and thrown into a ditch at the side of the road, while the log was driven with such force against a small frame tenement standing near, as to completely destroy it. No one was injured.—Sat. Courier.

INVIOLABILITY OF CONFESSION.—Some time ago a Mr. Hotten, in Baltimore, was robbed of sundry valuable papers, which were taken from a desk in his office by means of a false key.—Soon after the papers were returned to Mr. Hotten by Rev. Mr. Hickey, a priest of the Roman Church, and a young man named Greacen was arrested as the supposed robber. Mr. Greacen was brought to trial. There was no evidence to convict him, and Rev. Mr. Hickey was called to the stand. He refused to testify, the facts having come to his knowledge under the seal of confession. His right to refuse was admitted by the court, and Mr. Greacen was acquitted. A similar decision was made some years since in the case of a Catholic Priest, by De Witt Clinton, when Mayor of New York.—Philadelphia Saturday Courier.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 11, 1847.

MICHIGAN FUNDS.—Our friends in Michigan will pleuse observe that in this quarter, we have to lose a heavy discount on the funds of that State. They will therefore oblige as by making their remittances in Ohio or Indiana paper, or good eastern funds.

☞ By request, of an enquiring friend, we state that the post office address of Rev. T. Potter, Conference Missionary, is Mt. Vernon, Knox co., Ohio.

REV. W. A. PORTER.—We regret to learn of the continued affliction of this brother, and direct attention of brethren in the Pittsburgh District to his notice in another column.

"J. G. W." We are much obliged for two poetical articles from J. G. Wilson, V. D. M. of Philadelphia, one of which we inserted last week, the other this week. Should be gratified to receive more from the same quarter.

☞ We state by request, that the post office address of Rev. Gabriel Williams, for the future is Frankfort, Clinton county, Ia.

☞ We intended inserting the Address of the President of Michigan Conference this week, but have necessarily to defer it to the next number.

LOSING.—It is an ascertained fact, that we verily have lost two subscribers in the Pittsburgh District, and one in the Ohio District, because we have been so naughty as to publish some plain things against the use of tobacco! O——h! If any more have left us on this ground, we are not apprised of it. But we believe there are others who desire that we should let that Idol alone. Can't promise that. And must we lose subscribers for doing our duty? Let us see if those who are with us in opposing the practice, do not send us ten new subscribers, for one that we have lost. Who responds?

DISCOURSE BY BR. REEVES.—We commence this week the publication of a Sermon by Brother Reeves, in which is thoroughly discussed the question of the ministry of women. To most of our readers, it is likely, the subject is new. These will probable be surprised to find what an amount of argument, scripture, and learned authorities are produced by the author of the discourse, in support of his positions. The discourse is an elaborate one, and we trust that it will be read, notwithstanding its length. The subject is worthy of investigation. It is the intention of Br. Reeves to issue an edition of five hundred copies in pamphlet form. For this purpose, we set it up in wide columns, so as to page the same matter, after it has appeared in the newspaper.

The following statement by Brother Reeves, is intended as preparatory to the Sermon.

Statement.

A plea for the publication of the following Sermon at this time. Having preached upon the subject in Eldersville, (Washington Co. Pa.) while residing there as superintendant of the Ohio Circuit, during the Summer of 1846; at a subsequent meeting of the male members of both Societies belonging to the charge, it was unanimously resolved to request the author to publish it both in the Western Recorder and Methodist Protestant.

From several circumstances, its appearance has been postponed till this late period, and now its length alone is regarded as a sufficient reason for not asking its reprint in our Baltimore Periodical.

Apologizing to the respected Christian friends who requested its publication, for the delay of its appearance; we dedicate the production to them with the sincere prayer that its perusal many be profitable to them; and to all others who may take pains to examine the subject.

W. REEVES.

OTTERBEIN UNIVERSITY.—We are gratified to learn, by the Religious Telescope, that this institution has gone into operation. It is located at Westerville, Franklin county. The Scioto Conference of the United Brethren, recently appointed Rev. W. R. Griffith, Principal; Rev. Lewis Davis, General Agent, and Rev. J. G. Dewy, Travelling Agent for the University. We are the more gratified with the success of the 'Brethren' in the enterprise, because it has met with opposition from some of their body.

GREEN MOUNTAIN SPRING.—This is an interesting hydropathic work, published at Brattleboro, Vermont, by Dr. Wesselhoeft at $1 per year.—We have just received the November number.—But the number for October, never came to hand. Will the publisher please have the number sent us?

PICTORIAL SUN, 1847.—A Christmas and New Year's Gift. This is a Mammouth Pictorial Sheet, issued semi-annually by M. Y. Beach & Sons. Proprietors of the New York, Daily, Weekly, and Monthly Sun. The present number contains 30 engravings, several of which are quite interesting. Price, Single copies, 12½ cents. Ten copies for one dollar.

THANKSGIVING DAY.—We continue to add to our list of States as we meet with the Governors' proclamations.

For November 25th:

New Hampshire,	Missouri,
Massachusetts,	New York,
Connecticut,	Maine,
Indiana,	Rhode Island,
Michigan,	Pennsylvania.
Maryland,	Ohio,
Kentucky,	Florida.

LUTHERAN STANDARD.—This paper, devoted to the interests of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in the West, has been removed from Somerset to Columbus. It is edited by Rev. C. Spielman, and is issued semi-monthly. It is a good religious journal.

NEW AND VALUABLE WORK.

"Historical Collections of Ohio; containing a Collection of the most interesting Facts, Traditions, Biographical Sketches, Anecdotes, etc. relating to its General & Local History: with Descriptions of its Counties, Principal Towns, and Villages. Illustrated by 177 engravings, giving Views of the Chief Towns, Public Buildings, Relics of Antiquity, Historical Localities, Natural Scenery, etc., BY HENRY HOWE, Cincinnati. Published for the Author, by Derby Bradley, & Co. Price—$3. 1847."

Such is the title of a large and beautiful vol., which has been placed upon our table, by Mr. J. H. Johnson, Agent for Mr. Howe. We were aware that such a work was in press, and had been apprised some months ago of the extensive amount of labor and pains taken by the Author, in traversing nearly all the counties of the State to procure facts, materials and illustrations for a contemplated work respecting Ohio, and were prepared with no small degree of pleasure to examine the publication, on its appearance. It fully meets our expectations.

The book of Mr. Howe is an octavo volume of 582 pages. It is neatly printed on good paper, and substantially and handsomely bound.—The illustrations are numerous, well selected, and well executed, and represent all parts of the State. A new and good map of Ohio is appended, defining, of course, the new counties. This is very satisfactory.

The volume opens with an out line History of the State. Then the Counties are taken in alphabetical order. A mass of information is given of each, geographical, statistical, historical and miscellaneous. Numerous facts and incidents are embraced, never before published, with descriptions of antiquities and curiosities. We cannot more justly or in better terms describe the book in so few words, than by saying with the Editor of the Ohio State Journal, that it is 'a complete Encyclopedia of Ohio, as it was, and as it is, and that 'hundreds of dollars expended in travelling through the State, would not give a person so much information of Ohio, as three dollars expended for this book.'

We conceive that Mr. Howe is entitled to the gratitude of this community, for having produced a work so much needed, after spending so much time (more than a year) in traversing the State to collect materials for the purpose, many of which materials would otherwise soon have perished forever, with aged settlers and citizens, with whom the Author conversed. He should certainly be rewarded, at least, by a liberal patronage.

Mr. Howe has furnished the public just such a work as has been needed. It is decidedly a book 'for the people,' and a book 'for the times.' It gives fully and faithfully the rise and progress of one of the greatest of the States. Citizens of Ohio, who take pleasure and pride in the still growing and advancing prosperity of their State, should possess a copy of this work. It is worthy of a place in every family. Let such a book as this be patronized, instead of the thousand and one volumes of unworthy trash, with which the country is flooded. As the book is large, and contains a vast amount of interesting and useful information, the price, ($3) is quite low. Those who purchase now, need not apprehend that as has so often been the case with other publications, a copy can soon be purchased at the stores at a reduced rate. For the Author pledges his 'word and honor,' that the price shall not be reduced for at least four years, and that it shall not for that period be sold at the book stores, but by travelling Agents only.

Our citizens are about to be waited upon by Mr. Johnson, the Agent for this portion of the State, and we trust that he will find a ready and a rapid sale for a work so instructive and useful.

The following recommendation has been furnished by Judges Lane and Wood, Col. Medary, and Ex-Governor Corwin:

RECOMMENDATION.

"The Historical Collections of Ohio," is a volume of great merit, and of surpassing interest.

"Besides the General and Local History, and Topography, it contains engravings of the most noted places in each county, Biographical sketches of distinguished citizens, Frontier Narratives, and notices of the early adventurers, comprising a body of information not to be found elsewhere, at so low a price, and in such a compendious form.

"It is eminently deserving the patronage of our citizens, and ought to be found in every family in the State.

E. LANE,
R. WOOD,
S. MEDARY,
THO. CORWIN."

TRIENNIAL CONVENTION.—The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, convened at St. John's Chapel, Philadelphia, on the 6th ult. Bishop Chase of Illinois, the Senior bishop, presided in the House of Bishops, and Rev. Dr. Wyat of Baltimore was chosen President of the house of Deputies. The most interesting and exciting case which received the action of this body, was that of the suspended Bishop of New York. The following condensed statement, from the Saturday evening Post, gives we believe, a correct account of the manner in which the case was disposed of.

The Onderdonk Case.

The Episcopal Convention, after a long and able debate, took the ground that the Diocese of New York is not vacant, and passed a canon authorizing the House of Bishops to remit or modify at their pleasure, such sentences of suspension as that under which Bishop Onderdonk is now placed.

As soon as the Convention put this power in their hands, the House of Bishops, by a committee of five Bishops, elected by ballot, brought in a report recommending, unanimously, that the Bishop "have leave to withdraw his papers." The report went largely and ably into the reasons for rejecting his demand. Among others, that there was no reason to believe he had repented of that of which he had been found guilty, and that until there should be received from him a satisfactory profession of repentance, restoration was impossible.

The report went further, and aimed at impressing on the mind of Bishop Onderdonk, that since the office of a Bishop was given him, not for his sake, but the good of the Church, there was nothing left to him but the bare "legal possibility" of being ever restored, and no such possibility as should be the basis in his mind of any expectation. The report was very strong; and we trust will be considered as terminating this unhappy case.

The vote on the resolution was sixteen to six. The six were precisely the same Bishops who, on the trial, voted not guilty. Two Bishops, who would certainly have voted with the sixteen, were absent, viz.: Bishops Smith and Porter. All present, the vote would have been eighteen to six. —S. E. Post.

Annual Register, 1848.

We have shipped to Baltimore, Md. a box, containing 1000 copies of this publication for the Book Agent, and 200 copies for Rev. T. F. Norris, Boston, Mass.

Also, a box to George Conklin, including the parcels generally ordered by brethren in the Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, North Illinois and Iowa Districts.

Brother Conklin will send to Springfield, Ohio, the parcels for Brethren, Young, M'Guire, Rose, Stephens, Moore, Davis, Ensminger, where they can be obtained of Br. R. Rose.

Brethren, Joel and R. M. Dalbey, Trumbo, White, Fowler, Warrington, Kerzerta, Nutty, Williams, Finkbine, Evans, and Channell, will please send and procure their parcels from Br. Conklin, Cincinnati. Brother Smith of Tanners Creek, Ia., will also find his there.

Brother Conklin will also forward the packages for Brs. Morrison, Shipp, and Ellis, to Edinburg, Johnson county, Indiana, care of Austin Shipp, to whom also we have sent an additional small parcel to be disposed of to whoever may want.

The parcels for Illinois and Iowa, will be sent by Brother Conklin to Rev. John Clarke, Rushville, Illinois, care of Wilson & Co., where Brs. Johnson and Miller will please send and get them. This is best we could do in sending for them.

We have sent by the hand of Br. Jos. Burns the parcels for Brothers, Andrew, Ragan, John Burns, Davis, Cowl, and Scott.

A package has been shipped to Pittsburgh, to Br. Charles Craig, Diamond Alley, from whom may be obtained the parcels for Brethren Reeves, Robinson, M'Elroy, S. and J. C. Hazlett, Doe, Wood, Compton, Simonton, Clawson, Gillespie, Laishly, Porter, Lucas, Helmick, and Palmer.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. JAMES M'COY,

Was born September the 10th. A. D. 1783, in Hagerstown, Maryland. His father's family were members of the Protestant Episcopal Church from which he received the ordinance of Baptism. During his minority the family removed to Bedford, Pennsylvania, at which place they united with the Methodist Episcopal Church—then organizing a society for the first time in that country. James on arriving at manhood, married the youngest daughter of the late Colonel Coulter of Cumberland.—A short time subsequent to his marriage, he began to reflect seriously upon the subject of religion, which at that time was sadly neglected by a majority of the population of those mountainous districts, where he dwelt. On uniting with the Methodists a spirited persecution was directed at him by his neighbors and former associates which but seemed to increase his zeal for the cause which he had espoused. The following year he was appointed a class leader in his neighborhood,—the duties of which relation he discharged with zeal and fidelity. About this time it was impressed upon his mind that he was called to the ministry.—Striving for some time to get rid of this conviction he at length yielded by appointing a meeting at a neighboring tavern and preaching to those assembled. Shortly afterwards he was licensed to preach by the church authorities in which service he continued to exercise through life. In due time the degree of deacon was conferred upon him,—and subsequently he was elected to Elders Orders but having some doubt as to the scriptural authority for two ordinations he did not accept this degree till a few years previous to his death. When the controversy arose on the subject of Church Government he warmly espoused the side of "Mutual rights and lay representation," and when the Methodist Protestant Church was organized under the Conventional Articles he was one of the first to come out and subscribe himself a member of the Infant Church, in whose fellowship he remained to the day of his death, which took place Sabbath, October the 3d, 1847, in the 65th year of his age.

In the relations of private life he was an example of that which is excellent and praiseworthy; as a husband and father his life was a uniform display of conjugal affection and parental tenderness—his highest earthly enjoyments were found in the domestic circle in the bosom of his family—their happiness was his, and to promote it no exertions were too great.

As a neighbor, the united testimony of all who knew him will give him character. It was not merely that he was kind to his neighbors—hospitable to strangers—and charitable to the poor and as far as possible he "followed peace with all men" but there was a moral charm that uniformly surrounded him which was felt in every circle and spread its benign influence through the region in which he dwelt. As a Christian he was free from sectarian intolerance treating the peculiar tenets of other denominations with respectful deference. He felt himself called upon to bear an open and unambiguous testimony against the evils and enormities of Slavery—Intemperance, and War, the three great evils which are now rampant in this land of boasted liberty.

In the character of a minister of the Gospel he was highly esteemed by all who knew him.—His natural diffidence heightened by a consciousness of want of education caused him generally to commence his pulpit exercises with great embarrassment—but as this subsided, he generally led his hearers step by step into a large field of serious inquiry kindling as he advanced with increasing energy till the subject was exhausted. At times he seemed to labor with conceptions too vast for his utterance. On these occasions his delivery was solemn and commanding, and his diction awfully sublime. It was then he had great force without ornament and grandeur without correctness. His fervent piety imparted a peculiar unction to the sentiments he delivered and enable him to turn topics which in other hands would have been dry speculation, into materials for devotion and prayer. From his first acquaintance with religion to the close of his life he was never known to express the least hesitation respecting his fate, but enjoyed an uninterrupted assurance of a glorious immortality.—It was evident to all who knew him that his religion was not a transient impression, but a permanent principle, blending itself with all his thoughts and actions, elevating them towards heaven. A short time previous to his death, (all the members of his family being assembled at his house,) whilst seated at the supper table, he expressed his conviction that he would never meet them in like manner again until they should meet in our "Father's house above." He then exhorted all present in a most affectionate manner to meet him in the kingdom of heaven, where we now trust he rests from his labors,

Oh tell not the mourner to weep
Though he's laid down his head in the dust,
He's gone where his forefathers sleep,
He's gone to the rest of the just.
Yes, silent in death is that voice
Which moved by the spirit of truth,
Made the hearts of the aged rejoice,
And stilled the wild passions of youth.
Yet he lives, for his spirit hath soared
To the regions of heaven above,
Where freed from sorrow and pain,
He rests with the God of his love,

E. H. M'COY.

Written for the Western Recorder.

DIED, on the 23d September last, WILLIAM EDWARDS, formerly of this city, in the 57th year of his age. He had sustained the character of a Christian for about 30 years, and was amongst the first in the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church in this place. He left a widow and 3 children, two sons and one daughter, all of whom feel deeply afflicted on account of their loss. Brother Edwards gave the clearest evidence of faith in Christ and of a sure hope of heaven even to his latest hour, assuring his friends, that there was not a cloud between him and his God. He often expressed a desire to depart and be with Christ, and on one occasion, hearing the clock strike, he said, "The hours move slowly." As long as his strength would justify, he exhorted his friends to prepare for death.

He had been a licensed exhorter for a number of years prior to his death, and manifested a disposition to make the best of his time in doing good to others. At last, he died as he had lived, in the hope of eternal life.

"Precious are the dead which die in the Lord henceforth, yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." JOEL DALBEY, Jr.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 25, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SAMUEL CLEVINGER, ESQ.

We have lost one of our best citizens, a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and a Son of Temperance, the most popular lawyer we had in the place. He took an active part in sustaining our late Conference. Our town is nothing less than a place of mourning; yesterday morning he went out with his hands to work, worked himself until 9 o'clock, was dead aginst 10, was well as usual an hour before he died, more lively than usual. He apparently was a stout, hearty man, he was no doubt a Christian. He was truly a gentleman, a good and useful citizen. He will be lamented by all who knew him. How mysterious are the ways of Providence.—Here I am who have been afflicted for a year, thank God that I yet live.

W. A. PORTER.

Waynesburg, Pa. Nov. 3, 1847.

From the Carroll (Ohio) Picayune.

MRS. NANCY PATTERSON,

Wife of Robert Patterson, Esq., of Carroll county, departed this life, October the 23d, 1847, after five days illness of Eresypelas fever. Her age was 45 years and 11 months. She left a disconsolate husband and five children with a large circle of friends to mourn her departure. Her presence that cheered their dwelling, cheers it no more, her voice that was pleasing to them, speaks to them no more. She that walked to the house of prayer, walks with them no more.

"Sweet companion, mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer's breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening,
As it floats among the trees.
Peaceful be thy silent slumber—
Peaceful in the grave so low—
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more our sorrows know.
Dear companion, thou has left me,
Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hast bereft me;
He can all my sorrows heal.
Yet again I hope to meet thee
When my day of life is fled—
Then in heaven, with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

A HEROIC ACHIEVEMENT.—The several accounts we have had of the sufferings and mortality of a party of emigrants to California, in the mountains last winter, have been rather imperfect, leaving in uncertainty the fate of a few. By a letter in the California Star we learn that passed midshipman Woodworth organized an expedition to the mountains in March, and saved from death forty of the emigrants who were lost in the snow storm. The sufferings of the men, women and children were terrible. Two of Mrs. Grave's children that died, were eaten by the survivors, and when the party was found, they had eaten the breast, heart, liver and lungs of Mrs. Graves, who also died. The undertaking to save the lost ones was difficult and dangerous, and Woodworth himself was 21 days in the snow, and crossed Bear mountain four times.

News of the Week.

Proclamation by the Governor.

In accordance with a wise and Christian usage, and in compliance with a resolution adopted at the late session of the General Assembly of Ohio, the Executive is expected to set apart a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer, to be observed by the people of the State. Already a day has been designated for that purpose by the Executives of many of the States. Uniformity in the designation of the day is esteemed desirable by a Christian people, that there may be exhibited the sublime spectacle of a great nation in behalf of whom Providence has wrought wonderful things, in a signal manner acknowledging Him as their Sovereign Ruler, and as the munificent donor of all they enjoy.

I, William Bebb, Governor of the State of Ohio, do therefore hereby designate & set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November, inst., as day of Thanksgiving and Prayer to Almighty God, for his manifold mercies to us as a people, earnestly desiring that it be strictly observed, to the end that those mercies may be continued and the custom hallowed throughout the State, while our beloved Union has a name and a place upon the earth.

During the past year we have been peculiarly favored. While famine has caused intense suffering in a sister country, calling forth a wail of mourning from its redundant population, appalling to all hearts, our own land has ejoyed the blessings of plenty. The earth has given forth its fruit without stint, in obedience to the mandates of that Providence which causes the dew to distil, the rain to fall and the sun to shine. Of our abundance we have been enabled to minister to the wants of our suffering brethren, realising, as their thank-offerings reach us, how blessed it is to give.

No desolating scourge has visited our borders. The blessing of health has been enjoyed in an eminent degree, in nearly every section of the land. Labor has been rewarded and prosperity has marked the passing year.

For such blessings, how can we fail to be thankful! Let not ingratitude characterise a Christian people. Let us remember that where much has been given, much will be required.—Let us humbly thank God for what of good we enjoy, and pray that evil be long averted. The Pilgrims came to this continent with the Bible in their hands. The God of the Bible was their refuge and their hope. He prospered them and he has prospered us. Let us pray that the inculcations of His sacred Word may take deep root and be watered by His Spirit—that we may remember Justice and love Mercy—that a generation wiser and better than we may succeed us, to whom may be long vouchsafed the blessings of Civil and Religious Liberty.

We are called upon to lament the existence of a war that, although its desolating ravages have not been witnessed in our midst, has already cost much treasure and many valuable lives. Let us pray that it be speedily and happily terminated; that peace may be restored and long perpetuated to us and ours, contributing by its benign influence to the development of the useful arts and sciences, the maturing of a Christian character and the glory of our land.

For blessings received, for evils averted, and to the end that we may still enjoy the favor of Almighty God, I invoke the people of our beloved State to observe the day designated, as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer, suspending, as far as possible, all secular business, and, assembling themselves together for suitable exercises upon that day.

Given under my hand and seal, at Columbus, on this, the second day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven.

WM. BEBB,
Governor of Ohio.

November 2d, 1847.

Explosion of Fire-Damp and Death.—Mr. Isaac Rich, one of the proprietors of the mines of that name, at Pottsville, was instantly killed on the 23d. ult., by an explosion of fire-damp. He was at the time in the breastwork of the mine making observations of the progress of the work when an explosion took place and precipitated his body into the excavations below. He was about 24 years of age, and left a wife and a circle of numerous friends to mourn his death.—Dol. Newspaper.

Promotions.—It is said that the government is determined that no promotions shall take place in the army now in Mexico, or no appointment to fill a vanacy, unless made from those actually engaged in the service of the country, or from those who have rendered efficient service during the war. It is but just that those who have distinguished themselves in the campaign, should first reap the honors attending it.

Chicago and Detroit Telegraph.—The Chicago Tribune of the 15th inst. states that the posts are all up from Michigan City to that city, on O'Reilly's Line. The whole force was next to be concentrated on the line between Detroit and Toledo. The Tribune says it is intended to have magnetic communication between this city and Detroit by the first of December, if possible; and in any contingency, by the 15th.

Abolishment of Slavery.—The Barbadoes Gazette, of the 23d September, states that it has heard, on what it considers good authority, that orders have been recived from his government by the Danish governor of St. Thomas and Santa Cruz, to prepare the proprietors in those islands for the immediate emancipation of their slaves; and it is further confidently asserted, that similar orders have been transmitted to the governors of the French Island.

Powder Mill Exploded.—At Lowell on. Tuesday the powder mill of O. M. Whipple exploded. The blown up was a circular mixing mill, with cast iron wheels weighing seven tons. The accident was caused by the heating of one of the arms which pass through the wheels. The quantity of powder in the mill was 1000 pounds; loss $500. The machinery was not disturbed. No person was injured.

Inventors in the United States are on a much better footing in regard to the facilities for securing the patent rights of their discoveries than in Great Britian. For instance, the cost of taking out a patent here, exclusive of the expense of the model, is about $40. On the other hand, the securing of a patent for England alone is about $525; if Scotland is included there is an additional cost of nearly $400; and if Ireland, upwards of $600 more.

A machine for making staves for barrels is in operation at Dayton, Ohio, which turns out with ease twenty staves per miuute, or 1200 an hour —10,000 in ten hours is ordinary work. The stave is put in the rough, and comes out ready for the barrel, with the exception of jointing.

The late explosion at Nashvile is said to have caused a great demand for window glass. Over six thousand dollars' worth, we see it stated, was sold in two days.

Progress Abroad.

Turkey and Tunis have got the start of our illustrious Republic. Their Mohammedanism has taken one step in advance of our Christianity. But this honor is not confined to the religion of Mahomet. Hindooism, which we are seeking by our missionaries to extirpate, has also become an example to the Christendom of America.

The overland mail of September 1, brought to England the pleasing intelligence that slave-dealing has been abolished in the Rajpootana States, and the very name of slave is no more mentioned. The spirit of Progress is confined to no race. Suttees and infanticide were lately prohibited in the same States; and it is now declared a capital offence to aid or abet in such exhibitions. These reforms have been effected thro' British influence.

The following paragraph from the Indian news, we copy, not only for the information it contains, but to show how Americanisms are making their way in other regions:

"The chiefs of the Rajpootana States are going more ahead than any of the native princes of India, there being now in Bombay workmen from different trades sent by them for the purpose of being instructed in their professions in the Polytechnic Institute, lately established here, and which will commence operations in right earnest after monsoon."

We learn from the London Anti-Slavery Reporter that the country of Pesth, in Hungary, has instructed its members to demand of the next General Assembly, among other things, the following:

"The abolition of forced labor, and all impositions of the like nature, which will be replaced by numercial contributions; and the right of each village to be represented by two members in the County Assembly of which it forms a part."

We transfer to our colums, from the Reporter, the following notice of Abolition in the Danish colonies:

"A Copenhagen letter states, that on July 28, when the Governor General of the Danish colonies in America, General Count Schelton, was about to return to St. Croix, to resume his functions, the King delivered to him the following rescript for the abolition of slavery.

"'Christian VIII, by the grace of God, King of Denmark, &c., moved by feelings of justice and humanity, and taking into consideration the welfare of our colonies in the West Indies, as well as the interests of the planters in those colonies, we will and decide that the arbitrary powers which the slave owners possess over their slaves shall entirely cease; but, in order to protect the interests of all, and to forward the measures necessary for preparing this transition in the state of the slaves, this change shall not take place until twelve years from the date of this present rescript; that is to say, until the 28th July, 1859, and from the present time till then the status quo shall be preserved. Nevertheless, it is our will that the children of slaves, who may be born after the present day, shall be free from their birth, but shall remain with their mothers or relations, under conditions which we shall hereafter make known.'

"By another rescript, of the same day, the King directs the Governor General of these colonies to appoint, immediately on his return to Saint Croix, a commission, comprised of members of the Colonial Government, public functionaries, and other enlightened men, to consider and propose the measures to be taken for carrying into execution the provision of the above rescript, and insure the subsistence of the negroes after their emancipation, as well as the cultivation of the plantations by free laborers."

And are we to imagine that slavery on this continent is to prove an exception to the general law of Progress, under which, in all other parts of the world, it is crumbling into oblivion? Modern Civilization or slavery must give way. They cannot be reconciled.—National Era.

Nine Thousand Lives Saved.—It is stated, on good authority, that the lives of Nine Thousand People were saved by the donations of provisions in the Macedonian. This simple fact is stated in some half dozen lines, which are huddled away among a crowd of items, in the columns of the newspaper press. Nine Thousand Lives Saved! Had the same number of lives of Mexicans been taken by gunpowder and cannon-ball, we should have column after column, letter piled upon letter, giving the details of the bloody transaction, overflowing with rejoicings, and set off with the usual flourishes—"Glorious Victories—American Arms Triumphant—Our Soldiers Covered with Glory—Nine Thousand Mexicans Slaughtered," &c.

These little facts speak volumes on the depravity of human nature.—National Era.

Collision of Locomotives

The passenger train which left Boston on Thursday morning, at 8 o'clock, for the Western Railroad, soon after leaving the Charlton station, about 14 miles beyond Worchester, met on the same track a freight train out of its time, and of course should have waited at the station which it had last passed. Although the trains were not moving with great rapidity, the collision was so violent as to disable the engines, and to make a wreck of a number of cars. The tender of the passenger train was forced by the momentum of the cars behind it, upon the engine, and the baggage car upon the top of the tender. We do not learn that any person was dangerously wounded. A lady passenger and one of the brakemen were injured—to what extent we are not informed. In consequence of the collision, twelve or fourteen of the freight cars became detached from the rest of the train, by the breaking of the connecting bar, and being on a steep grade, they soon acquired a retrogade motion, which it was impossible to arrest.

They descended the plain with great velocity, and their progress was not arrested until they had passed the Spencer and East Brookfield stations, and had nearly reached that of South Brookfield. —Dol. Newspaper.

The Mormons.

The last news from Council Bluffs, says that a rumor came in, sent on in advance by the Mormon Twelve, who were on their route back from the Salt Lake. A small party was sent on the Bluffs in advance of the main party, in order to have fresh teams, provisions, &c., sent to meet them. The Mormons have located their grand gathering place about half way between the Utah and Salt Lake, in California, on a stream which connects the two waters. The distance between the two lakes is about sixty miles—a fertile valley extending the whole distance, of several miles in breadth. There they have laid out a city, and commenced making improvements. They are in the midst of the Blackfeet, Utah and Crow tribes of Indians, who are said to be peaceable, and favor this settlement.

The main body of emigrating Mormons, which started from the Bluffs in June last, had advanced about two hundred miles beyond the South Pass, by the end of July, and were passed at Green River at that time. They had got on without difficulty to that point, and were pushing on to their new location.—Cin. Com.

Emigration.

The process of emigration in ancient times was a violent one. The path of the emigrant was marked by devastation; he was the plunderer of his race. Emigration, in latter days, is more gradual, always peaceful, and generally beneficial, not only to the emigrants, but to those among whom they settle. In the last twenty-two years, a million and a half of people have migrated from Great Britain and settled in other countries, without strife or violation of the rights of any people. Such an event, in the days when Northern Europe used to overrun upon Southern, would have provoked the most wasting wars.

In the last five months, in the port of New York alone, one hundred thousand emigrants have landed from abroad, without producing the slightest disturbance. They will soon be lost in the great ocean of American life.

The following table is copied from the report of the Emigrant Commissioners:

"The number of passengers who arrived from May 5th to September 30th, inclusive, and for whom commutation money was paid, or bonds given, was 101,546, of whom only 25 were bonded. Of said passengers, there were natives of—

Germany,	43,208	Sweden,	119
Ireland,	40,820	Spain,	72
England, Wales,	6,501	Denmark,	51
Holland,	2,966	Portugal,	31
France,	2,633	Poland,	21
Scotland,	1,856	East Indies,	6
Switzerland,	1,536	Turkey,	1
Norway,	881	South America,	1
Belgium,	478
West Indies,	265		101,546"
Italy,	130

German and Irish, Celt and Saxon, in due time, lose the peculiarities of race which seem indestructible in their respective countries, becoming fused here in one general mass.—National Era.

Dreadful Railroad Accident.

The Boston Traveller of Thursday says:—A gentleman who arrived in the cars this morning, from Vt., give us the following account of a fearful and fatal railroad accident, which occurred about sunset last evening, in the vicinity of Royalston, upon the Vermont and Massachusetts Railroad. A freight train, consisting of an engine and two cars, loaded with railroad iron, was crossing a new bridge built over Miller's River, when the bolts which fasten the bridge drew out and the bottom of the bridge, together with the engine and cars, was precipitated into the river. Mr. Charles Field, an engineer upon the road, states that the accident occurred on a bridge between South Royalston and Athol; that the bridge was built by Messrs. Booby & Stone; that it had been carefully examined previous to passing over it, and believed to be perfectly safe; and that the cause of the accident was the imperfection of the iron used for the rods in the centre of the dridge.

Six persons are known to have been killed viz: Mr. Woodbury, the engineer, Mr. Benj. King, of West Acton, (who has left a wife and three children,) Mr. Thompson, of Acton, Mr. Wiley, of Baldwinsville, Mr. Huntoon, formerly of West Acton, and another, name unknown.

Mr. Whitemore, ticket master at Baldwinsville is badly burnt; also Mr. Reynold, track repairer. The fireman, Mr. Patch, of Littleton, escaped with the least injury, and is getting along very comfortably. The fall was about forty feet, and the engine and cars still remain in the river. If there are more dead bodies, they are beneath the cars.—Dol. Newspaper.

David Darrow, an old and much respected citizen of Stow township, Summit county, Ohio, was digging a well the other day, when suddenly the banks caved in upon him, twenty-five feet under. After five hours of intense exertion and great excitement, they reached the body, and found it dead.

Victims of the Scourge.

A N. Orleans paper publishes a list of names of all who have died there by yellow fever this season, with the place of nativity attached. The following is a recapitulation of the whole number from the 5th of July to the 20th of October —107 days:

From the United States, 240; England, 70; Scotland 20; Ireland, 694; France, 224; Germany, 877; Prussia, 44; Spain, 9; Portugal, 3; Switzerland, 24; Italy, 12; Denmark, 11; Canada, 6; Austria, 4; Belgium, 7; Sicily, 3; Turkey, 2; Mexico, 2; Gibraltar, 1; Carcassia, 1; Isle of Man, 1; Sardinia, 1; Norway, 1; Hanover, 1; Isle of Malta, 1; West Indies, 1; Jewish Cemetry, 44; Unknown, 338. Total, two thousand five hundred and forty four.

Rev. T. H. Stockton.—The numerous admirers of this gentleman will learn with great regret that he has accepted a call to take charge of a Church in Cincinnai, and that he has resigned as Pastor of the First Meth. Protestant Church of this city, and designs leaving Philadelphia in a few weeks.

Let the Cincinnatians cherish their acquisition with ardent affection, for they have taken from us one of the most eloquent, sincere and impressive pastors we ever listened to.—Phila. Sat. Courier.

Notices.

Notice.—The Springfield Temperance Society will hold its Annual meeting for the election of officers, &c., at the Methodist Church in Putnam on Tuesday evening next, Nov. 16th at half past 6 o'clock P. M. The society will be addressed by the Rev. Dustin, of Zanesville. A general attendance is solicited.

J. S. WARD, Sec'y.

Nov. 10th, 1847.

Washington Circuit, Ohio District.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Bethel meeting house, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in December. We invite as many of our brethren in the ministry as can come.

A. CHANNEL.

New Richmond Circuit, Ohio District.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at the Clover Creek meeting house, on Clover Creek, on the 14th and 15th insts. We solicit the aid of Brethren Langdon and Trumbo, of Cincinnati Circuit, also the unstationed brethren of this circuit, and other ministers and Laymen that can be with us.

R. M. DALBEY.

Leesburgh circuit, Muskingum District.—Our first Quarterly meeting will be held at Liberty Meeting house, three miles east of Uricksville, to commence on the 13th of November, to which we affectionately invite our Conference Missionary, Br. T. Potter, and all other brethren who can attend. We design to protract the meeting if circumstances permit.

W. L. Baldwin.

Bainbridge Ct., Ohio Dis.—Our first quarterly meeting will commence on the 13th of Nov., at Cove Spring meeting-house. We invite fathers Dobbins and Hughey, Brothers W. Pelan, C. H. Williams, and others who can attend, we shall be happy to see.

S. P. KEZERTA, Sup't.

Frederic Ct., Mask. Con.—Bro. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at the Huntsman appointment, that being the time and place of our first quarterly meeting.

J. S. THRAP, Sup't.

Wayne Ct., Musk. Con.—Brother Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at Waynesburg.

C. T. KINGSBURY, Sup't.

Monongalia ct., Pitts. District.—Br. Bassett: Please inform our worthy President, that the point of visitation on this circuit, will be at Thomas Maple's new Frame church. We are looking up to the God of our Fathers, that he will favor our Zion, and baptise the entire membership with the holy reformation fire, and that it may spread over the entire hills, and up and down the valleys, till one mighty anthem may echo from mountain to mountain.—Brother Brown, come with the whole armor on.

Yours, as ever, in the bonds of christian fellowship,

ELI MARTIN, Sup't.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Lewis	Circuit,	October,	24th,	1847.
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett; Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	" "	"
Cambridge	"	4th	" "	"
Belmont	"	1st	" Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	" "	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	" "	"
Steubenville	"	4th	" "	"

As Br. C. has given public notice of his purpose not to go to his charge, I hereby say to the friends on Pennville circuit, that I will meet my appn't on that ct. at Pennville: I would also, suggest, that I would be glad that C. J. and Wm. Sears, could make it suit their convenience to supply the circuit until my visit to it.

As the Mt. Zion circuit, has no house suitable for a large gathering of people in cold weather, upon reflection, I have thought it advisable to defer my visit until the warm season. I have recalled my appointment upon it, by private letter to bro. Hanby. In consequence of this change, I will visit the Coshocton circuit, the 3d. and Pleasant Hill circuit, the 4th Sunday of Novemcer. Of this fact I have given notice to bro. Ross, and Case by private letters.

GEO. CLANCY.

Br. Bassett; Please insert the following list of app'ts

Frederick	circuit,	1st	Sunday	November.
Licking	"	2d	"	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d	"	"
Coshocton	"	4th	"	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st	"	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts.

GEO. CLANCY.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Port William	"	Nov.	6th,	1847.
Springfield	"	"	13th,	"
Union	"	"	20th,	"
Darby	mission,	"	27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,		"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Springfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

Liberty	ct.	Nov.	6-7	1847.
Madison	"	"	13-14	"
Flat Rock	"	"	20-21	"
White Lick	"	"	27-28	"
White River	"	Dec.	4-5	"
Sugar Creek	"	"	11-12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Geo. Clancy, 2,	O.	W. P. Haymond,	Va.
A. Channell,	"	R. H. Walker,	"
C. J. Sears, 1 sub.,	"	P. M. Morgantown,	"
E. A. Brindley,	"	W. A. Porter,	Pa.
J. H. Webster,	"	P. M. Pittsburgh,	"
P. M. Cardington,	"	M. Jared,	Ill.
A. J. Robinson,	"	D. Young,	"
C. T. Kingsbury,	"	J. C. Wright,	Ia.
R. M. Dalbey,	"	V. Lucas, 1 sub.,	Pa.
G. W. Thornburgh,	"	W. Reeves,	"
P. M. New Alexandria,	"	J. Robison,	"
C. Russell,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
W. P. Haymond,		10	43	5 00
Benj. Hull,		9	52	2 00
J. H. Webster,	D. Davis,	9	24	2 00
J Gay,	A Brown,	8	52	2 00
"	L. Warren,	8	52	1 00
M Jared,	G W Jackson,	9	52	2 00
J C Wright,	P Moore,	9	13	2 50
D Young,		8	9	1 00
John Swern,		9	52	2 00
John Vansant,		8	52	2 00
O V Warren,	S Martin,	8	50	1 00
James Hamilton,		8	52	2 00
C Russell, Dayton,		9	52	3 00
R M Dalbey,	S Conkling,	9	28	2 00
D Vandenbark,		9	52	3 00
Wm Reeves,	Wm Morrison,	8	52	2 00
"	John Garrard,	9	52	2 00
"	John Langstaff,	8	39	1 45
J Robison,	W Palmer,	9	52	2 00
"	D Davis,	9	52	2 00

Br. J. C. Wright, certainly.

Br. C. J. Sears, we are obliged to you for the information you give, of the Chester Hill subs. The missing numbers are sent. Log-cabin post-office, ditto. The books and pamphlets are sent to M'C.

Br. W. Reeves, the Postmaster at Pittsburgh, informs us that the paper of W. Barnhill is not taken out. Please ascertain why.

The Postmaster at Morgantown, Va., does his duty well in giving us notice when papers are not taken out of the office. Repeatedly he has notified us that M. D. Wells does not take his paper, and repeatedly have we been assured by the Agent who procured us that subscriber, that he does not wish it discontinued. He now advises us to discontinue the paper of J. Vandevert. We have had no information that V. wishes to stop taking the paper, and if he does, he is responsible for another volume, since six numbers have been sent. Will Br. Laishley or Br. Gillespie oblige us by reporting on these cases once more?

A brief Appeal, in behalf of the Western Recorder.

We deem it expedient just now to address a few words, especially to Meth. Protestants in the West in reference to the claims of our paper. Indeed we have been advised to do so by our seniors and superiors, who take an interest in the prosperity of our paper. We shall have to speak plainly. Is the publication of the Western Recorder desirable—is it necessary? Should it be patronised and sustained? Those who answer in the affirmative, must know that an enlargement of its patronage is imperiously needed.

A highly respectable church paper is published in Baltimore. We are glad to know that it has a two fold more extensive patronage than the Western Recorder has at present. Yet we conceive that the latter should be at least as well sustained as the former. In the great western valley is found nearly one half the entire membership of the Methodist Protestant Church. And notwithstanding the claims of the paper in Baltimore, which have never been called in question, a leading portion of our community have from our first organization, been of the opinion that the interests of the church require also the publication of a periodical in the West. And indeed we must be permitted to enquire how we could, as a religious community, do without such an organ of communication with the several Conferences, and Circuits, and Stations? Where can be found equal facilities, or any medium of any kind, as Methodist Protestants, so efficient for spreading information, obtaining co-operation, and exciting each other, as churches and individuals to love, labor and all goodness? As a means of spreading and defending truth, and sending it all through the fellowship in the west, is not the Western Recorder indispensably necessary to Methodist Protestants? Make it then, by sustaining it, an able defender and successful promoter of pure truth.

The enemy knows how to sow his tares by secular and infidel publications. The press is vigorously used by the enemies of God and his cause. It teems with publications of a filthy, poisonous, deadly, soul destroying character. It is frightful to contemplate the havoc thus made in our new western world. Surely the churches —(and the Methodist Protestant Church should not be the least nor last—) should use the same mighty instrument with equal, yea, greater vigor, to neutralize the effects of such publications, and to undeceive all they may; at the same time carrying light into all the families of our friends and fellowship, which have readers in them.

But how shall this good work of sustaining the Western Recorder, if good work it be, be fully accomplished? By the ministers, preachers, members and friends of the M. P. Church. They can do it. Who then will say, Let us give the publisher one thousand new names in three months? That number will do to begin with in the way of enlargement. Who says, Yea, this thing can be done; and as so far my influence and exertions can extend, shall be done. Whoever so says, and does as he says, deserves well of the church and the country.

We might refer to the action of several Annual Conferences, which have been pleased, by the adoption of the most approving resolutions, to commend the Western Recorder to the general patronage of our community. This has been done by the Pittsburgh, Muskingum, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan Conferences. And though it may not be generally known, a similar expression of approval was given by the General Conference of 1846.

Then we believe it is the voice of our community generally, in the west, that the Western Recorder should be published. If then this is the case, should it not have a respectable patronage sufficient to sustain and establish it beyond the apprehension of embarrassment or failure? Within a few months past, we have enlarged the size of our paper, and expended four hundred dollars for new type and other apparatus for the purposes of our office, so that we are now prepared to turn out as respectable a sheet as is published by almost any religious denomination. And indeed, did our modesty permit, we might give scores of flattering opinions in reference to the general appearance, and value of our paper. Not only are we assured that it bears comparison with other religious newspapers, but a number give it the preference above some of the best, which we might name. Aye, and in several instances we have had the testimony of members of other denominations that the Western Recorder ranks amongst the best of family newspapers. Then the published testimony of numerous cotemporaries of the religious press, is too flattering to be quoted.

Shall then the Western Recorder be sustained —shall its subscription list be doubled? Or shall at least one thousand new subscribers be furnished us within three months? This can easily be done, and we will tell how it can be done, in much less time. We send a copy of the paper to about one hundred and fifty travelling preachers, nearly all of whom have it free for their agency. These brethren are distributed all over the country, but for the most part in this & adjoining Districts. Now, if each of those brethren will obtain for us from eight to ten new subscribers, it will double our subscription list at once. Or if each will obtain for us but seven it will make one thousand in all. And who says this cannot be done? A few of the ministers choose to pay for their paper, so as to be free from the obligation to act as agents. If such will obtain subscribers, and collect payments for us, we will gladly refund every man his dollar, for his agency would help us more than his money.

Brethren, shall this thing be done? Will you cheer us with a rapid ingathering of names to our list? How many of our brethren will do their part? With little exertion, in good & populous Circuits or Stations, more than the number specified could be obtained, and this would compensate for those in poorer circuits where so many may not be obtained. We beg leave to say that we are surprised that some ministers, who have good opportunities, do so little for the paper. A brother in a certain District, who has a large field, has collected for us just one dollar a year for 2 years past, whose predecessor used to collect from $30 to $60 per year for Br. Springer for the Western Recorder. This year, that brother will do nobly, we trust, and many others also.

We were cheered a few days ago in an interview with the brother recently appointed to charge of Zanesville Circuit. On his first visit to this place, he asked us for a list of our dues, expressing his intention (unsolicited) to obtain all within the bounds of his charge, and to get as many new subscribers as possible. We have no fear of getting too many, only we desire brethren to get only such as they believe will be good and responsible. Please obtain the pay in advance when practicable, or have assurances of it within three months, or at all events obtain it within the year. Brethren who do their part as agents, are entitled to their paper free, and shall also have our gratitude; and we shall cheerfully render some compensation or premium to those who do very well.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

Advertisements.

Waynesburg, Green County, Pa.

Rev. A. H. Bassett: My dear Brother, please say to the Brethren, that I have on hands, Clarks's Commentary, new and complete, do. upon the New Testament, do. Theology, Watson's Institutes, do. Dictionary, Common, medium, Revival Hymn Books, Disciplines, Snethen's Sermons, Harris' do. Williams' on the Lord's Supper. Rev. T. H. Stockton's Christian World, 3 vol. Social Spirit of Christianity, Whitehead's life of Rev'd. J. and C. Wesley. Large family Bibles, Pocket Polygot, do. Fletcher's address to seekers of solvation, Evan's Pamphlet, Christian Manuel. Life of Geo. Washinton, Columbus, and Flanklin, School books of various kinds.

Sears' Domestic Bible, 1000 engravings, 1,500 pages.
do. History of the Bible, several hundred engravings
do. Biography of the Bible. do.
do. Sunday Book, do.
do. Great Britain and Ireland, do.
do. Sketches Europe, do.
do. American Revolution, 160 engraving.

Hemmorrhage of the Lungs having returned upon me again it is doubtful whether I shall be able to travel much this winter, if ever. Should any of the Brethren want any of the above works and will inform me, I will try and send them as they may direct, Should my health admit I will bring them. Since Conference, I have visited, Allegheny, Pittsburgh, and the Brownsville circuit. Permit me Brother Bassett, to tender my thanks to the Ministers of those fields of labor for the active part they took in selling my books for me, and the membership, for their liberality in buying. Respectfully yours,

W. A. PORTER.

Notice.—At our instance, an Attachment was this day issued, by Wm. H. Moore, a Justice of the Peace, of Springfield township, Muskingum co., Ohio, against the effects of Henson Bagley, a non-resident of said county, dated this 19th day of Oct., 1847.

LARGE, BOATMAN, & Co.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.
LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection o Spiritul Songs, BY Rev. J. Dalby & J. B. Peat To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository.

Putnam, April 22, 1847. J. METCALF, Depositary.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN
BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

Road Notice.—Notice is hereby given that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, at their December session, praying for the location of a county road, commencing at a white-oak tree, near the east end of George M'Crooks' barn, on the county road leading from the falls of Licking to Crooks Bridge, known by the name of the "Dillon Road," running from thence a South-East direction, passing over lands owned by Robert Allen and George W. Rankin, to intersect the Zanesville and Maysville Turnpike near the Presbyterian Meeting House, known by the name of the Newton Church; the said Road to be laid on the same ground where there is now a Township road in use or as near as good ground can be had.

Newton Township, Oct. 30th, 1847.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefuiness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe & Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe, - -	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix - - - -	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both - -	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

The Shepherd Boy and the Rainbow.

A shepherd boy who had been told,
That where the rainbow touched the ground,
A goblet full of shining gold
Would by the lucky wight be found,
Who gained the spot ere from his sight,
The fairy phantom took its flight;

Had often watched, for hope was high,
To see the unsuspecting elf,
Upon a verdent hill-top nigh,
Set down its foot to rest itself;
Not doubting but he might secure,
By proper speed the golden lure.

One evening as a shower passed by,
The sun peeped out behind the storm,
And painted on the watery sky,
In magic tints the spectral form;
One foot seemed on the distant flood,
The other on the hill-top stood.

Eager as huntsmen in the chase,
Each limb the little urchin strained;
With panting sides and glowing face,
The summit of the hill he gained:
But saw, to his surprise, the bow
Was distant still a mile or so.

Loath to relinquish hopes so bright,
The golden vision lured him on,
Weary and faint he gained the height,
The rainbow seemed to rest upon:
Then sank exhausted and dismayed:—
The vision vanished into shade.

So thousands who are counted wise,
Are by illusive visions led,
Substantial happiness despise,
And toil for that which is not bread,
Till in the end, the object sought
Is found to be a thing of nought. J. G. W.

Religious Strictures.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Commentators vs. Anti-Commentators.

NO I.

Commentaries, in the general, have been written by men of piety, erudite attainments, and extensive biblical knowledge. They are the result of deep research, learned thought, and profound investigation. We admit that they are the productions of men uninspired by the Holy Ghost, and are thus the result of finite, and, consequently, fallible minds; some of them, in our humble opinion, containing subjects foreign, and even averse to the sacred text. But who of those who object to commentaries could have done better—performed so great tasks with so few striking defections? Who of those but what in some particular views and doctrines, according to the estimation of others, arrives at conclusions not warranted by, nay even in contradistinction to the truths of the Divine Word? From an investigation of the same premises, all are liable to deduce erroneous conclusions; unless we assume the position that the Spirit of God will lead all men to the adoption of one true and correct opinion—a position contradicted by the experience and practice of the different Christian organizations of the day. And while we are in possession of the same liability to err, with probably no more grace to affect our hearts and adorn our characters, our minds are darkened, and not so richly stored, if stored at all, with useful lore; our prejudices stronger, and our sources of information far inferior to the mind and facilities of the enlightened and Christian scholar. For this reason, we can rely with greater certainty upon the writings of learned commentators, than the verbal opinions of unlettered individuals.

Some of the most beautiful parts of the sacred Scriptures would remain probably forever with their beauties enclosed, like the buds of the rose without the breathings of spring, were it not for the efforts of the learned to bring to light their hidden riches and beauty. But it is seriously inquired, who can purchase all the works of learned authors illustrative of biblical truths? For instance works of history, in which are recorded the triumphant fulfilment of prophecy;—of travel, which fully corroborate all the geographical and scenic descriptions recorded in the Bible relative to the Holy Land? It is not to be expected that all works, even of the above class, can be purchased, even by men of liberal means, to say nothing of those possessing but limited resources. But here the argument rises triumphant in favor of commentaries: for in the generality of commentaries we find the records of such facts and illustrations. To remain in ignorance of the above subjects, is to deprive ourselves of some of the most forcible arguments that can be wielded against infidelity, and to the triumph of the Bible.

There are illustrations, tropes, & figures introduced into the narratives of the Old and New Testament, which require a partial knowledge of astronomy, ancient agriculture, horticulture, history, and geography. With the revolutions of centuries mighty changes have taken place in Empires and provinces, cities and towns, and the customs and opinions of mankind. And what can a common reader know, without the assistance of the learned, of these great revolutions in empires, cities, opinions and customs? What can he know of the prophetic fate of Tyre, Sidon, Nineveh, Babylon, and Jerusalem?—What of that sublime expression of the Psalmist—"the Lord God is a sun & shield?" What of the "roarings of the lion from the swellings of Jordan? What of the cedars of Lebanon and the excellencies of Carmel, the vine, the fig-tree, the lilies of the valley, the Rose of Sharon, the balm of Gilead, the land flowing with milk & honey, and the tending of flocks and herds?—What of Jewish rites, ceremonies, time, with all the types and shadows pointing to the great sacrificial atonement, and the blessings resulting therefrom? Of some nothing, and of others comparatively nothing. From this miscellaneous grouping of items, we again see the necessity of applying to the works of the learned for information.

We do not wish to be understood as even implying that the Bible is so incomprehensive, so full of deep and sublime knowledge, that the mass of mankind cannot become acquainted with any of its divine truths. Although there are beautiful figures, remarkable prophetic declarations, and many wonderful histories of events recorded therein, that require explication in order that the common reader may understand them; although there are sublime prophecies and glowing descriptions of scenes yet to take place in the history of our world and the revelations of eternity, that will never be fully understood until they burst upon the vision of the world and the view of the angels in heaven: yet the truths connected with the well being of man—his redemption by the Eternal Father, repentance and faith in his name in order to salvation, the sufficiency of the grace of God for all the trials of life, triumph in death; a resurrection of the body from the power of the grave and a mansion of glory in the kingdom of heaven, are revealed so plain that the wayfaring man need not err therein.

We are not of those who would rely enterely, without investigation, or the opinions of the learned. Learned men may err, and have erred widely from the truth. So far as we are capable of exercising our own understanding, we ought carefully to canvass the doctrines and opinions that are presented for our consideration, and adopt those which are more in consonance with our own perceptions of truth. But when through the mists of ignorance, our understandings are obscured and dark, we ought to apply for wisdom from on high, and search the records of the wise, our superiors in biblical lore. God has organized the human mind a free and untrameled agent, capable of reflection, investigation, and anylization. Those who will not employ their minds to these great objects, become the instruments of fanatics and designing men, are the subjects of superstition and bigotry, intolerant and overbearing, not answering the great design in their creation, and removed but one degree above the brute level. It becomes our duty, then, to employ the talents which our Creator has entrusted to our charge, to the investigation of all subjects, & to the employment of all means withir our reach, that will lead to our own good, enable us to advance the good of our fellow-men, and the glory of God.

ANON.

Solitudinarian Cabin, October, 1847.

The Budget.

FAITH AND KNOWLEDGE.

It is a strange notion of many well-intentioned persons, that religious knowledge doth differ from all other; and that it cometh by prayer only, and not by study. How shall the man pray who knoweth not or believeth not the necessity for prayer? But when study hath roused his attention, then there will be some likelihood that, like the treasurer of queen Candace, he will find out his own ignorance, and seek for some man to teach him; yea, look on high for the instruction of that Divine Teacher who is ever ready to make them wise who seek for true wisdom. It has never been my luck to know one whose faith bore right good fruit, who had not reasoned thereupon; for, as St. Clement of Alexandria, doth truly say, 'faith is knowledge, and knowledge is faith; God having so constituted them that they mutually lean on each other, by turns leading and being lead.'

THE PULSE OF THE CHURCH.—The prayer-meeting is the pulse of the church; if the pulse beats strong and regular, it indicates a strong and healthy constitution; but if feeble and irregular, it is a sign of ill-health and weakness: when the constitution of the church gets healthy and strong, the prayer-meeting will be thought much more of than our anniversaries.

"Every man that is born but once, must die twice: and every man that is born twice, will die but once."

Let every minister while he is preaching remember that God is one of his hearers.

In religious parlance we have often heard the following remark: "Such a person is a good man, but he is not a useful man." It would prove a difficult task to show how a man that is of no use can be really good; for if he be of no use, good for what is he? and if he be not good for some use, in what sense can he be called good? Thousands have rested in the notion of being good, without going on to the pertection of doing good; and a capacity for goodness has been mistaken and substituted for goodness itself. In our Saviour's estimation, the good tree is, not the tree that is capable of bearing good fruit, but the tree that bears it, and the more fruit it bears, the more it is under obligations to bear, & the more it is expected to bear; for "every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit."

MEMORY.—Many have large but unsanctified memories, which serve only to gather knowledge whereby to aggravate their condemnation.

TRUE VALUE.—The church-yard is the market-place where the things of this world are duly rated.

THIS WORLD AND THE NEXT.—He that will often put this world and the next before him, and look steadfastly at both, will find the latter growing greater, and the former less.

FATAL MODESTY.—A sad event occurred lately at a French town near Gourin. A fire having broken out in the night the family hastened to make their escape. Two daughters of the farmer, and a servant girl, finding a crowd assembled at the door, were ashamed of appearing in their night dresses, and returned for their clothing. In the attempt, two of them were burned to death.

Artistical.

British Railroads.

A London letter, published in the National Intelligencer, has the following statistics:—It appears that in May last there were 3,505 miles of railroad in England and Scotland, completed and in operation, and that on these finished roads there were 1,045 stations.—These roads employed 47,218 persons. There were also at that time 6,455 miles of railway in course of construction, employing 256,509 men; making an aggregate of 303,727 persons absolutely employed on railroads. Of these 263,594 were laborers and artificers.

9,021 quarrymen and carters.
8,867 inspectors, porters and police.
5,514 superintendants, foremen, &c.
3,596 engineers, surveyors, draughtsmen.
5,024 plate-layers.
5,933 clerks, cashiers, and accountants, and
2,178 secretaries, treasurers, &c.

303,727

A very tolerable army of employees. And when to this number is added the host of butchers, bakers, tailors, &c., who derive an income and living from the expenditure of these 300,000 persons; when we add to these the brick-makers carriage-builders, iron workers, hewers of wood, &c., whose labor is demanded for the production of the materials consumed in these roads, and again, add in the women and children dependant upon the husbands and fathers employed we shall find, says the Times, that the number of persons absolutely dependant upon the railroads already completed, and upon those actually in progress, is not less than three millions.

But the entire tale is not yet told. In the session of 1846-7, acts were passed for the construction of 4,618 additional miles of railroad; authorizing calls for £90,298,430, and loans to the amount of £42,318·938; being together, £132,-617,368. This amount will probably be spent in about four years, and, if the average earning of each person employed be taken at £40 per annum, it follows that 700,000 persons will be employed, and these will represent, including themselves, an aggregate of at least 3,000,000 of men, women, and children, to derive their support for four years from the construction of the railroads authorized to be constructed by the acts of Parliament, passed during the last session.—This aggregate of expense and employment is indeed a large one, but probably considerably within the fact. It is not to be supposed that the whole of these roads will be in the course of formation at one and the same time; but it is pretty evident, if my calculations be correct, and I have derived them from the most authentic sources, that from six to seven millions of the population of Great Britian will derive their support from this source for several years to come, and farther, that if the railroad speculation should not lead to their extension a single mile beyond their present authored length, those at present legalized by Parliament would, when completed, furnish employment and support to at least two millions of persons, so long as that mode of conveyance shall remain in the ascendency. The extent of business on working lines may be deduced from the statement that the latest annual return of receipts for—

Passengers on railroads was	£3,976,341
For goods - - - - - - - - - -	2,333,373
Together,	£6,309,714

I have not at hand a statement of the number of passengers by railroad later than for the last six months of 1845, (the least productive half year, by-the-by,) which is stated by Dr. Bowring as having been 16,720,650.

Railroad traveling enables you to get a hundred miles from home between early rising and a late breakfast, and you are among new scenes and a new people with scarcely any expense of time or money, and with very little fatigue.—This has led to ten people traveling now where only one travelled before. It is three hundred miles from Sunderland to London, yet such is the perfection of railway travelling, that I have known a lady in delicate health, leave the former place after midday lunch, and be with her friends at the latter place, before 9 o'clock in the evening.

Manufacture of India Rubber.

Here we saw the manufacture of rubber.—The man of the house returned from the forest about noon, bringing in about two gallons of milk, which he had been engaged since daylight in collecting from one hundred and twenty trees, that had been tapped upon the previous morning. This quantity of milk, he said, would suffice for ten pair of shoes, and he could collect the same quantity every morning for several months.

The trees do not usually grow thickly, and such a number may require a circuit of several miles. In making the shoes two girls were the artists, in a little thatched hut which had no opening but the door. From an inverted jar, the bottom of which had been broken out for the purpose issued a column of dense white smoke, from the burning of species of Palm nut, which so filled the hut that we could scarcely see the inmates. The lasts used were of wood, exported from the United States, and were smeared with clay to prevent adhesion.—In the leg of each was a long stick, serving as a handle.

The last was dipped into the milk and immediately held over the smoke, which, without much discoloring, dried the surface at once. It was then re-dipped, and the process was repeated a dozen times, until the shoe was of sufficient thickness, care being taken to give a greater number of coatings to the bottom. The whole operation, from the smearing of the last to placing the finished shoe in the sun, required less than five minutes. The shoe was now of a slightly more yellowish hue than the liquid but in the course of a few hours it became of a reddish brown.

After an exposure of twenty-four hours it is figured, as we see upon the imported shoes.—That is done by the girls, with small sticks of hard wood, or the needle-like spines of some of the palms. Stamping has been tried, but without success. The shoe is now cut from the last and it is ready for sale, bringing a price of from ten to twelve vieutens, or cents, per pair.—[Edward's voyage up the Amazon.

Essaying Metals.

This process is very often spoken of in the papers, but many persons, perhaps, who do not know yet, would like to know how it is managed. A correspondent of the Boston Post writing from Charlotte, in North Carolinia, gives an account of the process, as he obtained it from one of the officers there. He says:—The miners have to grind the gold rock fine, keeping it wet constantly and as it becomes fine it washes off. They have a kind of hard stone for grinding they then mix quick silver with it, and that collects the gold dust. It is washed out, dried and goes through some heating process. The gold dust is then usually sold to the superintendent of the mint.—Sometimes the miners melt the dust and cast it into a bar before offering it at the mint. To find the value, each parcel has to be essayed. The essaying is the most curious and scientific of all the business in the mint. The melters take the gold dust, melt it and cast it into a bar, when it is weighed accurately, and a piece cut off for the essayer. He takes it, melts it with twice its weight of silver and several times its weight of lead. It is melted in small cups made of bone ashes, which absords all the lead, a large part of the silver is extracted by another process & the sample is then rolled out to a thin shaving, coiled up and put in a sort of glass vial which is called a mattrass with nitric acid.

The mattrasses are put on a furnace & the acid is boiled some time, poured off, a new supply put in, and boiled again. This is done several times, till the acid has extracted all the silver and other mineral substances, leaving the sample of pure gold. The sample is then weighed, and by the difference before and after the true value is formed. All the silver over and above five penny weights for each lot is paid by the mint at its true value. The miner calls at the mint after his lot of gold has been essayed, and gets its full value in gold coin, the government charging nothing for coning. That is what one of the officers of the mint here told me, though I had always understood that the government had five per cent for coining. The gold after it has been essayed, is melted, refined, and being mixed with its due proportions of alloy (equal parts of silver and copper) is drawn into long strips in shape not unlike an iron hoop or cask, the round pieces cut out with a sort of punch, each piece weighed and brought to the right size by a file, if too heavy when it is milled, or edge raised, and put into a stamping press, whence it comes forth a perfect coin, bearing the endorsement of that respectable old gentlemen, "Uncle Sam."

Miscellaneous.

Churches---Preachers---Smart Men.

About ten years since, says the editor of an old periodical, we had pointed out to us in some paper of the day, the following common sense views.—They struck us with much force; and as there are sad evidences that neither the times nor the churches are greatly changed, perhaps their careful perusal may do good:—Ed. Presb. Herald.

MR. EDITOR—I hear much said in the churches about smart men, men of talents, great men, powerful preachers, &c., &c., and this is more particularly in reference to candidates for settlement. The questions asked by churches in want of pastors, are not, is the candidate a good man? sound in the faith? eminently pious, devoted and active? But is he a smart man? a man of talents? a popular preacher? This has become universal, from the aristocrasic city congregation with its salary of two or three thousand a year, down to the feeble society, with its stipend of two or three hundred. Indeed, the feebler the church, the more unwillingness is often manifested to take up with a pious, sound, faithful minister of ordinary talents. This feeling is doing immense mischief, both among the wealthy and feebler congregations on this subject. I am not about to detract an iota from the smart men. Would to God all the Lord's prophets were ten times more gifted, provided they were a little more pious than smart. But then there are evils in having one of our present race of smart men, of which feeble churches little dream. Wealthy congregations can afford to bear these evils, perhaps, because they must have great men at all events; though some of them are dying under their popular preachers. But feebler churches should look well to this matter. For

1. Many who pass for smart men, are more showy than sound, more brilliant than deep. They can let off a few sermons and speeches wonderfully well, and their pond is out.

2. Smart men are often more learned than pious, and by their levity and worldly conformity and want of spirituality, spoil all their Sabbath ministrations.

3. If your preacher is a smart man, very possibly you will be proud of him, and worship your preacher more than God, and then God will blast both him and you.

4. If you obtain a smart man, most probably he will be ambitious, and soon think that such talents as he posseses ought not to be confined to such an humble sphere.

5. If your minister is a smart man, and has the reputation of it abroad, the large churches and colleges will most probably entice him away. He will have call upon call, till at last he becomes satisfied that the providence of God calls him to leave; and then,

6. You will find that having once had a smart man, you will not be willing to take up with anything less than just such a smart man again.—These smart, strong men, make churches fastidious. I know a small church that is now dying from this cause; it has had one or two smart men, and they broke away suddenly, and now this church is not willing to take up with any much less than some great D. D.

7. Many of our smart men (I grieve to say it.) do not preach the gospel plainly, pungently, fully.—They sacrifice sound doctrine and faithful dealing to popularity. They wreathe the sword of the Spirit with so many thetorical flowers, that it does not "pierce even to the dividing asunder of the soul and spirit." This sacrificing at the shrine of popular applause is killing to orthodox spirit of many congregations. The poor leave the church because they are not fed, and when God's poor leave the church for such or any other cause, orthodoxy and piety will soon follow.

8. Smart men make churches fastidious. Like children fed on condiments, they have no relish for sound, wholesome instruction. The gospel must come to them through a rich tube. They spurn at the "sincere milk of the word" unless it is dealt out with a silver spoon highly ornamented & from a silver bowl, set roun dwith gems & brilliants. No preacher is popular with them whose ministration enlightens the understanding, mortifies their vanity, humbles their pride, corrects their bad temper, reproves their sloth, exalts their Saviour, and makes them forget their preacher, in their love and admiration of his Master. But a minister is sure to be very popular with them respecting whom they can say, 'what a fine speaker,' 'what a fine voice,' 'what beautiful figures,' 'what eloquent sentences,' 'what striking illustrations,' 'what correct taste,' 'what powerful reasoning;' in short, 'what a charming man and preacher he is" !!! Thus the man is loved, and praised and followed, instead of his divine Master. O how some of those smart men, swollen by the breath of human flattery, will shrivel up before the judgment seat! Feeble churches, can you afford to have a smart man?

PAUL.

OUR PUBLIC WORKS.—The Pa. Canal and Railroad are repaired from this city to Hollidaysburgh. The Juniata Division will be made ready for the Spring trade. The Harrisburgh Argus says the break at Duncan's Island will be repaired in the course of a week, when navigation will be uninterrupted between Havre de Grace and the head of the North Branch Division.

Pitt. Gaz.

Gems from Niagara.

At Niagara, an old guide to the Falls, who has lived there some twenty years, has kept during his time an Album, in which his visitors have written their notions, the variety of which is very amusing. Of course every one who visits the Falls is impressed with their grandeur and sublimity. One is awe-struck, and attempts to express his admiration in high-sounding and grand expression, while another, more phlegmatic, relieves himself by exclaiming with the Yankee, "What a waste of mill privileges." The following are selected:

"Roll on, mighty stream, in thy grandeur and power
The soul moved to wonder and deep adoration,
May the thonghts that inspire me at this parting hour,
Lead me ever to worship and praise God's creation!"

This was written in 1830. Another talks in this wise,

"I am a man what's very tall,
And been to see Niagara Fall;
But now, hereafter, I will call
Myself a man what's 'very small.'"

Some one who has a lively conception of the beautiful and graceful in nature, and who has had imagination warmed by the cooling spray of the water-fall—there's a bull—addresses himself "To Niagara" thus:

"If Red Sea, White Sea, Black Sea, ran
One tide of ink to Ispahan;
If all the geese on Lincoln Fens
Produced spontaneous new-made pens;
If Holland old or Holland new
One wondrous sheet of paper grew;
Could I by stenographic power
Write twenty libraries in an hour,
I could not write one half the grace
Of half a drop upon thy face."

Some miller or speculator has been here, and while viewing the water-fall, has had "an eye to business," and breaks out with the exclamation, "The mill-dam of the Almighty—capable of driving machinery that would flour the whole world!"

In the Album are numberless attempts at wit and sarcasm, which have been nicely turned against their authors by some one who has written underneath. When a man has written what he regards as a sublime impromptu to this majestic flood, he perhaps finds that a wag has made his beautiful thoughts and high-sounding words look supremely ridiculous. In 1843, a foreigner who seems to have been prejudiced against every thing American, and who has not soul enough to appreciate the grandeur of the scene, wrote on one of the fairest pages of the book, the sneering remark, "Not a bad cascade for a new country." To this, the following capital retort was made:

"Slaves cannot breathe in Freedom's air,
Nor tread on Freedom's plain;
If you don't like the water-fall,
Go, 'kneel and serve again!'"

Those who had nothing of their own to put on paper, have stolen, borrowed or "levied on" the good things of othors. A wag of this kind addresses himself to the Fall thus:

"The tailor made but a single note—
Gods! what a place to sponge a coat!"

A dyspeptic old fellow, who had been broken of his rest by the roar of the waters, gets out of bed in the morning, a little feverish for want of sleep, and smarting under the disappointment, give the Falls a little "blowing up" in the course of some five or six verses, of which the following is a specimen:

"Niagara! to thee
My spectacles I turn;
I see thy waters boil
As if all hell did burn!
And Satan's imps with ardor hot,
Were thrusting wood beneath the pot."

In contrast with this, I copied from the opposite page the following beautiful extract from an address to "THE WHIRLPOOL:"

"It comes, it goes, it backward flows---
It runs, it leaps, it jumps, it creeps---
It turns, it twists, it whirls, it twirls,
Like springing, dancing, waltzing girls."

It has often been remarked that it was but a single step from the sublime to the ridiculous, and of the truth of this saying, the following affords abundant evidence. It is genteelly done:

"See Niagara's torrent pour over the height,
How rapid the current! How majestic the flood!
Rolls along and descends in the strength of its might,
'As a monstrous great frog leps into the mud!'

And oh, should some mortal, (how dreadful the doom!)
Descend to the spot where the whirlpool carouses,
Alas, he would find there a watery tomb,
'Or at least he'd be likely to fracture his trousers!'"

The following is by some chap from N. York, who thus publicly thanks the Guide for his attention:

"So good Hooker, I bid you adieu,
And thank you for guiding us to the best view;
If ever you come to the city of York,
I'll give you a dinner of baked beans and pork!"

Valuable Discovery.

The last number of Howitt's Journal gives an account of a new fluid discovered by a French Chemist. Its character and uses are certified by many responsible men of science. It has also been tested by order of the English government, and proved to be a genuine discovery. We copy the following particulars from the Journal:

"A fluid which possesses the property of destroying noxious gasses has been discovered by a French Chemist, and placed by him, through the instrumentality of an energetic and patriotic Englishman, at the disposal of the English Government. The 'disinfecting fluid,' as it has been named, is inexpensive, simple of application, & without any odor of its own. It destroys the putrid smell of all substances, animal or vegetable, in any state of decomposition. The 'dead room' of hospitals, all dissecting rooms, the subjects of Coroner's inquest, or of any post mortem examination, may, by its presence, be rendered perfectly inoffensive. Portions of human remains, portions of animal remains, of fish, of vegetable matter, so putrid as scarcely to retain their form sufficiently to be recognized, have by it been restored to their natural odor. Night soil, arrived at that most poisonous pitch of stench which it emits when accumulated for years in cess pools, is, by it, neatly deprived of all smell; that which it retains being so trifling as only to be perceptible by very close observation.

"In sickness, also, the relief afforded will be extraordinary. A sick room may be, in the course of two or three minutes, perfectly purified by the use of a small quantity of this fluid, and all that was disagreeable to the senses before, replaced by a singular freshness. The crowded wards of hospitals have been not only purified, but the creation of any offensive smell at all has been prevented by it. In thinking of a number of sufferers whose proximity in their state of sickness and prostration necessarily renders each a cause of offence and additional suffering to all, the blessing of this new power to prevent this portion of their calamity is very striking.

"But there is a more important consequence involved. The generator of all the classes of infectious disease, the poison which, arising from the decomposition of animal and vegetable matter, becomes diffused in the atmosphere, and being inhaled into the lungs, causes that dreadful scourge fever, is neutralized, is actually destroyed by the chemical action of this fluid. The danger to which nurses and medical attendants are perpetualy exposed, and which in the present bad form of fever prevailing to so great an extent, has been particularly fatal, will now be averted. And it appears, from the experience already acquired, that a most beneficial effect is produced on the patients themselves by this purification of the air around them. We should naturally have expected this, and it proved so. A fever patient becomes in himself a source of fever. All the exhalations given off from him are dangerous to life, and while he inhales them he is continually taking fresh doses of the poison that has prostrated him. By annihilating the poison, a wonderful assistance is given to the physician in curing him. Hitherto this effect has been produced, as far as possible, by ventilation in all well regulated sick rooms and hospitals, but the new fluid does it much more completely. Ventilation only dilutes, this gets rid of the poison. In the most crowded and ill-ventilated wards, filled with cases of dysentery and fever in the dreadful form now prevailing in Ireland, it has been found efficient to wave in the air, and to hang round the beds, pieces of linen saturated in the fluid, and the state of the atmosphere around has been changed in a few minutes from one so noxious as to be highly dangerous to all those whose duty called them into the dreadful service of breathing it, into one of perfect safety and purity; while the poor suffering patients declare themselves to be 'in Heaven.'"

ARRIVALS.—Brigadier Gen. Kearney, late Governor of, California, accompanied by his family, arrived at the Monongahela house, yesterday, en route for Washington. The Hon. Wm. J. Archer, late Senator from Virginia, and the gallant Col. Churchill, of the Army, arrived also, on Saturday. Our Hotels are now crowded.

Pitt. Gaz.

Advertisements.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M.A

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

300 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,
146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,
AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exslusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; Including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families, published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$1	00
20 copies	do. do. -	3	00
40 copies	do. do. -	5	00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50

Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.
NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.
LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.
Mar. '9l '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 7. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, NOVEMBER 18, 1847. WHOLE NO. 423.

Written for the Western Recorder.

WATCH, CHRISTIAN, WATCH!

Watch, Christian, watch! The foe's abroad,
To lure thee from the living God:
Watch, Christian, watch!
Free man! by Truth divine made free,
Watch, jealous for thy liberty:
Watch, Christian, watch!

Pray, Christian, pray! The world has charms—
'Twould SMILE thee from the Savior's arms:
Pray, Christian, pray!
Its treasures rust, its beauty dies,
Beneath its flowers a serpent lies:
Pray, Christian, pray!

Fight, Christian, fight! The cause is just—
On, then, and place in God thy trust:
Fight, Christian, fight!
Nerve well thine arm for weapons strong,
Fight for the "RIGHT against the WRONG:"
Fight, Christian, fight!

Rest, Christian, rest! The time has come—
All watching, praying, fighting's done:
Rest, Christian, rest!
The clouds are fled, the tempest's o'er,
"To arms!" shall break thy rest no more:
Rest, Christian, rest!

Joy! Christian, joy! Now heaven's high dome
Rings with pure joy thy welcome home:
Joy, Christian, joy!
Let the glad chorus swell more loud,
Another soul has reached its God:
Joy, Christian, joy!

Solitudinarian Cabin, O. J. B. P.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SERMON,

PREACHED AT ELDERSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA;

BY REV. WM. REEVES.

[Published by request of a public meeting.]

Philipians iv: 3. And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel.

(Continued.)

Be it remembered, then, that we are not "erecting a theory upon a theory," but are arguing from facts, and facts known—which can be well authenticated; and are of frequent occurrence. And facts from experience, are a sufficient refutation of the alleged inability of the physical capacity of females, to endure the fatigues incident to the duties of the ministerial office. Besides, circumstances in this country, at present, do not call for such almost incredible amount of bodily exercise. And if they can do it with such great toil and exposure, why not with so much comparative ease and comfort? They can, and we believe, they ought. [2.] Of their intellectual capacity, let something be said. Most men admit that women possess a considerable degree of mental sprightliness, but many appear to question their capacity to compass subjects which require profound thought and intellectual vigor. Hence they deny the ability of women, to understand many of the sciences, master the "dead languages," or profitably to study Divinity. But we propose to disprove all such futile allegations, and establish their entire capacity for the task desired, by several quotations from strong-minded and learned men. Dr. Clarke declares: "But as God formed her [woman] out of a part of himself, [man] he saw she was of the same constitution in all respects, and consequently having equal powers, faculties, and rights," with man.—This respects women generally, and now let us specify a few individual cases. First, an extract from Mr. Buckingham's Lectures on Egypt. Cleopatra an Egyptian lady.—"In other cases," he says, "the endowments of nature and the gifts of Providence seem distributed with a discrimination which confers some advantage on each individual, which is withheld from others. To some is given great personal beauty; to others, great powers of mind; to others, extensive authority and influence; to others, peculiar fascination of manner; but in Cleopatra all these seem to have been concentrated, and showered with their utmost abundance on a single individual. She shines on the pages of time, "one entire and perfect chrysolite." In person, she was as beautiful as an angel; in mental endowments, she is said to have surpassed all females of whom we have any record; and so learned and accomplished was she in the arts, as to be a critic in each branch; while at the same time she was such an adept in LANGUAGES, as to be able to converse without the aid of an interpreter, with SIXTEEN DIFFERENT AMBASSADORS, EACH IN HIS OWN LANGUAGE! The British Elizabeth was esteemed an accomplished woman, because she could pronounce Greek and Latin Orations; but what comparison is there between the knowledge of two or three dead languages and an acquaintance with sixteen living tongues? But it may be objected that this remarkable woman lived so far away, and so long ago, and was so rare a case. Without tarrying to give a lengthy reply to such a futile objection, we dismiss it with the remark, that withal she was a woman, and her character shows the capacity of the sex. Let us now introduce one who lived nearer home, and in our own day. The following is taken from the "National Advertizer," published in England, dated, "January 15th, 1842." "Died—Miss Elizabeth Walker, daughter of the late Edward Walker, Esq., of Overhall, Hallstead, Essex, and grand-daughter of Jones, of Nayland, the celebrated author and divine. Her profound researches in Oriental criticism and Biblical learning, are well-known from her extensive labors for the Jews, in superintending the publication of the modern Hebrew version of the New Testament; also from her learned Dissertations in the Jewish Expositor. It is intended shortly to publish a volume of her Miscellanies, in prose and verse, including a new translation of the Song of Solomon, from the original Hebrew, with copious notes." This profound female divine would have done honor to any pulpit, in any church, in any country. And had she not nearly as good a claim to the clerical office, as many a minister among us, who is honored with a "cow-hide," and the "saddle-bags?" or some who receive a loud "call" to the incumbancy of a "settled pastorate?" In a word, was she not (and Cleopatra, too, worthy the "Epitaph of Maria Theresa,"—"Sexu fœmino ingenio vir,"—"A WOMAN BY SEX, BUT A MAN IN MIND!" The above was an English lady, and the one before, an Egyptian female monarch. Take now a lady in America, not the most renowned, nor far advanced in life. A young lady who was accidentally killed in one of the streets of Philadelphia, a year or two since, it was said in the public papers that, though she was "only seventeen years of age." yet she could speak "six different languages!" But it was said, she was a Roman Catholic. Well, have Protestant women inferior powers of mind?—Are our opponents prepared to make this "confession to the priests?" But why tarry so long with a few noted individuals; have we not clouds of living witnesses? Passing by the French female writers, let a few of the English and American authoresses be named: Mrs. Somerville, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Copley, Mrs. Rogers, Mary Howitt, and Eliza Cook. These are English writers, well-known in the literary world. And among the American female authors of distinguished merit, may be mentioned—Miss Sedwick, Miss Gould, Mrs. Williard, Mrs. Hale, and Mrs. Sigourney. These are ranked with us, among the "classical" prose writers, and poets of the day. And these, by popular literary authority, compared to Cooper and Carter, Chapman and Channing, Bryant and Brooks, Waldo and Wilcox, Walsh and Wirt, Siliman and Sands, Everett and Irving. And what more shall we say? for the time would fail us to speak of all the worthies among women, both in Europe and America, in religion and literature, from the pulpit and the press. Our country is now flooded with female literature. Yet, it seems, women must not preach the Gospel! They may do any thing else but save sinners from perdition, by the proclamation of New Testament truth!—Is the truth of the gospel too sacred for female lips to utter? or is the pulpit too holy a place for a woman to occupy?

(2.) But, it may be said, there are certain ministerial gifts and talents, which are peculiar to a preacher of the gospel, and which are essential to success in the sacred office: Do women preachers possess them? We unhesitatingly reply in the affirmative. It is admitted that a person may possess great powers of mind, and those powers well-cultivated, and with those cultivated powers an extensive stock of various and useful knowledge be acquired, and yet the person not be properly qualified to officiate at the altar. It does require a peculiar qualification, to labor in word and doctrine aright. But we contend, that these essential and peculiar requisites, are possessed by women as well as men. And is testimony required? A cloud of witnesses could be easily summoned to declare their support to the proposition. Not only could we introduce the names of Wesley, Fletcher, Brainwell, Bishop Asbury, Dr. A. Clarke, and hosts of other eminent ministers of Christ, of the Arminian School, but many Calvinian Divines also;—Churchmen and Dissenters, American and European ministers. Statesmen, too, of the brightest standing and capability of judging of the character of public ministrations. Volumes of written testimony could be readily procured, to prove the point. One eminent female preacher has published two volumes of letters containing cordial testimony in point. And any amount more might be procured.—A volume for a witness! Is not that enough? And some women have published their theology from the press, and in so doing have been sustained by high ecclesiastical authority. A Mrs. Bonder, for instance, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in England, published a volume of sermons of her own composition, and was sustained by Prelatical authority and sanction. And others now write sermons, and men ministers, ordained and togated, solemnly repeat them. It is said by credible authority in our possession, that the sermons of a popular minister in the English State Establishment, are the composition of his talented wife! She writes them and he repeats them? Query: Which of the two has the best claim to the appellation of a preacher? And the celebrated Mrs. Hannah More, whose praise is in all the churches, ascended a still higher platform, and preached to preachers. For what else is the publication of her Theological Works? And the universal meed of praise awarded to her labors, is surely sufficient evidence that in so doing she was not considered as stepping out of her proper sphere. And if they were properly educated and encouraged—"helped"—would not many more women be very useful in the Christian Church, in the pulpit, and from the press? Would they not equal most men in the same departments? Hear what Dr. Dwight says of women generally, and of Mrs. More in particular: "It is owing," he says, "to the innate good sense of the females of this country, that they are not absolute idiots. I would not give three groats to have a daughter of mine go to many schools in the country. Observe the state of our schools for females, and compare them with the colleges for males. The seminaries for females are no better than hired school-rooms*, and how disproportioned are the benefits of instruction offered in the two plans of instruction! Yet under all these advantages in the one case, we are comparing the abilities of the sexes. The end kept in view in our institutions for the education of males, is to make them useful: in that of females, to make them admired. Men will pay any thing to have their daughters taught to manage their feet in dancing, to daub over a few pictures, &c., to be admired by a few silly young men.—I cannot speak on this subject without indignation.

"In spite of all the disadvantages under which they suffer, females have not only become good, (which they have done oftener than men,) but great. Elizabeth was better than any other sovereign that ever sat on the English throne, except Alfred the Great. Catharine of Russia, though in some respects bad, was better than the other monarchs of that country. Margaret of Denmark, was great. Women on thrones have generally excelled men in that station. What a miserable collection of kings have sat upon the thrones of England, France, Spain and other countries of Europe! It has been said that Elizabeth's character is due to the wisdom of her ministers. Their wisdom only shows that she had sagacity enough to choose such ministers. In literature, women can appear to great advantage. No writer has equalled Mrs. More on the subjects she has handled." (And in our Discipline, in the list of books recommended to the ministers of the Methodist Protestant Church, as a suitable collection,' Hannah More's name stands immediately above that of Dr. Dwight.) According to this colossal divine, women, in many instances, and in the most exalted and responsible positions—of a civil and literary character—on earth, have not only equalled, but excelled the other sex; and that, too, under circumstances very disproportionate! Is it not, therefore, strange—passing strange—that a woman can shine so brilliantly in halls of science, in the temples of literary fame, and even on thrones of political power, but directly as she approaches the sacred desk, her light is extinguished? Is it not rather, and by those who ought to "help them," the readiest and the most "put under a bushel" of clerical opposition? And do they not thereby prevent much good being done, in the church, and in the community? And is there not great responsibility thereby incurred? Give women the same opportunities and advantages, and if they do not at least equal men generally, in usefulness in the pulpit, we will instantly yield the point. Is not success a fair criterion of talent for the work? From a book now lying before the writer, the superior success of scores of female preachers, could be attested by many witnesses, and of the most credible character. It is not denied, that there may be women preachers of inferior pulpit talents, or that they may not suffer declension in piety and usefulness, as much as the other sex. But what we maintain, is, that, in general, they have been, and are, at least, par-excellent in point of talents, piety, and usefulness, with male ministers: Then why should they be prevented from preaching the Gospel, while persons of the opposite sex are urged to enter the ministry? Is it simply on account of the sexual difference? If so, is it not based upon a prejudice of mind against female exercise at the altar? And will that prejudice afford a sufficient plea to the possessor in the great day? Let us carefully attend to the ensuing sub-division—

2. With regard to the major members of this proposition, that women in our day are held accountable to God for the improvement of their talents, a few remarks.—It should appear that argument on this point is unnecessary: for who that believes man is held accountable to God, denies the accountability of woman! A reference to a passage or two of Scripture, with a few remarks, may therefore suffice.—It is generally believed that the parables recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew, contain the doctrine of man's accountability to God, in the judgment of the Great Day. Parable 1st, of the wise and foolish virgins, (vs. 1–13.) does not refer to the female sex exclusively, but to different characters of both sexes, illustrated by a reference to a marriage solemnity, which in the East was very solemn, and impressive. Here then is the doctrine of the accountability of both sexes. And just as surely and obviously, as one half of our race must appear in the judgment, to give an account of their stewardship, so must the other half. And who, apart from this discussion, would deny it? And will the opposers of women preachers, carry their bigotry to the bar of God?—Parable 2d, of the talents, (vs 14–30,) is precisely to the point. And it seems to carry the sentiment farther than the former. The former shews our accountability to God, for the light of grace in the "lamp" of our hearts; while the latter included the cultivation of all our gifts and "talents." And most obviously, and we think, undeniably, women are here included. The following important points fully sustain our views, and are taken from a Commentary of another church. Let us carefully reflect upon their import.

"1. That all the talents we possess, however natural we may consider them, are derived from God, the author of our being; and to deny this, is nothing short of Atheism. 2. That these talents are bestowed in great variety upon mankind, some possessing ten (i. e. many) times the abilities and advantages of others, both natural and acquired. 3. That these talents, and the improvement of them, must be accounted for to him, from whom they were received. 4. That no excuse will be admitted for the non-employment of even a single talent: much less an excuse that reflects upon the character of our great Benefactor. 5. That the rewards which the great Judge bestows, will not be so much in proportion to the talents bestowed, as according to the improvement which we are enabled to make of them.—Every talent improved, though it were but one, will be graciously rewarded by him, in whom are united the characters of our Redeemer and our Judge." And is it not obvious to every observing mind, that whoever the Lord calls to labor in the ministry, he has first endowed with suitable 'natural talents,' to qualify him for the work! And for these things we must all give an account in the Judgment. Can any person believe that God ever gave talents to any human beings, not to be improved? And if he has given ministerial talents to some women, and holds them accountable for the same, ought they not, as well as men, under the like circumstances, to "occupy" till He shall "come?" Are not our opponents, therefore, reduced to the following unenviable dilemma; viz: either to deny what is demonstrably true,—that women have talents for preaching the Gospel: Or, if they have, they are, nevertheless, not accountable to God for their improvement and exercise?—which, according to the benevolent-minded Calvinian commentator, above cited, would be "nothing short of Atheism!"

In the parable of the "ten pounds," as recorded in St. Luke, xix: 11—26, we are further encouraged to labor in the Lord, under the assurance that our reward in heaven will be in proportion to our fidelity in the improvement of the "pounds" committed to our care. And that parable, says the commentator before cited, "appears to us to have a particular reference to the gospel ministry, which is described as treasure deposited in earthen vessels; and of which treasure the apostles, and their successors in the ministry, are appointed stewards, and respecting which the utmost fidelity is required.–(See 2 Cor. iv: 7. 1 Cor. iv. 1, 2. 1, 2.)"

Thus we have shown, we think conclusively—beyond successful contradiction,—that some women, as well as men, do possess talents for the proclamation of the Gospel, and for the improvement of which, they are held as certainly and as solemnly accountable to God, as persons of the other sex. What therefore remains now for both.—for all.—but to remember the awful declarations of the Scriptures, and act accordingly. "Wo unto him that striveth with his Maker!" And wo unto those who have a dispensation of the Gospel committed unto them, if they preach not the Gospel. And wo unto them who hinder others from obeying their Maker's will.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

* Is there not a manifest improvement in this matter since the days of Dr. D., for we hear now from different quarters, of young ladies graduating, in [illegible] Institutions, and taking their regular diplomas?

Ecclesiastical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

On the Constitution and Government of the M. P. Church.

NO. II.

Constitutional prerogatives of classes. An "Associate Church or Society is composed of any number of members residing sufficiently near each other to assemble statedly for public worship, and to transact its temporal business. And every Church shall be divided, when it becomes necessary into smaller companies or classes for purposes of religious instruction and edification."—Dis. pp. 17, 18. You see a single class however small may constitute a Church: and a Church may embrace a number of classes. The legitimate perogative of classes, is the subject of our present enquiry.

1. They have the right to choose their leaders annually. Where a class will, assert its own rights no one can be appointed to the leadership but by the voice of the Society. They are not bound to submit and be led by one that they deem incompetent to the task. The man most highly esteemed, is their uniform choice. Let the brethren see to it that their leaders are wise and good men. The practice sometimes followed, of choosing a man not deemed fitting, for the purpose of complimenting him, or for fear that he may think himself slighted, should be reprobated by every member of the Church. A man who is fishing for the office is utterly unfit for it. While he who is willing to bear any burden that he may serve God and his Church, though diffident and trembling under the cross, may be a blessing to his brethren.

2. A class has the prerogative, exclusively, of receiving persons into its fellowship. In circuits probationers and applicants, are received into full fellowship by a majority of the class voting for the applicant.—pp. 35. The provision for the admission of probationers or applicants to full membership by the vote of a majority of the leaders, at a regular leader's meeting in stations is unconstitutional, & an infringement of the rights of classes. Classes have a right to say who they will, or will not fellowship; and no authority can legitimately bring one into, or keep one out of the class in opposition to its will. It is the prerogative, and likewise the duty of classes to receive authoritatively by vote into their fellowship, all applicants deemed worthy.—This is an inalienable right belonging to every class.

When the term of probation specified in the Discipline has expired, the Society is not bound to receive each individual into full membership, or to drop him from the list; he may for reasons deemed sufficient by the class, be continued on probation, till the class can be satisfied that he is worthy of a place with them as a member in full standing. or that he should not be entitled to a place even of a candidate for membership. When persons on probation give satisfactory evidence of a change of heart by the Holy Ghost, and a fixed determination to walk in all the ordinances and commandments of the Lord blameless, a class should receive them into full fellowship. A class is not bound to receive those who do not give satisfactory evidence of a gracious change, though his four months may have expired.

Neither is a class bound to receive one who comes with a certificate of good standing in another denomination, circuit, or society, of whose piety they have reason to doubt. We repeat it, each class possesses the inalienable right of receiving to its fellowship those who apply for admission. No denomination, minister of the gospel, society, or set of men have the right of constituting an individual a member of another class, (which would be the case if classes were bound to receive all who present valid certificates.) Certificates and letters show that their bearers have been thus and so, but not necessarily that they now are. A man with a letter in his pocket is properly a member of no Church. If his conduct is unbecoming the christian his letter is not to entitle him to membership. But a valid letter with a corresponding demeanor should entitled every applicant from an Evangelical denomination to membership in every class.

3. Classes possess the exclusive authority of excluding unworthy members from their fellowship. An accused member is to be tried by the class of which he is a member, or a committee appointed by, and with the approbation of the class, of whose qualification the class is to judge. This is as it should be. An individual ought not to be excluded from a society in opposition to its wish. A majority of a class, or committee appointed for the special purpose, alone, on constiutional principles are authorised to exclude persons from the Church.

The Discipline provides for an appeal to the Conference in the case of those who have been tried and found guilty. If the quarterly Conference decides that the proceedings were not according to Discipline, the case is to be remanded back for trial again.—pp. 51. The proviso allowing the tribunal to which the appeal is made, the privilege of deciding upon the merits of the case is an infringement of the rights of classes. No authority in the Church has any right to interfere here. A quarterly Conference composed of officers and intelligent men are better prepared to decide on the legality of proceedings than a Society; but the prerogative of excluding a member from a class belongs to that class alone.

4. A class has the prerogative of recommending individuals to the quarterly Conference for license to exhort and preach. This is a wise and wholesome arrangement. A Society which has met an individual in the class room, and been familiar with his daily walk and deportment, who professes to be moved by the Holy Ghost to call sinners to repentance, are better prepared to act understandingly in the matter than any others can be, and thus prevent the Church from being imposed on by base and designing men.

Classes have their rights which should not be infringed by any other department of the Church. The stability of our own institution, and the prosperity of the Church, depend very much upon the harmony and peace of the class. If all is well here it is sure to be well every where else.

WESTERN WATCHMAN.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Reply to "A Virginian" on Slavery.

NO. 1.

BR. BASSETT: Through your forbearance I purpose offering a few short articles in reply to "A Virginian's" strictures on my position, published in the 50th number of your paper. This Virginian says I "want an immediate emancipation from the Devil and all Slavery whether in or out of the church." And so I said, and so I still say, and that too in good faith and all sincerity, and why should not the sentiment be adopted by professed christians in Virginia as well as by myself? Do the professed friends of the blessed Jesus down south love and serve or hold on to a connection with the Devil and Slavery whether in or out of the church? If so I am willing they should wear all the glory and receive if they wish the rich reward of such a connection; and I will pray to be excused from all connection with the old serpent and all his works. But this Virginian says "as it regards our relation to Slavery we are truly sorry that there are any (Slavery) amongst us; but they (Slavery) are here and what are we to do with them" (Slavery?) Why our Brother Gay says emancipate them (Slavery) immediately both from the church and state."—In this array of person, number, and case of the noun Slavery, we learn that this Virginian is "truly sorry that there are any Slavery amongst them." But why truly sorry if Slavery is right and of God, and is as holy an institution as matrimony as he would seem to argue in his communication? If Slavery is right and a holy institution he should rejoice that it is established amongst them and never for a moment be sorry for its existence. On the other hand if Slavery is wrong—at variance with the laws of God, and the rights of man, as honest men we ought to be truly sorry that it exists any where on the face of the earth, much more when it exists in our beloved church and country.—And if we are truly sorry that Slavery exists amongst us will we not all at once let our slaves (if we have any) pass from goods and chattels to the rank of sentient beings where the God of heaven placed them, and also let all our influence go against such an unholy institution as that of American Slavery? Yours as ever in favor of the entire emancipation of all the oppressed, JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Ia., October 26, 1847.

P. S. In my next I shall attempt an answer to some of your enquiries. J. G.

Ladies' Department.

A Chapter on Females.

We like to look upon a healthy woman—she is a prodigy in the nineteenth century. Wherever you go you see scores and hundreds of spleeny, sickly, feeble girls, who can hardly muster courage to make their beds, wash their faces, or drive an intruding cow from the yard. Tell them about early rising, fresh air, and healthy exercise, and they heave a sigh as long as the moral law, & about faint away. You expect them to get up before day—to work in the kitchen—to breathe the fresh air of morning!—preposterous and absurd. They have never seen the sun rise, and would hardly know but the sun continues to shine forever, if it were not for the almanacs and their grandmothers. No wonder that every year sweeps to the grave so many young women, who have been sickly and effeminate, ever since they were born into the world; and death will continue to select them as his victims, till they learn their duty, and pursue that course which insures health, strength and long life. Our great-grand parents lived to a great age—and never thought of lying down to die till they had at least reached the meridian of life. They were stout, strong, hearty and happy. Why? They rose early—worked like beavers, and never spend the midnight hours in dancing. Instead of being frightened at a mouse at their feet, a beetle on their neck, a fly's foot on their arms, in the absence of their fathers and husbands, they would load their guns, and shoot bears and catamounts, and keep at bay a party of savages. How have these daughters degenerated? What female is there now a days who would'nt run from a gun, even if it had no lock? The ladies of olden times out lived their husbands years and yeas. How is it now? Widows are few and far between. It was no singular thing for our grand mothers to have three or four husbands in the course of their lives. Now it is the reverse. Men have about as many wives—diseases of late have been so fatal among the female sex.

Do you know the cause? It is found in listless idleness—inactivity—late hours——thin shoes—muslin dresses—a horror of the fresh morning air, and in that detestable stuff, stitched in pink and yellow covers, which is flooding our country. If they will do nothing else, young ladies will sit and read from morning till night, that sickly, sentimental impure, and we will say licentious trash, that is thrown in such abundance from the press. This shrivels the mind warps the affections, chills the better feelings, and makes the life wretched beyond description. Let females look into this subject and act like reasonable beings, and we should soon see a different state of things. We should hear of no fainting away—no sickly constitution—no affections of the lungs—no elopements and no suicides.—Colesworthy.

"Can a Maid forget her Ornaments?"

"Why trimmest thou thy way to seek love?"

Why those curlings, flouncings, bustleings, waspings? Why so many precious hours at the toilet? Ah! to look pretty! to gain the affections and esteem—of whom? The wise and the good? Who painted her face and adorned her head? See 2 Kings ix: 30. "Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way?" Where the distinguishing line between God's people and those who are not? Mothers, know ye that virtuous modesty is sweeter and more beautiful than the rose or violet? Adorn your daughters with this grace. Angels smile. And above all, let their adorning be that, even that, "of a meek and gentle spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of great price."—Golden Rule.

VARIETY.

DEATH IN THE PULPIT.—We learn from the N. Y. Commercial that on Sunday evening, as Rev. Mr. Tappan, the excellent Chaplain of the Alms-House in that city, was concluding his opening prayer in the chapel of the institution, during Divine service his voice faltered, and he suddenly fell in the pulpit in an apoplectic fit. Dr. Reese, the resident physician, with several of his assistants, being present in the congregation, immediately rendered every assistence, but though partial consciousness returned by the use of restoratives, the venerable man sank during the night under universal paralysis. The deceased has been for 20 years successively, the Chaplain of the Alm-House officiating alternately at Bellevue, and at Blackwell's Island. His loss will be deeply felt; for his fervent piety, amiable manners, and truly catholic spirit, have always endeared him to the inmates of the establishment, in whose service he has spent his labors and his life.

TOMATOES FOR COWS.—It is not generally known that this vegitable is a superior article of food for milch cows.—We have tried it two summers and find it decidedly superior to any other vegitable we have yet tried. They add greatly to the quality, as to the richness of the milk, and a rich golden color to the cream, the butter, which is at least pleasant to the eye, even if the flavor is not improved. We do not know, however, that they impart any richer flavor to the butter.

We have known cows to refuse them when first offered, but soon became very fond of them; others, we beleive a large majority, eat them greedily from the first. Thus far, we have fed them only in the raw state, but if boiled with corn meal, say half and half, or two thirds tomatoes, and they will be doubtless far better.

To one who has a dairy farm, the cultivation of an acre or two in tomatoes, would be repaid by a greater profit than any vegetable we know. From an acre not less that eight bushels might be gathered every day, from July until frost.

There is some trouble in picking them, but then nearly every farmer has children; his little boy say, his big boys too, who would not be the worse for a little work. We should be glad to see the experiment tried on a larger scale than ours, and to learn the result.—S. C. Tem. Adv.

A FARMER'S BAROMETER.—A writer in the Georgia Farmer, gives directions for making a cheap barometer, to aid in foretelling the weather. He takes a stick three feet long and attaches it to the butt of a phial, full of air of course, & corked tight. The stick is then suspended in a horizontal position on a pivot, where it will readily turn, say on a thread tied near its centre. When the storm is coming on, the air outside is lighter than that within the phial; of course the phial sinks, and indicates a change in the atmosphere. Such a barometer as this may be made in ten minutes, and some young philosophic farmers will incline to have barometers of their own manufacture.

CHARCOAL.—Powdered charcoal, or the refuse of the heap, should be thickly strewed over place where filth is allowed to accumulate. It absorbs the bad smell and makes an excellent manure of what otherwise would not only be useless but offensive. It also prevents the larvæ of insects from becoming flies or moths. Pigs like to eat charcoal, and are thought to fatten on it; and in the course of the summer months, I frequently have a bushel or so at a time thrown into the pen. It makes the manure so much more valuable that I find it worth while to buy it for the purpose. American Agriculturist.

An Editor not a gentleman.

Marcanson of the Dayton Transcript, tells the following good one as a spark of his experience:—

We have traveled some 1500 miles, within the last few days, by land and water. The tavern keepers, steamboat captains, &c., have uniformly chalked our hat, and indignantly refused to permit us to pay our way. In short, upon the 'raging canawl' upon the expansive lake, in the packets, hotels, and floating palaces of Lake Erie, we have had a 'free blow,' and uniformly been regarded among the 'dead heads.' This you will regard as a very agreable and advantageous way of traveling. But there was one 'free blow' we received,, which came near knocking us in to the middle of next week. The incident is so comical that we will relate it, if the joke is at our own expense.

While on board one of the splendid steamers which ply between Buffalo and Chicago, the fuz on our chin grew rather longer than was agreeable, and we repaired to the barber shop on board to have it taken off. The fellow did it up in first rate style. After he had combed and oiled our head, brushed our clothes and slicked us up fine, we felt gratified, pulled out a dime, and proffered it to him as a reward for his services. He drew himself up with considerable pomposity—

"I understand," said he, "dat you is an editor."

"Well, what of it?" said we.

"We nebber charge editors nofin," said he.

"But my wooly friend," said we, "there are a good many editors traveling now-a-days, and such liberality on your part will prove a ruinous business."

"Oh, nebber mind," said he, "we makes it all up off de gemmen."

In the earlier part of the reign of Henry VIII. it was death to teach the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments or the Apostle's Creed, in the mother tongue. For this crime, six men and a woman were burnt at Coventry April 4, 1519.

Religious Intelligence.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Mt. Vernon, O., Nov. 9, 1847.

Br. Bassett: After leaving the pleasant village of Youngstown, I with some difficulty arrived at this place, which the Conference assigned to me as my field of labor for the present year. After travelling once around the circuit, we held our first quarterly meeting, at which we were favored with the labors of Brother J. Thrap, and Brother A. Channell, of the Ohio Conference, the meeting (though not so interesting as we would have desired) was on the whole very profitable to the church in this place. This circuit, (it will be remembered) has been thought by some on the decline for a few years, but I am glad to say, that I have been happily disappointed with the people of this circuit; no man could wish for a pleasanter people to live with than are found on this charge, to all appearance. Spiritual matters however look very dark and discouraging, and it will take a great amount of labor to break the way, but the God of the church is all-sufficient for any labor he has sent us as agents to perform, if we are really faithful as his agents. O, may the great Head of the Church help us to be faithful and bless us this year with all the circuits in the District.

I have fixed my location for the present Conference-year at Mt. Vernon, Knox county, which will hereafter be my post office address. Brethren pray for us. J. M. WINN.

Bucyrus Circuit, Nov. 5, 1847.

Br. Bassett: We wish to say through the Recorder to Brother Clancy and all concerned that we are at our post and have been once round the circuit, have held our first Quarterly Meeting at the Steward meeting-house, on the 30th and 31st of October. The meeting was lively and interesting so far as we know to all. We find some unsettled difficulties among the members. However to take the circuit as a whole, it is in tolerable good condition. This circuit contains a number of valuable members and a highly useful local ministry. I hope the Lord will make us useful amongst them this year.—We would here ask why it is that Bucyrus circuit is not in the list of circuits and stations of the Presidential appointments?* Is it intended by this that it is not to have a visit from our much esteemed President this year!—I hope not.—Is it on account of inattention to discharging its obligations to that office heretofore? This cannot be,—for from past Reports we find it stands among the very highest.—We submit the above in good feeling and good faith. Praying that the Lord may make this a prosperous year throughout all our borders. I remain, yours,

JEREMIAH JACK.

* Have patience Br. J. Give him time, and the President will get around to Bucyrus, also.

OHIO DISTRICT.

West Alexandria, O., Nov. 11, 1847.

Br. Bassett: Our first Quarterly Meeting for Twin Creek circuit is over, it was held at Jacksonburg, Saturday and Sabbath last (6th and 7th instants.) I have been twice at all the appointments since Conference—and do not find things in quite as prosperous a condition as I could wish; yet there seems to be a strong disposition exhibited among the membership, to renew their covenant afresh, with God; and press their claims, for the reviving influence of his spirit' and indeed we have already had some tokens, that their requests would be granted. On Sabbath afternoon, at our Quarterly Meeting, while commemorating the death of our blessed Lord, the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit came down among us, and we were able to feed on him by faith in his blood!

Our good Brother J. H. Thomas assisted us at the table and shared with us while we realized the truth of the sentiment expressed by the Psalmist when he said, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Oh Lord give us more of that sacred principle! We contemplate holding a protracted meeting at West Alexandria; to commence on Friday, 24th of December next. We invite brethren, without distinction, to our assistance. This meeting is expected to meet Brother Young's visit.—We will be glad to have a visit from any of our ministerial brethren at that time.—Come brethren—come and help us. Pray for us?

Yours in Christ, J. NUTTY, Sup.

Buena Vista, Fayette co., O., Oct. 30, '47.

Br. Bassett: At this late date, I would give some account of the fourth quarterly meeting of this (Washington) circuit, for the past year. It was held at the frame meeting-house, commencing August 21st, and continuing to the 25th.—The society, at that place it is known, had been in a low state of religion, caused by previous division on the subject of slavery. But at this meeting, the Lord came into the camp of his people, in the display of his grace. The church was gloriously blessed, and sinners deeply convicted. Mourners pressed forward to be prayed for.—Some professed peace in Jesus, and fourteen joined the church. JAMES H. WEBSTER.

Buena Vista, O., Oct. 28, 1847.

Br. Bassett: With a heart thankful to God my Maker, I sit down once more to address you, and through the Western Recorder, our worthy President, Br. Young, and our friends generally, to let them know that I have safely reached Washington Circuit—have settled at White Oak Grove, and have found a worthy people on this Circuit. Blessed be God, for a resting-place for the weary pilgrim. As to the condition of the Circuit, I shall say nothing at present, but pray that the Lord may bless Washington Circuit with a revival of religion.

Let me say through your paper to friends in the Muskingum District, from which I have recently removed, I still pray for you all, and the recollection of the divine blessings we have enjoyed together in days past and gone, encourages me to press on to the heavenly Canaan. Go on, brethren and sisters in the Lord, for by the grace of God, I trust we shall meet sooner or later in a better world. A. CHANNELL.

Temperance Thanksgiving.—The view of the success which has attended the efforts of the Sons of Temperance throughout this State, and indeed everywhere, the Order has determined to have a general thanksgiving, and the Grand Division of Md. has authorized and directed their presiding officer to appoint a day to be devoted to the solemn service of thanksgiving and prayer, by all the subordinate Divisions acting under its jurisdiction. That officer has, therefore fixed upon the 25th of the present month, believeing it to be every way appropriate, whilst it may better suit the convenience of those disposed to participate in the solemnities of the day. The Divisions of the city are expected to assemble in a body, when a discourse befitting the occasion will be delivered. The country Divisions will make arrangements to suit themselves. This is the same day appointed by the Executive of the State or a similar purpose.—Balt. Sun.

Michigan Conference.

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT.

[Ordered for Publication.]

To the Ministers and Delegates of the Annual Conference of the Michigan District in Conference Assembled—

Dear Brethren: Permit me to submit to your honorable body the following report:—Two weeks after the session of the Annual Conference last fall, I commenced the arduous and responsible duties of my office, performing four quarterly visits to the following circuits: Jackson, Washtenaw, Adrian, Franklin, McComb, Lapeer, Flint, Orchardlake, Livingston, Ingham, Barry, St. Joseph, Lagrange, Laporte, South Bend, and Prairie Ronde. I visited Belvieu three times; Valparaso and Buffalo mission twice each; Grand Rapids once. This circuit has been without a preacher for most of the year; yet I found the friends generally warmly attached to our cause, and fully determined to come up to the Annual Conference by their delegate and request a preacher the ensuing year. This work has strong claims upon the stationing authority of the Church.

Jackson, embraces an extensive and interesting section of country—several good classes with a number of substantial members. There has been a good revival of religion at several appointments, with an increase of membership the past year.

Adrian,—On my first visit I was highly pleased with the state of things on this circuit. Tho' we have not realised all our sanguine expectations in reference to this work, yet we believe it is still in a healthy state. Perhaps a division of the circuit would contribute to its prosperity.

Washtenaw, is a small but pleasant circuit.—Its importance is somewhat augmented by its embracing within its bounds the Leoni Institute.

Franklin, covers an important arena of country—has a number of very firm, strong, and influential members, and has been gradually coming up during the year.

McComb, is a new but extensive field of fertile soil, which needs only to be judiciously cultivated to produce an abundant harvest. Owing to affliction our brethren appointed to this work, have not been able to labor as extensively as could have been desired. Yet they have been favored to some extent with the fertilising showers of revival.

Lapeer, is small and feeble, though embracing several important points. Though deprived of ministerial services for most of the year, our friends generally stand firm, still determined to maintain their identity as a circuit.

Flint, owing to the newness of the country, the bad roads, and extensiveness of the work, bears some analogy to the circuits we travelled in the early days of our itinerancy. The labors of our Brother appointed to this work, though arduous, have been crowned with success.

Orchardlake,—The life and power of religion seems to be enjoyed by many on this circuit.—It embraces a fine section of country and is a pleasant work.

Livingston,—Our cause may sometimes be injured by a premature division of circuits; this may have been the case with Livingston. But by the judicious and indefatigable labors of the superintendent the past year, it is assuming a more healthy and prosperous aspect. There has been a revival of religion at several appointments, with an increase of membership.

Ingham, has experienced lights and shades in its history. But at present there is much to encourage hope, and to stimulate to action. Blest with a number of permanent and influential members—the capital of the State located within its bounds—a rapid increase of population—with public opinion in a good degree favorable to our government and usages—if favored with an efficient ministry—is destined to become one of the strongest and most important circuits in the Conference.

Belvieu, embraces Calhoun, Belvieu, and a part of Eaton counties. A division of the circuit is called for. There has been an evident increase of the work of God on this circuit the past year.

Barry, for some cause, though containing the materials for a good circuit, has been for one or two years past, rather on the decline. Since Conference, however, till the death of their late superintendent, there were apparent symptoms of the return of more prosperous days. A good revival had commenced.

St. Joseph, situated in a beautiful country, with an enterprising and intelligent population, needs the labors of an efficient minister, to ensure success. Unless this work can be favored by the stationing power of the Conference, it may be judicious to attach it to some adjoining circuit.

Lagrange, has had to struggle with opposing powers, and disheartening difficulties and trials. But many of our friends have stood firm in the good cause. During the last quarter under the labors of our young Brother, Green, there has been some revival of religion, and some additions to the Church. A rich field is open before us on this circuit.

Laporte, located in one of the most wealthy, fertile, and pleasant counties, in Northern Indiana, with a strong membership, is justly considered one of the best circuits in the Conference. From present appearances a good revival of religion is very much needed to enable it to retain its present high character and ensure future success.

Valparaso, owing to frequent disappointments, mismanagement, or from some other cause, has not succeeded as well as might have been anticipated from its flattering commencement. Yet there are several excellent members, with ample room to extend the work and raise up new societies. This circuit should not be given up.

Buffalo Mission.—The labors of the missionary have been attended with some success.—With funds the mission can be sustained, otherwise it may be wisdom to unite it with an adjoining circuit.

South Bend, embraces few appointments—a rich country—good roads—with a small band of faithful brethren, who both love and sustain our ministry, and institutions. This is a delightful circuit.

Prairie Ronde, with the advantages of a beautiful and fertile country, and a good membership—possesses the means of becoming the most lovely and pleasant portion of our work. This circuit during last winter was favored with a revival of the work of God, with some additions to the membership of the Church.

From the above it appears that the Great Head of the Church has been pleased to visit some portions of the District with the reviving influences of his Holy Spirit. Sinners have been converted—backsliders reclaimed—and believers sanctified. To God be all the glory! So far as my knowledge extends, we have peace in our borders, with quite a large number of strong, firm, pious, and influential members upon the several circuits, who would justly be considered an acquisition to any of our sister denominations, and who exert an influence in favor of the cause so near our hearts, as Methodist Protestants, that of "Mutual Rights and Religious Liberty." Men, who have deliberately sought a home among us, and who love any organization on account of its own intrinsic worth. The entire field of the Michigan District, presents an inviting attitude to the Methodist Protestant Church. The Macedonian cry as we have passed through the length and breadth of our extensive work, has saluted us from almost every quarter—"Come over and help us," but alas! our laborers are few.—O that the Lord of the Harvest would convert and send forth more!

Had we some fifteen or twenty more ministers of the right stamp, who loved our cause, and were able and willing to make sacrifices for its prosperity, with the Divine blessing, as a Church we should succeed to admiration. Public opinion is being disabused in reference to us as a people,—and other leading denominations are extending to us the right hand of fellowship, and "bidding us God speed." We would name especially our Presbyterian, Congregational, and Baptist neighbors.

Even the M. E. C. has elicited our admiration by her general kindly feeling, and Christian charity; in some instances inviting us to occupy their meeting-houses on our quarterly-meetings, and communing with us on our sacramental occasions. All open hostility against us as a Church has measurably ceased, but few of the Old Ch. evincing the least enmity—and those not the most distinguished for learning, piety, or strictly moral character.

We regret to say the fiscal concerns of the District are not in as prosperous a condition as might be desired. This, however, we apprehend is not for the want of ample means, or disposition on the part of our people to support the ministry, and the benevolent institutions of the Church—but the want of some regular uniform system.—Would it not contribute to our prosperity as a Conference, for this body to turn its attention to this important subject during its present session, and if possible devise some feasible plan, which will secure union of effort among our people, and thus enable them more successfully to carry out the rules and provisions of our excellent Constitution upon this point? This is a subject of vital importance, and demands prompt and immediate action.

Circumstances have transpired to render it necessary to make a few incidental changes in the appointment of the preachers during the recess of Conference.

Brother J. H. Haseltine was transferred from Adrian to the Prairie Ronde circuit, and Brother S. Lapham appointed to supply his place. Br. P. R. Ransom was dismissed from the Ingham circuit, and the work supplied by the unstationed preachers. Brother G. Wooster was dismissed from the St. Joseph, and Brother White appointed to the charge; Brother E. Fulkerson was permitted to confine his labors to Stuben county, and Br. O. P. Green appointed to the Lagrange. Brs. Lowre, Lanning, and Cranson will be able, I presume, to give satisfaction to the Conference why they have not performed the work assigned them in their respective fields of labor. Brother G. Wooster has left by letter for Oregon.

We would respectfully suggest for your consideration that it might conduce to our prosperity as a District, if the stationing authority should be required to hold a session on the second day of Conference and on each succeeding day during its continuance. Thus giving the parties interested sufficient time to consult each others' wishes, and adjust any difficulties that might arise. The interests of the Church demand that this business should not be hurried through, without time, due reflection, and frequent fervent prayer to Almighty God for Divine direction.

We would here record it, as a tribute of grateful acknowledgement to our Heavenly Father for his merciful Providence, that up to the session of our Conference last fall, from our first organization—embracing a period of some five years—not a single minister had been removed from us by death. But the scene is now changed. It has been reserved for me to be the first President to announce death's doings amongst us. Unawed by the sacred character of the men—the magnitude and importance of the work in which they were engaged—the "King of Terrors" has fearlessly entered the holy sanctuary, and taken from the sacred desk in the midst of a glorious revival of the work of God, on their respective circuits, two of our most devoted and successful ministers—yes, our beloved and lamented Gregory and Williams are gone!—they fell at their posts, and died with the armor on.

The claims of the bereaved widow and fatherless children appeal to the sympathies and prompt action of this venerable body. To fill the vacuum occasioned by this mysterious Providence, it became necessary to appoint Brother Haseltine to the Barry, and Brother Johnson to the Belvieu Circuit.

In conclusion, I beg leave to say, that in performing the work assigned me, I have travelled 4,793 miles—preached 363 sermons—attended 120 prayer meetings—been present at 70 love-feasts—and presided at 69 Quarterly Conferences—besides the incidental business and labor connected with my work and office.

The past has been a year of unprecedented labor and suffering, and also one of great spiritual enjoyment.

I take this method to present to my dear brethren in the ministry and membership my sincere thanks for their Christian courtesy, in cordially receiving me at their respective circuits and houses, for the cheerful and liberal manner in which they have anticipated and met my pecuniary claims. Having had an opportunity of extending my Christian acquaintance, and witnessing quite extensively the operation of our excellent system of "Mutual Rights," I shall retire from the Presidential Chair, with feelings of strong, and enlightened attachment to the Church of my adoption.

The Conference will accept this sincere expression of my gratitude, for the honor conferred upon, and the confidence reposed in me, by electing me your President at your last session, hoping you will pardon my errors—accept my well meant endeavors to promote the best interests of your Conference, and ever remember me in your daily supplications at a throne of grace. In consequence of the poor health of myself and family, I must respectfully but positively decline being a candidate for the Presidency the ensuing year. May God preside in all your assemblies—direct in all your deliberations—assist you in preserving the unity of the church—make you successful in winning souls to Christ—and finally bring us one and all to inherit Eternal life through the mercy and mediation of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. B. MACK.

Leoni Conference Room, Oct. 5, 1847.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 18, 1847.

☞ Br. J. Nichols of Cambridge Circuit having removed to Hoskinsville, Morgan County, wishes his letters and papers sent to that address.

First Response.—We sent out an appeal two weeks ago, in behalf of the Western Recorder, pointing out how easily our friends might raise for us one thousand new subscribers within 3 months. Br. J. Nichols of Cambridge Circuit, is the first to respond. He says:

"If possible, I will send you my ten subscribers in 3 months, and all the money I possibly can. In this age of coveteousness, it is hard to get money for any purpose. But I have been trying since Conference, and will try again. If patience and perseverance accomplish all things, I will see what they will do for the Recorder."

We thank our brother for the above good resolution, hope he will pardon our publishing it, as we trust his example will be an incentive to many others.

☞ Next week we will give some respectful attention to the letter of Br. Z. Beatty which is just received. We think we will give satisfaction.

Correspondents.—Please have patience, as we just now, have much on hand. We are glad that the muse of our Pittsburgh friend is waked up again.

☞ We direct attention to Brother Hoagland's advertisement of his lost horse. If it can be found, we anxiously hope to hear soon some favorable word.

Not Received.—The Pitsbugh Christian Advocate has not come to hand for three weeks past. We cannot conclude that our excellent Brother Hunter intends cutting our acquaintance. We rather apprehend that some mistake occurred by our requesting our exchanges to be sent to Putnam instead of Zanesville.

Delinquents.—The publisher of the True Wesleyan reckons that those who are owing for that paper, do not feel comfortable, that their digestion is interrupted, and they do not sleep quietly.—We wonder if it is not so with those who are owing for the Western Recorder.—The Wesleyan says the only way to obtain relief is to pay up! We think that an excellent prescription, and we hope our friends concerned, will try it.

British Conference.—At the last Annual Conference of the Wesleyan Methodists in England, a proposition was made as usual, to send a deputation to the General Conference of the M. E. Church of the United States. Dr. Newton enquired, "to which of the divisions of that body, the northern or southern—the anti-slavery or pro-slavery." It was concluded that the body repudiating slavery was the one to which their delegate should be sent. Dr. Dixon, said to be a staunch abolitionist, and eloquent speaker, was appointed for this mission to the American General Conference.

Secret Societies.—The Watchman of the Valley, New School Presbyterian paper, having published a Report of the Ripley Presbytery, against Secret Societies, has opened its columns "for courteously written articles," on the subject, on either side. We see that the Western Christian Journal, Baptist paper, still continues the discussion on the same question, writers on either side taking part.

The Pamphlets.—We have already disposed of 5000 copies of the An. Register for 1848. We have yet on hand, about 1000 more, most of which are already ordered. Brethren of the Muskingum District, will please send for their parcels if possible, or instruct us how to forward them.

Important Colony.

We have been much interested to learn that a company of emigrants from Liverpool, England, have recently purchased a large tract of land at the mouth of the Big Sandy, and on the Ohio river. The location is at the extreme north eastern point of the State of Kentucky, and opposite to Virginia and Ohio. They design pursuing extensively the manufacture of queensware, that having been their avocation in England. We are informed that a suitable clay has been found at their new location. Samples of this clay have been sent to Liverpool, worked into ware, and found to answer as well as that found and used in England, in the manufacture of the Liverpool ware. Having made this discovery, they have purchased a body of land at the mouth of the Big Sandy River, embracing several thousands of acres. A very numerous company of emigrants are coming out to settle there, who will doubtless prove worthy and valuable citizens. Their business enterprize also, will be of great interest and importance to the west. The emigrants are mostly of the Wesleyan Methodist connection in England, and it is said will bring their own ministers with them. We have this information from our friend Rev. W. I. Fee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who was stationed minister in this place last year, but who now has charge of Guyandotte circuit, Virginia, near the premises of this new colony. He states also that a gentleman of his acquaintance, and member of his charge, has been engaged by the company to make for them five hundred thousand brick, each year for seven years, for their building purposes. This looks indeed like founding a new city. Success, we say to the western manufacture of Liverpool ware.

J. N. Maffitt.—We learn that this gentleman has for some time past been preaching and lecturing in the 4th Street Methodist Church, Louisville. We have seen various notices of this, but cannot gather whether the Professor of Elocution has identified himself with M. E. Church, South, or not. He has been officiating however in one of its principal churches, and lecturing, it is said, on various topics illy befitting the pulpit. The Western Christian Advocate publishes a disclaimer in reference to his connection with the M. E. Church, whilst the Presbyterian Herald, Watchman of the Valley, and various secular papers, denounce unsparingly a lecture or discourse delivered by Mr. M. in defence of the Mexican War, & in favor of annexing the whole of Mexico to our territory. The "Herald," published in Louisville, says. "We have not yet seen or heard of any man, of any party in politics, whose moral sense was not deeply shocked and pained at hearing such sentiments coming from the sacred desk, and from a professed minister of the Prince of Peace."

Dr. H. P. Bennett.—We see that the death of this brother is announced in the last number of the True Wesleyan. He was for some years a minister of the M. P. Church, and belonged to the Indiana Conference from its first organization. He was one of the Delegates from that District to the Gen. Con. of 1842, at Baltimore. Soon after this he withdrew from the M. P. C., and identified himself with the Wesleyan Methodist Connection. He located himself in Richmond, Indiana, and pursued the practice of medicine, until his health declined, when he removed to Randalph Co., Indiana, where he died, as we learn by the T. Wesleyan, at peace with God and man, Oct. 2d. 1847. Brother Bennett was a good preacher, and a good physician. We had an agreeable acquaintance with him for several years. He was most distinguished as an anti slavery lecturer, to which calling he devoted considerable attention. Dr. B. was a native of Vermont. He was buried at Newport, Wayne Co., Ia. "Alas for thee, my brother."

Rev. Moses Scott.—We have observed a note in the Methodist Protestant, asking information respecting this brother, in behalf of Jane M'Une, a relative in Philadelphia. We respond to this enquiry, that Br. Scott is a travelling minister of the Muskingum Conference, and is Superintendant of Salt Creek Circuit. His post office address is Oak Hill, Jackson County, Ohio, where he resides.

Teachers Coming.—Thirty-five young ladies under the care of the National Board of Education, of which Gov. Slade is General Agent, recently left Hartford, Conn., for the West. Fifteen of them arrived at Cincinnati on Tuesday week. So says the Watchman of the Valley. They are destined for Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee. We think well of this Educational enterprise, but are of opinion that Gov. Slade would do well to caution those young ladies, not to get husbands out west & quit teaching too soon.

Turnpike.—We are gratified to learn by the Urbana Gazette, that there is now prospect of soon having a good gravelled turnpike road from that place to Springfield, and so on north. Having done and suffered in years past, our full share in travelling not over but through the roads of that interesting section of the State, we heartily congratulate the citizens and our friends and brethren especially of that region, on the prospect of their having a road, by which they can travel upon the surface of the earth. We have travelled through the Black Swamp, and we have travelled through the beautiful town of Urbana, when the roads in that vicinity were worse than the Black Swamp. We hope that that good road will be fixed up, and then we do want to go and see our old friends out in the north west once more.

Sears' Magazine.—The November number is received. It contains pictorial descriptions of the States of Michigan, Indiana & Illinois, with interesting illustrations. Amongst these are views of Detroit, Chicago, and the State House at Indianapolis. Mr. Sears' volume for 1847 when completed, will make a valuable book, containing pictorial descriptions of all the States of the Union. R. Sears, publisher, N. York. Two copies for $3.

Ladies' National Magazine.—The December number is received. It contains a beautiful mezzotint engraving, representing the Battle of Redbank. Also, The Countess, and the fashion plate. Mrs. Ann S. Stephens is Editor of the National. C. J. Peterson, publisher, $2, per annum. Philadelphia.

Temperence Meeting.—The Annual meeting of the Springfield Temperence Society was held on Tuesday evening last, at the Methodist church in this place. Rev. Mr. Dustin delivered an interesting address. L. Wiles Esq., was elected President for the ensuing year, and seven other gentlemen Directers.

Thanksgiving Day.—We continue to add to our list of States as we meet with the Governors' proclamations.

For November 25th:

New Hampshire,	Missouri,
Massachusetts,	New York,
Connecticut,	Maine,
Indiana,	Rhode Island,
Michigan,	Pennsylvania.
Maryland,	Ohio,
Kentucky,	Florida.
New Jersey.

For December 9th.

Arkansas.

Behind the time.

Iowa.—It is stated that the Commissioners appointed by the Iowa Legislature, have located the permanent seat of government, on a prairie in Jasper county, midway between the Des Moins and Skunk rivers, eighty miles west of Iowa City, and thirty from the geographical center of the State.

Methodist Episcopal Church.—The Western Christian Advocate gives statistics of the M. E. Church, taken from the "Minutes" just published, as follows:

Whole number of members in the M. E. Church,	631,558
Colored members,	29,901
Indians,	716
Travelling Preachers,	3,296
Superannuated Preachers,	346
Local Preachers,	4,913
Total preachers, travelling and local,	8,555
The decrease of the members amounts to	12,741

Too Poor.

"Got a paper to spare?"

"Yes, sir: here's one of our last.—Would you not like to subscribe sir, and take it regularly?"

"I would—but I am too poor."

That man had just returned from the Circus, cost 50 cents; lost time from his farm 75 cents; whiskey, judging from the smell, at least 25 cents—making a dollar and a half actually thrown away, and then begging for a newspaper, alleging that he was too poor to pay for it!

That's what we call "saving at the spile and wasting at the bung-hole."—Fayette (Mo.) Times

And then, Mr. Times, you never thought of the tobacco account. Ten cents a week for tobacco, (more than wasted.) would pay for a good Magazine and two newspapers. And how many of this sort of "poor" spend more than that amount in this way? Too poor! Nonsense.

Rev. Adam Crooks.

Many of our readers in this vicinity are aware that this brother served last year as officiating minister, of the Wesleyan Connection in this vicinity. It seems that at the last session of the Allegheny Conference of the Wesleyan brethren, a call was received for a preacher from N. Carolina. Brother Crooks was appointed there, to a charge called Guilford circuit. We saw him after Conference—for he called upon us, when about to start for his distant appointment. We find in the last number of the "True Wesleyan" a long letter from Br. C. giving an account of his journey and safe arrival at his destination.—After leaving Zanesville, he spent the Sabbath in Marietta, after which he proceeded down the Ohio river to the mouth of the Great Kanawa, up which stream he proceeded 60 miles to Charleston—thence by stage to Lewisburg, Va., where he spent the following Sabbath. He gives an interesting description of the wild mountain scenery of this route. He passed successively the Greenbrier Ridge of mountains, the Allegheny Ridge, the Blue Ridge, the famed Peaks of Otter withal, the highest of the Blue Ridge, passing Fincastle and Lynchburg, and finally reaching Guilford, N. C. He states that a Methodist woman was put into the stage at F. who was sold by her Episcopalian master to go farther south.—She was leaving a husband, mother, brothers, sisters, and the grave of a child. In conversation, Br. C. asked her if she did not mourn the death of her babe. Her answer was: "No, I am glad it is gone, for it is a stranger to my sorrows."—From our acquaintance with Br. C. we consider him a prudent as well as a zealous man, and trust that he will be useful in his mission south.

Annual Register, 1848.

We have shipped to Baltimore, Md. a box, containing 1000 copies of this publication for the Book Agent, and 200 copies for Rev. T. F. Norris, Boston, Mass.

Also, a box to George Conklin, including the parcels generally ordered by brethren in the Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, North Illinois and Iowa Districts.

Brother Conklin will send to Springfield, Ohio, the parcels for Brethren, Young, M'Guire, Rose, Stephens, Moore, Davis, Ensminger, where they can be obtained of Br. R. Rose.

Brethren Joel and R. M. Dalbey, Trumbo, White, Fowler, Warrington, Kerzerta, Nutty, Williams, Finkbine, Evans, and Channell, will please send and procure their parcels from Br. Conklin, Cincinnati. Brother Smith of Tanners Creek, Ia., will also find his there.

Brother Conklin will also forward the packages for Brs. Morrison, Shipp, and Ellis, to Edinburg, Johnson county, Indiana, care of Austin Shipp, to whom also we have sent an additional small parcel to be disposed of to whoever may want.

The parcels for Illinois and Iowa, will be sent by Brother Conklin to Rev. John Clarke, Rushville, Illinois, care of Wilson & Co., where Brs. Johnson and Miller will please send and get them. This is the best we could do in sending them.

We have sent by the hand of Br. Jos. Burns the parcels for Brothers, Andrew, Ragan, John Burns, Davis, Cowl, and Scott.

A package has been shipped to Pittsburgh, to Br. Charles Craig, Diamond Alley, from whom may be obtained the parcels for Brethren Reeves, Robinson, M'Elroy, S. and J. C. Hazlett, Doe, Wood, Compton, Simonton, Clawson, Gillespie, Laishly, Porter, Lucas, Helmick, and Palmer.

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

PATASKALA.

Mr. Editor: You inform us in your paper of the 21st ult. that the Presbyterian brethren have changed the name of 'Licking Presbetery to that of Pataskala; and you indicated that it was done by them to "restore the Indian name of that stream," that is, of 'Licking. Now are not both you and they aware that Lickticking and Hockhocking are as much Indian names as Pataskala and Wakatamaka. It is true our modern abreviators, who have substituted 'pike for turnpike, &c., &c., also, give us 'Licking and 'Hocking for Lickticking and Hockhocking, but this does not destroy the Indian character of these names. Lickticking and Pataskala are no doubt names of different nations of Indians for the same stream, but we have always understood that the former was the name given by that nation who inhabited it when the whites generally became acquainted with it. Perhaps Messrs. Nye or Converse could give us some light on the subject.

The Presbetery may have had, for aught we know, reasons why they prefer one Indian name to another, but it certainly could not be because the sound of Pataskala is more "musical" than Lickticking. But for our part we can see no reasons why the records of the country should be corrupted to accommodate such a change.

We have understood, from old pioneers, that Wakatamaka means crooked creek; that our river was called Muskingum (Moose-king-gum, or Elk's Eye,) because the transparency of its waters was like the Eye of the Elk; that Hockhocking means Bottle River,—so called because its upper falls is supposed to resemble that kind of vessel. But we do not remember to have heard the meaning of Lickticking. Who can tell us the meaning?—We have no doubt, however, that Pataskala and Wakatamaka are both names of the same nation, who do not appear to have the use of any other vowel but a, and then from the similarity of the sounds Lickticking and Hockhocking are names of another but different nation.

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, O., Nov. 9, 1847.

Explanation.

Mr. Editor: When I first came upon Washington Circuit, there were but ten appointments given me by Br. Trumbo, my predecessor, and four of these were without classes. They were all continued as preaching places until the second quarterly-meeting, when one of the appointments was dropped, not by my request, but on motion of Br. Ryan in quarterly Conference. At the third quarterly-meeting, another appointment was struck off from the plan, not by my request, but on motion of Br. Lyon, in quarterly Conference. These two appointments having been discontinued by the quarterly conference, there remained eight on the plan of the circuit, besides which I preached at four other places for some time, till finding the prospect unfavorable, I dropped them, and attended only to the eight regular appointments. I make this statement to correct a misrepresentation which has been circulated. As I was left without an appointment by our last conference, I took a transfer in view of going to Indiana Conference. But having returned home, and made known my intention of removal, the citizens and community amongst whom I have lived and labored the past year, being unwilling that I should go, immediately got up a subscription for my support for this year.—I expect therefore to remain where I am, and intend to do all I can for the Recorder.

J. H. WEBSTER.

Moon's Mill O. Oct. 30, 1847.

[We like that last part of the brothers letter best.--Ed.]

Written for the Western Recorder.

Conference Collections.

Br. Bassett: I would respectfully suggest to the Sec'y. of Muskingum Conference (Br. Burns) the following correction of the two resolutions respecting Conference Collections, as being my understanding of the action of the Conference in regard to this matter.

Resolved 1st. That it be hereafter the duty of each Superintendent of a circuit or station, to take up a Conference collection, or have it done, in the societies of their respective charges to be brought to the Annual Crnference, to supply the deficiencies of its itinerant preachers, &c.; and that he be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of this duty.

Resolved 2d. That it shall be hereafter the duty of each Superintendent of a circuit or station, to arraign before their Quarterly Conference, the Stewards of their respective charges, who may refuse, or neglect to take up the Annual Conference collection; and that he be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of this his duty.

I have no recollection of the conference striking out anything from the original resolution, and substituting any thing in its place as an amendment. But it is my impression that what was offered by Br. Burns as an amendment, was adopted in addition to the original resolution of Br. Springer, instead of being made a substitute for it, and that both are equally binding upon us.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

Brownsville O. Nov. 15, 1847.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. SOLOMON LONGSWORTH.

Died at his residence, in Vanwert county, O., after a protracted illness, in the 59th year of his age.

He was born in the State of Maryland, Baltimore county, on the 16th of June, 1789. On the 11th of June, 1811; he was married to C. Boyer, who is yet living. In the year 1832, he moved with his family to the State of Ohio, where he continued to reside until his decease.

Through the labor and instrumentality of our late lamented Father Snethen, Brother Longsworth was convicted of his sins and of the necessity of a change of heart, and in the pardoning mercy of God through Jesus Christ was soon privileged to rejoice in the free remission of his sins; and united in membership with the Methodist Episcopal Church in which he continued to hold an acceptable standing as a member, and a part of the time as a local preacher, until the subject of Church Government, not only agitated the church of his choice, but resulted in the secession of hundreds of her most worthy members and ministers as advocates of Mutual Rights; when he was among the first to declare for reform by casting his lot with the seceders in the organization and upbuilding of the Meth. Protestant Church, in which he held an acceptable standing as a minister and member to the time of his death, which occurred on the 17th of August last.—The disease of which he died was chronic inflammation of the stomach and bowels. His sufferings are said to have been very severe, still he bore them with great patience, and met death full of christian fortitude and humble resignation to the will of his Heavenly Father. In his death, the church, his widowed partner, and his fatherless children have all sustained an irreparable loss; yet, in this, each may find a mixed cup:—While there are reflections the most bitter, there may be those most sweet. I learn that he conversed of his approaching death with freedom and pleasure, giving full evidence that the 'sting of death' was extracted, and he felt possessed of a full victory through his Lord Jesus Christ. Truly, to all such, "to die is gain."

Will the Methodist Protestant please copy? as Brother Longworth has many friends who are readers of that paper. GEO. CLANCY.

Mansfield, Nov. 4, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SOPHRONIA MITCHEL.

Death has been here, and taken a mother from our side. Sophronia Mitchel, consort of Brother James H. Mitchel, of Johnstown, Pa., departed this life October 26th, 1847, aged 42 years.—Sister Mitchel was born in Westmoreland county, and was brought up by Isaac Mears, in Connelsville, Fayette county. On the first day of January, 1824, she was married to J. H. Mitchel. Sister M. was a worthy member of the Methoditt Protestant Church. She experienced religion ten or eleven years ago and lived in the enjoyment of the favor of God from that time till it pleased God to take her out of this world to her reward. From her youth she was inclined to be religious. She was a good wife and an affectionate mother. Brother Mitcheland his dear heart-broken children have met with an irreparable loss. But their loss is her infinite gain. No more does she suffer; her body lies in the cold grave: closed are her eyelids and quiet her breast. But her redeemed spirit has soared to the spirit world—the land of the blessed, and there is happy and free.

Sister Mitchel was the mother of eleven children. Four of them have gone before and the others now mourn over their loss. O, how near is a mother to children, and how near and dear are children to a mother. The writer of this had the privilege of conversing, singing and praying with our now departed sister and all seemed to be well. She said that she was willing to depart and be with Christ which is far better.

But said she, if it would please God to spare me a little longer until my little boys grow up I would be thankful. And in her low state she would talk about the welfare of her children until she would be almost exhausted. She bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude. O how patiently did she await her change, and with what Christian resignation did she meet her last enemy. May the Lord bless Brother Mitchel and his children.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, write—Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth, yea saith the Spirit, that they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."—Rev. 14 chap. and 13th verse.

V. LUCAS.

Johnstown, Pa. Nov. 3, 1847.

News of the Week.

Dreadful Accident on the Reading Railroad.

On Wednesday last, a coal train broke down, above P. Clinton, and caused a number of trains to be delayed by the impossibility of removing the obstruction. One of the trains, in order to pass, went upon the wrong track, and consequently came in collision with another train, occasioning a dreadful loss of life. One man, named Barney McGuire, was instantly killed; another whose name is unknown, has since died, and John Regan was so dreadfully crushed that he is not expected to survive. There are five others most seriously injured, but I have not been able to learn their names. This accident has occasioned a great loss to the Railroad Company, in broken cars and damaged locomotives.

John Regan, we learn, has since died; James Brown, engineer of the locomotive Independence who had both his legs crushed, has also died; a man employed as brakeman, from one of the Eastern States, and whose name is unknown, was instantly killed by the tank of one of the engines falling upon him; James O'Neal, conductor of the Independence, had one of his thumbs broken, and his arm severely hurt, and the foremost brakeman of the Warrior had his chin fractured, and otherwise injured.

Our informant states that the accident occurred in consequence of the locomotive "Washington," in coming down, running off the track and leaving a part of her train still on it. She was followed by the "Independence," which was being brought down alone to Reading for repairs—but no serious contact took place between them. Soon afterwards, the "Warrior," with a train, came down and ran into the "Independence," producting a wreck of both engines, and causing the fatal results we have detailed above.

John Stanley, a fireman on the Reading railroad, was run over by the wood car, Monday afternoon of last week, near Port Clinton, and was instantly killed.—Dol. Newspaper.

Railroad Accident.

Within the last two weeks three severe accidents have been recorded upon the Massachusetts Railroad. The last happened on Saturday. The N. York Tribune gives the following particulars of this occurrence:

"By a passenger who arrived at the Astor house yesterday morning, we learn that a frightful accident occurred on the Norwich and worchester Railroad near Boston on Saturday morning. It seems that the switch was not properly adjusted, and as the train from Boston for Springfield was crossing the Mill-Dam, (Brooklyn,) some part of the leading cars started up the iron on the track, which, striking against the bottom of a second class car, in which twenty passengers were seated, precipitated all except seven into the water. Those seven were scattered out upon the track, and all killed by the train as it passed on, cutting off heads, limbs, and horribly mangling and cutting bodies entirely to pieces. Those who fell into the water were saved. We have a telagraphic despatch from Springfield which states that the bottom of the car was smashed to pieces by the break becoming detached and falling under the car, and that beside the seven who were instantly killed, several were seriously injured. We were unable to obtain the names of the killed, but undersand they were Irishmen."

The Slave Trade.

Its prosecution under the American flag, and by Americans.—The Washington Union states that letters have been received at the Navy Department by the United States brig Dolphin, which has just arrived at New York, in 22 days from Perto Praya, (Cape de Verd Island.) In relation to the important movement of the republic of Liberia, in declaring her independence, the following extract is given from Lieut. Commanding Bell to Com. Read, dated U. S. brig Boxer, October 5th:

"On my arrival at Monrovia, on the 16th ult., I found that the colony of Liberia had proclaimed itself an independent nation, under the name of the Republic of Liberia. I enclose a copy of a letter which Governor Roberts addressed to me, to apprise me of the new dignity of his government—enclosing a printed copy of the declaration of their independence."

"In a letter from the same, same date and port, Lieutenant Commanding Bell gives some account of his cruise. He had over hauled an American brig (the J. W. Huntington) on the night of the 31st August, owned in New York, from Rio Janeiro, with the usual assorted slave cargo on board, and lumber enough for a slave deck. He was informed, also, that the Malaga had precisely such a cargo, except the lumber. The American brig 'Senator,' board in March last, was out from Rio with such a cargo, & similarly chartered. The master of the J. W. Huntington reports that she (the Senator) now lies scuttled in Rio. Having safely landed 500 slaves at Cape Frio, she proceeded into Rio under Brazilian colors, where her owners were suffered to strip her of all her furniture, and then the government siezed her as a no-document vessel—the American crew having left at Loarge; where the slaves were taken on board.

"In these transactions (says Lieutenant Commanding Bell) you perceive the mode in which the American flag covers and promotes a trade which no other flag can, and the base uses to which it is applied by foreigners who have not the manliness to vindicate the freedom of their own.

"'The American factory at this place is the principal trading establishment under the Amer. flag on the southern coast; there being branches of it, as at Ambizetto and at Loango, owned by Messrs. Boorhows and Hunt, Salem Massachusetts, who are said to be doing a fair business in guns, ivory, copper, and ebony; that house sends out from six to eight vessels annually.

"'From the same source I understand that upwards of thirty American vessels annually come freighted from Brazil by Brazilians to the south coast; some of them, as is well known, taking a return cargo of slaves, under Brazilian colors, their American crews first leaving them. But the most of them are believed to leave the coast carrying white passengers only.'"

The Union well adds:

"This is shameful traffic, and ought, if possible, to be arrested. Will not the republic of Liberia be one of the most important agents for effecting this object at some future, though it may be distant time? May it not furnish not only a harbor, but facilities for supplying any vessels that may be employed for repressing the trade, and even vessels of her own, for this purpose? As she strengthens and improves her own resources, she will furnish a more inviting habitation and resting-place for the free men of color who will be emancipated in the United States; and she may even come to exert a greater degree of moral force over the continent of Africa, to restrain the aliments of the slave-trade, and give the African mind and manners a wiser and a more liberal direction? The present position of Liberia will lessen the idle jealousies which England has entertained of our relations to that country, and lead her to treat them with more confidence and more kindness."

Virginia Destined to be Free.—The Norfolk Holland alluding to a statement in the Parkersburgh (West Va.) Gazette, that large numbers of citizens of the Old Dominion are leaving her territory for the Far West, says:

Now in this there is nothing that should cause regret in Virginia. Let those who are lured by prospect of gain, or who realy believe that they can better their condition by emigrating to the new States, follow their bent, and take their slaves along with them! The vacuum may cause a momentary weakness, but it will only be to recruit with a two-fold vigor. The place of every slave will in time be filled by a hardy, industrious, tax-paying, musket-bearing freemen, of the right stuff to people a free State, which Virginia is destined to be one of these days, and the sooner (consistently with reason) the better for her own good.

Norfolk, remember, is on the eastern Shore.

Met.—Hon. John Quincy Adams and Hon. Albert Gallatin, met at the rooms of the New York Historical Society, on Tuesday night last. The meeting was most cordial, and many reminiscences must have flashed across their yet active minds.

Fatal Accident.—On Monday evening, a fireman on the Reading railroad, near Port Carbon, was run over, by an engine, and killed.—His name was John Stanly.

Little Miama Railroad.

The great increase of business on the Little Miama Railroad, has rendered a double track a matter of necessity, and we understand that the work for the same will commence immediately. About twelve hundred tons of the iron, the first manufactured west of the mountains have already arrived. It is the heavy L. and H. rail, and being laid upon a track, with a substantial McAdamized foundation, any speed within locomotive power, may be made upon it, with little or no danger. The amount of iron now arrived will be sufficient for about twelve miles of the track. This iron was manufactured near Pittsburgh, at an establishment got up under the especial patronage of the Western railroad companies.

We understand from Mr. Clements, Superintendent of the Little Miama Railroad Company, that the connection between this and the Mad River line, will be complete certainly by the first of May. This connection, opening an unbroken line to the Lakes, will doubtless increase the travel three fold.—Cin Com.

The Ohio River.—We have collected a few facts relative to the Ohio which may not prove uninteresting. The Ohio including the Allegheny, which may be regarded as the same river, under another name is 1,200 miles long. At Cincinnati, which is about equi-distant from Pittsburgh to its confluence with the Mississippi, it is 534 yards wide, which may be assumed as its average width. Its annual range here, from low to high water, is about 50 feet; its extreme range on record 64 feet (at the time of the flood of 1832.) It generally reacher its lowest stages in August, September and October; and its greatest rises in December, March, May and June. For a long distance below Pittsburgh, it is frozen over almost every winter, for several weeks; at Cincinnati it is not thus closed oftener than once in five years on an average. Its current, when at a mean, height, three miles, and when higher and rising four to five miles. Its immediate valley has an average width of one mile. It has the following tributaries, the Monongahela, Allegheny, Beaver, Kanawha, Muskingum, Hocking, Scioto, Great Sandy, Great and Little Miama, Licking, Kentucky, Wabash, Salt, Green, Cumberland and Tennessee, which drain a region of upwards of 130,000,000 acres—an area three times larger than all New England, and as large as all the Atlantic States, north of the Potomac.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Melancholy.—On Saturday, Oct., 23d, a small boat started from the wharf in the village of St. Lawrence to go to Matilda, a distance of 16 miles. While descending the Galoo Rapids, the boat filled and sunk, and all on board were drowned.—The names of the men are Robert Johnson, Arthur McNarin, Robert Riley, Mich'l Langharn Johnson Atchison and Geo. Darling.

Suit for Libel.—Mr. Morgan L. Mott, has honored Mr. Greely, of the New York Tribune, with a capias citing to show why the editor ought not to pay him the trifle of $10,000 for sundry holes made in his reputation.

Another Fatal Explosion.—The second within a month, and the third within a year—occurred at the powder mills Hart's Corners, Westchester county, New York last Thursday. It occurrred in the presshouse, and killed a German named Benjamin Hugle, and badly wounded two others, one of whom has since died, and the other is not expected to surveve.

Another.—A New York letter of Thursday says:—

"We have intelligence from Catskill, that an explosion took place yesterday in the powder mills of Latham and Smith, seven miles from that place, of 4,000 pounds of powder, and killed 3 of the workmen, named Overbagh, Westcott and Scribner. The explosion was heard for 20 miles and shook buildings for 7 miles distant.

Not Bad.—A friend writes us from East Machias, that he went to attend the dedication of a Roman Catholic Church in that place the other day. The interior of the building was crowded—a capital sermon was preached—and every body was waiting for the ceremonies of the dedication, when the officiating priest quietly remarked that, the building was unpaid for by the congregation, he could not with conscience dedicate it—"he could not give from them to God what was not theirs to render. When the church legally belonged to them, he would with pleasure be the medium of presenting it to Heaven" An example this not unworthy of being followed by Protestants.—Boston Trans.

The Planet Mars.—Every body must have been for a long time past struck with the unsual brilliancy of this beautiful planet in the east. On sunday it came in opposition to the sun, and it is now several millions of miles nearer to us than it will be again for many years. When nearest its distance was about 4 millions of miles. On the 25th of September, 1848, when most remote, its distance will be five and a half times as great, or about 249 millions and on December 12th 1849, when again nearest to us the distance of this planet will be about 55 millions, or about 12 millions of miles greater than at the present time. Its brilliancy, therefore, at the opposition of December, 1849, will be much less than that at the opposition of October, 1847.—National Intelligencer.

Stop my Paper

Some men are like cats. You may stroke the fur the right way for years—talk and write to please them, and hear nothing but purring; but accidently tread on a tail—say something that comes in contact with her faith, prejudice or interest, and what a scracthing and clawing there will be.—Ex. paper.

The true way of punishing such selfish and illiberal beings is to make the paper worth to them more than its cost, and the loss of it a greater punishment to themselves than the loss of subscription is to the publisher.—Dol. Newspaper.

Mr. John Walker, of Lisburn Cumberland county, Pa., one of the workmen engaged at the new bridge erecting at Harrisburg, fell from the roof, fracturing his skull. He died during the night. Several other accidents have happened at this bridge.

Notices.

Mad River Mission, Ohio District.—Br. Young is informed that his meeting will be held in Russelvania, Dec. 4th.

We expect to hold a protracted meeting in Equality class, 2 miles east of Russelvania, commencing on Christmas Day. We invite Brs. Peat, Borton, Howe, and others who can come. L. Ensminger.

Washington Circuit, Ohio District.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Bethel meeting house, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in December. We invite as many of our brethren in the ministry as can come.

A. CHANNEL.

Frederic Ct., Musk. Con.—Bro. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at the Huntsman appointment, that being the time and place of our first quarterly meeting.

J. S. THRAP, Sup't.

Monongalia ct., Pitts. District.—Br. Bassett: Please inform our worthy President, that the point of visitation on this circuit, will be at Thomas Maple's new Frame church. We are looking up to the God of our Futhers, that he will favor our Zion, and baptise the entire membership with the holy reformation fire, and that it may spread over the entire hills, and up and down the valleys, till one mighty anthem may echo from mountain to mountain.—Brother Brown, come with the whole armor on.

Yours, as ever, in the bonds of christian fellowship,

ELI MARTIN, Sup't.

Wayne Ct., Musk. Con.—Brother Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be at Waynesburg. C. T. KINGSBURY, Sup't.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Lewis	Circuit,	October,	24th,	1847.
Clarksburg	"	"	31st,	"
Evansville	"	November	7th,	"
Morgantown	"	"	14th,	"
Monongahela	"	"	21st,	"
Waynesburg	"	"	28th,	"
Washington	Station,	December	5th,	"
Home,	"	"	12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	"	19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

Br. Bassett; Please insert the following list of app'ts.

Frederick	circuit,	1st Sunday	November
Licking	"	2d	"	"
Mt. Zion	"	3d	"	"
Coshocton	"	4th	"	"
Pleasant Hill	"	1st	"	December.

Should be glad to be informed, through the Recorder, of the place for meeting on each of the above named cts.

GEO. CLANCY.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Port William	"	Nov.	6th,	1847.
Springfield	"	"	13th,	"
Union	"	"	20th,	"
Darby	mission,	"	27th,	"
Mad River	"	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,		"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Springfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

Twin Creek	Ct.		Dec.	25
Cincinnati	Miss.	Elm st.	Jan.	1 1847
Cincinnati	St.	6 st.	"	8
Cincinnati	Ct.		"	15
New Richmond	Ct.		"	22
Lebanon	St.		"	29
Lebanon	Miss.		Feb.	5
Greenville	"		"	12

J. M. YOUNG.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

Liberty	ct.	Nov.	6–7	1847.
Madison	"	"	13–14	"
Flat Rock	"	"	20–21	"
White Lick	"	"	27–28	"
White River	"	Dec.	4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	"	11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of	December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	"	"	"
Cambridge	"	4th	"	"	"
Belmont	"	1st	"	Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	"	"	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	"	"	"
Steubenville	"	4th	"	"	"

As Br. C. has given public notice of his purpose not to go to his charge, I hereby say to the friends on Pennville circuit, that I will meet my appn't on that ct. at Pennville: I would also, suggest, that I would be glad that C. J. and Wm. Sears, could make it suit their convenience to supply the circuit until my visit to it.

As the Mt. Zion circuit, has no house suitable for a large gathering of people in cold weather, upon reflection, I have thought it advisable to defer my visit until the warm season. I have recalled my appointment upon it, by private letter to bro. Hanby. In consequence of this change, I will visit the Coshocton circuit, the 3d. and Pleasant Hill circuit, the 4th Sunday of Novemcer. Of this fact I have given notice to bro. Ross, and Case by private letters. GEO. CLANCY.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. Rinehart,	Pa.	P. M—Martin's Ferry,	O.
G. B. M'Elroy, 2.	"	T. Newman,	"
E. Alexander,	"	J. Jack,	"
A. P. Corey,	Vt.	C, Bassett,	"
T. L. Forkner, 2,	Pa.	C. H. Williams,	"
J. B. Rice,	Va.	S. Gee,	"
E. A. Wheat,	N. Y.	J. Nichols,	"
L. Ensminger,	O.	P. M.—Hendryburg,	"
Z. Beatty,	"	J. M. Young,	"
J. S. Thrap,	"	J. M. Winn,	"
Miss H. Langdon, 2 subs.	"	P. M.—Plainfield,	"
J. S. Hudson,	"	Mrs. Enyart,	"
J. F. Bane.	"	J. Nutty,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts,
S. Gee.	J. Stout	9	52	2 00
E. Alexander.	S. Armstrong,	9	52	2 00
"	Himself,	9	52	2 00
J. L. Falkner,	R. Milligan,	9	52	2 00
J. W. Heanly,	Jos. Ball,	8	31	2 00
E. A. Wheat,		9	52	1 00
J. D. Langdon,	Miss Soph ia Davis,	9	52	2 00
"	Miss Eliz. Totton,	9	52	2 00
J. H. Linder,	L. R. Penn,	9	52	2 00
"	Himself,	9	52	2 00
H. L. Gray,	John Stoner,	9	52	1 50
J. S. Hudson,	O. Moses,*	9	26	5 00
"	H. Elton,*	9	26	5 00
Z. Beatty,		9	52	2 00

* With a balance in the hands of Mr. Hudson.

The P. M. at Edinburgh, Ia., notifies us that T. Russel does not take his paper from the office. Will Br. T. Shipp have the goodness to see to this matter? T. R. is behind with us for 19 numbers to this date.

We inform our friend J. B. Rice of Freeport Va. that we never recieved any letter from him enclosing one dollar, nor any pay at all since we have had charge of the paper. Consequently he owes us for more than two years. Moreover we never recieved any notice of his removal. Why did not the post master let us us know? We now send as regnested.

Br. J. S. Thrap, the money sent pays for the books sent, and for your 50 Registers.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED.—On the 30th ult., by Rev. Wm. Duling, Mr. Benjamin F. Hickman, to Miss Eleanor F. Pierce, all of Muskingum, Co. Ohio.

DEATHS.

DIED—At Doylestown, Wayne County, Ohio, Rev. G. H. Wrygandt, aged 68, a prominent minister of the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

——At Geneva N. Y. on the 25th of September, Rev. Lewis D. Howell, long known as indefatigable General Agent of the American Tract Society.

——At Reading Pa. on the 21st. ult., Rev. Wm. A. Wiggins, in the 51st year of his age, and 24th of his ministerial labor, as an itinerant of the M. E. Church.

——At Cincinnati, on the 16th. inst. Col. G. W. Bradbury.

——At Columbus, Oct. 30th J. M. Espy, Esq. in his 76th year.

Advertisements.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

FROM the stable of James Steward, Jacksontown, Licking County Ohio, on Sunday night last, a small iron gray mare, about four years old, a natural trotter, fast walker, and of sprightly spirit, somewhat saddle marked. Any one who has seen or heard of the animal, will confer a favor by giving information to the Editor of this paper, or to James Steward, Jacksontown, or the subscriber at Brownsville, Licking County Ohio, and shall be reasonably rewarded. E. S. HOAGLAND.

Brownsville, Ohio, Nov. 16, 1847.

Waynesburg, Green County, Pa.

Rev. A. H. Bassett: My dear Brother, please say to the Brethren, that I have on hands, Clarks's Commentary, new and complete, do. upon the New Testament, do. Theology, Watson's Institutes, do. Dictionary, Common, medium, Revival Hymn Books, Disciplines, Snethen's Sermons, Harris' do. Williams' on the Lord's Supper. Rev. T. H. Stockton's Christian World, 3 vol. Social Spirit of Christianity, Whitehead's life of Rev'd. J. and C. Wesley. Large family Bibles, Pocket Polyget, do. Fletcher's address to seekers of solvation, Evan's Pamphlet, Christian Manuel. Life of Geo. Washinton, Columbus, and Flanklin, School books of various kinds.

Sears' Domestic Bible, 1000 engravings, 1,500 pages.
do.	History of the Bible, several hundred engravings
do.	Biography of the Bible.	do.
do.	Sunday Book,	do.
do.	Great Britain and Ireland,	do.
do.	Sketches Europe,	do.
do.	American Revolution, 160 engraving.

Hemmorrhage of the Lungs having returned upon me again it is doubtful whether I shall be able to travel much this winter, if ever. Should any of the Brethren want any of the above works and will inform me, I will try and send them as they may direct, Should my health admit I will bring them. Since Conference, I have visited, Allegheny, Pittsburgh, and the Brownsville circuit. Permit me Brother Bassett, to tender my thanks to the Ministers of those fields of labor for the active part they took in selling my books for me, and the membership, for their liberality in buying. Respectfully yours,

W. A. PORTER.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe & Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe, - - -	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix - - - -	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both - - -	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked and with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 12th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 1, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

POET'S CORNER.

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE PLEDGE.---A Parody.

The Pledge! it is of thee,
Sweet pledge of Liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Pledge, which my father tried
Pledge of my mother's pride;
From every mountain's side,
Let temperance ring.

The pledge teetotle! the
Pledge of the noble free,
Thy name I love!
I love the pledge that kills,
Those deadly worms of stills;
My heart with rapture thrills,
Like that above.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring through all the trees,
Sweet temperance song;
Let mothers' hearts awake,
Let children, too, partake,
Let Sots their silence break,
The sottish prolong.

Our fathers' God! to thee,
Author of Liberty!
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With temperance holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King!

Putnam, O. LEWIS.

[BY REQUEST:]

From the Cadiz Republican.

LINES

INSCRIBED TO MRS. M. P. BRISTER.

BY MRS. FRANCIS B. M. BROTHERSON.

"A treasure but removed—
A bright bird parted for a clearer day,
Thine still in Heaven."

A harp was thine—a tiny harp,
Of tragic tone and sweet,
Whose every note of melody
Thy 'raptured soul did greet.
Hushed are its chords! a Mighty Hand
Hath burst its strings in twain!
Its gushing murmurs 'round thy home
Shall I never fall again?

A bud was thine—a lily bud,
Thou hailed it with delight,
And Fancy 'round it flung fond dreams,
Hope wove a tissue bright!
'Twas thine its opening bloom to know,
To watch it day by day—
And thine the untold agony
To mark it fade away!

Yet in a land of lovelier light,
And fairer skies than ours,
'Tis clothed in beauty—fadeless—new,
It lives in Eden bowers:
We may not know how bright the hues,
That unto it are given;
Nor image forth its radiant bloom,
In yonder glorious Heaven.

Thy cherished harp! in that fair clime
Its notes resound again!
And what was once an earthly tone
Is now a seraph's strain!
List! will not then its melody
Replace the lost from earth?
More sweet, more holy, lovelier far,
Than that of mortal birth!

Then bend not o'er yon grassy mound,
Thy treasure lies not there!
And deem thou not the dreary tomb,
A home for aught so fair.
But with the undimmed eye of Faith,
Gaze on the Eternal's throne;
Around it blooms thy cherished flower,
Thy HARP gives back its tone!

Cadiz, Oct. 14, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XIV.

On the 17 of June, 1830, it fell in my way to call and spend a few hours with that venerable old servant of God, Rev. Philip Gatch, who was one of the first Itinerant Methodist Ministers raised up in the United States. He is now between seventy and eighty years of age.* He spoke favorably of our principles, and wished us success; but considered himself so near the end of his pilgrimage, that his chief concern was to be ready to depart. I was truly delighted and much encouraged, in listening to him while he gave a brief sketch of his early travels. On the 18th, I crossed over the Ohio river, and preached to a large and attentive audience, and by request gave a short lecture on Church Government. A local preacher of M. E. Church, interrupted me, I requested him not to interrupt me, and also told him if he or any of their preachers would do me the favor to meet me in public on the subject, I was ready. He accepted the challenge, and the time and place were fixed, after meeting closed. I then recrossed the river to New Richmond, and that night we held a prayer and class meeting, and the good Lord was with us to wound and to heal. Two professed to find pardon, and ten were added, counting one that joined in the morning, six from the M. E. Church, and four from the world. O, this was a memorable night.

Twenty-second, preached in Felicity, in the Presbyterian Church, & duty to myself appeared to call for defence of moral character. It was circulated that I had got a cirtificate from the P. Elder, J. B. F., by telling a lie, and run off with it, I informed them that before I had an opportunity to hand the certificate to the P. Elder in the other District, I concluded that it would be best for me to leave the M. E. Church, and help to organize a church, on gospel principles, and I have my cirtificate yet and expect to keep it. I preached again in the evening two miles from town. A travelling M. E. Preacher sat by my side, I asked him to close, but he refused, Br. Sargent gave a warm exhortation, and closed. 23d, set out for my appointment at Br. Flakes, I had been very uneasy about my family for several days, and strange to tell, as soon as I mounted my horse this morning, it was deeply impressed on my mind that I would meet my son Wesley, that day bringing me bad news, and so it was, he had got to the place where I was to preach a few minutes before me, and informed me that his sister (about eleven years of age,) had got badly burnt, after talking a few minutes to the people we set off for home forty miles, got there next day, found my child in a good way to recover from her burn. But this was only the beginning of affliction; she was attacked with the bloody flux. After staying four or five days at home, she being better, I set out again, but within one week my son met me again in the evening informing me that his youngest brother was at the point of death when he left home. We set out immediately, and rode all night except about two hours to feed and let our horses rest, reached home next morning about nine o'clock,—found my darling youngest son cold and ready for the coffin. I confess I was completely overcome, & exclaimed, O! cruel death why hast thou been so merciless, as to take my sweet and lovely boy from me so unexpected: I mourned for months, and was strongly tempted to unbelief, in a future state, or the immortality of the human soul. O! I had to pray without ceasing, and preach against infidelity with all my might. I finally, got complete victory, by reading Dr. Dick's Philosophy of a future State.

* We suppose the writer means at the time of the entry in his journal, Mr. G. has since died.

[ED. W. R.]

The Budget.

Galignani's Messenger.

Published in Paris; states that:—"A few days ago, several working men were dining together in a public-house—when one of them gave way to a habit of swearing by God. The master of the house made remonstrances with him, which were taken in good part. Another man, however, a weaver, named Heruber, after denying the existence of a God, uttered the most impious language, and at last said in a contemptuous tone—'I will go and sup with your God to night.' The words were scarcely pronounced when the man fell dead upon the ground, as if he had been struck by a thunder-bolt."

A Special Providence.

No man can deny the doctrine of a special Providence who acknowledges that it is the duty of every man to pray; for prayer necessarily supposes that God holds a universal sympathy with all his creatures. It implies his universal presence and agency, and that he is most completely able to single out one person from the accumulated multitude of his subjects, and one thought and wish of that person, so as to accommodate his government to it. If this be not the case, prayer is an absurdity; and as Christianity insists upon its necessity and efficacy, Christianity must be implicated, in all the odium that is cast upon prayer by the infidel notion, that God only sometimes governs the world by controlling and influencing the hearts, conduct, and fate of individuals. DR. STYLES.

The Divine Character.

There is no subject within the range of thought more worthy of study than the DIVINE CHARACTER. It is a wonderful, a delightful, a boundless, an ennobling theme. What holiness! what justice! what patience! what mercy! The safety of the universe, the integrity of moral administration in all worlds, the complete redemption & immortal joy of all believers, and the final triumph of good over evil, are secured by the character of God. It is the highest argument and permanent guarantee for the fulfilment of every prophecy respecting the church and the world, and the performance of every promise made to Jesus Christ, as Mediator of the New Covenant. It is the standard of final appeal in all cases of doubt; the basis of spiritual worship, and the center and sum of all that is good, and great, and beautiful, and true.

LEASK'S EVIDENCES OF GRACE.

Three Religions.

Every time religion has been in question, man's regards have been directed to three objects—GOD, MAN, and the priest; and indeed there can be but three religions in the world, according as the originating power belongs to God, man, or the priest. I call that the religion of the priest, which has been continued by the priest & for the priest, and which is governed by a sacredotal caste. I call the religion of man those various systems and opinions which human nature invents for itself, and which being erected by man in his diseased state, are consequently destitute of all sanatory power. I call the religion of God the truth as it has come from God himself, and which, for its object and issue has God's glory and man's salvation. Hierarchism, or the priests religion: Christianity, or God's religion. Such are the three doctrinal systems that now divide Christendom. Now neither in Hierarchism nor in Rationalism, is there any salvation for man or for society. Christianity alone can give life to society.

D'AUBIGNE.

Scientific.

From the Christian Citizen.

GEOLOGY.

The attention recently given to the subject of geology in the United States is far greater than at any former period. The same remark will apply, indeed, to the study of mineralogy; which is intimately connected with geology, to ornithology and botany; and in some measure to conchology. Geology, or a treatise on the earth, as differing from geography, relates not so much to the appearance and form of the globe, as to the substances, of which it is composed, as sands, clays, rocks, stones, marble, lime, and minerals of all kinds. Economical geology relates to what is particularly useful and beneficial; scientific geology, more to what is remarkable & curious, and which may serve to throw light on the causes and manner of the present formation of the earth.

It is generally known, probably, that there are two theories respecting the present formation of this globe: One called the Vulcanian theory, which supposed a great subterranean fire to have been the cause of the various substances of which it consists: the other called the Neptunean system, assumes that a deluge of waters produced the appearance and the condition, as it now exists. Both these physical causes have probably had an influence in making the earth what it appears and what it is. The studious geologist and philosopher almost every where finds evidences of a deluge, which overflowed the globe, and produced great changes in the form of the surface; as to mountains, vallies, bays, rivers, &c. And marine shells and skeletons are also found far from the ocean, and deep (sometimes) in the bowels of the earth. There are also evidences of changes wrought on the surface of the earth, by volcanic fires. Some of which have become extinct or closed up. And the heat of these volcanies, no doubt, has operated partially in the formation of rocks and minerals. These, however, have been quite limited, compared to the extensive effects of a general or universal deluge. The history of the formation of our globe is so short, and given in such general terms, that it leaves much to conjecture. The account by Moses, the Jewish law-giver, is the most authentic which exists. Nor is there probable evidence that any other, or any more early and correct was ever written. The cosmogony of the most learned writers of ancient times is evidently borrowed from Moses, or is to be traced to traditions which came from the Jews. Moses probably wrote according to the tradition and belief of the patriarchs: for before him, no writer is known to have existed. To the learned men of Egypt, too, he might be indebted for part of his statement. That his history was the result of full, plenary inspiration, is exceedingly doubtful—and yet his sacred character is a sufficient guarantee for the truth of his narrative. This is a concise but natural account of the appearances and the events which occurred. The knowledge of the origin of our race might be transmitted from Adam to Noah, with few errors or mistakes. And together with the story of the deluge, would be safely handed down through a few hands to Abraham and Jacob. Shem, and probably Noah, lived to the time of Abraham. Noah lived three hundred and Shem five hundred years after the flood; and Abraham was only the tenth generation from Noah.—From Abraham to Moses, six generations; tho' the life of man was much shortened, three individuals might convey all the knowledge of the former.

But the geologist should seek for facts, and examine things as they are, without regard to any ancient theory, however respectable. Revelation and science are not opposed; but usually the latter has only served to support the former. The candid geologist will acknowledge that there are evident indications of the Mosaic deluge; and the learned student of history will also admit that the account given by Moses of the origin and early migrations & settlements of mankind are true.

Inquisitive minds will desire to learn what circumstances could have fractured rocks, rounded their fragments, and distributed them into such dissimilar situations. This is one of the first and most important lessons in geology: and the solution will be found to be the key to similar phenomena, in situations still more extraordinary, where the lower pudding stones and breccias present themselves. To trace the rounded and smooth pebbles of the sea shore to their native rock (and they are sometimes found on the dry land, far above the level of the sea and far from their original bed) it is requisite to have some slight knowledge of minerals. Rocks are nearly related (or of very similar substance;) nineteen-twentieths of minerals being composed of five substances—Silex, the constituent of flint and sand—alumine, the constituent of clay—lime, the constituent of chalk, gypsum, & all calcarious beds, magnesia & iron. Feldspar, mica, hornblende, besides being found in veins, are met with in unstratified rocks; and some knowledge of them is essential to the student. The next question will probably be, whether the whole substance of this earth is one solid mass of rocks and strata (or ledge) resembling those found near the surface. The existence of volcanic action through every part of the known world, either by the irruptions of active volcanes, or by earthquakes, is an assurance that there must be vast cavities in the globe, where igneous action is fiercely at work; and of which those volcanoes are the safety-valves. Of the extent of these cavities, and of the depth at which they are seated, some opinion may be formed, from the great distances at which particular earthquakes have been felt. That of Lisbon in 1755, not only affected the springs and lakes of every part of Europe, but was sensibly felt in North America. That of New Madrid (in Mexico) in 1811, shook the valley of the Mississippi for several hundred miles. "When we are told, that the crust of the earth is composed of a series of rocky beds, from the inferior granite up to the uppermost tertiary bed, lying above the chalk; and all being more than a hundred in number, differing from each other, in many particulars, both as to the relative proportion of the simple minerals of which they are composed, and the organic bodies imbedded in them; we are at first incredulous, because our own observation shows that the tops of the highest mountains and the beds of the lowest surfaces, are both formed of granite or gneiss, or slate, the lowest order of rocks, we are acquainted with. Another step or two, and our eyes begin to open; and we are led to perceive, that these mountains have once existed at lower levels, and that they have been forced up thro' the superincumbent formations, by the expansive power struggling in the bowels of the earth. We thus become acquainted with the existence of a power capable of the mightiest mechanical exertions. Wherever volcanic waters are, there we find calcareous and other mineral substances; and under circumstances warranting the opinion, that they have at all times derived their origin from the central and unsearchable parts of the globe. When we look, too, at the great extent of the calcareous formations, (especially the transition and carbonated limestones,) found in almost every part of the globe, and analogous in geological position, in mineral composition, in organic substances—we can conceive (at least) of a source whence they may have been derived, and which was in operation upon a mightier scale, in ancient periods, than at the present time. And from what other quarter, it may be asked, could they be derived? When we see the gneiss uniformly, in the most distant parts of the earth, superimposed on the granite, the calcareous beds always lying above the gneiss, and the rocks of the series invariably following each other, in an order as regular as that of the letters in the alphabet, we cannot but think of this constancy of succession, as the rusult of the law of the structure of our planet—as being part of a great design, appropriate to the developement of a great end."

TWO YOUNG MEN DROWNED.—Samuel O. Merwin and Samuel W. Platt, two young men of Milford, Connecticut, went out into the Sound in a sail-boat to shoot ducks last Thursday. Nothing was heard of them again till Saturday evening, when the boat was picked up six miles below New Haven, nearly filled with water, with masts, sails, &c., all gone, and the dead body of Platt lying in the bottom. The boat is supposed to have been overturned, Merwin drowned, and Platt, after succeeding in righting the vessel, to have died from hunger, exposure and fatigue. The deceased were about twenty years of age, of very respectable families, and correct deportment. [Springfield Republican.

At Mansfield, the other day, a young woman lost an eye, in consequence of its being struck by an apple which was thrown at her in joke.

Miscellaneous.

The Rev. Mr. Simeon and the Cause of Israel.

"K. C., Allg. 9, 1847.

"MY BELOVED BROTHER:—... You will be glad to hear that the London Jews' Society, which has rather languished since it came under the exclusive care of the Established Church, is reviving, both shooting its roots downwards, and spreading its branches upward. This day, this very hour, whilst I am writing this, are missionaries (if I may so call them) going on board a packet at Harwich, to proceed through Holland and Prussia to Petersburgh, in order to explore the state of the Jews, and spread among them the Hebrew New Testament; (which is finished to the end of the Hebrews; and will be wholly finished in two months,) and to ascertain what opportunities may offer for establishing missions among them. The persons going are Mr. Way, of Stansted Park; now ordained a priest; Mr. Nehemiah Solomon, a Polish Jew, converted to Christianity, and ordained a deacon in the Church of England; and Sultan Kategarry, (a converted Mahometan from near Astracan, sent over hither by the Emperor of Russia, to be educated at his expense,) and Mr.—, who was of St. John's not long after your time. We all met at Colchester, whence I am just returned this day, and had such another parting yesterday as once took place at Miletus.

"What stay they will make I do not know; but it is probable they will be absent a year, as it is their contemplation not only to go to Petersburgh and Warsaw, but to be at Jerusalem at Easter. The state of the Jews, in Russia and Poland is very encouraging. Very many are anxious to have the New Testament in Hebrew: and if the Jews (two millions of whom are in the Russian empire,) can be furnished with that, there is reason to hope that many will find it the power of God to the salvation of their souls. The whole go at the sole expense of Mr. Way."

"K. C. Camb., Dec. 24, 1847.

"MY BELOVED BROTHER:—... Now let me tell you a little about myself. My strength, through the goodness of God, has rather increased, and I have, during the months of September and October, taken a very extensive tour of about eight hundred miles, with Mr. Marsh and Mr. Hawtrey, for the Jews' Society. At Norwich the Bishop gave us his countenance, and the speech I delivered there, I printed, and it is now circulating throughout the United Kingdom. I have sent a few to you; but I hope you will receive many more from Mr. Hawtrey. It will go to Madras and Bombay, and be extensively circulated in America also. Through the mercy of God it has removed to a great extent the (too just) prejudices which had arisen in the public mind against the Society; and we hope the Society will flourish, and be made a blessing to the whole Jewish people. If my life be spared till next June, we shall extend our Journey to Edinburgh and Glasgow.

"We have great reason to think that the Hebrew Testament is doing good among the Jews in Poland and Germany. The fields there seem white, ready to the harvest. The Jews abroad are of a different cast and complexion from the poor sordid people in England. We are going, at private expense, to take a chapel at Amsterdam and send a chaplain there. In that city are thirty thousand Jews. In less than a week the thing will be done: and if it succeed so as to promise well, we shall, after two years of trial, bring it before the public. But till the experiment has been fully tried, the public will not be burdened with one shilling expense about it. I have a similar plan for Hamburgh; only, if I succeed there, it will be without any expense; there being already the train completely laid, and nothing remaining but to apply the port feu to it."

We wish our own friends here to mark what Mr. S. says of the character of the Jews in England. One of the greatest difficulties of the work in the United States is indicated in those few words.—Jewish Chronicle.

From the American Messenger.

Put down that Novel.

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL! It is a wonder that you ever took it up! The world is full of good books; why, then, occupy yourself with the indifferent and bad? It is full of good books; history, biography, travels, the writings of wise and good men, and above all, the inspired word of God. Why, then, be satisfied with fiction, when on every side surrounded with reality? Why exhaust your intellect on trifles, when you might be enlarging and enriching it by truth? Why feed on chaff, when the wheat is before you? Why gather sand, when you might be treasuring up gold!

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL! It is wasting your time. Every moment of that time is precious. At most, you have none to spare; you may have but very little; and for all of it you are soon to give account. This very hour you are misspending—wasting—dreaming it away over the pages of romance, when you might be improving it to useful ends, in doing good, obtaining important knowledge, becoming wiser, happier, better.—Rather, then, be redeeming your time, than thus idly and sinfully wasting it.

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL? It is perverting your taste! Its style is swelling and unchaste; its descriptions exaggerated; its characters unnatural and overdrawn; its sentiment mawkish and affected; its joys and sorrows only imaginary and ideal. It is a misnomer to call such productions "works of taste;" a libel on the name to pretend they belong to "polite literature." If they shine it is only "as the rotten log, or putrescent carcase, which is phosphorescent because decaying; if brilliant, it is only as the will-o'-the-wisp, which is caused by impure and fetid gases." There is no surer poison for a correct and cultivated taste, than the habit of novel-reading.

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL! It is giving you false views of life! Its scenes are fanciful; its characters unreal; its circumstances and events such as never did, and never will occur. Believe in the reality of its pictures, rely on the impressions of its pages, and you will be utterly unfitted for the world as it is—for the sober, and, much more, the stern realities of actual life. Its cares will seem burdensome; its joys meagre and unsatisfying; its business drudging and tedious; its duties a trial, and its trials impossible to be borne. If a student, it will make you less diligent in your studies; if in business, less faithful to the desk or counter; if a parent, less interested in your family, and less attentive to their wants; if a son daughter, brother, or sister, less cheerful in the discharge of relative duties, less inclined to concecrate your thoughts, affections, and sympathies to making your home happy, and more ready to waste them all on ideal beings and imaginary sufferings. Only become, or continue to be a "novel reader," and, living in an unreal and romantic world, you will soon have no taste or fitness for this.

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL! It is endangering your morals! Even if of the least objectionable class the English or the Scotch novel, it too often makes light of the social and conjugal virtues, smiles at profaneness, and sets forth its hero as a gambler or debauchee. And if of the French or Italian school, it is thick sown with the seeds of licentiousness, robbery, arson, piracy, or midnight assassination. Like the pestilence, it taints with every touch—alluring to vice here, and hell hereafter. Go on reading it, and, like Spencer, you may end your career at the yard-arm; or, like the wretched Myers—unworthy of the name of woman—be found unfaithful to every conjugal and parental tie, and adulteress in heart, if not in life.

PUT DOWN THAT NOVEL! It may ruin your soul! Almost to a certainty it will give you a distaste for the Bible and self-examination, an aversion to prayer and all serious thought. The simple and touching narratives of the New Testament will have no charm for the morbid taste you are cultivating; the story of the cross will seem insipid and tame, compared with the high-wrought scenes to which you have long been accustomed. And turning away from these, your heart will be hardened, your conscience seared, your life careless, your heedlessness unbroken. God and his claims will be unheeded, and death and judgment and eternity forgotten. Carried away by the passionate love of fiction, you may be steeled against the power of divine truth; and, disregarding that truth, your soul will be lost! And the summing up of your sad history may all be written in the mournful sentence, "THE NOVEL-READER IN PERDITION!" T. E.

From the Boston Olive Branch.

"Written in Great Haste."

We not unfrequently receive articles for publication in the Olive Branch, to which is attached by the writers, by way of apology for defects which they suppose may be discovered in them, these very comforting words: 'Written in great haste.' But what do these authors mean?—If the communications are what they ought to be, we surely care not how much haste they were written in. But if they are not what they ought to be, what right have they to impose upon us with crude matter, written in haste, and requiring more time to correct than it would to write the articles 'out of whole cloth?' We like to receive communications from our correspondents, and we do not expect, by any means, that all articles will be fully prepared for the press; for every one that can write a useful article is not able to furnish perfectly finished composition. And when they do the best they can, we are very willing to fit their articles for the press. But we insist upon it, they have no business to send us a bundle of blunders and imperfections, which they wish us to fit up, and then tell us 'they were written in haste!' But who wishes them to write in such great haste? Not we, surely. Let them take time,—as much time as they want, and do the best they can. Then we will freely knock off excressences and smooth their surfaces. But we are afraid there is sometimes a little pride in these statements of 'haste.' Do not some, after they have done the best they can, say they have written in haste, to make others think they could do better if they had time? We do not say this is the case, perhaps it is not so. But at any rate it is neither a compliment nor a benefit to us to have our correspondents hurry their communications. They had better take more time—and make them shorter.

From the American Messenger.

History.

A good writer says, "People will not look forwards to posterity, who never look back to their ancestors." The great difference between savage and civilized nations is this: one has no history, which can instruct them; the other has lessons in the past, which must lift up their minds at least on some occasions. It was the answer of one of ignoble birth, and of more ignoble habits, "Why should I do any thing for posterity? posterity has never done any thing for me;" and he held fast his purse. Family histories, not intended for publication, are eminently useful, when well-written. There should be more of them. The history of particular enterprises, churches, towns, and states comes next. Then the history of our country.

The difficulty is, we read history too much as atheists do. God is not all our thoughts. We do not see his hand in every thing. "Whoso is wise, and will observe these things, even he shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord." A history of the American Revolution, deeply imbued with a religious spirit, taking notice of the serious character of most of the actors in that drama, and celebrating the wonderful interpositions of God, would, if well-written, be eminently useful. It would ennoble many a mind, awaken many a song of praise, and prepare the national mind and heart for great deeds, and a noble imitation of the virtues of the mighty dead.

R.

RAILWAYS.—The Cincinnati Gazette of the 22d inst., says:

We understand that arrangements have been made, not only to complete, at the earliest period, the Mad River road to Springfield, but to continue it to Dayton. This is now regarded as a "fixed fact."

The survey of the road to Hamilton, is about being completed, and it will be put under contract as soon as the right of way is relinquished.

The Legislature of New York has again refused to abolish capital punishment in that State.

DIED WITH EXULTATION.—An old man named Simmons, died recently at Ward's Island, New York, where he had been living under the charge of the commissioner of emigration, and had not been very well, but was improving. He had a daughter residing at Wisconsin, and his son had made arrangements to take him there, and was informing the old man. He appeared to be highly excited with joy, and soon after laid down on his bed where he was shortly afterwards found dead.

A BOAT UPSET AND THREE MEN DROWNED.—The schooner Mayflower, Capt. Hupper, from Thomaston, bound to York river, with an extra number of hands, to be employed in cutting wood having put into Hampton Roads, eleven of the hands left her on Friday morning, in a sailboat, to go up to Norfolk, but had not proceeded far when the boat was capsized by the wind, which was blowing heavily at the time, and three of the men were drowned, viz:—Isaac Atley, of St. George, Me; James Winkpaugh, of Warren Me., and Moses Lawrence, of do do. The survivors were picked up by the surrounding vessels, and the bodies of their unfortunate companions were recovered by dragging.

The highest shot tower in the world is the Merchant's Tower, in Pittsburgh, being 250 feet 1 foot higher than that of Vallack Carinthia.

Mr. Longworth, of Cincinati, has made from his last season's vintage of Catawba Grapes 6000 bottles of Champaigne, which promises to be of superior quality.

Partridges are so abundant in Iowa that one individual at Burlington last year took 13,820 of them, the year before 9,0 00, and this fall expects to take 10,000.

Advertisements.

Notice.—At our instance, an Attachment was this day issued, by Wm. H. Moore, a Justice of the Peace, of Springfield township, Muskingum co., Ohio, against the effects of Henson Bugley, a non-resident of said county, dated this 19th day of Oct., 1847.

LARGE, BOATMAN, & Co.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH.

For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT

To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday School Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

Road Notice.—Notice is hereby given that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, at their December session, praying for the location of a county road, commencing at a white-oak tree, near the east end of George M'Crooks' barn, on the county road leading from the falls of Licking to Crooks Bridge, known by the name of the "Dillon Road," running from thence a South-East direction, passing over lands owned by Robert Allen and George W. Rankin, to intersect the Zanesville and Maysville Turnpike near the Presbyterian Meeting House, known by the name of the Newton Church; the said Road to be laid on the same ground where there is now a Township road in use or as near as good ground can be had.

Newton Township, Oct. 30th, 1847.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M..A

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS.☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS, designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol. Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

---

000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES, ILLUSTRATIONS, BIOGRAPHIES, DOMESTIC DUTIES, PARENTAL RELATIONS, MISSIONS, BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES, TEMPERANCE, DUTIES OF CHILDREN, PRAYER, NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary, Bible Geography, Teacher taught, Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols, Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols, Union Questions, 12 vols. &.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Bhildren of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exslusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered in the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools.

With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered. $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	-	3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st

With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50

Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.

NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.

Mar. '97 '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 8. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, NOVEMBER 25, 1847. WHOLE NO. 424.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A FATHER AT THE GRAVE OF HIS CHILDREN.

Stranger! tread softly o'er that spot,
For 'tis the silent resting place of one,
Our hearts held dear in life. 'Tis Willey's Grave!
Enshrined within its narrow confines,
Lies the sweet form of a departed one—
The object of a father's love,
A mother's tender care!

Around that dear child,
Our hearts, in life, clung fondly, and in death
Can we forget him? Can we forget that darling boy,
As daily he come prattling home from school,
In the full glow of health and love,
And on his mother's breast would lean his head
And tell his little wants, while sparkling from his eyes
His soul would look affectionately, fondly?
No stranger, no!
While life's pulsations throb within our heart,
While through our veins, life's fickle current flows,
We never, never can forget him.
Ah no!

We never can forget the sweet expression
Of his laughing eyes, which often shed the tears [old;
Of sympathy at other's woe. Tho' not yet eight years
Though he was yet in childhood's morning hours
I've often seen the sympathetic tear course down
His tender cheek. Ah no! no never can forget
His thousand little pranks, happy smiles,
His merry laugh that echoed through the house,
And many a little sweetly—winning way
Which but a parent feels and knows.
A month has since gone by
Since in his last dress we laid him here
Beside his little brother Alfred, and yet
It seems a year! See that is Alfred's Grave
And this is Willey's!

Four times has autumn
Cast his blighted leaves upon the grave of Alfred,
And still he sleeps!
As oft has youthful spring-time come with joy,
With sunny skies, and warm refreshing showers,
To bless the earth with hopes of fruitful seasons,
And still he slumbers here! And now in tears,
We have lain his brother Willy by his side.
Can it be so! Oh! stranger can it be
That we will never, never see them more
This side eternity? Ah can it be that in this world
We ne'er shall look upon their face again?
Ah yes they've gone from us,
And left a gloomy world of sorrow far behind,
Their pains and sufferings here are at an end,
They'll never feel the bitter pangs of grief,
Or ever mourn, like we a sad bereavement.

Ah! I have often wished
That 'twere with us as 'twas in days gone by,
When we had all our dear ones prattling round us.
Those were the sunny hours that shone upon our pathway!
But death has entered, and borne off in triumph
Two of our sweetest lambs.
Dost wonder that we weep at the remembrance
Of days gone by, days that never can return?
See! sparkling in the early morning rays
The pearly dew drops shine, that even each blade of grass
That grows upon their graves, is shedding tears for them!

Hark! the soft autumnal breeze
That flits and plays around their silent beds
Like me, is sighing too!
Thus stranger, link by link,
The chain that binds us to the world is broken.
Thus all the joys of earth, like shadows down the dale
Are passing swiftly by. The pleasures of this life
Are bubbles floating on the stream of time.

Pittsburgh, October 1847. W. R.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SERMON,

PREACHED AT ELDERSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA;

BY REV. WM. REEVES.

[Published by request of a public meeting.]

Philipians iv: 3. And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel.

(Continued.)

Prop. vi. Female preachers are as manifestly called of God to the work of the ministry, as male preachers.

Much has been said and written upon the subject of a special call to preach the Gospel. What are usually denominated the orthodox churches, have generally demanded of a candidate for ordination, some evidences of his call to the office he seeks to fill. Here we have no dispute. Neither are we called upon in this instance, to discuss so much the constituents of a divine call to the sacred office, as to shew that whatever may be comprehended in the call, women can lay as clear a claim to it as men. If recollection can be safely relied on, in the early history of Methodism, when the Lord poured out his Spirit in so remarkable a manner, and many souls were suddenly and powerfully converted to God, the genuineness of the work was doubted by many dignitaries of the church. And on one occasion, a learned diocesan of the State Establishment, in an interview with the Rev. Charles Wesley, was disposed to dispute the point with him, when with his usual sagacity and courage, he demanded of the bishop the presentment of any authorized criterion of a genuine work of grace, & by that he was willing the question should be tested. And we are equally willing to subject the question of a providential or divine call of women to preach the Gospel, to any legitimate test. And if the very same evidences cannot be advanced to support the call of one sex, as well as the other, we ought not to believe in it. But on the other hand, if the very same evidences can be, and are advanced, ought we not to believe that they are equally called of God? All we ask is, that the claims of both be put into the same balances.

Rev. Charles Buck, in his Theological Dictionary, has probably given as concise and candid a description of a call to the ministry, as any other we could introduce. He defines a "Ministerial Call" to be "a term used to denote that right or authority which a person receives to preach the Gospel." And after dividing the question, says, "The following things seem essential to a divine call: 1. a holy, blameless life.—2. An ardent and constant inclination and zeal to do good.—3. Abilities suited to the work: such as knowledge, aptness to teach, courage, &c.—4. An opportunity afforded in Providence to be useful." Now if these "things" comprise the essential attributes of a "divine call," who will dispute their possession by some women, as well as men? Let us look at them separately.—"1. A holy, blameless life." Will any person dispute, that women may be, and are, as pious and exemplary as men? According to Dr. Dwight, women have "oftener become good" than men. And is it not undeniably true? "2 An ardent and constant inclination and zeal to do good." Is this not experienced and evidenced by women as well as men? Let their own memoirs and diarys declare. "3. Abilities suitable to the work: such as knowledge, aptness to teach, courage, &c." After what has been written on the previous proposition, on the "talents," &c. of women, to resume the subject here would, we think, be superfluous. And if any one of these qualifications should be denied to be possessed by women, it would probably be that of "courage." But even this, the writer has known some women to possess to a remarkable degree. Indeed it has frequently been strikingly exemplified by female missionaries, both at home and abroad. They have not unfrequently been foremost to face danger, and when male ministers have shrunk with fear. Also before popular and august assemblies, often have they suffered less trepidation than ministers of the other sex, as our own eyes have seen. And these women, naturally the most modest and retiring. Fully convinced themselves of their call to the work, and possessing "an ardent and constant inclination to do good," at the same time feeling, their own insufficiency, they have cried to the Lord for help, and, depending upon him for assistance, calmly dismissed all fear of man. In the days of Sampson, see the fear of Manoah, and the fortitude of his wife! Behold also in the days of the Savior, the weakness of man, and the strength of woman! How strikingly was that exemplified during the trial and crucifixion of the Redeemer.—Peter in the hall, and Mary at the cross! What cowardice and inconstancy appeared in the conduct of the apostle; and how conspiciously did "courage" and "constancy" shine in the character of this female follower of the Lamb! Celebrating these noble virtues in woman, as distinguished above those of the other sex among the disciples at the crucifixion, the poet beautifully and truthfully sings:—

"Not she with trait'rous kiss her Savior stung;
Not she denied him with unholy tongue;
She, while Apostles shrank, could danger brave,
Last at his cross, and earliest at his grave."

And touching the last item, viz: "an opportunity afforded in Providence to be useful," proof, it is deemed, would be useless, as probably, there is no person will dispute the point.

To the above four elements of a divine call, as furnished by Mr. Buck, and probably embodying the sentiments of the Christian church generally, some few persons might wish to add, one more—that of success. And we have no objection to the addition. At the same time it may be doubted, whether at all times, apparent success in preaching the Gospel, is a conclusive evidence that the proclaimer is especially called of God to the sacred office. But if this point be urged, we have no fear of the issue. For as far as success can be ascertained by known facts, we may boldly challenge a comparison, with any given number of each class of evangelists. In the published testimonies of the labors of hundreds of these 'handmaids' of the Lord, written, too, often, by eminent male ministers, their superior and extraordinary success has been the 'crown of their rejoicing,' and by some considered, the chief and conclusive evidence of their call to the work. As a specimen, Rev. John Stamp says, respecting one among the many, whose pulpit labors have been crowned with great success, (and with whom the writer is personally acquainted,) 'some years since, a Miss Ann Corey, a preacher in that connexion—(the Bible Christian, in England,) visited different parts of Kent, and God slew sinners by heaps under her ministry!" yet that author does not rely upon the circumstance of success, chiefly for evidence of their call of God. For after enumerating many more of different denominations, he remarks, "I do not mean to say that souls being converted under them is a direct proof that God has called them to the ministry. But I think it is a very strong presumptive proof: When the great Head of the Church crowns the labors of men, it is often appealed to as a proof on the subject; and where can we find six men who had more souls saved under them, than Mesdames Fletcher, Cutler, Mortimer, Crossley, Mallett, and Harrison, for the time they labored?"

Let us hear another ministerial author on the subject of a 'call to preach the Gospel.' And one of no mean standing, in one of the most respectable and useful churches in Christendom. We refer to Rev. Gardiner Spring, of the Presbyterian Church, and "pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, in the city of New York." In his "Discourse" entitled "The Savior's Presence with his Ministers," "delivered before the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, at the opening of their Session at Louisville, Kentucky, in May, 1844," he speaks of this divine call. And, though more diffusely expressed, is similar in sentiment to Mr. Buck. He says, "In the third place, this promise ["Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world"] is made to those who are themselves persuaded, that God, by his Spirit and providence, calls them to the sacred office." And what but this confident 'persuation' in 'themselves' that 'God by his Spirit and providence, calls them to the sacred office,' can induce timid and delicate females to leave the comforts of home, and encounter the scoffs of opponents, in addition to all the common conflicts incident to the life of a missionary,—whether at home or abroad? These 'handmaids' of the Lord, have generally met with great opposition, and endured bitter obloquy, from those who ought to have been their first and warmest friends; but the love of Christ constraining them, they have persevered, and by the Spirit of the Lord, have been marvellously successful." Mr. Spring farther says, that a "minister must have a desire for the office, and an obvious leaning and tendency of mind and heart towards it, as his own chosen allotment, and the way in which, of all others, he would be gratified to consecrate his services to his divine Master. He must have the deliberate and solemn conviction, that it is his duty to offer himself for this high and delightful service; that he would commit sin in not doing so; and that 'wo is it unto him, if he preach not the Gospel.' Here is 'the strength of the call to the sacred office.' According to this definition of a 'divine call' to preach the Gospel, let the question of the claims of women to the work, be settled. If they have not experienced as deep a conviction, that it is their 'duty' to preach, as men, and that they 'would commit sin in not doing so,' decide against them. But if they have, who dare forbid it? If their hearts do not as tenderly feel for sinners, as men's, we yield the point. In a word, if they do not actually experience the full weight of that 'wo is unto me, if I preach not the Gospel,' let their claim to a divine call to the office, be relinquished for ever. But if they do; and we have indisputable evidence of the fact, we ask in the fear of the Lord, if they ought not to receive our help and not our hindrance?

Who can read the experience of those holy women in the days of Wesley, Fletcher, and Bramwell, and not be convinced that God was with them, and that He had a work for them to do in the vineyard,—'soul saving' work! And many other hundreds in different denominations. See the Magazines of the Primitive Methodists, Bible Christians, Wesleyan Methodist Association, &c., &c., in England.

As a specimen experience, of preaching women, among the Primitive Methodists, taken from one of their Magazines, by the author of the 'Female Advocate,' we cite the following passage. 'One of these when dying, said, 'Various have been the opinions of my friends and others respecting my calling sinners to repentance; but God is my witness, I have done it to his glory: the day of doom will make it plain and clear to the three worlds, that I did right by obeying the heavenly call; and the only thorn in my pillow is, that I listened so long to my mistaken friends, when souls were sinking to hell by millions. Sisters, sisters, sisters, obey the voice of God; where he appoints, there go; if he approves, no matter who condemns.' She then shouted to her husband, 'My dear, I preach to all, and cry in death, Behold, behold, the Lamb!' She said to a sister in the ministry, 'Span your arms of faith around blood-bought souls, and bind them to the cross. Tell Heaven, earth, and hell, you will have souls,' &c. Volumes of similar sentiments, and holy aspirations, from hundreds of female ministers, could be produced. So that we are driven to this dielemma, either to believe the testimony, that women as well as men are called of God to preach the Gospel, or impiously to deny that such strong and clear indications of the Spirit of God, are genuine, merely because they are experienced by females. But is it not unjust, unchristian, and cruel, as many have done, to scorn and deride those tender spiritual sensibilities, as the offspring of fanaticism and delusion, when felt by females; but respect, admire, and reverence them, as divine, when experienced by males! Most of all, those men ministers, who hallow them in their own hearts, but despise and denounce them, when they exist in the heart of a woman!

Finally, if as Rev. Mr. Spring says, in these inward convictions and sensations of 'duty,' and 'wo unto him, if he preach not the Gospel:'—If 'here is the strength of the call to the sacred office,' how is it that these feelings afford evident 'strength' sufficient to induce belief, that the man who experiences them is 'called of God to the sacred office;' but the woman who experiences them is not? In one sex they are genuine, in the other counterfeit! In a man, they evidence a 'divine call;' in a woman, that she is deluded! Such is the logic, and such is the divinity of opposers of female preaching! Reader, what say you?—A Presbyterian minister once, in a desultory discussion with the writer, rather than admit that women have a right to preach, when called of God to the work, denied positively, that either men or women, have such special 'calls of God' in our day! What will not some men do, rather than admit the obvious fact, that women have a right to preach.—But, thank the Lord, all the 'sons' of Levi are not opposed to those 'daughters' upon whom the Spirit is poured from on high,—as 'helpers' in the good work. For many, and of the most celebrated clergymen of their respective churches, have given their decided approbation of it, and conviction that many of them as are obviously called of God to the work as themselves. And it is not a rare occurrence, for a clergyman, who, perhaps chiefly from curiosity, has been drawn to hear a female proclaimer of salvation to sinners, despite former prejudices, to exclaim, 'well! I believe that woman is called to preach the Gospel!' Hearing for themselves, and witnessing the signal success which has often attended their labors, has convinced many men of the truth of our proposition.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Ministerial.

Ministers Should be Students for Life

Nor can a mind continue well furnished without continued study. Our collegiate and theological courses are perhaps sufficient, by way of professional preparation. But in them we attain only the rudiments. Our acquisitions are our capital, which must be constantly increased, to meet increasing wants. Whoever expends upon it, in neglect of all accumulations, will soon become an intellectual bankrupt, And here with all deference we would start an inquiry as to the cause of the prevailing mania in congregations for young ministers. Why are so many old ministers turned out of their pulpits to get their living by the road-side, or even not get it in their profession at all? Is it because they have less wisdom, less piety, less information than their young brethren? Certainly not! It is because, as Sampson lost his strength with his hair, men loose their power of efficient speech, as their locks fall off or begin to change color? Why, who is the genius of eloquence in Homer? It is the Pylian sage, the patriarch of three generations—

"Experience Nestor, in persuasion skilled,
Words sweet as honey from his lips distilled."

Who is the "old man eloquent" of the American Congress? Who but a statesman of almost four score—a man, who, if he had been the pastor of a country church, ought, according to the natural course of things, to have been superanuated and laid aside twenty years ago. The stars of both the American and British Senates, are nearly all venerable for years. And no person has yet been thought worthy of the Presidency of the U. States, the most responsible office in the world, till had attained the experience of an aged man. Why then, is this general desire to exchange old men for the young ones in the pulpit? Among other reasons, may not this be one? Amidst the labors of the ministerial profession, in the constant interruptions to which it is exposed, in the severe draughts which are continually made upon the pastor's spirits, is not study too much neglected? Are not the old acquaintances if we may whisper such a question among ministers, too often brought forward? the barrel, too often unturned?—the yellow, blotted manuscript too frequently exposed? Or are not the same generalities, though on fresh paper, too often repeated? We know the ready apology, and it has weight. In the multiplicity and pressure of duties, there is not time for study. But may we not as well reverse the position, and say, in the absolute necessity for study there is not time for so many miscellaneous avocations? Why should study, so indispensable to success, be placed last in the catalogue of our employments? Ought not this to be a fixed principle with every settled clergyman, that the most sacred purpose for which time is given, next to actual preaching and the cure of souls, is study? 'Give thyself to reading,' said Paul to Timothy. 'Neglect not the gift that is in thee. Meditate on these things, give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all.' We do seriously advise every young minister, if he would give the pulpit its true power, if he desires to retain his situation, to let study be the last duty which he neglects. In addition to some general knowledge of the current literature, by which he acquires a perception of the present modes of thought, & the condition of the popular mind, let him discipline his powers occasionally, at least, if not by mathematical demonstrations, by the close study of such works as Butler's Analogy, and Edwards on the Will; by reading the magnificent prose and poetry of Milton; by attention to such delineations of character as are found in Othelo and Macbeth. Let him also give some attention to the ancient classics, to those immortal works which always have been and always will be models of good composition. Let him be as deeply read as possible in the theology and in theological and general history. Above all, let him meditate upon the sacred scriptures, catch the spirit of the sweet psalmist of Israel, and rise to the sublimities of those grand old prophets, whose anthems resound like the sea. The New Testament will be the source of his authority, the chief fountain of his eloquence. The masters of christian oratory are Paul and John, and—bowing reverentially at the name—Jesus "Never man spake like this man."—Bibliotheca Sacra.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Western Christian Journal.

THE FEEJEE ISLANDS:

OR ANOTHER ARGUMENT IN FAVOR OF MODERN MISSIONS.

The Feejee group of Islands is situated in the Pacific Ocean, between 15½ and 19½ degrees, south latitude. The whole group contains 154 Islands—sixty-five of which are inhabited; the whole containing probably about 130,000 inhabitants. There is not in the whole world a more savage, ferocious, unfeeling and treacherous set of cannibals, than these Feejee Islanders.

We were reading, a few days since, in Wilke's narrative of the Exploring Expedition sent out by the U. States, in 1838, and his notice of and attempt to establish a Christian mission among them. He found on one of these islands a Mr. and Mrs. Hunt, and Mr. and Mrs. Lythe, who arrived there in August, 1839, and who, at the time of his visit, had been there nearly a year. As a specimen of the character of the people they had to deal with, and to show their prospect of success, he tells us that soon after their arrival they were informed that a great feast was about to take place.—The position of the mission house in the village was such, that Mr. Hunt witnessed, from his yard, the whole transaction. Eleven human victims, saved for the purpose from a horrible massacre that had been inflicted upon a neighboring town, were dragged along upon the ground by ropes around their necks, to the very front of the mission house, where, after the customary ceremonies were over, they were cut up and cooked, one of them only two or three yards from the fence of the mission grounds, and then devoured to glut the cannibal appetite of these brutal savages.

After all the parts but the head had been consumed, the king's son knocked at the missionary's door (which was opened by Mr. Hunt,) and demanded why their windows were closed. Mr. Hunt told him 'to keep out the sight as well as the smell of the bodies they were cooking.' The savage instantly rejoined in the presence of the missionaries' wives, that if it happened again he would knock them on the head and eat them.

'I know of no situation,' remarks Mr. Wilkes, 'so trying for ladies to live in:' and he continues, 'It is not to be supposed, under this state of things, that the success of the missionaries will be satisfactory or adequate to their exertions, or a sufficient recompense for the hardships, deprivations and struggles which they and their familes have to encounter.'

But this was the reasoning of one who estimated things after the standard of this world. He understood not the power of that faith that nerved the heart of these devoted disciples of Jesus upon this, to him, 'forlorn hope.' He knew not the promise upon which they rested, and the power of those spiritual weapons they wielded.

Wait said Judson, when he found himself in the midst of heathen ignorance, superstition & degradation, & if we live twenty years you may hear from us again. Less than ten years have already passed, and even so soon we are permited to hear again from those devoted servants of Jesus who had set themselves down in the midst of these savage cannibals of the ocean isle, for the Master's sake.

They went to work at their task, hopeless it would have been, had not God promised his word should not return unto him void. Taking up a recent number of the Western Christian Advocate, our eye rested upon an article on the present condition of the missions to the Feejee islands, under the patronage of the Wesleyans. One of the missionaries, in a recent report, says: 'It is cheering to observe that where sin has thus abounded, grace hath abounded much more. Many of the worst cannibals in the Feejee islands have been converted to God; a multitude of the common people, and some of the chiefs have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth. The New Testament is translated into one of the Feejee dialects; and before this time we may hope is printed, and the entire precious volume in the hands of both teachers and people.' Mr. Lythe, one of those of whom Wilkes speaks, giving an account of the progress of the gospel at his station, among other things mentions the recent conversion of a daughter of the king, a wife of one of the chiefs.

There has been a gracious outpouring of the Spirit at the towns of Wathewatha and Waitambu. Mary Jane, the wife of Zephania Lua, chief of Wathewathe, and daughter of the king, has been soundly converted. Immediately after the blessed change she went to the king, and besought him with filial importunity at once to embrace religion, stating that she had just now found its reality. About forty persons, mostly members, have obtained good in this revival, and several of them (I cannot speak particularly) know that they are now the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

Western Sketches.

From Sears' Magazine.

Mount Joliet.

Mr. Schoolcraft, in his travels in the central portions of the Mississippi valley, gives us an account of his visit to this place. It is a hill or mound, a few miles from Fox river, and near Lisbon, on an immense prairie. It is about 1,300 feet long, 225 broad, and 60 high; oblong at the base; and covers 500,000 square feet. It is far from any other elevation, and is conspicious from a great distance on every side, commanding views in all directions which are bounded only by the horizon. We give an extract from Mr. S.:—

"We entered the strip of woods which form a margin to the Aux Sables, one of the tributary streams of the Illinois, during the most intense heat of the day, and enjoyed its refreshing shade for a few moments. Ten miles beyond this pellucid little river, we halted, and dismounted in the plains, and made a short excursion on foot to Mount Joliet. This monumental elevation takes its name from Sieur Joliet, who was sent by M. Talon, the intendant of New France, to accompany Father Marquette, in his search of the Mississippi, in the year 1673. They entered this stream through the Wisconsin, and then followed its current. It is not certain how far they descended, but it is evident they passed the junction of the Missouri, and some assert that they went to the mouth of the Arkansas. On their return to Canada, they followed up the Illinois, and have left us the first notice of this mound, which they ascended.

"Any prominent swell in the surface of the soil would appear interesting and remarkable in so flat a country, but this would be considered a very striking object of curiosity in a region of inequalities. It is, strictly speaking, neither a mountain nor a hill, but rather a mound, and the first impression made by its regular and well-preserved outlines is that of a work of art. This alluvial structure is seated an the plains, about six hundred yards west of the present channel of the river Des Plaines, but immediately upon what appears to have been the former bank of this river. Its figure, as seen as a distance, is that of a cone truncated by a plain parallel to the base, but we find, on approaching, its base describes an ellipsis. Its height we computed to be sixty feet. Its length is about four hundred and fifty yards, and its width seventy-five yards. These measurements have relation only to the top. Its base is of course much larger. The sides have a gradual and regular slope, but the acclivity is so great that we found the ascent laborious. There are a few shrubby oak-trees on the western side; but every other part, like the plain in which it stands, is covered with grass. The materials of this extraordinary mound are, to all appearance, wholly alluvial, and not to be distinguished from those of the contiguous country from which, it would appear, they have been scooped out. It is firmly seated on a horizontal stratum of secondary limestone. The view from this eminence is charming and diversified. The forests are sufficiently near to serve as a relief to the prairies. Clumps of oaks are scattered over the country. The lake Joliet, fifteen miles long and about a quarter of a mile wide, lies in front.—There is not perhaps a more noble and picturesque spot for a private mansion in all America. Few persons will choose to pass it without devoting an hour to its examination; and few will perhaps leave it, without feeling a conviction that it is the work of human hands. It has been remarked by Dr. Beck, that this is probably the largest mound within the limits of the United States."

Growth of the West.—The following remarks on this subject were made by a former resident of the west, now established in the profession of law in Portsmouth (N. H.), at a public meeting in Boston to take measures in relation to the late Chicago convention:—

"I say you can not have been indifferent to the political strength of the west; but have you, until quite recently, comprehended the vast commercial resources of that region?

"Of these you are now compelled to take notice. Every paper that comes to us, tells of the mighty energies of the west. One speaks of a line of canal-boats fifty-three miles in length: another tells us a ship has just left Chicago, spreading its white sails to the western breeze, and that it is to find no rest for its keel until the flag of our country shall wave in the port of a foreign land; another tells us that there are at this moment ten millions of people in the great valley of the Mississippi. How can it be? we exclaim. Fifty-five years ago the first settler of Ohio (in the person of Dr. Cutler, of Beverly, Mass.) bade adieu to his friends here, to go to a place upon which at present is built Marietta, a town which is now engaged largely in shipbuilding, for the commerce of the ocean. Michigan, thirty-five years ago, had scarcely an inhabitant; now, more than three hundred thousand warm hearts are beating upon her soil; and her sons count up the profits of their ample fields in the year that is past, in eight millions of bushels of wheat. Such has been the growth of the whole west. A few years since, in a birchen canoe, I was paddled all along the shores of Wisconsin, from Chicago to Green bay—a distance of several hundred miles—seeing scarcely a white man. Last year it was my good fortune to go along the same shore, and over the same waters, and I passed the large towns of Sheboygan, Southport, and Racine; and when far off, on the waters of Lake Michigan, I beheld the city of Milwaukie, looking like a sea-sybil with its 'tiara of proud towers.' But I can not, in the brief time allowed me, describe the change that has taken place in the lakes. The traveller may leave Buffalo today, in one of the lake steamers, and in seventy-two hours the keel of his noble vessel shall scrape the golden sands of Illinois—nearly one thousand one hundred miles to the westward. His eye will have gazed upon the soil of five of the states of this Union, as well as upon the possessions of Queen Victoria.

"In 1818 appeared the first steamboat upon the lakes; now there are more than one hundred of the largest class; and the Griffin, a vessel of seventy tons, launched by the daring La Salle, in 1769, has multiplied, until now the lakes are white with sails, and literally murmur with the rush of keels. The commerce of the lakes at this time may be safely estimated as worth one hundred and fifty millions of dollars per annum, requiring the constant employment of over three thousand sailors, as brave as ever dwelt on the ocean, and who would be as efficient if summoned to the gun-deck. The cities of Detroit and Buffalo have more tons of shipping afloat than are owned in the four planting states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama; and these are but two of the seven cities along the lakes. It is estimated that there are on the western waters eight hundred and fifty steamboats, and that 13,400 persons are engaged in navigation. These are some of the random statistics that occur to me; but we must remember that the statistics of 1844 will not serve as a basis of calculation in 1847. The growth of that region far outstrips the wildest imagination of the poet, who has said:

"'A thousand years scarce serve to form a state.'

"We behold them in our day leaping from our western forests into the bosom of this confederacy, almost before we can give them a 'habitation and a name.'"

VARIETY.

Family and Social Reading.

The benefits of social reading are manifold. Pleasures shared with others, are increased by the partnership. A book is tenfold a book, when read in the company of beloved friends by the ruddy fire, on the wintry evening; and when our intellectual pleasures are bathed in domestic affection. An elegant writer commending the practice of reading aloud, says:

'Among a thousand things of making home attractive—a main point in ethics—this stands high. What is more pleasing? What more rational? What more tributary to the fund of daily talk? What more exclusive of scandal and chatter? He would be a benefactor indeed, who should devise a plan for redeeming our evenings; and rallying the young men who scatter to clubs and taverns and brawling assemblies. Such a reformer and inventor would deserve a garland of heart's-ease, from the hands of slighted woman. Families which are in a state of mutual repulsion have no evening together over books or music. The master is at his bar-room. The boys are at some public room or place of amusement. The girls are abroad in full dress. The mother sits at home, in spectacles. And the several parties straggle in, weary and sometimes surly, at such hours as suit their whim, and then only because nature demands sleep. It is well if even this, at length, is not sought away from home.

'There is a higher reason still, in favor of the practice here recommended. Written language is the vehicle of a vast body of truth relating to our spiritual and immortal part; truth which we are prone to neglect, and truth which is never without a social reference. Nowhere is the volume of holy wisdom more appropriate, then when read aloud in the household assembly; nowhere is religion more sweetly intermingled with the attachments of the heart.—Heavenly counsels are not the less impressive when conveyed by the familiar and cherished voice.

'I beg leave to add, this is a pleasure for the poor man's house; and for this I love it. The poor man, if educated, is one day almost placed on a level with the prince, in respect to the best part of literary wealth. Let him ponder the suggestion, and enjoy the privilege.—Amer. Messenger.

The Remorse of a Duelist.

A young Scotchman came to Charleston, S. C., and settled there. He gave offense to a noted duelist, and was challenged, fought and killed him. He removed afterwards to New Orleans; was engaged in successful business, and was regarded the merriest fellow about. His intimate friends thought the murder had made no impression upon him; not one of his relatives believed he cared any thing about it.

In 1834 or 35, he was engaged in large cotton speculations, News of a rise in prices reached New Orleans, soon after he had shipped a large number of bales to New York. If he could sell or make particular arrangement, he could realize a fortune. But it was nesessary to go New York.—He jumped on board a steamer, went to Montgomery, Ala., and pushed rapidly on by land for Washington City. Over excitement brought no fever, and he was oblige to stop in the interior of South Carolina.

Full fifteen years or more had elapsed since he had killed this man. For the first time, he lay on a bed of sickness. He had fever and delirium, with it. And in that delirium with terrible anguish and maniac fury, he spoke of this deed of death! It made those of us who heard him shudder as we listened! Was his laughter, all along, forced? Had his merriment been lip deep; of the intellect and not of the heart? He grew better, and his physician thought him convalescent. Now and then he would in his sleep exclaim, Take him off ane; dont tie his dead body to me. But the fever thought he would soon be well. He did grow better, but watching his opportunity, he went to a chest of drawers, as if for some clothing, stealthily took from it a razor and drew it rapidly across his throat! It was a dreadful gash that he made, and would have been fatal had not one who was near struck his elbow, as he was making an attempt upon his life!

Poor man! He knew and had known no peace since the day he killed his opponent. When he thought his end near, he made the confession: He felt, he said, as if he was a murderer, though no one charged him with the crime.

And our belief is, that no man who kills another feels thoerwise. The mark of Cain is upon him, and he sees it if no other eye does.—Louisville Examiner.

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Millsborough Pa. Nov. 17th 1847.

Br. Bassett.—Having to write to you on business I wish also to inform Br. Brown and the friends in general something of the spiritual condition of this, Brownsville circuit. Our first quarterly meeting was held in Millsborough, Oct. 17th. This was a profitable meeting to the religious part of community in this place. Love-feast on Monday was a refreshing time; the Lord was with us in very deed, and the people were made to rejoice in his love. Brothers Clawson and Gelispie were in attendance and preached with great zeal and ability. The Lord reward them for their labors of love with us. We have good congregations in general, and peace prevails among us. This is a four weeks circuit and the brethren desire an Assistant preacher which they have not got yet. Perhaps Brother Brown can supply them. I have written to him by order of the Quarterly Conference to do so. Yours in the bonds of a peaceful Gospel.

R. T. SIMONTON. Supt.

From the Methodist Protestant.

PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25th, 1847.

Br. Reese:—Having to write on business I send with it a short account of an interesting protracted meeting that has been in progress for six weeks past. A considerable number of the members have for some months past been anxiously praying for a revival of religion in our little church, and from the increasing interest in our meetings, together with other evidences of the divine favor, we concluded that our prayers were about to be answered and we should experience the refreshing from the presence of the Lord—and although not the season for protracted meetings in our city—we some weeks previous. appointed the second Sabbath of September, at which time to commence our protracted effort; and set apart the previous Friday for prayer and fasting. At the time appointed we commenced our meeting, and although weak handed as far as human aid was concerned, the Lord was with us from the very start. Our congregations were very small at first, in a short time our lecture room was crowded, the word was preached by broths. Eversole, Swentzel, Reineck, Jacob Nichels, J. Moore, Stier, J. A. Jackson and Shermer, of our own church—as well as several local preachers of the M. E. Church; it had the desired effect and was accompanied by divine power; our altar has been crowded with anxious, inquiring souls after peace and salvation—and the Lord has heard, and answered the prayers of many while others yet are seeking. May the Lord speedily set them free also. Up to this time between fifty and sixty have professed to be reclaimed or converted—and thirty-six have joined our church, all on probation, except one, with certificate. There are some ten or more that will likely to join the first opportunity. To God be all the glory—O that he would keep them all faithful to the end. The work is still going on, we intend protracting it this week, if not longer; and if any thing of interest should take place, you shall hear again from me. A number of the converts as well as those who joined are heads of families; several middle aged persons. We are enjoying greater prosperity at this time, than we have at any time since my connexion with this station and sincerely hope and pray it may continue. I conclude by asking the prayers of all who may be interested in this good work, that it may go on.

Respectfully yours,

J. R. NICHOLS,

Pastor of the Brickmaker's Station.

From the Methodist Protestant.

NEW JERSEY DISTRICT.

Egg Harbor, N. J., Oct. 19th, 1847.

Bro. Reese:—Some time ago I sent you a small note and promised that you should hear from me again. I now take my pen in hand to give you and the readers of our valuable paper in general some information respecting our Zion in this part of the work. According to appointment I entered my field of labor, and went to work the best I knew. Our congregation soon began to increase; I labored on, keeping up all my appointments punctual, until after the second quarterly meeting; the brethren appeared to be encouraged. We then concluded to have a camp-meeting: the time was fixed—September the seventeenth—the ground was prepared, and all was in order. We also prayed that the Lord would be in our midst. I called to my assistance bros. Shoch, Smith, Timberman, Vanleer and McCall. These brethren all labored with zeal and energy, & the Lord poured out his spirit in a woderful manner: the shouts of believers were heard through the entire grove, while those of mourners were numerous. The meeting continued to increase in interest until its close. The result was that about fifty found peace with God. The work has continued ever since: it has become general: the holy fire is spreading: may it continue to burn until all shall enjoy the love of God! Seventy-two have joined us since this revival commenced, and I expect many more, for the altar is crowded every night. To God be all the praise. Brethren pray for us that the Great Head of the Church may prosper his work generally in our Zion. There has been as many converted since the camp as at it, which would make one hundred. Bless the Lord, oh my soul.

I still remain your brother in the Lord,

J. N. TIMBERMAN, Supt.

From the Methodist Protestant.

ALABAMA DISTRICT.

Wilcox Co. Ala., Oct. 19th, 1847.

Br. Reese.—I commenced a protracted meeting at Mount Zion Church, ten miles from Greenville, in Butler Co., on friday before the 2d Sabbath in last month, which continued for thirteen days. There was a general waking up of the Church. Twenty-seven professed religion a number of which were young men of the highest promise, and thirty joined the Church. I have attended but few meetings which resulted in more good to our Church.

I preached in Greenville a few days since.—The Church there is still alive. It numbers near one hundred white members, who will compare in every particular with those of any other Church in the State. The Church at Mt. Zion numbers, I think, between eighty & a hundred white members, of good moral worth and about one hundred blacks.

I am now engaged in a meeting at Bethel near James Jenkins's which promises much good. A few have professed religion, and there are several penitents. Yours affectionately, Peyton S. Graves.

Death from a dissecting wound.—A young gentleman named Crawford, a son of the late Hon. W. H. Crawford, of Georgia, and a member of the Jefferson Medical School of Philadelphia, came to his death a few days ago, in that city, from the effects of a slight puncture received in one of his hands, whilst engaged in dissecting.

Conference Proceedings.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

North Illinois Conference.

The North Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church held its fourth session at Lafayette, Stark county, Illinois, commencing October 6th and closed on the 9th, A. D. 1847. It was a harmonious time and one that will long be remembered on account of the brotherly love that characterized all that were present, and the Divine blessing which was manifest.

The President being absent, P. J. Strong was elected President pro. tem., and Daniel Bagley Secretary. Conference opened by reading Scripture, and a short season of prayer. It was truly a reviving season.

The following is a list of members of Conf.

MINISTERS.	MINISTERS.
John Williamson,*	Rufus Richardson,
Abraham Woolston,*	Ezra Comly,
Edward Mercer,	Jacob Fowler,
Moses Jared,	John Brook,
P. J. Strong,	Robt. Rice,
Wm. H. Miller,*	B. C. Johnson,*
Wm. E. Martin,	G. S. Pierson,*
Daniel Bagley,	Hiram Wright,
Daniel Young,*	J. T. Nesmith,
Daniel Beeman,	Sam. Dilley,
F. N. Witherspoon,	Wm. F. West,
Wm. B. Jordan,*	——Cochran.*

Those marked thus (*) absent.

LAYMEN.	LAYMEN.
Peter Miller,	Franklin Dale,
Handy Cannon,	Jacob Miller,
Jacob Brown,	Edward Sellon,
Wilson Nichols,	John Hall,
Sam. Finch,	Vincent Bourman.

The following were received into the Conference.

J. T. Nesmith.

Samuel Dilly.

Jacob Fowler by certificate from Onondaga Conference.

B. C. Johnson by certificate from Illinois Conference.

G. S. Pierson from the Iowa Conference.

Hiram Wright by good vouchers from the Wesleyan Methodists in America.

Robert Rice by good vouchers from the M. E. Church, Iowa Conference.

The following were elected to orders and ordained at the Conference.

ELDER'S.	DEACON'S.
Jacob Fowler.	J. T. Nesmith.
Robert Rice.	Sam. Dilly.
John Brook.	Jacob Miller.
	G. D. Bromley.

LIST OF APPOINTMENTS.

P. J. STRONG, President.

Rufus Richardson, Conference Missionary.

Princeton circuit, R. Rice.
Bureau ct., J. Brook.
Fox River ct., G. S. Pierson.
Somonauk ct., F. N. Witherspoon, supt., E. Comly, ass't.
Rock River ct., D. Young.
Lafayette ct., M. Jared.
Cherry Grove ct., D. Bagley.
Honey Creek ct., Wm. E. Martin.
Canton ct., S. Dilly.
Tazwell ct., J. T. Nesmith.
Magnolia ct., Jacob Fowler.
Troy Grove mission, W. H. Miller,
Plumb Creek miss., B. C. Johnson.
Wisconsin miss., ——Cochran.
Andover miss., H. Wright.
Mason miss., D. Beeman.
Buffalo miss., To be supplied.
A. Woolston, Wm. F. West, W. B. Jordan, in the hands of the President.
John Williamson, Superannuated.
Edward Mercer, "
Isaac Edwards, Removed by certificate.
Daniel Hoover, Transferred to unstationed list.
Jesse Baker, Withdrawn under charges, but has in his possession a letter illegally obtained from the Cherry Grove circuit.

Report of Committee on Finance adopted by Conference, (no active Itinerants voting.)

In view of making some permanent arrangement for the support of our ministry, we recommend the following plan.

1st. The first quarterly Conference on each circuit or mission estimate as near as possible the ability of each class, which is expected to contribute to support the preacher or preachers, and said apportionment be handed to the respective leaders for collection.

2nd. We likewise recommend a prompt and vigorous action on the part of all stewards and leaders to provide for the temporal wants of their respective superintendants and assistants that they may be unencumbered and fully prepared, to labor efficiently in the Lord's vineyard.

Report on Slavery adopted by Conference, unanimously.

Res. 1st. "This Annual Conference does consider the voluntary enslavement of our fellow men under all circumstances sinful; we will use all lawful and scriptural means to procure its extirpation from the church and from the world: we hereby disclaim all participation in the evil of Slavery, and refuse the hand of Christian fellowship to slave-holders.

Res. 2nd. "The religion of Jesus Christ and his apostles is opposed to all oppression, hence where oppression exists there is a lack of the influence of that religion."

Res. 3d. As far as the action of this Conference is concerned the word white in the Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church is and shall be considered a dead letter, and all God's children shall stand upon the same platform irrespective of color.

The next session of Conference to be holden at Princeton, Bureau county, the first Wednesday October, 1848.

P. J. STRONG, by request of Con.

P. S. Will the Methodist Protestant please copy?

Death of a Revolutionary Patriot.—Captain Alpheus Bigelow, Sr., of Western, Middlesex county Mass., died at his residence in that town on Wednesday, 13th inst., being within one month of ninety years of age. He lived eighty-six years in the house in which he died.

The free Church of Scotland somewhat threaten to cut off all communication with the Presbyterians of the United States unless they sever their ecclesiastical connection with slave-holders.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

THURSDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 25, 1847.

Found.—By a line just received from Br. Hoagland, we learn that the lost horse has been recovered and brought home. We are very glad, and what gratifies us still more, our brother informs us that our notice in the Western Recorder, facilitated the discovery of the animal, at a place more than half way to Columbus.

HARD CASE.

Some of our readers will recollect that several months ago, we announced a discovery we had made that it is impossible to please every body. Some anti-masonic brethren ordered our paper discontinued because we had published one or more articles written by secret society men.—Afterwards several Masons talked of discontinuing, because we published some Anti-Masonic articles. Finding we could not please the folks either way, we concluded to please ourself by dispensing with the discussion, and we soon found that that course was most pleasing to the greater portion of our friends. We had, however, to lay aside several articles which had been sent us, some on each side of the question. We regretted to disoblige some of our correspondents, but it seemed best to pursue that course. Our friend, A. Cole, of Albion, Pa., for whom we had published more than for any other writer on the subject, sends us lately a severe rebuke for having discontinued the publication of his articles.—As we have paid postage on it, we feel at libery to give it a little attention. We concieve that the writer does us injustice, in more particulars than one. He makes us 'refuse to print against Masonry, because four Masons talk of withdrawing their subscription.' He adds, 'if he (the editor) does, shall the blood of the innocent be required of the watchman, because dollars and cents stand in the way?' Now, our friend C., must know that when we dismissed the controverty, we stated that we had made up our mind to do so before the Steubenvilie letter came to hand, and gave as our chief reason that we were upon the point of starting away from home, and to be absent several weeks, in attending the sessions of three Annual Conferences, and of course could not be at home to inspect the articles which might come to hand on the subject. And we at the time made a direct apology to A. C. for not publishing two additional articles received from him. As however he still complains of us, we will state how much ground he has for complaint. The articles sent by him, which we published, were so far from being prepared for the press, that we had to make from one hundred and seventy to two hundred and fifteen corrections in each of them, before handing to the compositor. This we can prove by members of our family and workmen in our office. When our brain was taxed with that service, we considered that the labor had been less to originate an article on any given subject, than to prepare such manuscript for the press. Few Printers would have taken the trouble. Well, after we have done this service for a man, patiently as possible, for several weeks, we submit whether we are entitled to his gratitude or his reproaches. He asks if we have not 'printed every thing we could rake in favor of secret societies?' and adds that 'the Sons of Temperance are still delving away in our paper.' We leave our readers to judge how much truth and how much justice there is in these imputations and sayings of A. C. As to our being influenced by dollars and cents, as our correspondent seems to believe, it is a serious matter, but we shall seriously say that though we are conscious of faults and failings for which our conscience rebukes us, we are not sensible of any compunction of conscience in reference to the case he refers to. It will not do, Brother C., to measure conscience for our neighbor. We have no doubt that our friend considers Masonry an awful thing, and that he considers it his duty to oppose it, and for ought we know, it may be none too good; yet he must excuse us if we are not yet so much impressed with its monstrosity as himself, and cannot find it our duty to go with him the length he does in its condemnation, especially whilst men equally entitled to credit say it is a good institution.

The unpublished papers of Brother C. shall be returned to him as requested, and we are sorry that it is not convenient for us to accommodate him in their publication. His paper shall also be discontinued as he requests, he having honorably paid up to this date.

Central Ohio Rail Road.—The Zanesville Courier of Friday last contains the Report of J. Knight, Esq., Engineer, who has by appointment of the Board, just completed the reconnoisance of the country between Wheeling and Zanesville, in view of describing a route for the proposed Railroad. He finds the route 'quite favorable to the object proposed.' He makes the distance by this route, from Wheeling to Zanesville, ninety miles, and from Zanesville by Newark, to Columbus, sixty miles. In all from Wheeling to Columbus, one hundred and fifty miles.

Distress in Europe.—The recent foreign arrivals bring sad details of commercial distress and prospect of famine in several countries in Europe, but especially in Great Britain. It is apprehended that Ireland will again be overwhelmed with suffering, during the approaching winter. Indications of it already appear. Besides there have been mobs, and sanguinary collisions between the people and the military. The cholera is said to be raging in Russia, and has already reached Sweden in its westward progress. Its approach is anticipated in England.

A Volcano in the U. States.—It is said, on the authority of newspapers in the state of Georgia, that on the 19th ultimo, a volcanic eruption burst from one of the high peaks of the Look-out-Mountain, attended with a violent shock.

Cambridge.—As a chronicler of passing events, we several weeks ago published a statement in reference to the disturbances connected with the removal of the 'Clarion of Freedom,' from that place. As in duty bound, we expessed our disapproval and condemnation of the riotous proceedings, said to have been enacted in the case. By private letter from Br. Z. Beatty of that place, it has been, in a very kind manner hinted to us that some of our friends there, considered our remarks rather a disparagement to the place, or its citizens. Indeed, the same has also been signified to us by one or two other brethren. Now, nothing could have been further from our intentions. We have just read over the article referred to, which appeared in our paper of Oct. 7th, and are utterly at a loss to know what expression we made which could by construction even, be viewed in that light. No. We said no harm of Cambridge. We have the highest respect and regard for many of its citizens, and cherish a most pleasing recollection of hours & days we used to enjoy there in years gone by. In the article referred to, we said. 'We are grieved that the goodly village of Cambridge has been dishonored by scenes of outrage. The friends of order there, doubtless deplore the fact. Was not this giving Cambridge our sympathies, rather than our reproaches? And indeed our friend B. declares himself 'opposed to every thing of a mobocratic nature.' And tho' he says he was named in the 'Clarion' as one who encouraged the mob, (we were not aware of this) he assures us he 'had nothing to do with it in any way whatever.' Furthermore several Cambridge friends have indicated to as that the accounts of the riot, given in the 'Clarion' are exceedingly exaggerated—that the proceedings were not so violent as therein represented. We gave the 'Clarion' as our authority, and published an extract from it. The first number we received of that paper was the first one issued after its removal from Cambridge. We are therefore unacquainted with its 'frequent attacks upon the Methodist Protestant Church, alluded to by our friend.

Progress of the Telegraph.—It is expected that the Magnetic Telegraph line will be completed to New Orleans in the course of the ensuing winter. There will then be direct communication from that city, across the entire country, quite to Quebec and Montreal! Astonishing but true. The line also extending westward has reached Vincennes, and is rapidly advancing towards St. Louis.

Annual Register.—Br. W. Reeves of Pittsburgh Station writes: "The Annual Registers have come to hand at Br. Craig's, I have received my package, and herewith send you the pay. We are much pleased with the appearance and the matter of this interesting annual. It improves."

Prices.—Flour still retails at $5 in Putnam & Zanesville. Wheat brings 90 cents. The Gazette of yesterday sets down $3 as the market price of pork.

Madame Restell.—This notorious woman, having been about three weeks under trial as an abortionist, has been duly convicted, not of manslaughter, but of misdemeanor, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

C. M. Clay.—By latest news it seems that C. M. Clay and a number of his former fellow prisoners in Mexico, are on their way home.

National Era.—This useful Anti-Slavery paper has now been published nearly one year in Washington City. Is printed on a large sheet of the first quality, in the best style. Besides the faithful discussion of the question of slavery, in which, we believe it is doing a vast amount of good in the South, it gives attention also to social and political questions of general importance, and not neglecting the interests of pure literature. Faithful reports are promised of the doings of Congress during its session. Interesting and exciting debates are expected on important questions. The Era has arrangements for interesting Foreign and Domestic Correspondence.—We are gratified to learn that though located in the midst of slavery, and conducted in a fearless but we trust prudent manner, it has during the first year of its publication, not only been tolerated but welcomed by a large portion of the community and of the press, and that its patronage has been liberal. The publisher is desirous of receiving subscriptions to commence with the approaching Congress. Edited by Dr. G. Bailey; J. G. Whittier, Corresponding Editor: L. P. Noble, publisher.

Godey's Lady's Book.—The December No. is received. It is embellished with two eloquent mezzotint engravings, The Widower, and the Widow. Also Music, two Fashion Plates, Model Cottages, &c. Mr. Godey proposes to publish a Lady's Dollar Paper, containing contributions from numerous female writers of popular talents. He will send one copy of the Lady's Book, and one of the Lady's Dollar Paper, for a year for $3. L. A. Godey, Publisher, Phil.

Thanksgiving Day.—This 25th day of November, is observed as a Day of Thanksgiving and Prayer, in the following named 18 States, and one Territory. Pleasing thought.

For November 25th:

New Hampshire,	Missouri,
Massachusetts,	New York,
Connecticut,	Maine,
Indiana,	Rhode Island,
Michigan,	Pennsylvania.
Maryland,	Ohio,
Kentucky,	Florida,
New Jersey,	Delaware,
Illinois,	Tennessee,

and Wisconsin Territory.

For December 9th.

Arkansas.

Behind the time.

"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men?"

Cumberland Presbyterian.—This excellent religious paper, we are pleased to see, has recently been improved in its mechanical appearance. By a recent statement of its Editor, Rev. Mr. Brice, we learn that it meets with encouraging success. That's right. We reckon, however, that the tobacco users will not relish all the articles which appear of late in the columns of the Presbyterian. For, several of its writers of no mean abilities, have for some time past been waging an unsparing war upon the practice. That's right, too.

Steamboat Disaster.—The Ohio Statesman has news by telegraph from Cincinnati, that the steamboats "Tempest" and "Talisman," came in collision on Wednesday night of last week, near Cape Girardeau, and that the Talisman sunk immediately in deep water. Forty lives lost.—No further particulars yet.

☞ We take the following from the last number of the Methodist Protestant, which is just received:

REV. THOMAS H. STOCKTON.

This brother passed through Baltimore on his way to Cincinnati, arriving on Wednesday, 10th instant, and leaving the next morning. He preached at Liberty Street on the evening of his arrival to a large congregation, who were thrilled with his manly, pious and over-powering eloquence. It was not our privilege to hear him, as we did not reach the city on our return from the Virginia Conference in time to attend service.—The scene of his parting, we are told, was touching in the extreme. Those who know the high estimation in which brother S. is personally held by his friends may readily imagine the painful emotions his removal is calculated to inspire.

Bro. Stockton's health is feeble. He was repeatedly interrupted during his discourse with violent paroxysms of coughing. Should we never hear his voice of eloquence again in this life, nor look upon his emaciated but impressive countenance, nor grasp his hand in fraternal sincerity, we expect to hear that voice in heaven, mingling with the shoutings of the redeemed, where we shall see alike and think alike: and where "safe from diseases and decline" his now frail and enfeebled body shall be "dressed in the vigor of immortal youth."

Since writing the above we have received the following:

Proceedings of the First Methodist Protestant Church of Philadelphia.

At a meeting of the membership of this church, held in the Lecture Room of the Chapel, on Thursday evening, November 11th, 1847, of which public notice had been given; the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted, and ordered to be published.

Preamble.

Whereas, it has pleased God by his Providence to call to another field of labor our beloved pastor, the Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, who for nearly nine years has faithfully labored in our midst, during times of pecuniary embarrassments and difficulties of the most trying character; and whereas, we entirely owe our existence as a Methodist Protestant Church, (through the blessing of God) to him, as there was no such a society in this city when he commenced his labors; and whereas, other hindrances have occurred to prevent our prosperity, among which may be mentioned the mission question, by which our membership was divided; and whereas, it becomes our duty as a church now that he has left us, publicly to express our feelings at the loss of our founder and pastor as well as to the course we intend pursuing in the future: therefore,

Resolved, That our beloved brother, Thomas H. Stockton is endeared to us by the ties of fraternal affection; & whilst we mourn the seperation from one whose whole soul was engaged in our spiritual welfare, we pray God to sanctify this exercise of his providence to our good and the furtherance of his cause, and we shall ever remember him and his family at the throne of grace, invoking the Divine blessing to follow them in all their journeyings.

Resolved, That bro. Thomas H. Stockton has faithfully and earnestly warned us by all the threatnings of Sinai, and affectionately entreated us, by all the sufferings of Calvary, to flee from the wrath to come and abide in the love of God, by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ: thus fulfilling his duty as an ambassador of his Saviour faithfully and fervently.

Resolved, That we will cherish the precepts he has so often inculcated: follow the pure Christian character he exemplified in our midst, and by the grace of God so live, that if on the shores of time we may never meet him more, we may meet him when the archangel's trump summons us to the judgment, and at the right hand of God enjoy with him the blessings of heaven.

Resolved, That we will testify our love for this Zion over which his heart no doubt yearns with the affection of a father, and whose last charge to its members was, be faithful to the Methodist Protestant cause by discountenancing all attempt to pervert it from the original design of its founder.

Resolved, That we still adhere firmly to the principle and government of the Methodist Protestant Church, and are determined to succeed or fail by them.

Resolved, That we are 'strongly attached to our mission relation,' and after years of experience, as a church, we have not the least desire, wish or intention of changing in this relation our connection to the Conference.

Resolved, That we do hereby promise to give our undivided support and co-operation to the ministerial brother who has been unanimously solicited by us to become our future pastor.

Resolved, That a copy of the above, signed by the officers of the meeting, be published in the "Methodist Protestant," and "Western Recorder," also a copy be forwarded to our late pastor, signed by all the brethren and sisters of the Church.

JOHN D. GINNODO, Chairman,

W. R. Stockton, Secretary.

Famine in Newfoundland.—The people in some parts of this Island are suffering dreadfully for want of the necessaries of life.

Shakers and Bibles.—The Boston Traveler says that the Shakers, not long since, called on the Bible Agent at Concord, N. H., (Dr. Chadburn) for four dozen Bibles. Surprised and delighted, the Agent enquired, "How is this? I thought the Shakers in Canterbury did not allow the Bible among their members." "Nay," said the Shakers, "we do now. The Millerites that joined us last fall want Sunday Schools, and Bibles to use in them. How many can thee give us?" "You are able to pay," said the Agent, "and we cannot give you all; but if you pay for three dozen, I will throw in one more." "It is well," said the Shakers. It seems that about 50 Millerites, having run through their property, went last fall to the Shakers.—Sab. Recorder.

Ecclesiastical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Conference Collections.

NO. I.

Mr. Editor: I requested Br. Burns, the secretary, to give in your paper, the action of the Muskingum Conference, at Youngstown, in relation to the Conference collections. In answer to that request he gives the following:

Br. Bassett, I furnished, at the request of Br. Springer the original and entire resolution of the Muskingum Conference touching the duty of superintendents in reference to Conference collections.

"Br. Springer offered the following resolution:"—

"Resolved that it be hereafter the duty of each superintendent of a circuit or station, to take up Conf. collections, or have it done, in the societies of their respective charges, to be brought to the Annual Conference to supply the deficiencies of its itinerant preachers, &c.; and that he be held responsible to this Annual Conference for the discharge of this duty."

After considerable discussion the above resolution was amended and passed as follows:

"Resolved that it be hereafter the duty of each superintendent of a circuit or station to arraign before the Quarterly Conference, the stewards of their respective charges, who may refuse or neglect to take up the Annual Conference collections, and that they be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of this duty."

Now, Mr. Editor, I have been more surprized at this little matter than any small occurrence that has passed under my notice lately. And I am entirely at a loss to know how to account for it. For the secretary to report my resolution to have failed, by being merged in his amendment, as he does above, I consider such an outrage upon the doings of the Conference, that I cannot consent to let it pass without notice.

In order that the reader may understand the merits of this question I will state some facts which transpired previously and at the time of the action of the Conference upon this resolution.—It is known to those conversant with the business of the Conference that a list of questions is adopted which it is made the duty of the chair to propose to the superintendents severally on the annual examination of their official characters. One of which is:—

"Have you attended to the Conference collections?" Notwithstanding the obvious necessity of prompt and persevering attention to this duty, and the injustice and inhumanity towards those preachers who travel the poor circuits and outskirts of the work, of any attempt to throw cold water on the enterprize, yet, I blush to say it, that a number of the leading preachers have interposed their influence, for several years, to shield from merited censure, such superintendents as have paid little or no attention to these Conference collections.—The chief argument offered for the protection of these delinquents, is, that the General Conference, (see 11th Ed. Dis. page 70,) "makes it the duty of the circuit stewards to take up such collections, consequently it cannot be made the duty of the superintendents." And the president of the Conference went so far as to assent, with much confidence, that an Annual Conf. could do no act to give "official character,"—that is, to prescribe official duties,—"to its members."

Up to this time we had taken but little, if any part, in this controversy; but when we saw such opposition manifested to a vital measure, and such inattention to the organic law of the church, even in high places, we could not consistently with our duty remain any longer silent. We, therefore, read, for the benefit of all concerned, from the Con. Art. VII. sec. 3. where the Annual Conference is clothed with power,—"to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the itinerant preachers and their families; to raise the amount of their salaries," &c. On the presentation of this constitutional law, the question was raised, whether the Conference had ever passed a "rule" making it the duty of superintendents to raise Conference collections, and I believe the journals were referred to; but it was stated and admitted that there was no direct "rule" upon the subject. I then offered my resolution above, grounded on the constitutional provision just quoted. My object was to put an end to the cavilings and disputations with which the Conference had been bored for the last two or three years about these Conference collections.

The proposition contained in my resolution is a plain, business, common sense proposition. Such as the Conference, by adopting the question above quoted, had been virtually acting on already for several years. It needed no amendment—no substitute—no saddle or rider—no mistification. Some seventeen years' experience had satisfied every man, who would be satisfied, that the circuit stewards could not be relied on to raise collections for the benefit of the needy itinerants. My resolution, therefore, asked the Conference, by virtue of the powers rested in their body, to make it the duty of superintendents, by a direct act, to raise such collections. They are the persons who have always attended to this duty among Methodists, from the outset of the Society. Being in the habit of speaking—always before the public, and having more influence with the people, than ordinary citizens, they are the very persons who should be charged with this duty, because none others could do it so efficiently.

Well, but it seems that my worthy brother secretary could not let the Conference act on this plain question without enlightening it with his splendid ideas. He therefore offered his resolution, above, as an amendment to my resolution. Now, bear it in mind, gentle reader, he did not offer it as a substitute—this the rules governing the deliberations of the Conference would not permit—he did not move to amend by striking out, but he simply offered his as an amendment to mine, of course I could understand him in no other way than by adding it thereto. Altho' I saw his resolution contained some nonsense; that the spirit of it was oppressive and tyranical, and that it had no more connection with mine than the poles of the earth have with each other, it containing a distinct and separate proposition, yet for reasons I can give, if necessary, I admitted his amendment, not as a substitute, but as an amendment by addition, as he never said a syllable about striking out. But little did I think when making the admission, that, because he had the power of the quill, he would drive my resolution from the sod in order to give his own child undisputed possession of the premises.—Does the worthy brother think that no body's ideas are of any importance to the world but his own?

My resolution enjoins one duty upon the sup.; the amendment of the Secretary enjoins another and different duty, if indeed duty it may be called. Or rather it attempts to enforce a duty that is already binding in the Discipline, and therefore means nothing in particular. When the question passed the Conference I had a right to expect both the resolutions, the original and the amendment, would go on the statute book and be published among the acts of the Conference. By what art of hocos pocos mine has been given the go-by I should like to know. I hope the worthy secretary may have some way of explaining this thing creditably to himself.

The secretary is the accredited officer of the Conference, his reports are official and decisive. I see no remedy in a case of this kind. And as he has seen proper to knock my rule, governing Conference collections, on the head, the mooted question, is, therefore, left still open for dispute, and the cavillers will have at least another year of grace.—Thus to corrupt the journals and actions of a deliberative body, whether it be done in willfulness or ignorance, is certainly a very vexatious matter.

I do not recollect how the secretary stated this question on its final passage, nor how he read the journals he had kept, but I do recollect, very distinctly, the nature and character of his motion. Confiding in his intelligence and integrity I was not on my guard. But he had no right to make any statement or record which was not in strict accordance with his motion. If such things as this are permitted to pass unrebuked, no difference whether they happen from inattention, or otherwise, little confidence can be placed in the reported doings of our Conferences.

Very respectively yours, &c.,

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, O., November 10th, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

BR. BASSETT: You are hereby requested to give the following resolution passed at the first quarterly Conference, Zanesville circuit, a place in your valuable paper.

Resolved, That this Conference recommend that each class on the circuit furnish themselves with a small bound blank book, wherein the members' names shall be enrolled ANNUALLY. Opposite the names four columns shall be struck off, headed 1st qr., 2d qr., 3d qr., 4th qr., these columns to contain in figures the support each member gives to the glorious Gospel of Jesus, during the currency of the year. And that these books be by the stewards (or leaders) regularly brought up and laid upon each quarterly Conference table for public examination.

I individually would suggest that each society might head their names annually with a motto of their own choosing, as a kind of voluntary by-law, provided always they select none that will come in just opposition with the fundamental articles of our church constitution, for I hold that document to be near in kin to the constitution of the United States, half a century ahead of the age. Mottos like the following might at least have the virtue of being harmless.

1st. Agreed, by voluntary consent, all who neglect class-meetings and contributions during the whole currency of the year shall not have their names enrolled again but by a vote of the society.

2d. Agreed, that our attendance upon the means of grace as well as our contributions for the support of the Gospel be publicly read from the desk whenever called for, provided ministerial delinquencies in duty be also inserted and read.

3d. Agreed, "each man shall do his duty" when senecure honors in the church are abolished, important offices in conferences receive something more than mere nominal labor, examining and stationing committees are filled with men who look at the whole and not at the unit.

4th. Agreed that the evident desire, the willing mind, the strenuous effort at Right be not only a covering but end to all strife, and have the preference to words, wealth, or wisdom amongst us.

Yours, WM. HAMILTON.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

LEVI BEARD,

Son of Mr. John Beard of this place, died November 1st, 1847, aged 7 years and 2 months.—It is a painful reflection to his school-mates, and his preceptor, that his death, is, indirectly, to be attributed to an accidental hurt received in the abdomen, while engaged at play. The injury, at first, was but trifling, but upon his taking cold, was sufficient to induce a determination to that part of the system, causing inflammation of the bowels.

His physician was enabled to arrest the disease at first, and so far restored him to health, that he returned to his school. But a relapse of the disease, soon terminated the pain of the little sufferer. I will further add, that his little school-mates listened to his funeral sermon, and followed his remains to their final resting-place. They, unanimously, request of their teacher, that he will give the book, intended as a premium to the decaased, for his good deportment in school, "to his mother; that she may keep it as a memento of her child, and, also, as a memento of their affection for their departed school-mate."

Putnam, Ohio. L.

[The above was accidentally overlooked and omitted last week.—ED.

News of the Week.

A New Republic.

The United States brig Dolphin, from Cape De Verd, brings intelligence that Liberia had declared itself an independent nation, under the name of the Republic of Liberia, and had for the security of the rights of the people, formed a constitution modeled on the constitutions of the States of this Union. The document is long—it opens with a concise historical sketch of the establishment, and condition of the seulement, and concludes with the following appeal to the nations of Christendom:

"Therefore in the name of humanity, and virtue, and religion—in the name of the Great God, our common Creator, and our common judge, we appeal to the nations of Christendom, and earnestly and respectfully ask of them that they will regard us with the sympathy and friendly consideration to which the peculiarities of our condition entitle us, and to extend to us that comity which marks the friendly intercourse of civilized and independent communities."

The bill of rights declares that all power is inherent in the people; that all men have a natural and inalienable right to worship God, after the dictates of their own conscience; that no religious test whatever shall be required as a qualification for civil office, or the exercise of civil rights; that the press shall be free to every person to examine any branch of the government; that every citizen may freely speak, write and print, on any subject, the law holding him responsible for the abuse of that liberty. The Legislative department is to consist of a Senate, and a House of Representatives.

The executive power is vested in a President, who holds office for two years. A judiciary is created, and other needful regulations instituted.

This step we consider the most important in its bearing on the future destiny of the African race of any that has yet been taken, and calls forth the sympathy and aid of the friends of humanity and the progress of the human family. If the government of this young republic is attended with success, (and virtue and intelligence will secure it,) the social, moral and religious condition of Africa will, in the course of time, undergo a complete revolution. The world will, we trust, see a Christian nation of colored people spring up in the bosom of Africa that will in the course of time, shed all the blessings of good government over that benighted continent. The independence of Liberia will give it a position among the nations that no Collonial dependence can attain. The jealousy of England, which has hitherto harrassed the colony, will be allayed, if she can forget or forgive the republican form of government. The progress of Liberia for the past few years, in wealth, power, and importance, has been truly great, as this step proves, and we look to the Republic of Liberia with more confidence to suppress the slave trade than to the combined navies now on the coast of Africa.—Cin. Com.

Great Surgical Operation.

The Ohio Statesman, of the 10th inst. contained the following announcement:

We learn that on yesterday, Dr. R Thompson, of this city, and Dr. M. Z. Krider, of Lancaster, assisted by other medical gentlemen, removed a tumor from the abdomen of a lady, near Etna, Licking county, which, independent of the fluid it contained, weighed 29½ lbs. It proved to be the whole of the liver, which had undergone degeneration, and had become filled with hydratids. Strange to say, that the woman yet lives, and to all appearances doing well! But how will she continue to live without so important an organ?

We have heard of no such case before—but these are days of wonders in science and arts.

The operation, as we understand, was undertaken at the earnest solicitation of the patient, and concurent desire of her friends.

OVERWHELMING ARGUMENT.—Dr. Lathro in one of his sermons says: "If it were true that there is no God, what evidence can the Atheist have that he shall not exist and be miserable after death? How came he to exist at all? Or if there is no cause, he may exist in another state as well as this. And if his corrupt heart and abominable works make him so unhappy here that he would rather be anihilated than run the hazard of a future existence, what hinders but he may be unhappy forever? The man, then is a fool who wishes there was no God, hoping thus to be secure from future misery, for admiting there is no God, still he may exist hereafter as well as here; if he does exist, his corruptions and vices may render him miserable eternally, as well as for the present."

Cairo.

Cairo, at the junction of the Ohio and Mississippi, although unquestionably a most favorable location for a prosperous commercial city, has, up to this time, improved but little. The land on which the town is laid out, and for many miles back, was owned by a company of speculators, and although a vast amount of money has been expended, but little has been done to guard against the overflow of the two rivers that wash its sides. The complete failure of the company is probably owing to the ignorance, and consequent mismanagement of the funds of the company. The point on which Cairo is laid out might be as readily leveed as the Lower Mississippi, and were this done, the place would be effectually guarded against inundation. In connection with building up a city on Bird's Point, as the site of Cairo was called, was a project of building a railroad from that place to Galena. A charter for this road was obtained, and operations commenced. The work already done on this road, and the land owned by the State of Illinois, pledged for its construction, are valued at $1,500,000

It is said that the company that projected these great works, and so signally failed in carrying them out has sold out to another company. If so whether the new company will be more fortunate than the old, is yet to be seen: but when we look forward to the wants, we might say the necessities of the great West, we cannot doubt but the above projects, gigantic as they are, will be carried out. English companies are certainly not the men to do it, but in time the stock will pass into the hands of American capitalists, which will ensure the success of both city and railroad. —Cin. Com.

VALUE OF THE TELEGRAPH.—On Thursday, the 30th of September, a lady who had removed from Portsmouth to Cincinnati, Ohio, being dangerously sick, expressed a desire to see her sister, resident at Portsmoth, New Hampshire. A notice was immediately sent by telegraph to Philadelphia, from thence to Boston, in season to reach Portsmouth the same evening; and the cars of the next day, Friday, bore the anxious sister on her journey to Ohio. Her sister died on the 3d, but she reached Cincinnati in season to attend her funeral. The distance is nearly a thousand miles each way. A few years since it would have required six weeks to communicate intelligence and receiv[illegible]

Bank of Wooster

Quite a sensation was produced in Cincinnati, on Saturday, by a rumor effecting the solvency of the Bank of Wooster—insomuch that some of the Banks then declined recieving the Wooster paper. The Banks of this city were telegraphed on the subject, which was the first intimation here that any suspicions existed. The Massillon Bank was enquired of by telegraph—but all was quiet then. The rumors doubtless had their origin in wantonness, malice, or some equally unworthy motive. They have failed to produce any effect here. The paper of the Wooster Bank is recieved in the Banks of Columbus, and on the streets, as usual.—O. S. Journal.

GOOD COUNSEL.—As the great Presidential campaign will soon commence,—we think it a proper time to advise the politicians to preserve a mild and gentle deportment towards their opponents. Considering these struggles only as scramble for offices—it is better to keep cool, for electioneering is pretty much a game of skill and calculation,—in which coolness and self-possession are likely to thrive the best. It is an old observation,—and we believe a true one.—that "there are many ways to kill a dog besides choaking him with butter." It is equally true that there are many ways to attack a political opponent without overwhelming him with personal abuse. The lie may be given in such elegant forms that the party implicated will rather feel himself complimented than otherwise;—and yet the effect of the charge will be quite as potent as if the coarsest language were used. So instead of using the word scoundrel you way, by a neat periphrasis, convey the same idea without offence to ears of the most refined delicacy.

In disputes between political editors, the terms liar, scoundrel, rogue, notorious, &c., may often be applicable enough, but let it be remembered that the use of such words is more digracefui than the application. Political editors pride themselves on proving this thing or that—if they should take some pains to prove themselves gentlemen, we might admire their logic and rhetoric much more than we do at present.—Scott's Weekly Paper.

THE LAKE CITY.—A recent census, taken for school purposes by the City Authorities of Cleveland, fixes the population at "Twelve Thousand Seven Hundred and Sixty Nine," the same showing an increase of 2654 during the past year and a half.—The number of children, between the ages of 4 and 21, is 3956.

The prosperity of Cleveland is an indication of the growing wealth and increasing population of Ohio. A Lake port for the shipment of produce and for the receipt of merchandise of all kinds—her business concerns directly at least one half of the State. We trust that it will continue to increase, her borders to enlarge, until the broad and beautiful plain upon which the city is built, shall be covered far and wide with the habitations and by industry of man.

[Zanesville Courier.

SCROLL OF DEATH.—The year 1847, which is fast winging itself away in the great flight of time, has been one of the most memorable in the world's history, for the mortality which has marked its existence. The Cholera has been committing its most fearful ravages in the North of Europe, and Asia, while thousands and tens of thousands have died of famine in a nearer part of the Old World. Coming nearer home, we read frightful records of the havoc committed upon human life by the unnatural ravages of war. The slain in battle fill pages of our newspaper press, and the touch of disease has robbed life of more victims than the sword. But Death has visited the continent, and our country and neighborhood in other forms than Battle.—Upon a single spot, and that Gros Isle, below Quebec, a death roll was shown, sometime since, which extended over thirty-four feet. It has since been much lengthened, with the record of the grave, and last month numbered the names of "nine thousand persons who died of Ship Fever!" In another direction, we read a record like the following. It is an appalling evidence of the unsubstantial character of human life, and of the vanity of human wishes:—Bitts. Gazette.

The N. O. National of Oct. 22, contains a list of interments in the different Cemeteries of New Orleans and the City of Lafayette, during the great Epidemic of the present year. The total number embraced in the list, which includes all who died between the 5th of July and the 20th of October, is 2,544. The nativity of the victims was as follows: United States, 240, England, 70; Scotland 20; Ireland, 694; France, 224; Germany, 847, Prussia, 44; Spain, 9; Portugal, 3; Switzerland, 24; Italy, 12; Denmark, 11; Canada, 6; Austria, 4; Belgium, 7; Sicily, 3; Turkey, 2; Cuba, 2; Mexico, 2; Geralta, 1; Circassia, 1; Isle of man, 1; Sardinia. 1; Norway, 1; Hanover, 1; Isle of Malta, 1; West Indies, 1; Jewish Cemetery, country not known, 44; Unknown, 238. Total 2,544.

GOOD.

A daub of a man a poor miserable show of humanity, from New York—passed through our State, and received the hospitalities of some of its wealthy citizens. He thought it would please his entertainers to denounce the opponents of slavery, and exhalt the patriarchal institution.

"I am satisfied," said he, "that the slave is happy, and believe the institution, as administered here, neither harsh nor unjust. If those scoundrels"—

"Pardon me, sir," replied a slaveholder, as he interrupted him. "we want no such defence. It is enough for us that the law gives and secures us our rights, without asking FREEDOM to defend as bitter a cause as ever afflicted society or troubled man. I would give for my children's sake alone all I have, (and he spoke not without reason,) if Kentucky had been as New York is—free."

The subject was dropped. The miserable caitiff started new topics, and tried hard, we learn, to recover lost ground. He failed, of course.—Every planter felt contempt for him, and one went so far as to show it. John Randolph expressed the Southern feeling, when describing this class of Northern men, as "Spawn, sir, spawn." They are time-servers at home, and lick-spittles abroad.—Kentucky Examiner.

THE ELECTRO-MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.—The Cincinnati Atlas, in speaking of the operation of the telegraph says:—

"The question is asked by those who know something of the phenomeny of galvanism, how the circuit which the fluid is to traverse, can be formed with a single wire? The manner of this is one of the most wonderful things about the whole discovery. The return part of the circuit is made by the earth. For example, here at Cincinnati, there is a connectiod between the battery and the damp ground under the college building made mainly of gass pipes. At Philadelphia and at every office, there is a like connection. The fluid coming from Philadelphia, for instance, on the wire, passes into the earth, and by it returns to the opposite pole of the battery at Philadelphia. That it should unerringly find its way back, a distance of hundreds of miles, passing mountains and valleys, through earth, water, rocks ores and the thousand [illegible] might retard, deflect, or dissipate it, is one of those astounding facts of science which we only believe when conviction is enforced by irresistible evidence.

---

"Formerly it was deemed necessary to have a complete circuit of wire; but, by experiment, it is found that for the return half of the circuit, the earth answers as well as wires."

POPERY FOR CORN.—It appears from the reports of the Romish Society for the Propagation of the Faith, that while this country was contributing supplies to the starving Irish, the poor people of Ireland have contributed to that Society $28,000, to be spent in the spread of Romanism in this country.—Pres Herald.

FATHER MATTHEW.—This noble champion of Temperance has fixed upon the early part of next Spring as the period of his visit to this country.

Ho! from Oregon

Mr. Davenport, an adventurous youth, of Pickaway county, has recently returned from a tour to the far-off country, and is about to give his friends some account of what he saw and encountered. During the progress of his journey he wrote occasionally to his friends in Circleville; and from the manner in which those letters were received by the public, we are inclined to believe that his "Journal" will be found to abound in interest. The Circleville Herald of yesterday speaks thus in reference to it:

MR. DAVENPORT'S JOURNAL.—Next week we shall commence the publication of the extracts from the journal of Mr. Davenport, who has lately returned from a tour to Oregon, California and the Sandwich Islands. He was in the celebrated expedition under Fremont, and returned with him to the "borders of civilization" the present fall. —Ohio S. Jour.

BR. BASSETT: The late Conference did not call on the President for a financial report, and it was forgotten by him during the Conference session; it may, however be proper for him to forward it for publication, with these remarks,—1st, his account list is mislaid, and this report is from memory,—2nd, places not visited (Morganville excepted) are not reported.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

cts. & sts.	claim.	paid.	deficit.
Steubenville st.,	$25	$25,00	$ 00
Mt. Pleasant ct.,	22	22,00	00
Georgetown "	6	6,00	00
Belmont "	8	8,00	00
Pisgah, "	16	16,00	00
Pennville "	8	8,00	00
Morganville "	5	3,00	2,00
Cambridge "	20	18,00	2,00
Lancaster "	12	8,66	3,33
Zanesville "	22	16,00	6,00
Newark "	22	22.00	00
Delaware "	5	2,12	2,87
Frederick "	12	12,00	00
Licking "	14	5,00	9,00
Mt. Zion "	4	2,00	2,00
Coshocton "	20	20,00	00
Pleasant Hill "	9	9,00	00
Leesburgh "	8	8,00	00
Woodsfield "	4	4.00	00
Columbia "	6	6,00	00
Portsmouth "	10	10,00	00
Bucyrus "	10	10.00	00
Sandusky "	18	18,00	00
Thompson "	6	6,00	00
Belview "	6	6,00	00
Wayne "	6	6,00	00
Otsego "	12	12,00	00
Granger "	8	8,00	00
Warrensville "	8	8,00	00
Burton "	8	4.64	3,66
Farmington "	5	2.00 *
Vienna "	7	7,00	00
Youngstown "	8	8,00	00

* Br. Piper has some funds in his hands, for me which will be placed to the credit of this circuit. I know not how much. G. C.

Notices.

Mad River Mission, Ohio District.—Br. Young is informd that his meeting will be held in Russelvania, Dec. 4 t h.

We expect to hold a protracted meeting in Equality class, 2 miles east of Russelvania, commencing on Christmas Day. We invite Brs. Peat, Borton, Howe, and others who can come. L. Ensminger.

Washington Circuit, Ohio District.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Bethel meeting house, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in December. We invite as many of our brethren in the ministry as can come.

A. CHANNEL.

Br. Clancy is hereby informed that at a called quarterly-Conference of the Pennville Circuit, a mutual agreement was entered into between the Circuit and Brothers J. W. Southard and C. J. Sears to serve them the balance of the Conference year. Thus: James W. Southard Superintendent, and C. J. Seares Assistant. Your concurrence is respectfully solicited. Address those brethren, Chester Hill, Morgan county, Ohio. Yours,

SAMUEL PARKER.

Newark Circuit—Muskingum Con.—We expect to hold a protracted meeting at Elizabethtown (Perryton,) commencing on the 11th of December, to which we invite our Conference Missionary; also, Br. Hoagland, and any others of our ministers who can come and assist us. We expect to continue several days.

W. H. MARSHALL.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Morgantown, Nov. 17, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will confer a favor on me, by publishing the following appointments, and I will fill them if God spares my life.

Pittsburgh st.,	Dec.	26,	1847.
Allegheny "	Jan.	2,	1848.
Sharpsburg ct.,	"	9,	"
Birmingham miss.,	"	16,	"
New Brighton st.,	"	23,	"
Manchester ct.,	"	30,	"

Will the Superintendents please to secure some help at each meeting?—My will is good, but I am not able to labor as much as in years gone by. I need help, from God and man, wherever I go, at all my meetings.

GEO. BROWN.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Waynesburg	Ct.,	November, 28th,	1847.
Washington	Station,	December 5th,	"
Home,	"	" 12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	" 19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT: Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of	December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	"	"	"
Cambridge	"	4th	"	"	"
Belmont	"	1st	"	Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	"	"	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	"	"	"
Steubenville	"	4th	"	"	"

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

White Lick ct.	Nov.	27-28	1847.
White River "	Dec.	4-5	"
Sugar Creek "	"	11-12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Darby mission,	Nov.	27th,	1847.
Mad River "	Dec.	4th,	"
Miami ct.,	"	11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Springfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

Twin Creek	Ct.	Dec.	25	1847
Cincinnati	Miss.	Elm st. Jan.	1
Cincinnati	St.	6 st. "	8
Cincinnati	Ct.	"	15
New Richmond	Ct.	"	22
Lebanon	St.	"	29
Lebanon	Miss.	Feb.	5
Greenville	"	"	12

J. M. YOUNG.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

S. Parker,	O.	P. J. Strong,	Ill.
C. T. Kingsbury,	"	S. Dilly,	"
W. Hamilton,	"	P. M.—Wilmington,	"
J. A. Jewett,	"	R. Bamford,	Mich.
J. Dalbey, Jr.,	"	P. M.—Rice Creek, 1 sub.	"
P. M.—Delaware,	"	J. Gay,	Ia.
E. S. Hoagland, 2 subs.	"	A. Perdieu, 1 sub.	"
J. F. Bane, 2, one sub.	"	N. Gillespie,	Va.
R. T. Simonton,	Pa.	W. Deford,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
R. Bamford,		9	21	1 00
C. Hanchett,	G. Lowrie,	9	52	1 00
J. Worstell,		8	52	2 00
J. Gay,	C. Spear,	9	26	1 00
R. T. Simonton,	Miss E. Berry,	9	52	2 00
J. Dalbey, Jr.,	F. A. Harris,	9	52	2 00
"	J. Owry,	9	52	2 00
O. White,	L. R. Winn,	9	7	1 00
"	J. Hocking,	9	13	1 50

The P. M. at Delaware, O., notifies us that our paper addressed to C. Sparks, Sunbury, and forwarded from there to Delaware, is not taken out of the office. We have never received any pay from that subscriber. Will Brother Hatfield please attend to the case?

☞ We inform Br. J. Maxwell, of Va., that S. S. still lives in this county, and is considered insolvent. Nothing to be got—sorry for it.

☞ Brother N. Gillespie will receive a private letter from us.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On the 18th ult., by Rev. J. M. Courtney, Mr. JOHN MCD. KENDALL, Printer of this Paper, to Miss MARY J. SMITH, of Zanesville.

——On the 21st inst. by the Editor of this paper, Mr. GEO. PADGITT, of Zanesville, to Miss MARY BROOKOVER, of this place.

——At Oberlin, Ohio, on the 4th inst. by Prof. H. Cowles, Mr. M. B. BATEHAM, of Columbus, Editor of the Ohio Cultivator, to Miss LOUISA JANE LOVELL.

——In Fayette county, Pa., by Rev. R. T. Simonton, Sept. 30th last, Rev. F. C. HERRON, to Miss HARRIET VOREROSS, both of said county.

——At Millborough, Pa. by the same, on 11th inst., Mr. JOHN HALL, to Miss MARTHA CANADAY, both of that place.

Advertisements.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT,

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT WORCESTER, MASS.,

BY SAMUEL CHISM.

This publication is sent forth, with the specific object of disseminating evangelical truth. Its design is eminently 'practical,' not speculative. It will present those vital truths of christianity which are calculated to stimulate the church to her appropriate work in the evangelization of the world; and will urge the unconverted to an immediate surrender of their hearts to God, and the entire consecration of themselves to his service. It is not devoted to the interests of any particlar denomination, but aims at the present and eternal happiness of the whole human family.

Each monthly issue will contain 32 pages of matter, octavo, in new, bold, and clear type, cast expressly for this use. Two sermons will appear in each number; and the remaining pages will be filled with Skeletons of Sermons, Ministerial and Religious Miscellany, Criticisms, Biographical Sketches, etc.

The list of Contributors to the American Pulpit will embrace several of the ablest clergymen of the evangelical denominations in the United States.

TERMS.

1. $1 per annum, in advance. If not paid till after three months from the time of subscribing, $1,50 at which time all subscriptions will be consided due, and bills sent accordingly.

2. Any person obtaining three subscribers, with pay in advance, shall receive a fourth copy gratis.

3. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year. It is desirable that all subscriptions should commence with the first number of the volume.

4. Will not the friends of this work use their influence in extending its circulation? Certainly, by so doing, they will advance the interests of Christ's cause. A little exertion on the part of each individual will do much to make it one of the most extensively circulated periodicals in the United States.

5. Several special agents are wanted to procure subscribers in different parts of the United States. Superannuated clergymen will receive good encouragement on personal or written application.

6. Ministers of the gospel, of every denominati on, and other responsible individuals, are authorised, and cordially invited to act as agents.

7. All communications connected with the editorial department should be addressed to Rev. J. D. BRIDGE, Worcester, Massachusetts. All communications on business should be directed, 'post paid,' to SAMUEL CHISM, Worcester, Massachusetts.

Road Notice.—Notice is hereby given that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, at their December session, praying for the location of a county road, commencing at a white-oak tree, near the east end of George M'Crooks' barn, on the county road leading from the falls of Licking to Crooks Bridge, known by the name of the "Dillon Road," running from thence a South-East direction, passing over lands owned by Robert Allen and George W. Rankin, to intersect the Zanesville and Maysville Turnpike near the Presbyterian Meeting House, known by the name of the Newton Church; the said Road to be laid on the same ground where there is now a Township road in use or as near a good ground can be had.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞ TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS. ☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS, designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

Waynesburg, Green County, Pa

REV. A. H. BASSETT: My dear Brother, please say to the Brethren, that I have on hands, Clarks's Commentary, new and complete, do. upon the New Testament, do. Theology, Watson's Institutes, do. Dictionary, Common, medium, Revival Hymn Books, Disciplines, Snethen's Sermons, Harris' do. Williams' on the Lord's Supper. Rev. T. H. Stockton's Christian World, 3 vol. Social Spirit of Christianity, Whitehead's life of Rev'd. J. and C. Wesley. Large family Bibles, Pocket Polygot, do. Fletcher's address to seekers of soivation, Evan's Pamphlet, Christian Manuel. Life of Geo. Washinton, Columbus, and Flanklin, School books of various kinds.

Sears' Domestic Bible, 1000 engravings, 1,500 pages.
do. History of the Bible, several hundred engravings
do. Biography of the Bible. do.
do. Sunday Book, do.
do. Great Britain and Ireland, do.
do. Sketches Europe, do.
do. American Revolution, 160 engraving.

Hemmorrhage of the Lungs having returned upon me again it is doubtful whether I shall be able to travel much this winter, if ever. Should any of the Brethren want any of the above works and will inform me, I will try and send them as they may direct, Should my heal[illegible] admit I will bring them. Since Conference, I have visited, Allegheny, Pittsburgh, and the Brownsville circuit. Permit me Brother Bassett, to tender my thanks to the Ministers of those fields of labor for the active part they took in selling my books for me, and the membership, for their liberality in buying. Respectfully yours,

W. A. PORTER.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN

BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St. Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

---

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe,	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

POET'S CORNER.

Written for the Western Recorder.

LINES COMPOSED ON RECEIVING A WITHERED ROSE.

I would not be a Rose to die,
Without awaking sorrows sigh;
Oh, no! I would not wish to bloom,
Unwept to sink into the Tomb.

I'd rather be a lowly flower,
With none to praise or love me here,
If friendship in my parting hour
Would grant me but this boon—a tear!

I'd choose the coal for my bed,
Beneath the Ocean's dreary wave;
Sooner than die with none to shed,
A tear of sorrow o'er my grave.

They only mourn the 'Early dead'
Then let me early pass away,
With cherished friends around my bed,
To sing, "I would not live alway."

And I would have my body laid,
Beside the little bubbling brook,
Where oft in Boy-hood I have strayed
With no companion but my book.

E'en then by puny grief oppressed,
I wished—(It was a child's desire,(
A requium for my spirits rest,
Sung sweetly by the woodland choir.

Although I am a youth no more,
I have my childish notions yet:
The fondly cherished wish of yore,
I'd not forego without regret.

*Kirk White has these two lines.

"I would not be a leaf to die
Without recording sorrows sigh."
Putnam O. LOUIS.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XV.

My family had for many years been blessed with heath. But now, our Father saw fit to chasten us severely. The two eldest and the two youngest suffered much with that most cruel disease the bloody Flux, and the youngest was torn away from the embraces and warm affections of parents brothers and sisters, but we must try to say sincerely, the Lord's will be done, being confident that he is happy and far better off than if he had remained here. But a few minutes before he departed, he told his mother though only 7½ years old that he would soon be with the Angels: I will here transcribe an acrostic, written by his sister Lucinda.

Emblem of the flowers of May,
Death has borne from us away.
Who seemed not meat to go so soon,
A flower of morn escaped the noon.
Released from earth he takes his flight,
Distrustful of this warld's delight,
Redeemed by grace, in glory he
Mingles in songs of Extacy.
Crowned with fadeless beauty now,
Glory decks his lovely brow,
United with the heavenly throng,
In rapturous lays of holy song;
Receives a harp in his right hand,
Encompassed with the angelic band.

On the 24th of August 1830, our camp-meeting commenced. The affliction of my family had kept me at home until that day. I left my wife very ill, and did not reach the camp ground until next morning. We had about thirty tents. The Lord had commenced his blessed work of conviction and conversion, and glory to his holy name he displayed his power every day and night during the whole time, About fifty souls were converted, forty seven gave their names to join our infant branch of the Church of Christ.—Among the converted was a young lady, both deaf and dumb, in her the Prophecy of Isaiah, 35–6, was literally fulfiled, after weeping and no doubt, praying mentally with other mourners twelve or fifteen hours, she clapped her hand, and said glory to Jesus,* and expressed these words repeatedly while a heavenly smile was on her countenance. Her friends said she had never spoken before that time, there was no doubt of her conversion.

Our second Annual Conference commenced the next week in the City of Cincinnati, on the second of September, there were about fifty Preachers and Lay delegates present, and the good Lord was with us. Several souls were converted, and we had a loving, harmonious time, in at ending to our Conference business, near forty were appointed to itinerate. We now felt confident, that there were false Prophets in the land of the free. It had been reiterated by many that we would soon come to nothing. But God is with us and we are safe, and will prosper.

My dear companion getting worse, wrote for me to come home, so I left Conference on Monday, and reached home the next day, and found her a little better but not able to walk. The Conference appointed me Missionary to Youngstown, a sketch of which Mission I will give in the next number.

*We were present at the camp meeting here spoken of, and are aware that the extraordinary circumstance here stated, was attested by many person still living.
[ED. W. R.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A Few Thoughts.

This is an age in which much is said, and much written in reference to the success of the different branches of the church. Each individual who for his piety, or talents, or who by a combination of these, is thought worthy to be placed over a portion of the flock of God, as he begins to act in the character of an evangelist if he is not, in the estimation of those over whom he presides, chargable with neglect, begins with great energy, and with the most determined effort, to labor for that particular branch of the church with which he has chosen to unite. And too frequently, is it the case, in order to please those for whose special benefit he seemed to labor, or to promote those principles which he supposes most happily adapted to the condition of mankind, that he goes farther and openly attacks, every thing that in any way conflicts with his notion of things. Not content with opposing sin in all its forms he opposes those who choose to meet it in any other way than that which he has conceived to be best calculated to secure success. He appears to think that no good can be done, unless those engaged in the work follow him. Shall we be surprised while young men are compelled to take a course like this in order to render general satisfaction if this feeling increase until religion shall consist in form and men will be thought justifiable in proclaiming the impossibility of salvation except through the pale of the church with which they stand connected? Perhaps no christian will take this ground now, but yet they do not see the danger of indulging a party, partial spirit. Talk with them on the subject, and they will tell of their purity, and point you to their prosperity. Read their periodicals, and you will read of revival and refreshing seasons.

But talk with, or read those who lived in the earlier years of protestant prosperity, and especially when methodism began to be known, and you will hear, and read of more religion than christians at the present time suppose to be necessary.

In view of the state of the church those who were acquainted with its spirituality in those days, now mourn its departure from that purity, and holiness of living for which it was then distinguished.

In vain will you turn their attention for relief to those refreshing seasons which are dwelt upon with so much satisfation and delight. They will with a sorrowful countenance inquire how long it will be before these youths, who have professed such love for the Saviour, &c., such joy in the Holy Ghost, will he found at a party of pleasure engaging freely, and after the first few invitations unhesitatingly in all the sinful, and disgusting fooleries, that an age of fashion, and folly has invented. And how long before these of maturer years will think it no harm to unite with the rabble, in cheering with fiendish yell the success of a political champion, or conclude themselves equally innocent in singing the song of his triumph, or the defeat of his opponent. What shall we answer to these things? And why are they so? Is it not because the churches generally take too little notice of such conduct? Is it any wonder that pure and undefiled religion is so seldom met with, and that the love of so many has not only grown cold but entirely vanished? And why is it that these things are looked upon with such indifference but because sectarianism has got the ascendency over virtue, and men are more afraid of loosing members from their church, than of keeping unworthy persons within, what ought to be its sacred enclosure?

C. T. K.

Congress, O., Oct. 25, 1847.

The Budget.

THE BEAUTIFUL.

Half unconsciously
We gather up a blessed treasure-store
Of sights and sounds, whose beauty shall not die,
But haunt the secret heart forevermore?"

"The Beautiful! It cannot pass away,—
It can never die! Like the orb of day,
By Earth's dark atmosphere sometimes obscured
Seeming as if his beams were quite absorbed,
Or had been borne to other worlds away—
Still unextinguished,—bursting forth again,
In radiance brighter for the brief eclipse!
Nor dwelling here above, though oft unseen,
And not by all alike perceived,—soul-born,
And nature to those happy regions where
The pure and holy are; where love and peace,
And goodness reign supreme; nor sin, nor death,
Nor sorrow comes. The Beautiful doth shine
Immortal, clothing with angelic light
The all-impassing things of Paradise!"

"How little of ourselves we know,
Before a grief the heart has felt.
The lessons that we learn of woe
May trace the mind as well as melt.
The energies too stern for mirth,
The reach of thought, the strength of will,
'Mid cloud and tempest have their birth,—
Through blight and blast their cause fulfil;
And yet, 'tis when it mourns and fears,
The loaded spirit feels forgiven,
And through the mist of falling tears,
We catch the earliest glimpse of heaven.,'

"Religion does not aim to cancel our natural affections. To condemn, as unchristian, the deep grief of bereavement, is to condemn all strong human attachments. Grief is only the memory of widowed affection. The morality which rebukes sorrow rebukes love."

Christmas Evans.

Christmas Evans was a native of Cardiganshire, (Wales) and was born on Christmas day, 1766. His father was a Shoemaker, and miserably poor. He died when his son was in his ninth year. On the death of his father he was obliged to go out to service. His maternal uncle who was a farmer, took him into his employ. This man was a drunken, brutal creature, & treated his nephew in a way which made his recollection of the time he spent with him excruciatingly bitter and painful. After living in one or two places as a farm servant, he entered in the same capacity the service of—an Arian Minister, and a noted schoolmaster. Christmas first religious connection was with a Presbyterian congregation, in the neighborhood of which his master was Pastor. He subsequently joined the Baptists, and was settled in Carnarvonshire as a stated minister; but the greater part of his active and useful life was spent in Anglesea where he labored for forty years. He was the apostle of the Baptists in that island, and was instrumental in the establishment of a great number of Churches. His last charge was at Carnarvon; and it was on a begging expedition into South Wales, with a view to obtain help towards liquidating the debt on his chapel, that he died, at Swansea, in the month of July, 1838.

Christmas Evans was popular to the last.—His mental character may be summed up in one word—imagination—gorgeous, imperious, overshadowing. His passion was equal to his imagination, and made red-hot his creations. He was a large hearted man, ingenuous and unsuspicious as a child, and capable of the most ardent and generous friendship. His defects and faults sprung from the head, not the heart. His piety was deep and earnest, and his expressions healthy and active. His self-denial was apostolic, while his industry and perseverance were unremitting, and his labors most abundant. We envy not the man who can read some parts of his life with an unmoved heart and a dry eye. It is with no common interest that we have followed the friendless farm servant boy from his humble origin, with its multitude of attendant obstacles and trials, down to the point where we find thousands hanging on his lips, and delighting to acknowledge the magic spell of his eloquence.

"The ruling passion" seems to have been "strong in death;" for his imagination conjured up a "chariot with horsemen;" his last words to the by-standers being—"Good bye! drive on."

Miscellaneous.

If I were a Rich Man.

"If I were a rich man!" said Mr. Harris.

"And suppose you were, neighbor, what then?" said Mr. Brown who overheard the exclamation.

"Why I'd give to the poor and reap the pleasuse of the charity."

"You would, would you?"

"Yes sir, most certainly."

"And would'nt wish to keep a trifle for this purpose or for that, and ride in your carriage, when you might as well go afoot?"

"No, sir, not I, Mr. Brown."

"And would prove yourself an honorable exception among the rich men would you?"

"I should try I think."

"But what makes you think you would be so much better than the rich in general?"

"O, I can't say, exacly; I suppose it is because I so frequently experience the inconveniences of poverty."

"You poor! Mr. Harris. Why, I always considered you a wealthy man."

Me wealthy! Why, sir, I couldn't muster five hundred dollars, if I should sell every thing I possess. Rich! I'd like to own my dinner before I eat it; I am sure I should grow fat at the bare thought."

"But Mr. Harris what would you really do if you were as rich as John Jacob Astor?"

"Well, I don't know exactly what I would do with so much money as he has; but one thing is certain, I'd give all the poor in my neighborhood one good dinner."

"Is that all?"

"O, no! I would repeat the dose so often that the leanest should cry enough?"

"Well, Mr. Harris, I heard a great many people talk in just this manner; but when Providence has blest them, they have almost invariably forgotten their good resolutions."

"Some may have done so; but just give me a chance, and I'll show you the difference."

"Ah! I fear neighbor," said Mr. Brown, as he walked away, "but few are able to withstand temptation."

"And I am willing to be tempted; the sooner the better," said Mr. Harris, and he passed on.

But one year from the date of the above conversation, Mr. Harris was what the world calls—a rich man. An uncle had died in the Indies, (or some where else,) at just the lucky moment, leaving him sole heir to a fortune. Mr. Harris' first intelligence was draft for fifty thousand dollars, payable at sight. The poor man could hardly contain himself for joy; a thousand brilliant vissions danced through his brain. His wife should not labor; his children should be finely dressed, and delicately fed—and—his neighbors should have—yes, he would give—something to his neighbors.

The news of his good fortune spread like wild-fire. Friends gathered round to congratulate.—One and another volunteered this service and that offers they would never have made but for the ringing of that same fifty thousand dollars

Mr. Harris moved from his humble cottage to a splendid house in town. Mrs. Harris no longer performed the drudgery of her family. Jane and Ellen left off knitting mittens for their brothers, and Henry and Edward split no more wood for the kitchen fire.

With wealth came wants unnumbered. Labor once performed from necessity, was renounced entirely, and with it the pleasure that labor brings.

Mr. Harris soon found himself unable to walk. Horses must do the drudgery his limbs had hitherto been able to perform, while pampered appetite rejected wholesome food, which not long ago crowned his table.

In the process of time Mr. Harris fell ill. Mr. Brown who had never lost sight of his old friend, now renewed his former friendly intercourse.—Dim recollections of a conversation once held with this same Mr. Brown haunted the sick man's mind. He was willing to be tempted; his wish had then been granted; and, like others proved him a frail man. During a protracted illness, recollections of neglected opportunities and wasteful extravagance troubled him. Resolutions for the future were frequently avowed, but, through the arrangements of Providence, nipped the bud.

The man who but a few years ago found his heart so deeply touched with sympathy for his fellows, has not fulfilled his better promptings when means were in his power, and sought therefore to atone for the past neglect, by bestowing in one generous bequest that which he could no longer retain, purchasing at once a name in the world for charity, and a right to be remembered at the portals of heaven. Mayhap the knowledge of his ultimate benefactions preceded his own appearance there, but unbelief questions the efficacy of such claims for admission.

Were this an overdrawn, or solitary case, charity would prompt us to drop the vail, and bid him God speed in his journey to the skies. But many a man, with means at his command to alleviate much of human suffering, pleads inability, with the pitious addendum, "If I were only rich."

"If I were only rich." What then? The good performed in this world is not estimated by dollars and cents, by Him that seeth the heart. There was once a poor widow, more commended for the bestowal of two mites, than her wealthy compeers for their large gifts. "Do good as ye have opportunity."—Troy Budget.

Rules for Conversation.

The following "Rules for Conversation," are from House's Sketches for the Young, a valuable book for those for whom it is designed.

"Rattling knives and forks while eating, starting up and rushing unceremoneously out of the room, stepping immediately before one who is looking intenily at some object, pushing and jostling one without any apology, slapping any one familliary on the sholder, and calling him in a mock-affectionate style, 'my dear Doc.' 'my dear Prof,' and like names scratching your head, poking your fingers in your ears, and affecting a look of deep sagacity and solemn wisdom, are all out place, and will ruin whatever repatation you may have for good breeding.

"Guard against them most sedulously. In company with others, say little about yourself.—Never be such an egotist as to attempt to make yourself conspicuous by speaking ill of yourself. This is an expedient adopted by some people, to prove to the bystanders their skill in self-knowledge. They are, however, among the vainest, proudest, and most ignorant of community.

"Never talk about trifles. Trifling conversation, such as the state of the weather, the style of the fashions, long, tedious, humdrum stories, which every boy and girl of five years old can recite, are nauseous as ipecac to a sensible mind.

"Avoid slang phrases, provincialisms, and technicalities. They are unpardonably vulgar It is just as easy to talk grammatically as it is otherwise; to say, 'in this place,' as to say 'in these diggins;' and far more becoming a gentleman.

"Avoid witticisms and repartees. They are no criterion of shrewdness, any more than interlarding one's speech with foreign phrases, and repeating the words, 'says he,' and 'says she,' and 'you know,' and 'you understand,' indicate a great mind.

"Robert Hall was capable of giving the bitterest repartee, as you well know. He was unsuccessful in his courtship with Miss Steele, the distinguished poetess; and on a certain occasion, in company with some ladies and gentlemen, one of the former remarked, 'Try us, Mr. Hall, perhaps you'l not find our hearts all steel.' A moment's hesitation ensued, when, with a most withering frown, he replied. 'Perhaps not. but I shall find a face all brass.' He never indulged in it, however, only when compelled to it."

Religion abolishes Slavery.

"Whoever is acquainted with history cannot be ignorant that religion has abolished slavery."—Ganganelli, Clement XIV.

Divine Providence is continually renewing and regenerating the face of the world. Humanity is marching forward to its destinies. "We are all brethren!" These sublime words, repeated by echo to echo and generation to generation, assure a better lot to all nations. It is enough to watch and see! The East is not to-day the East of antiquity. Its thousands of slaves are almost everywhere transformed into active and industrious people. Here and there, it is true, there remain numerous branches of the old tree known under the name of slavery; but these branches detached, one after another, from the trunk which gave them life, will not be slow to perish. We shall soon see them cover the earth as dangerous plants which men destroy because they cause death.

The age, civilization, and humanity, owe their thanks to the Bey of Tunis, to Mahomet Ali, and to Prince George of Wallachia, for the great things which they have accomplished in behalf of the slaves. They are due equally to his imperial majesty the Sultan Abdul-Medjiel, who, more enlightened than his predecessors, has not feared to annihilate the sale of men in the public markets of his empire. In this is his formal title to the honor and prosperity. We freely confess we did not expect so speedy an end to the frightful scenes which the traffic in slaves in the East presented to the world. The movement is made; justice and humanity triumphed.

It is especially in Brazil and the Spanish colonies that slaves suffer. It is to these points that we shall not cease to direct a vigilant attention, that their natural rights may be restored as quick as possible to the thousands of Africans. We above all lay to heart the ironical smile of the representative at Paris of the first of these powers, who, doubtless regarding the blacks as another race from our own, seemed one evening to be pleased at the idea that his country always carried on the trade.

In the United States of America, things asume a better aspect each day, notwithstanding the terrible laws which govern the slaves. It is felt on all sides that a barbarious institution, which deprives unoffending men of their liberty, which assimilates them to beasts, which at every hour violates the most sacred laws of morality, is not an institution which can long endure.

France especially is under obligation, at the earliest moment possible, to discharge the most impirious duty by liberating the slaves in her colonies. She will pass in the eyes of the world as the most inconsistent of nations, and her politicians will be regarded as the most trifling of all men, if incessantly contending for liberty, they forget the slaves. The cannon and the drum have gained us glory enough. The greatest in our eyes will be that which shall result from granting liberty by law to thousands of creatures who have drank only the poisoned beverage of a miserable life.

Thanks and honor to our colleagues who have seconded us! May they continue to patronize the work of emancipation by their liberal aid; and may all men, the enlightened and the good not fear to concur by their words and their acts, by their vigilance, by their writings, by their prayers, and by their petitions, to assure and hasten human freedom throughout the world!—That will be a glorious day in the eyes of God when there shall be no slaves.—Translated from the annals of the African Society.

The Education of the Heart.

It is the vice of the age to substitute learning for wisdom—to educate the head, and forget that there is a more important education necessary for the heart. The reason is cultivated at an age when nature does not furnish the elements necessary to a successful cultivation of it; and the child is solicited to reflection, when he is only capable of sensation and emotion. In infancy the attention and the memory are only excited strongly by things which impress the senses, and move the heart; and a father shall instil more solid and available instruction in an hour spent in the fields, where wisdom and goodness are exemplified, seen and felt, than in a month spent in the study, where they are expounded in stereotyped aphorisms.

No physician doubts that precocious children, in fifty cases for one, are much the worse for the discipline they have undergone. The mind seems to have been strained, and the foundations for insanity are laid. When the studies of maturer years are stuffed into the head of a child, people do not reflect on the anatomical fact, that the one is confirmed and can bear exertion, the other is growing and requires repose; that to force the attention to abstract facts, to load the memory with chronological and historical or scientific details; in short, to expect a child's brain to bear with impunity the exertions of a man's, is just as rational as it would be to hazard the same sort of experiment on its muscles.

The first eight or ten years of life should be devoted to the education of the heart—to the formation of principles, rather than to the acquirement of what is usually termed knowledge. Nature herself points out such a course; for the emotions are then the liveliest, and most easily moulded, being as yet unalloyed by passion. It is from this source that the mass of men are here after to draw their sum of happiness or misery; the actions of the immense majority are, under all circumstances, determined much more by feeling than reflection; in truth, life presents an infinity of occasions where it is essential to happiness that we should feel rightly; very few where it is at all necessary that we should think profoundly.

Up to the seventh year of life, very great changes are going on in the structure of the brain. and demand, therefore, the utmost attention not to interrupt them by improper or over excitement. Just that degree of exercise should be given to the brain at this period, as it is necessary to its health; and the best oral instruction, exemplified by the objects which strike the senses.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary to add, that at that period of life, special attention should be given, by parents and teachers, to the physical development of the child. Pure air and free exercise are indispensable, and wherever these are withheld, the consequences will be certain to extend themselves over the whole future life. The seeds of protracted & hopeless suffering have, in innumerable instances, been sown in the constitution of the child simply through ignorance of this great fundamental physical law; & the time has come when the united voices of these innocent victims shall ascend, "trumpet-tongued," to the ears of every parent and teacher in the land, "Give us free air and wholesome exercise; leave to develope our expanding energies, in accordance with the laws of our being, and full scope for the elastic and bounding impulses of our young blood." [London Quarterly Review.

Fascination of the Rattle-snake.

"When I was a boy about thirteen years old," says Mr. Willard, "my father sent me into the fields to mow some briers. I had not long been employed when I discovered a large rattle snake, and looked for something to kill him; but not readily discovering a weapon, my curiosity lead me to view him. He lay coiled up, with his tail erect; and making the usual singing noise with his rattles, I had viewed him but a short time, when the most vivid and lively colors that imagination can paint, and far beyond the power of the pencil to imitate, among which yellow was the predominent, and the whole drawn into a bewitching variety of gay and pleasing forms, were presented to my eyes, at the same time my ears were enchanted by the most rapturous strains of music, wild, lively, complicated and harmonious, captivating and enchanting far beyond anything I ever heard before or since, and indeed far exceeding what my imagination in any other situation could have conceived. I felt my self irresistably drawn towards the hated reptile; and as I had been often used to seeing and killing rattle snakes and my senses were so absorded by the gay vision and rapturous music, I was not for sometime apprehensive of much danger; but suddenly recollecting what I heard the Indians relate, (but had never before believed) of the fasnating power of these serpents, I turned with horror from the dangerous scence; but it was not without the most violent effort that I was able to extricate myself. All the exertions I could make with my whole strength were hardly sufficient to carry me from the scene of horrid yet pleasing enchantment; and while I forcibly dragged off my body, my head seemed to be irresistably drawing to the enchanter by an invisible power. And I fully believe that in a few moments longer it would have been wholly out of my power to make an exertion sufficient to get away."

Who cannot be Rich.

A Polish woman who has a stall in the Washington Market, found herself about five years ago a widow with four small children, and an estate of just $1,50c. in money. She had not however turn her steps towards the Alms house, nor spend her time in begging from door to door. Though embarrassed by a very poor knowledge of our language, she immediately invested her capital in some articles which she could sell, and commenced operations, employing the children as she could for assistance. For a year or two past she has had a market stall. A few months ago she learned that the owner of a good farm of seventy-five acres in one of the central counties of the State, was very desirous to sell his farm for money. She examined the farm, found a good barn, house, &c.,and fifty acres under cultivation. Her twelveshillings had grown to twelve hundred dollars, all safe in the Savings Bank, and she offered it for the farm and it was accepted,—for it was all in cash. The Polish widow now has her country estate, where she has been spending some months; though unwilling to retire as yet, she has returned and rusumed her stall. What a fine provision for herself and family has she secured by five years of determined effort!—What proof has she made, that this is the land where all may be rich who have health, and where they only who have it not are proper objects of charity. We only hope that this honorable Polish widow will not be tempted to throw herself and her fare away upon some lazy loafer. —Jour. Com.

The following resolution was passed at "the colored people's Educational Convention,' recently held in this city:—

"Resolved, That the white people of this State ought not to reproach us with being ignorant, degraded and poor, while they tax our property to support their own poor, and their blind, deaf and insane, and educate their own children, while denying to our benefits and blessings conferred by this taxation."—Ind. Sentinel.

INDIAN SUMMER.—We do not always have an "Indian Summer," properly speaking; and the question whether "this is the Indian Summer?" is often a very puzzling subject for tea-table talk. It is unknown in the parts of the Old World, whence we chiefly derive our literature. It is like the farewell lingering look of a departing friend. We cannot persuade ourselves that Winter is as pleasant as Summer. Winter like old age, may be kindly and have its own charms; but youth and maturity, spring and summer, are the most joyous seasons. The origin of the term Indian Summer is probably unknown to many of our readers. With the white man engaged in agricultural persuits, which during the early settlement of this country, were his chief occupation the Summer and early part of the Fall are the chief seasons for gathering in crops, and these he then made the occasion for peculiar enjoyment and festivity. The favorite period of the Indian was that time when the leaves fall rushing from the trees, the sun shines dimly through the hazy atmosphere, when the nights are free from frost and days moderately warm. This period, when ever it occurred in Autumn, either in October, or November, or indeed in wintry December, was hailed with every feeling of delight by the Indian, fire was set to the dry leaves of the forest. which rapidly spread and drove the deer to the laurel groves for protection, where the Indians were concealed prepared for their destruction.—Hence the Indian would say to the European, "The white man' sunmmer is past and gone, but thd Indian summer is come."—Buffalo Com.

RAILROAD MOVEMENTS.—The New York Tribune says:

"Gangs of workmen commenced grading the Kenebec road in Gardiner, Hallowell and Augusta, this week. It is the intention to prosecute the grading as fast as possible in these towns through the winter.

"At the annual meetings of the stockholders of the Wilton Railroad company, it was voted that the work of constructing the road be at once entered upon, and ordered an assessment of five per cent, upon the capital stock to be paid.

"Emherst Express states that the stock of the Brattleboro' and Bellows Falls Railroad has all been subscribed, and that a meeting for the choice of Directors is to be held at Brattleboro' on the 11th of Nov.

"The Morris and Essex (N. J.) Railroad Company has comenced laying the rails on the extension to Dover, and expect to accomplish the whole route in the course of two months.

"The contract for the Stonington Railroad Branch has been taken, and the work will be commenced immediately. It is expected that the new road will be ready for use early in May.

"The Cape Cod Branch Railroad is now in progress, the workmen having commenced laying the rails betweem Middleborough and Wareham. The road, it is expected, will be ready to go into operation early in the ensuing spring."

For men to resolve to be of no religion till all are agreed in one, is just as wise and as rational as if they should determine not to go to dinner till all the clocks in town strike twelve together. —Dr, Scot.

WISCONSIN.—The Territorial Legislature assembled at Madison, on the 18th ultimo, for the special purpose of preparing the way for admission to the Union as a State. The message of Gov. Dodge is wholy occupied with the reasons for a speedy entrance into the Union as a State. The population of the territory he estimates at 200,000.

THREADED BANK NOTES.—Messrs. Crane & Co., of Dalton, Massachusetts, Manufacturers of bank note paper, have invented a very simple and efficient method of preserving the denomination of a bill from alteration. Threads of silk or cotton are arranged in parallel lines, lengthwise with the note, and embodied in the substance of the paper during its manufacture. A one dollar bill has one thread, and one is added for each denomination up to five dollars, then a ten dollar bill has six threads, another is added for twenty, fifiy, one hundred, five hundred, and one thousand; the last has eleven threads. It must be very difficult, if not impossible, to insert another thread after the note is finished, and as the threads mark is value as distinctly as the figures, the chances of a successful alteration are at least greatly diminished. The Mechanics' Banking Association of this city, and several of the banks in this State and at the East, have ordered the threaded paper, and it will probably come into general use.—N. Y. JournSl of Commerce.

Advertisements.

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.
LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH.
For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon,
A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY
REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT
To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism; in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.
AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.
PUBLISHED BY THE
American Sunday School Union,
146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,
AND OVER
500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,
On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,
EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &c.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums, from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without a case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, 10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools. With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered. $3,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families' published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	-	3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st
With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50
Philadelphia.
Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.
FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.
FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.
General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street
Branch Depositories.
BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.
NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.
LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.
Mar. '97 '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 9. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, DECEMBER 2, 1847. WHOLE NO. 425.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SONNET.

Oh, were I good, I would not care to die,
Tho' Nature blooms in all the joy of spring;
For, there's no spot, beneath yon azure sky,
Where my sad sprite can rest her weary wing.
Noah's fair Dove could find an Olive Branch,—
(Emblem of Peace;) but, oh, there is no peace
For my poor bleeding heart! no leaf to staunch
Its ebbing wound—its sorrows cannot cease.
But hold! Is there no balm in Gilead?
And is there no Physician there, my soul?
Yes. There is one whose heart like mine, has bled;
He bids me take the healing balm—I'm whole!
Henceforth declare, the weary may have rest,
Since I have found it on His gentle breast.

LOUIS.

PUTNAM, Nov. 10, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SERMON,

PREACHED AT ELDERSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA;

BY REV. WM. REEVES.

[Published by request of a public meeting.]

Philipians iv: 3. And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel.

(Continued.)

PROP. VII. In the apostolic and primitive church, those holy women who were called of God to the work of the ministry, were inducted into the sacred office by a regular and formal Ordination, and that to Elder's Orders.—This proposition may appear astonishing to some of our opponents; and especially, perhaps, to that class who lay the greatest stress upon the circumstance of a formal ordination. To some of these, it seems to be the sine qua non to a valid claim to the clerical office. Of such, therefore, may not the most be hoped, as the fruit of this discussion? For surely, if the above proposition be true, and it should be proved to be so, according to their own profession, they should be among the fastest friends of female preaching.—But in our estimation, this external ceremony, important and proper as it may be to preserve order and decorum in the church, is, nevertheless, not essential to the office itself. It may have its uses, and, in this respect, we have no objection to it. Nay more; as a ceremony of uniform recognition by the church, of the right of the candidate to the clerical office, we deem it wise, impressive and judicious. For the church, by her authorized officers, publicly and solemnly, by a form of ordination, to 'acknowledge' the 'authority of the person thus set apart for the ministerial office, to 'preach the word.' &c., we think attended with great good. But that the church, or her officiating ministers, has power to impart that authority, or to give the Holy Ghost, is a doctrine we repudiate, and denounce, as Papal, even though borrowed and used by some Protestant churches. And we are happy to find this sentiment sustained by so respectable an author as Rev. Gardiner Spring, before cited. In his Sermon on the Savior's presence with his Ministers, (by the way, one of the best sermons on the ministry we have ever read,) he is very lucid and pointed on the subject. He says, 'The act of setting apart to the ministry, consists in the formal vote or resolution of the Presbytery, expressing their approbation of the candidate, and their judgment that he is called to the office. This resolution is indicative of his vocation; and while it does not give him his commission, because that is given him by the divine Head of the church, it is proof to himself and the world that he is called of God. From that hour, he is, to all intents and purposes, an ambassador of Christ. a duly authorized minister, having a divine warrant to preach the Gospel, and administer its ordinances. All that follows this governmental act is the mere outward and formal expression of the act itself, by which he is constituted a minister, and receives his official authority. His ordination by the laying on of hands, solemn and impressive as it is, is the least important part of the service.' And he, upon the authority of 'Hetherington's History,' asserts that, 'The church of Scotland, for a time, dispensed with this outward ceremony, in order to discountenance the prevalent idea that spiritual gifts were imparted by it.' And is it not also remarkable that even the old Wesleyan Church—in England, with all the learning of her ministry, and their fondness of ecclesiastical power, never, till recently, formally ordained their candidates to the sacred office?

Mr. Spring says in another place, 'As a sign of designation to office, it is recognized in the Scriptures. Yet it should never be forgetten, that it transmits nothing. It has no magnetic charm, by which the vestal flame from higher altars is communicated, and does no more than honor the heavenly gift by settling it in form on its appropriate and golden candlestick. The doctrine of Rome and of England, [and may we not add America too? for is not the same sentiment in the Methodist Episcopal Church Discipline?] on the subject of ordination, is unworthy of a spiritual religion, and grows out of that monstrous system of errors which well nigh extinguished the light of Christianity, by subsituting visible forms for invisible realities, and converted the religion of the Gospel into the more accommodating and more captivating religion of sense. Accipite Sanctum Spiritum—receive the Holy Ghost, is the presumptious language to a candidate in the formula of ordination in both [all three] these churches."—In consequence of what we consider an undue importance which many attach to ceremonial ordination, we have indulged in the above digression; as it may tend to strengthen our regard for the spiritual, while it shews the insufficiency of the ritual part.

Let us now listen attentively to, and weigh impartially, the evidence to be adduced in direct proof of out proposition,— that, in the primitive Christian Church, those holy women, who were called of God to the work of the ministry, were formally ordained to that sacred office, and some of them even Presbyters. And in the mouth of two or three witnesses, let every word be established. The first author we introduce is the learned Dr. Macknight.—In his admirable Commentary on the Epistles, he clearly proves the point, now under discussion. On Rom. xvi: 1, he translates,—'Phebe a deaconess.' And quotes and translates from the Apostolical Constitutions, thus: 'Ordain also a deaconess, who is faithful and holy, for the ministries toward the women.'—'Pliny too,' he says, 'mentions them, [deaconesses,] in his letter to Trajan. And speaks of two christian females, put to the torture, 'who were called among the Christian Ministerstræ.'' And on v. 12, the Dr. says of Tryphena and Tryphosa, that they 'were probably female presbyters or deacons, who employed themselves at Rome in propagating the Gospel; as was Persis likewise, who in the next clause is said to 'have labored much in the Lord.' And as Mary is said, verse 6. to 'have labored much with the apostle,' she also may have exercised one or other of these offices in some of the great cities of Asia or Greece, where the apostle preached, and by her zealous services, especially among her own sex, may have been of use to the apostle and his assistants, while preaching the Gospel.' Again on v. 1, the Dr. says, 'The deaconess is also described,—1 Tim. v: 9, and verse 10, orders the widows or female presbyters, to be chosen from among them.'—'Grotious too,' he remarks, 'tells us, these female presbyters or elders were ordained by the imposition of hands till the councils of Laodicea; and for this he quotes the XI canon of the council. From what is said of Euodia and Syntyche, Phil. iv: 3, it is probable they were female presbyters.'

Drs. Dodd and Coke also, in their excellent commentary, it is remarkable, evidence the same thing, and cite the very same passage as well as another, with Dr. Macknight. On Rom. xvi: 1, after a lengthy and instructive introduction, they enter elaborately into the discussion of female preaching, and patiently compare this chapter with 1 Cor., xiv, where, it has generally been thought, the apostle forbids women from preaching. And reconcile the two chapters by considering the proper field for female ministers, was confined to their own sex. And for that work, they were solemnly set apart by regular and formal ordination. And add, 'In favor of this opinion, Grotius, on the verse before us, remarks, 'that in Greece there were ..... female presbyters, as well as deacons, for the instruction of their own sex; which female presbyters were ordained by the laying on of hands, till the council of Laodicea;' and for this he appeals to the eleventh canon of that council. This order of priestesses must grow out of the custom of women's holding separate assemblies for their mutual instruction and edification.'

Dupin, too, as before quoted, bears witness to the fact, "'that in the fourteenth century there were deaconesses in almost all churches.'" And the author who cites him says, "In the fifteenth canon of the council of Calcedon, commonly called, the fourth general council, assembled anno 451, is this passage: "A deaconess is not to be ordained before she is forty years' old." Here then is circumstantial evidence of the strongest kind, added to positive testimony,—in the ecclesiastical legislation regulating the time, or fixing the age, of the female candidate for 'holy orders!' This also is confirmed by that colossal divine and profound commentator, Dr. Clarke. In his comment on Rom. xvi: 1, after translating the Greek word 'diakonon' —a 'deaconess,' asserting that "there were deaconesses in the primitive church," and specifying the duties of their office, says, "They were chosen in general out of the most experienced of the church; and were ordinarily widows, who had borne children. Some ancient constitutions required them to be forty, others fifty, and others sixty years of age." And adds the following important testimony: "It is evident that they were ordained to their office, by the imposition of the hands of the bishop!!" And what is still more notable perhaps, he says, "and the FORM OF PRAYER used on the occasion is EXTANT in the apostolical constitutions!!" The Dr. also states the period of the continuance of the order of female ministers in the church. It appears, as before observed, that as long the church continued pure, WOMEN were not only allowed to preach, but also regularly ORDAINED to the office and work. And it is owing—not to any prohibition of the Almighty, but to the corruption of the church, and of the male ministers, that the 'order' has not continued to the present day, in unbroken succession. The Dr. closes his comment by stating that, "In the tenth or eleventh century, the order became extinct in the Latin Church; but continued in the Greek Church till the end of the twelfth century." And directs his readers to "See Broughton's Dictionary, article Deaconess." Finally here, be it observed, that the above authors give positive testimony to FACTS, and cannot therefore, be refuted by merely negative evidence.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Written for the Western Recorder.

Scraps from my Port-folio.

BY PHILOM.

1.

There is in the human mind a strong disposition to regard the antique with a degree of respect and reverence which is sternly denied to anything and everything called modern. Let an old book, statue, or painting, one around which antiquity has folded its mantle, gray and dark, be offered to view, and it is looked upon as a something sacred and almost worshipful. It becomes, as the case may be, at once a text-book, a model, or a standard. And to touch carelessly or to speak lightly of such venerable relics of olden times is to expose oneself to a serious charge of profanity and to the anathemas of all lovers of the "ancient regime." Why is this? Whence does it come that we are bound to bow in obedience to every-thing, provided it be covered with the dust and smell of the mould of antiquity? Are the writings of a Xenophon, statues of a Phidias, or the paintings of an Apelles really beter or intrinsically superior to those to which a more modern and humble date is assigned? I sincerely doubt it. In the cultivation and improvement of the useful and beneficial arts and sciences, at least, the nineteenth century has far outstripped the most renowned ages of antiquity. And her progress is yet an eagle one—onward and upward! She boasts names that are & shall be inscribed upon the pillar of their country's history. Their memory shall live and shine as stars in the already clustered constellations of the firmament of science and literature. Then, while we respect and admire, so far as truth will permit, the works of former times, whether civil or ecclesiastical—scientific or artistic, let us not blindly and superstitiously worship. Let us not in our respect for the past, forget the claims of the present. Too long have we wandered amid the broken shafts and crumbling piles of the shadowy past while the present has been neglected.—Extract.

2.

It is the sentiment of Revelation, and one to which the experience of ages responds in harmony, that man is born to trouble, or, in other words, human life is a drama of trial and affliction. Exceptions there are it is true: but how few such play a part upon the great stage of human action; the number is so few, as, in the mass of human beings, scarcely to be noticed or warrented as exceptions. The sources of misery are sown thickly within, and scattered thickly without us. They surround us in profusion. The Elements and seasons; the winds and weather; Profession and occupation; the dearest relations and fondest ties of social life; genius and intellect, the strugglings of the former to soar, and the patient investigating curiosity of the latter; the memory of the past, the feelings of the present, the prospects of the future, in a word, every relation and possession of life, from the highest, through all intermediate grades down to the lowest, has appended to it sources of grief, more or less. And when evil in reality does not shade the present, there are often imaginary ills, which, being equally painful as the former, are, therefore, so far equally real. But real evils are very often magnified by being looked upon through a false or gloomy medium and their pain is, consequently, aggravated. Were we careful to possess ourselves of clear conceptions of the true character of our afflictions; to view them as they really are and not as they appear colored through the medium of nervous fear, or morbid feeling; and were we as solicitous to derive from them that amount of moral instruction and improvement which, no doubt, our heavenly Parent designs we should; and did we, instead of indulging in improper reflections, endeavour to ascertain precise by their cause, and, in the removal of that, seek for the removal of the effect, I have no doubt a great many afflictions would prove rich blessings; at least, all would be much all eviated. One great cause of agravation in affliction is the thought, that our afflictions are singular; inherited by no one else, pertaining solely to ourselves, and that others have never been thus afflicted.—This thought is, however, founded in gross selfishness, and is therefore, wrong. If the same particular nerve in others has not been touched, a keener one has been made to quiver. Niether are our afflictions casual; but they are the touchings of the rod of heaven; nor are they penal, unless especially so marked. But they are disciplinary, and under the control of Him who is too wise to err, too holy to wrong any one of his creatures, and too good to inflict unnecessary evil.

3.

SIN, what has it done? What destruction has it not wrought? It has torn the crown of honor from the brow of man; it has desecrated the temple of his purity; it has kindled strange fire upon the altar of his heart; it has mingled false incense in the censor of his devotion; it has shaded the walks of Eden, faded the bloom and stolen the fragrance of its fairest and loveliest flowers; it has poisoned the waters of the fountain of human enjoyment; it has given birth to, and commissioned death; it breathes upon the air, and death rides in awful triumph upon the wings of the epidemic; through empires and nations, o'er kingdoms and states, amid the cities and towns, the villages and hamlets he guides his way; fans with his wing the cheek of thousands, and livid as ghastly corpses they crowd and swell his train!—Or, more like the march of time, stealthy and quiet, he stands upon the threshold of domestic life, for there is no place too holy and sacred to forbid his entrance. And in very mokery of the glee within fastens his basilisk eye upon the form of the lovely and beloved, & selects her as his victim; he blows through her life a breath of death—the carmine fades from the cheek; the smoothness from the brow; glossiness from the hair; rubiness from the lips; fulness and symmetry from the form; agility from the step; laughter and sparkling from the eye—and she, whose presence was the token of gladness; whose voice, silvered with joy woke up new feelings in the heart; clothing the lips of the father with words of gratitude to heaven for such a gift, while the mothers have danced with feelings of unmingled pleasure; whose hand was ever soft and smooth with kindness; whose heart was ever the temple of benevolence, while her words were but the echoes of the music of that temple; yes the idol of the household from its shrine is torn to do homage to the King of the tomb! And now the dew of death stands in thick beads upon that once polished brow; and ere long the grave worm in solemn mockery of former beauty, will sit in the eyeless socket, or, crawl through the chambers of the brain. This is death, and death is the offspring if sin. For "by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin." But is there no rescue? Is there no balm for the wounded heart? Are the smitten in spirit to languish forever? Is there no bow of hope to span the grave? "If man dies shall he live again? Yes, there is one whose name has power to hallow even death,—a confidence in whose merits will convert the last sigh of the world-weary soul into the Keynote of endless bliss—that name is JESUS! "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—"Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me;" and those shadows shall fly before the beams of the "Sun of Righteousness." Our last enemy and our strongest, even death as the effect of sin, shall be destroyed."

4.

All men are engaged in the persuit of happiness. A hope of its attainment, no matter in what it may be supposed to consist, swells every heart; nerves every arm; courts and finds a home in every bosom. This hope is not confined to any privileged class or favoured few; it sways the feelings of the peasent as effectually as it does those of his monarch. Though thus ardently pursued by all, yet, how few are favored with its constant companionship?—Alas! the moments are few, very few, of which it can, in truth, be said, they are unmixed, unalloyed. Pure happiness, happiness unshaded by a single cloud; happines unmixed with a single drop that might give it bitterness, does not appear to be the lot of mortals. There are moments oh! how sweet they be, when the soul appears to rise in all the strength of conscious superiority; delighting in its own fulness and smiling upon all groveling cares it leaves earth and roams amid the wonders of its ideal creations. But such fancyings are transient. A breath from the past may curl some leaf of memory's volume darkened by a painful remembrance, and the magic wreath is dissolved; or perhaps, a fear of the future, dark and dread, throws around the bright spot we now inhabit a shade that makes the soul quiver; and the gay vision fades away. But is man always to be as "a pendulem twixt a smile and a tear?" Is this his destiny, fated to him? NO. The gospel clothed with light, arrayed in the garb of gladness, comes with its hopes and its joys and weaves, even from the sufferings of the believer, a wreath of fadeless bloom. Like an angel undisguised it enters into the workings of our most secret feelings, moulding and harmonizing them into serenest complacency with the divine will for this is the true source of all true and permament human happiness. Like its great author it says to the waves of life, "Peace, be still." It kindles a torch to light the grave—drives back the fear of death—gilds the Tomb—leads to heaven—crowns with imperishable glory.

5

The heart of the christian is, as it were, a focus in which are concentrated the principles of the gospel and the graces of the Holy spirit; displaying from thence, as from a common center, their concentrated energy in the temper and conduct. As in a convex lens the united rays of light produce a burning heat, so a union of the doctrine and graces of the gospel in the heart of the christian produces love —warming love.

The famous philosopher, the really great Czar Peter, of Russia, whose memory will ever be the admiration of Europe, always rose two hours before day, and when he saw the morning break, he would express his wonder that any man should be so stupid as not to rise every morning to behold one of the most glorious sights in the universe. "Men take delight," said he, "in gazing on a picture, the trifling work of a mortal, and at the same time neglect one painted by the Deity himself. For my part," added he, "I am for making my life as long as I can, and therefore sleep as little as possible."

In the city of London, the deaths average about 1000 per week the births 1200.

Scientific.

Explanation of the Daguerreotype Process.

This important discovery is one of the most remarkable of modern times, and in its progress will doubtless be productive of many highly interesting and beneficial effects which few are prepared to anticipate, and as a brief description of it cannot fail to be acceptable to our readers, we have condensed from a popular writer a few general hints respecting it.

The Camera Obscura, it is generally known, is a contrivance for delineating on a white ground a living picture of whatever object may be presented to it. The Daguerreotype fixes this picture indelibly upon the surface of a plate previously prepared for the purpose. The plate consists of a thin leaf of copper, plated with silver, both metals together not being thicker than a card. The object of the copper is simply to support the silver, which must be the purest that can be procured.

Before the plate is placed in the camera there are certain operations to be performed.

1. The surface of the plate should be made perfectly smooth or highly polished. For this purpose it must be laid flat, with the silver side upward, upon several folds of paper for a be dding; and having been well polished in the usual way, the surface must be powdered equally and carefully with fine pumice. Then a little cotton wool dipped in olive oil, must be rubbed over the plate. A small portion of cotton must now be moistened with diluted nitric acid, and applied equally to the whole surface. The next thing to be done is to make the plate equally and thoroughly hot, when a white coating will be observed on the silver, which indicates that that part of the operation is finished. An even cold surface is next wanted, such as a metalic plate cooled almost to the freezing point by muriate of soda, and to this the heated plate must be suddenly transferred.

2. The next operation is to give the plate a coating of iodine. This is accomplished by suspending it over a dish with iodine divided in to small pieces. This process should be conducted in a darkened apartment. The requisite time for the condensation of the iodine varies from five minutes to half an hour. When this process is satisfactorily accomplished, the plate should be immediately fixed in a frame with catches and bands, and placed in the camera; and the transference from one receptable to another should be made as quickly as possible, and with only as much light as will enable the operator to see what he is doing.

3. The next operation is to obtain the drawing. Having placed the camera in front of the object to be represented, and the lens being adjusted to the proper focus, the ground glass of the camera is withdrawn, and the whole is left till the natural images are drawn by the natural light from the object. The time necessary to leave the plate for a complete delineation of the object, depends upon the intensity of the light.

4. Immediately after removing the plate from the camera, it is next held over the vapor of mercury, which is placed in a cup at the bottom of a box, and a sprit lamp applied below till the temperature rises to 140 degrees of Fahrenheit This process is intended to bring out the image, which is not visible when withdrawn from the camera.

5. The next operation is to fix the impression. In order to do this the coating on which the design was impressed must be removed, to preserve it from being decomposed by the rays of light. For this purpose the plate is placed in the trough containing common water, plunging and withdrawning it immediately, and the plunging it in a solution of salt and water till the yellow coating has disappeared.

This new science or art has been distinguished by different names. It was first called Photography, from two Greek words signifying writing by light. It was afterwards called the art of Photogenic drawing, or drawing producted by light. M. Daguerre, the discoverer gave it the name of Heliography, or writing by the sun; all which appellatives are derived from the Greek, and are expressive n some degree of the process.—Scientific American.

The Burning Wells of Kanawha.

The burning salt wells of Kanawha, Virginia, are a great curiosity. The immense discharge of combustible gas, the low temperature of the waters coming from a depth of 2,000 feet in the earth, and the great force of the ascending column, all combine to render these wells interesting and wonderful. Some of these walls have, it is said, exhausted the subterranean gasometer with which they are respectively connected. I am inclined to the opinion that he exhaustion of the gasometer was not the cause of the cessation of the discharge of gas, but that the shaft through which the gas and water passed has been so encrusted as to close italtogether, and thus prevent the escape of both the gas and salt water. Mr. Spencer, the former Superintendent of the New York State Salines, on his return from the Fossil Salt Mines in South Western Virginia, came around by the Kanawha Salines, which are in the North-Western section of that extensive State, and remained there a week. The salt made at Kanawha, annually, is equal to about two millions of bushels. The coarse alum salt is made there.—The price of salt is twenty-five cents for fifty pounds, last year fifty cents. The bitter water which is separated from the salt, in the progress of manufacture, is of great specific gravity; a sample which I have is 1964. A mine of cannel coal has been recently found within sixteen miles of these Salines—the quality is excellent. I have a sample of this coal, and a comparison with sample of foreign cannot coal, shows it to be uperior. Coal is used at Kanawha for heating the salt pans. As wood has risen in price at the New York State Salies, from $1 75 to$3 50 per cord, it is important to ascertain if the bituminous coal of the Corning mines cannot be used economically for the making of salt at Syracuse. This was one of the objects of Mr. Spencer's visit to Kanawha—to examine their bitumious coal furnaces.

Great improvements have been made at Saltville, of late. One of the proprietors, in a letter to me states, "that in the new process one half the fuel is saved, and two-thirds of the labor, and a salt of a very superior quality produced. Formerly $2 000 worth of kettles were broken in a year. Now no kettles are broken. Formerly the caking inside the pans was cut out with iron picks. Now fresh water is heated in the pan and the saline caking removed." Thus Yankee skill is reaching the bowels of the mountain of old Virginia.—New York Journal of Commerce.

New Experiment.

A recent work of science gives the following novel experiment which settles questions of some importance in philosophy.

"Two hundred pounds weight of earth were dried in an oven, and afterwards put into an earthen vessel. The earth was then moistened with rain water, and a willow tree weighed five pounds was placed therein. During the five years the earth was carefully watered with rain water or pure water the willow grew and flourished; and to prevent the earth being mixed with fresh earth, or dust blown on it by the winds, it was covered with a metal plate perforated with a great number of small holes, suitable for the free admission of air only. After growing in the air for five years, the willow tree was removed and found to weigh one hundred and sixty-nine pounds and about three ounces. The earth was then removed from the vessel, again dried in the oven, and afterwards weighed, it was discovered to have lost only about two ounces of its original weight; thus one hundred and sixty pounds of woody fibre, bark or root were certainly produced; but from what source? The air has been discovered to be the source of the solid element at least. This statement may at first appear to be incredible, but upon the slightest reflection its truth is proved, because the atmosphere contains carbonic acid, and is a compound of 714 parts by weight, oxygen, and 386 parts, by weight of carbon."

Variety.

ADDRESS

TO THE COLORED PEOPLE OF U. S. OF NORTH AMERICA.

St. Domingo, July 10, 1847.

Dear Friends: We, being native Americans who emigrated to this country in 1824, being now in body assembled, have resolved to offer to our brethren of the Unite States the law of emigration passed by our house of congress, on the 5th inst. It invites all strangers here to participate in our glorious liberty, without distinction of color; and all who will come by this invitation, will have their passage paid, at the rate of $14 per head; and those who will come with the avowed intention of becoming farmers, will have in addition to the payment of their passage, fifty acres of land, as a donation to them forever, together with the implements of husbandry, and a regular maintainance until they are able to maintain themselves; and they will be entirely exempt from military service, as also their offspring in order that they may attend to the agricultural pursuits. We presume that this law can fully be depended on, by all who may feel disposed to embrace its offers, as it is founded on necessity. As we have a very healthy climate, and, perhaps, one of the best soils in the world, with a generous population, all we stand in need of is American Society—or, in other words, tillers of the ground; in fact, by the aid of foreigners, this might be made a paradisaical garden. We have the full right of the liberty of conscience. We have a Methodist Church in the city of Port Plat, one in Samana, & one in this city, where we worship God according to the dictates of our consciences, without the least molestation. Our friends may depend on this information as being strictly true; and up to the present time we have a majority of colored population of more than two-thirds. We expect that many white people will accept this offer, as they seem generally more disposed for adventure than the colored. However, we hope that our friends will not let this fine opportunity pass without embracing it.

There is a vessel engaged to bring out emigrants. She is consigned to the house of Messrs. Amar & Co., New York. Persons interested will do well to call on the above gentlemen. Furthermore, should it become a general desire, any merchant who would choose to fit a out vessel, for the purpose of bringing out emigrants, will be sure to receive $14 a head, including all expenses, for as many as they will land here. If any merchants should like to have a guaranty, they could, by writing to our President on the subject. His name is "Pedro Santana," president of the Dominican Republic. It will not be as inconvenient to new comers hereafter as it was with us. We can give them all the necessary information how to conduct themselves in this country.

We remain, dear brethren, yours,
(Signed in behalf of the meeting,)
REV. JAMES FALLS, Chairman.
Elijah B. Gross, Secretary.

HOW TO ACQUIRE A LIBRARY.—Three cents a day, paid out by an apprentice boy for cigars, or what not,—amounts to —let us see! how much in a year? Three times three hundred and sixty five is ten hundred and ninety five, $10, 95; and this for five years, the average for apprenticeship in this country, amounts to the round sum of fifty four dollars, and seventy five cents.

Now take an apprentice boy, who is in the habit of smoking cigars, or drinking mint jullips—and that is no better —and let him make an estimate of what he thus absolutely throws away—and he will be surprised to find that twenty one cents a week is a very moderate estimate. And where there is one who thus throws away that amount a week how many are there for whom four times that sum will not suffice?

Take then, this very moderate sum as a standard, and we have the sum of 54,75 in five years—which all will agree is the same as sunk—yea, and a hundred times worse than sunk to the bottom of the sea! a sum sufficient to purchase a library of Book equal to a doctor's or lawyer's. It would buy a copy of Shakspeare, Webster's octavo Dictionary, a copy each of Rollin, Gibbon, and Bancrofi's Histories—all of which are indespensable by the way; to which it would add Young, Milton, Pope; Lock and Bacon, Combe Irving, Bryant, and a dozen others, of the very best English, and American clasics.

What apprentice, after having acquired such a knowledge of his craft, as will enable him to start into the world a useful member of the community, but will be better satisfied with the possession of such a library, thus acquired than with the recollection of having expended such a sum in a manner far from useful or necessary.

The remarks above are directed more especially to apprentices; but they will apply with equal truth to other classes of young men. Thousands are thrown away in that manner, which if appropriated in the way suggested, would open the way in numerous instances, to honor, fame, —and what is better than all—to happiness!

The Young Negro's Prayer.

A young negro, saved from a vessel which traded in slaves, had been landed on the coast of Sierra Leone, and placed under the care of a school-master named Thompson. One day, when the school was closed and the door shut, the master in passing heard a slight murmur; he approached and listened: it was the little negro boy, who prayed nearly in these words—"Lord Jesus, I thank thee that wicked men have come and taken me, and that King George's ship came afterwards and took the vessel of these wicked men, and brought me hither, where Massa Thompson has taught me to read, and to know Thee. But still I have a greater favor to ask of Thee. Send other bad men to take my father and mother, and order a vessel of King George to take the vessel of these bad men, and to bring hither my father and mother, in order that Massa Thompson may teach them also to read, and that they may know Thee, and that we may all go together to heaven." This was a singular prayer, you will, perhaps, say. True; but the poor child expressed what he felt, according to the degree of knowledge he possessed; and you know it is the heart, and not the words which the Savior regards.

On the evening of the same day, Mr. Thompson walked on the shore, and seeing little Tom, he said to him, "What are you doing here?" "I am come," he replied, "to see if the Lord Jesus has granted my prayer." The child continued thus for some time to visit the shore: & one evening he was seen returning, leaping and dancing and clapping his hands—"My prayer is heard," cried he, "my prayer is heard! my father and mother are come." Then taking Mr. Thompson by the hand, and leading him to the shore, he showed him two aged negroes. They were really his father and mother, who, having been made slaves at first, were now rescued by an English cruiser.

Thus had little Tom manifested the true spirit of prayer, not only in asking with simplicity and fervor a favor to which he attached a great value, but in waiting with patience, and hoping for the answer to the request which he had addressed to the Lord. This is prayer indeed!

A French paper, La Semaines, announces the invention of a steam plow, or rather a mode of digging by means of steam, from which great results are anticipated. The inventor is a young medical man, named Baraff. The paper states that one of two-horse power was in operation at the residence of the maker, who was constructing another of double that power. The machine proceeds along the field and digs the ground with the greatet precision. Two beams furnished with five mattocks each, act successively upon the soil, loosening it to the depth of 12 or 15 inches, and pounding it as small as compost. By using only one of the beams, a tillage of the usual depth can be effected.

Conference Proceedings.

From the Methodist Protestant.

PENNSYLVANIA CONFERENCE.

The Pennsylvania Conference convened at Hollister's Mills, on the 25th day of August, 1847, to hold its seventeenth annual session pursuant to appointment. James S. Furguson in the chair. Conference opened by reading a portion of Scripture and prayer. All its sessions were opened by similar religious exercises.

Secretaries.

E. S. H. Cobb, Daniel L. Braynard.

Transferred to Unstationed List: J. B. White.
Elected to Elder's orders: E. S. H. Cobb.
" to Deacon's orders: James Wilson

Received into the Itinerancy: Joseph Watrous, George Buckingham, Renaldo E. Gormon, W. B. France, Daniel L. Braynard, and Daniel Gormon.

APPOINTMENTS.—Stephen W. Allen, President. Chenango Circuit, Daniel L. Braynard; Wells and Burlington Circuit to be supplied; Quicks Bend and Albany, Alexander Lane; Rushville, John Hagans; Monroe, James Wilson, E. Watrous, Union, Renaldo E. Gormon, Salem, Joshua W. Rutledge, James S. Furgason; Canaan, Ambrose Abbot, George Buckingham; Sanford, Joseph Watrous; Lackawana Mission to be supplied; Elmira Mission, William Vercoe; Bloomsburg Mission, Robert Baird; Stroudsburg Mission, Wm. Bortree, Daniel Gormon; Broom Mission. Palmer Owen; E. S. H. Cobb, Conference Missionary.

Resolved, That the last day in this year be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, especially for the sanctification of the preachers and members of the Church.

Monday afternoon, 5 o'clock, August 30th, 1847, Conference adjourned to meet in South Canaan meeting house, in Wayne County, Pa., on the last Wednesday in August, 1848.

E. S. H. COBB, Sec'y.

From the Methodist Protestant.

VERMONT CONFERENCE.

The Vermont Annual Conference met, according to adjournment, at South Granville, N. Y., September 8th 1847.

Conference opened by the President. Chandler Walker was chosen Secretary, and Reuben Buttolph, Assistant Secretary.

Hiram Carpenter received into the Itinerancy and ordained Deacon.

Heman Bruce, formerly of the New Jersey Conference, received on his recommendation.

Luther Chamberlin, Heman Green, and Wm. J. Carr transferred to the unstationed list.

George Smith, Conference Steward.

STATIONS OF THE PREACHERS.—Peleg Weaver, President. Balston Circuit, John W. Dorris,—an Assistant to be supplied; Providence Circuit left without a preacher at their request; Chester Circuit, Ransom Speer, Granville Circuit, George Smith. Hiram Carpenter. Shelburn Station, Levi S. Smith, Onion River Circuit. Charles C. Burnett Calais Circuit, Done Cook. Jesse Turner, Home Missionary on Bethel Mission; William Hart, Home Missionary on Grand Isle Mission; Heman Bruce, Conference Missionary.

Chandler Walker, J. D. Esmond, Reuben Buttolph, Anson H. Spear, and Alpheus Carey, left without appointments at their own request.

UNSTATIONED MINISTRES AND PREACHERS.—Balston Circuit, Henry Harris, Licentiate; Providence Circuit, Asa Mosier Deacon; Chester Circuit, Alden Davis, Elder; Granville Circuit, Zina Boyington, Elder—Thomas Carpenter Joseph Wetmore, Deacons—Jeremiah Rogers, Licentiate; Union River circuit, Nathaniel Stockwell, E. Stephens, Licentiates; Calias Circuit. Marsh P. Ladd, Licentiate. John R. Dinsmore, Licentiate; Essex Circuit, no returns, and left without a Preacher.

Three meeting houses on Balston circuit, worth $1000 each $3000; 3 on Granville Circuit, $2000; 1 on Providence Circuit $800; 1 on Shelburn Station, $3000; 1-4 Onion River $500; 1 Parsonage on Onion River Circuit, $500 —tot al, $9 800.

The next meeting of this Annual Conference to be held in Shelburn, Vt., on the third Wednesday in September, 1847.

Passed the same resolutions on slavery and on finance that were passed last year.

Had a very harmonious session.

Not able to give the precise number in society not having had returns from all of the circuits: the probable number is about 700, one hundred less than last year.

Peace and harmony prevail at present throughout the district—prospects brightening—a revival commenced on Balston Circuit—a number of conversions. Yours in love,

GEORGE SMITH, Pub. Com.

From the Methodist Protestant.

TENNESSEE CONFERENCE.

Extracts from the Minutes of the Nineteenth Annual Conference of the Tennessee District of the Methodist Protestant Church; held at New Concord Camp ground, Ohio County, Ky., October 1st to 4th 1847.

At 11 o'clock the President O. Potts, took the chair, and called the Conference to order by reading a portion of Scripture and prayer.

On motion, B. F. Duggan was appointed Sec.

The Conference adjourned to hear the introductorry sermon, by B F. Duggan, at the stand.

Received into the Itinerancy: J. C Crews, J. Hutchinson.

R. J. W. Baldmain was received by a certificate from the President of the Alabama District.

Elected to Deacon's orders: S. H. Miller, C. Askew, who were ordained.

Elected to elder's orders: R. P. W. Balmain, B. H. Steward, and ordained.

Standing District Committee: J. L. Hawkins, J. Camper, Allen Wallis, J. L. Armstrong J. Rucker, A. Landers.

NUMBER IN SOCIETY.—Union Circuit, 219; Liberty Circuit 153; Obion Circuit, 165; Trenton Circuit 155; Bolivar Circuit. 115; Providence and New Concord. 309; Hopewell Circuit. 138; Licking Circuit, 82; Jefferson Circuit, 14; Buffalo Mission, 34. Total, 1382.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.—O. Potts, President. Union Circuit, B. F. Duggan. Liberty Circuit, J. Camper, B. B. Hunt, Obion Circuit J. C. Crews, J. C. Lewis, P. White, Trenton Circuit, S. H. Miller, J. Jolliff, Bolivar Circuit, J. R. Robertson, J. H. Cobb, Providence & New Concord Circuit, J. H. Harper, T. Burgess. R. P. W. Balmain; Hopewell Circuit, John Sharp, R. Hooper, E. G. Williams, Jefferson Circuit, J. Hutchinson, Licking Circuit, unsupplied; Buffalo Mission, R. W. Morris, J. L. Hawkins, J. Holms, C. Smith, G. Yost. B. H. Stewart, Home Missionary. Wm. A Sharp, C. H Hines, left in the hands of the President.

On motion, Conference adjourned, to hold its next annual session at Union Campground, Bedford County, Tennessee; to commence on Friday before the first Sunday in October, 1848; at which time there will be an introductory sermon by S. H. Miller, on the call to the Ministry.

B. F. DUGGAN, Sec.

Religious Intelligence.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Fredericktown, O., Nov. 11, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: Having to write you on business: I wish to say to those interested; that thro' the good providence of the Parent of all good, I arrived with my family, on this (Frederick Circuit,) the second week after the rise of Conference: and found the Circuit in a good, healthy condition. Peace and Christian fellowship reigning throughout its borders. This is truly a pleasant Circuit. Its membership possessing much of the spirit of Mutual Rights: and Christian liberality, such as seem, not only to say, 'be ye fed;' or 'be ye clothed;' but furnish the means for its accomplishment: this I think a good mark of love for the great work of saving souls. Oh, that the Lord may enable us to feel more of its importance.

Our first Quarterly Meeting was held the sixth and seventh inst. At this meeting we were favored with the very acceptable labors of our estimable President, (Br. Clancy,) who labored with more than usual zeal, and to the satisfaction to the edification of all who heard him, so that we have grounds to believe that great good will ultimately be the result. We are looking forward for yet better days on this Circuit. Oh that we may far more than realize our most sanquine expectation. Yours in love,

J. S. THRAP.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO, THURSDAY, DEC. 2. 1847.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL.—PRINTER.

ANNUAL REGISTER, 1848.—We still send a copy by mail to each subscriber who pays, $2 in advance for 9th volume of the Western Recsrder. Should any mistake or omission occur, we desire to be informed of it.

THANKSGIVING.—Since our last, we see that the States of Mississippi and Louisiana also joined in the observance of Thursday Nov. 25th, as Thanksgiving day.

☞ When a correspondent sends his first article for the press, and negleçts to pay postage, we infer that that writer wastes his postage money for tobacco. We knew such a circumstance, somewhere in the great state of Ohio, less than a year ago. His article however was considered to have some merit.

THANKS.—We are under obligation to Brother S. Morrison, Freeport, Ia., for a copy of Dr. David Dale Owen's Reports, of the Geological Survey of the State of Indiana. This document we have for several years been anxious to meet with. Also, to Brother E. A. Wheat, of Elba, New York, for copies of the Minutes of the Genesee Conference, in pamphlet form. If the secretaries of the different Conferences, would annually favor us in this way, we should be essentially aided in posting up the statistics of our church. Much obliged.

DISAPPOINTED.—When we open a letter from a brother minister, and don't find funds enclosed, or the names of several new subscribers.

STILL WORSE.—When we receive a letter from a brother minister, and find that he only wishes us to announce a quarterly meeting, or to change the address of his paper, & has left us to pay his postage, we cannot help thinking that such a brother is guilty of a small deficiency.

NO BETTER.—When brethren of distant States and Conferences who have heard what a good paper ours is, write to us, requesting us to send them some specimen numbers of our paper that they may see how they like it; why, it is a pleasure to us to do so; but when they make us pay postage in such case, if intentionally done, we consider it a positive imposition. And in case such enquiring brethren should be pleased with our paper, (as we trust they will) and send us subscriptions, they should certainly forward the pay in advance.

PROMISES.—We well remember who promised some time ago, to remember us, and pay up before this time, but have not yet exactly done that thing. We can't forget those promises, and have begun to think strange, quite strange, that those promises are not remembered by brother so and so.

NOT BAD.—A writer in the last number of the Cumberland Presbyterian, answers the objection of the chewers of tobacco, that it is a plant of nature, and is not therefore to be refused. He says—

"I do not shape my argument against the plant. I have no doubt but our Divine Creator made the plant for a wise and benevolent purpose, but I have no idea that he designed it to be chewed up and spit all over the whole face of his fair creation—I object to the use, and not to the plant."

By the by, we wish that those subscribers who discontinued taking the Western Recorder because we thought it our duty to take ground against the use of tobacco, would subscribe for the Cumberland Presbyterian. It is an excellent paper.

EX-PRESIDENT TYLER, made a call at Cincinnati one day last week on his way South. Did not leave the Steamboat.

REV. WM. HUGHEY.—We are gratified to learn that Brother Hughey, an old itinerant of the Ohio Conference, is again 'in the field,' Clarksburg Curcuit being left vacant, by Brother Pelan, our old friend H. is attending to the said Circuit, 'active as a boy.' So says Brother Carson of Bainbridge. Success, we say to the labors of Brother H. and we trust he will find it convenient withal, to do us a clever agency for the Western Recorder.

PICTORIAL SATURDAY COURIER.—This is a mammouth pictorial sheet, intended for the Christmas and New Year's holidays, issued from the Saturday Courier press, Philadelphia. It contains more than fifty engravings, a great portion of which pertain to recent battle scenes and incidents.

Tobacco.

We are glad to find a portion of the religious press is waking up, and raising its voice against the common use of tobacco. The editor of the Western Christian Advocate, which we apprehend is one of the most extensively circulated papers in the West, in his last paper, makes an appeal to professing Christians concerned, which we conceive should be seriously pondered, and promptly heeded. He says, "A hundred tobacconarians could support, with the price of their gratification, a missionary in a foreign land; and all the tobacconarians of Christendom could supply the entire heathen world with bibles in ten years! How professing Christians intend to answer at the bar of God for their misapplied moneys, we profess not to understand." We notice that in the next column of the Advocate is one of Charles Gutzluff's Reports from China. The letter thus commences: "The Chinese Association has taken efficient measures to circulate the holy Scriptures throughout the empire. We can sell the New Testament at five cents a copy.—China must be converted by means of the Bible; and we trust in the Lord that he will give us means to print it and awaken every where in the the people a hungering after the Word of God." Now if the sum of five cents will furnish a copy of the New Testament to the Chinaman; and the Chinese Association are praying for means to print and send it abroad to the hundreds of millions of that benighted nation, is it not humiliating that professing Chistians should be expending upon an unnatural and viciating appetite means which might be employed in enlightening and saving those perishing heathen? How many hundreds and thousands in this land might, by denying themselves this unworthy indulgence, appropriate almost daily, or at least weekly, a sufficient sum to furnish a copy of the New Testament to the heathen.

We are glad to find that some ministers are discontinuing the use of tobacco, determined hereafter to be more consistent examples to the flock. It did us good to see our old friend M'G. at the recent session of the Ohio Conference, and who had been a member of that body from its first session. He stated that he had pursued the practice for forty-nine years, and now the fiftieth had been his jubilee. He had for the year past refrained from the habit, to the evident advantage of his health and enjoyment. Another brother minister we saw at the Muskingum Conference, who broke off from the practice a year previous upon hearing the lecture of Br. Springer at Steubenville. He still stood firm, and stated that he would not for any consideration be induced to resume the habit. We lately had the pleasure of receiving a letter from a minister belonging to the Pittsburgh Conference, stating that he had discontinued the practice, after he had pursued it for thirty years, and expressed a hope that he should not 'backslide.' Stand fast, brother.

A COUNTY WITHOUT INTEMPERANCE, AND A COUNTY WITHOUT CRIME.—It seems that the County of Barnstable, Massachusetts, has little further use for Courts and Juries, for Lawyers, Sheriffs, Constables, or Justices of the Peace. When we were in Cincinnati two or three months ago, an able Lawyer was holding forth in that city on the subject of Temperance, before large audiences. He stated that he was from Barnstable Co., Massachusetts, where the semi-annual Court had lately convened as usual, but found no cases whatever upon the docket! It seems that the cause of Temperance, and the cause of Peace, had taken such deep root in that county, that crime had well nigh disappeared, & litigation got into disuse. Of course, our legal friend, and perhaps others could be spared to go out upon a mission in the good cause of Temperance. The circumstance is an interesting one, and we almost feel proud to claim that said Barnstable County as our birth place. We meet with the following paragraph in reference to this matter in Cist's Advertiser.

A Peaceable Community.

Barnstable, Mass., Sept. 10.

The Court of Common Pleas for this peaceable county has been in session here for its semi-annual term; for, though there was an able Judge present in the form of Judge Ward, a suitable posse of officers, headed by the energetic Sheriff Hinkley; the full complement of Grand and Petit Jurors, without a missing man of the pannel; a melodious crier, in the person of the prompt Mr. Blish, to open the court; a learned clergyman, Mr. Palfrey, to make the prayer in conformity to the pious usages of our ancesters; and a bar full of lawyers qualified to maintain either side of any cause, yet after all, not a case, civil or criminal, was found for the juries. In six months not two men could be got to law with each other, and nobody had committed a crime that required a verdict of guilty or not guilty.—The like cannot be said for any like number of forty thousand civilized people in the world. It is one of the good fruits of the principles planted by the Pilgrims who first landed at Provincetown on the end of good Cape Cod.

SEARS' MAGAZINE.—The Dec. number of this valuable work has been received, which closes the volume. It contains pictorial descriptions of the States of Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin and Texas. Amongst the embellishments are views of St. Louis, Milwaukie, Southport, Galveston and Houston. The number is very interesting. Mr. Sears has made arrangements for an improved volume for 1848. We shall publish his prospectus.

GOLDEN RULE.—This is the title of a monthly publication in quario form, by Rev. D. F. Newton, Covington, Ky. at fifty cents per annum. Its size is compensated in quality, for though small, it contains more good things than half a dozen popular mammoth sheets.—Take up any number of the 'Golden' and you will not go amiss for something good. We believe it is all good. It devotes much attention to the Temperance cause, and to other reforms of various extravigances of life and society, but especially the common use of tobacco. Br. Newton calls this reform the cause of God. We have no doubt his paper will do much good.

PITTSBURGH COMMERCIAL JOURNAL.—This excellent weekly newspaper, has just been again enlarged, and is now a mammoth sheet. Each number contains reading matter enough to make a book, embracing much interesting reading matter, and the general intelligence, of all sorts. Always glad to see the Journal come. Weekly paper, $2 per year. R. M. Riddle, publisher.

THE MESSAGE.—The Annual Message of the President is looked for next week. If it should prove a little longer than the one we had last year, what will the printers do for X's? The words Mexico and Texas occurred so many hundreds of times in the last Message, that the type setters in many offices, could much as ever find enough of the the letter x for the occasion!

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent

Written for the Western Recorder.

Temperance Cause.

MR. EDITOR: The Springfield Temperance Society in conjunction with the Putnam Division of the Sons of Temperance, have appointed a committee to make arrangements for the purpose of bringing the subject of temperance before the people of this county on the west side of the Muskingum river.

The plan proposed is to hold meetings in the various townships and districts when it may be practicable.

To distribute papers, essays, statistical information—and procure as many orators as will volunteer in the cause.

One great object will be to show the demoralizing tendencies of strong drink as a beverage—Its destruction of human life! its destruction of property, of social happiness, of virtue, law, and religion!!

The folly and hypocrisy of one professing to be a friend to his fellow man, to his country, or the cause of God, and not use his talents, his influence, and his example to drive this hydra-headed monster from society!!

And especially to wake up our countrymen to the importance of calling upon our law-makers to interpose the authority of law, to the diabolical traffic of intoxicaring liquors!—

Small donations will be required from the friends of the cause for the purchase of such papers and tracts as may be deemed useful.

Respectfully submitted,

THE COMMITTEE.

Putnam, O., Nov. 30, 1847.

Ecclesiastical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Conference Collections.

NO. II.

MR. EDITOR: In my last I referred to several points, in relation to this subject, on which, I then, had not time, or space, to make such remarks as I thought called for, which I propose attending to at my leisure.

The first thing I shall more particularly notice is the argument already alluded to, drawn from the Discipline (See 11th Ed. pa. 70,) where the General Conference makes it the duty of circuit Stewards to raise Conference Collections. It is inferred hence that the Annual Conference cannot make it the duty of any one else to raise such collections.

The constitution (Art. 7 Sec. 3.) we have already shewn, authorizes the Annual Conference "to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to defray the expenses of the itinerant ministers, preachers and their families; to raise the amount of their salaries," &c. Now, it will be recollected that it is the General Conference which charges the duty of conference collections upon the circuit Stewards, but, that, it is the constitution—which is paramount authority to the General Conference—that confers the power to make financial "rules and regulations" upon the Annual Conferences. And the Gen. Conference has by its own acts declared that it does not consider itself at liberty to interfere with any power which is already defined to the Annual Conferences by the Constitution. For instance, the constitution grants to each Annual Conference, (See Dis. pa. 20) the power to "regulate the manner of elections within its own District;" consequently, the General Conference in giving rules for electing delegates to the Annual Conferences (See Dis. pa. 54) provides that said rules shall only operate "where an Annual Conference shall omit or decline to prescribe the mode for the election of delegates," thus acknowledging the paramount authority of the Constitution, and the illegality of its acting on questions confiled by that instrument exclusively to the Annual Conference, only where the latter "omits to act."

The only consideration, which we perceive, that can be offered against this argument is drawn from the Dis. page 24, where the constitution gives the General Conference power "to devise ways and means for raising funds," and thus seemingly gives that body, on this subject, concurrent jurisdiction with the Annual Conferences. Our reply is, that the power to make financial "rules and regulations" is expressly granted, in the constitution, to the Annual Conferences, and, in the passage above, only impliedly to the Gen. Conf. Implied powers are always doubtful ones, and never can conflict with those which are clearly and positively expressed. The General Conference may have power to make rules governing financial matters where the Annual Conferences "omit" to act on the subject as in the case of elections refered to. But where an Annual Conference has adopted a set of financial regulations the power of the General Conference must cease, else the constitution has been guilty of creating conflicting jurisdictions. And, by the way, there is wisdom in this arrangement of the Discipline; because, from the varied sentiments and habits of the people, over such an extent of country as the church designed to operate, no one set of rules could be supposed to suit every section of the work. The Annual Conferences can, therefore, vary them to suit the exegencies of the case.

But even admitting the rule of the General Conference, charging the duty of Conference collections upon the circuit Stewards, to be of binding force, and that the rule cannot be superceded by an act of the Annual Conference, still the An. Conferences has power, by virtue of the constitutional provision above quoted, to require the superintendents to attend to the same duty also; more especially when it is assertained, by long experience, that the General Conference rule is of little or no practical utility. And it is a burning shame for an Annual Conference to sit, inactive, with free powers to remedy the evil, and look upon a rule, which, from the very nature of the case, must be inefficient, and not only make no effort to relieve the poor preachers, who travel the outskirts of the work, but seemingly countenance such men as wishing to shew their great ability at legislation, throw cold water on efforts which are made for the relief of those needy laborers. And if this thing is continued, little confidence can be had in in the humanity of the body. But from our knowledge of a majority of the members, we shall be much mistaken, if, when they come to understand this thing, they do not treat such men as their merits deserve.

As it regards the opinion of the chair referred to in our last, that the "Annual Conference could do no act to give official character (that is, to prescribe official duties) to its members;" the assertion is too absurd to merit any serious attention. It is passing strange that any man making pretentions to intelligence would risk his reputation for correctness with such a declaration. We only notice it because it was part and parcel of the effort made at our last Conference to shield such superintendents as were delinquent in their attention to Conference collections.—"The Annual Conference can do no act to give official character to its members," eh! And yet the constitution gives it "power" "to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to defray the expences of the itinerant ministers and their families;" "to make such special rules and regulations as the peculiarites of the district may require;" "to prescribe and regulate the mode of stationing the ministers and preachers within the district;" "each Annual Conference shall have exclusive power to make its own rules and regulations for the admission and government of colored members within its district," &c., (See Dis. pages 20 and 21) and yet, forsooth, it can "do no act to give official character to its members!" Let the Annual Conference make "rules" on any of the subjects above referred to; then let the superintendent refuse to carry them into operation, and he will very soon find the Conference can effect his "official character" by removing him from office (See Dis. pa. 38) and placing him as an assistant or transfering him to the unstationed list.

From the view we have here taken of the powers of the Annual Conference, over the subject of Finance, it is clear, that, when that body passed a rule making it the duty of the chair to ask the superintendent, on the annual examination of his character, whether he had attended to the Conference collections, that it was the will of the Conference he should attend to that duty. And that body having power to enforce the duty, it was sheer quibling, such as a two shilling pettifogging lawyer would be ashamed of, to attempt to shield the delinquent from censure. Indeed, it is worse than quibling—it is that species of anarchy which is the deadly bane of all well ordered governments. And, if possible, its bearing upon the poor and pennyless preachers, is such an outrage upon humanity, as to make it still worse than all these. And bear it in mind, reader, that the persons who thus interpose their influence to weaken the efforts in behalf of the needy itinerants, are, we believe, all ministers, who take very good care to appropriate to themselves the best situations in the Conference. Some of them go as fine and as slick as if they had every morning hopped out of a band box, while their poor fellow itinerant, from the frontiers of the work, clad with rags, has scarcely one cent in his pocket to take him to his next field of labor.

"Oh! wod kind heaven the giftie gie us,
To see oursel as others see us."!

Very respectfully your's, &c..

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, O., November 27th, 1847.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MRS. SALLY BROWN,

Consort of David Brown, Sen., departed this life October 6th, 1847, in the 63d year of her age.

Sister Brown was born in the State of New Hampshire where she experienced religion in early life. Her parents, John and Huldah Hubbard, being members of the Baptist Church she also became a member of the same. Shortly after her marriage her husband settled in the State of Vermont where she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, there being no church of the former persuasion in the neighborhood in which she then resided. With her husband she emigrated to Ohio in 1814 and settled in Scioto county.—She remained a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for nearly forty years when she attached herself with most of her family to the Methodist Prot. Church. My own acquaintance with our departed sister commenced a little over a year ago. During that acquaintance we can bear testimony to her christian character. The gospel of Christ was her delight; whilst Jesus was the theme of her conversation. I do not know that I ever visited her but her conversation would turn upon the subject of religion. Her attendance upon the means of grace was regular, and whilst in the house of prayer her whole soul appeared to be engaged in the services.—But she has been taken from us! We shall no more hear her voice in the class-room and prayer-meeting, or behold her attention to the gospel. However if faithful we expect to meet her in a better world as her end was peace. From the commencement of her disease she was under the impression that she would not recover. But this gave her no alarm. A few days before she died she directed my attention to the text from which she desired me to preach her funeral discourse, and to a hymn to be sung over her grave. About two days after this, supposing herself to be dying she called her family to her, giving to each member her farewell charge, encouraging those she supposed to be on their way to heaven, warning the rest; not forgetting two of her sons, who were absent. May her afflicted husband and children remember her dying words. The husband has lost an affectionate and pious wife, the children a beloved and tender mother; but if her last advice is followed, no doubt but they will meet her where parting will be no more. After her farewell charge to her family she still lingered with us for two days when her happy spirit took its flight we have no doubt to a better world.—Our society at Wesley Chapel has met with a loss; but our loss is her gain.

W. W. TIPTON.

News of the Week.

Accidents on Railroads.

A correspondent of the the American and Gazette, in view of the many accidents that have lately occurred upon railroads, calls the attention of railroad proprietors to the coupling of the cars. He says well, that while it is true passengers should not stand outside when the cars are in motion, death is a dreadful penalty for a little thoughtlessness or imprudence; and offers the following suggestions:

Could not the cars be so constructed as when joined to form as it were one continuous car, with the intervals or spaces between well secured by an iron railing or door on each side, which might be kept locked, if necessary, and opened and closed by the conductors at every stopping place. The platforms between the cars might be covered over entirely, so as to form but one floor, on which passengers could securely walk from one car to the other; the coupling rods might be increased and made more substantial—and in addition to these improvements, an inclined board, the person who might fall from the cars beyond the reach of the wheels, might be added to great advantage, and would doubless save many lives; this might be let down when in motion, or when passengers are entering or leaving the cars.

We hope the railroad companies will take this matter under consideration, and see if various means cannot be resorted to, to make this mode of traveling more secure. Putting benevolence out of the question, they would lose nothing by a little more attention to the safety of their passengers.—S. E. Post.

Horrible Murder.

A respectable farmer by the name of Izry Roberts, living in Burlington county, New Jersey, was murdered in his wagon on the Moorstown road, about three miles from Camden, on Saturday evening last. The inquest makes it evident that he was shot from behind, while sitting in the seat of the wagon. the murderer probably was sitting in the back part of it. A young man with a gun was seen to jump out of the wagon shortly afterwards, by two boys, and he inquired of them the road to the ferry—he also was seen at the ferry, and the pocket-book of the man was found in a canal-boat near there.

Mr. Roberts was a member of the Society of Friends, and is said to have been much beloved and respected by all who knew him. As he had no enemy, the only motive of the murderer could have been money—of which the murdered man is supposed to have had over a hundred dollars about him. The neighbors and friends of Mr. Roberts have offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer and the Governor of New Jersey will doubtless at least double the reward. With the clue that the officers of justice have, it is almost impossible that he should escape detection. The whole community is interested that nothing should be left undone to bring the perpetration of so brutal and cold-blooded a murder to condign punishment.

Since writing the above, we learn that the reward has been increased to $1.200.—S. E. Post.

TERRIBLE GALE.—An extract of a letter from Grenada, Oct. 25, 1847, received in New York says:

There was a severe gale of wind on the night of the 11th inst., which injured Trinidad and Tobago greatly. At the latter island it was very severe. About seven hundred houses were destroyed. Nearly all the estates have lost their work houses, and fully one third their crops.

DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.—We learn from the Indiana S. Journal that a shocking accident happened to Governor Whitcomb, on the down train of railroad cars on the 16th, at Edinburgh. The Governor had stepped off the cars for a few moments, and was about stepping on again while the cars were in motion. His foot slipped and he fell between the cars and the platform of the depot, the cars whirling him around and crushing his thighs as they went. The Governor was insensible for some time after he was extricated, but finally recovered consciousness. The exact character and extent of the injury, we are unable to state; but from what we are told, it will be some time, if ever, before he can recover.

MORE OF THE CAMDEN MURDER.—We learn that the individual who is supposed to have been the muderer of Mr. Roberts, was seen in the woods with a gun, by several persons, on Saturday afternoon, near the spot where the foul assassination was perpetrated. Also, that about six o'clock on Saturday evening, this same individual, in company with another man, is reported to have stopped a wagon, and asked permission to ride for a short distance; but the request was refused, owing to the wagon in question having been sufficiently burthened. This took place on the Moorestown road. near the scene of murder. Some of the persons who saw the suspected individual, think that they could identify him. We have likewise heard a rumor to the effect that Mr. Hugg, of Camden, had caused a man to be taken into custody at or near Frankford, Pa., under circumstances of suspicion. The rewards now offered for the apprehension of the blood-stained miscreant amount to $1200—i. e., $500 offered by the friends of the late Mr. Roberts, $500 by the Governor of New Jersey, and $200 by the Mayor and City of Camden.

A COMPARISON.

A Virginian, travelling in Massachusetts, writes from Springfield, to the editor of the Richmond Whig, expressing his astonishment at the enterprise of the people. He also furnishes a table, carefully compiled, of the comparative value of manufactures and agriculture of the free and slave States, the summing up of which is as follows:

	Slave States.	Free States.
	$107,934,996	$397 965 522
Produce of the South - - - -	107,934 996
Balance against us - - - - - -	290,030,526
Excess of agricultural produce in favor of the North, as heretofore stated - - - - - - - - - -		52,707,913
To give the North and West equal territory with us, for agriculture, as per last statement - - - -		459,000,000
The same equality for manufacturing as for agriculture, these States produce - - - - - - - - -		262,000.000
Leaving us in all justice in the vocative - - - - - - - - - -		1 054 728 459

"This is simply two pursuits—agriculture and manufactures. Where will it leave us when I shall add on commerce to this terrible exposure!"

He proceeds to note some curious facts, among others, the following, which he treats in a style which South Carolina will bear rather more patiently than if the writer were a Northerner:

"In making musical instruments, South Carolina has not one cent invested; neither has she in fire arms. When she attempted to annul the laws of Congress, and set at defiance her obligations to her sister States, she sent to this State for guns, swords, cannon, and even musical instruments, to give enthusiasm to her people and marshal them against their brethren of the Union. The Yankee boys charged her just about twice as much as they would any one else. At the same time, they could have formed a dozen companies of the less noisy, but brave people, who work hard for their living, and marched to Carolina, and frightened all these warriors out of the State. Those Nullification muskets are still in Carolina, where they will remain as useless lumber. I respectfully submit to her politicians, when they want to fight again, to learn to manufacture their instruments of war and defence. All the other states have something invested in this business except this little war State.—Nat. Era.

A CONTRAST

But, another Virginian tells some home-truths of the Old Dominion. He has just been contemplating the wonderful prosperity, of Ohio, under her Free Labor Institutions, and turns with a melancholy eye to the "Mother of States." We quote from an editorial in the Richmond (Va.) Republican, of September 4th. the passage is a most striking one:

"Neglect and decay seem to have laid their hands upon the commerce, the enterprise, and the education of this old commonwealth. Its noble harbors, with here and there a straggling sail look like huge 'banquet halls deserted.' Its beautiful rivers are impeded and their value impared by obstructions, which the least exertion of enterprise would remove, Its boundless water-power, sufficient to propel more manufactories than Old England can boast, waste themselves in the sea. Its principal work of improvement, the James River Canal, crawls onward, with snail-like pace, and when it draws nigh to the Blue Ridge, pauses for years, as if the shadow of the mountains had chilled it to the centre. Its legislative charter, long and anxiously sought, seem to be, when granted, objects of distrust. Fortune presents her flowery favors, but we hesitate to grasp them with a strong hand, lest they conceal some unobserved thorns. Our principal cities remain almost stationary, while many of our villages have the delapidated, ancient look of towns 'gone to seed.' And, amid all this, ignorance prevails to an unprecedented extent, some eighty thousand of our people not being able to read the title deeds of their salvation and their freedom if they were put into their hands.

"Leave this scene of desolation, and cross the Ohio. The roar of steam falls upon your ear; cultivated fields meet the eye; the busy hum of manufacturing industry sounds upon the air. You behold beautiful villages, with an aspect of rural neatness and industry, as well as beauty; you see growing towns, full of life, bustle, and animation; you arrive at a Queen city, which, containing forty years ago a few straggling huts, has now a population of eighty thousand souls, and is filled with elegant edifices, both public and private, vieing with the palaces of the merchant princes of Europe. Here you will meet with no inconsiderable number of Virginians, who have devoted their wealth and energy to the foundations of a new State. Or, if you choose to travel northward, by way of the Ohio and Erie Canal, you may pass silently and steadily, for days and nights through a country, not only rich in natural resources, but with every acre highly cultivated; the marks of the recent forest will be fresh, and yet, almost upon the very spot where it stood, town after town rises before your sight, their street filled with an active and enterprising population, and exhibiting, even to the eye of a transient observer, every evidence of energy and thrift. Thus you journey on, until at last, as you approach the Northern border, a view is presented that will almost lead you to imagine you are approaching an Atlantic seaport. The flags and sails of vessels are before you, not only schooners, but heavy brigs and large ships are there, their tall masts visible for miles, while, ever and anon, an immense steamer urges her way slowly and majestically, amid a crowd of other craft, with which the harbor of Cleveland is often literally choked up. There you are, on the northern borders of Ohio, in one of the most beautiful cities of the world, while before you spreads the bright expanse of that noble lake whose waves reflect the unquiet spirit of man, and what, with storm and steam, know no rest.

"What Virginian can think of these things, without resolving to put forth every power of body and mind for the regeneration of a Commonwealth with which Ohio can bear no comparison, in the extent and variety of her natural advantages? There is abundance of wealth in the soil—there is a superabundance of energy in the Virginia character, if it be only rightly directed, to make this Commonwealth, what the God of Nature designed her, the greatest, wealthiest, and most powerful member of the American Confederacy. If her people could only have a breathing-spell from party politics for eight years; if, during that time, they would permit the revolutions of '98—'99 to take a profound nap, and, instead of discussing abstractions, dig ditches, lay down iron rails, and build school-houses, we should have a State worthy the name, the bright traditions, and the illustrious destiny of the OLD DOMINION."

Good advce, this? And the people of Western Virginia begin to see that the right way to carry it into effect is, first of all, to remove that which prevents the institution of schools and the construction of canals and railroads.—Nat. Era.

THE DRAIN OF EMIGRATION.

This is most forcibly presented by Dr. Ruffner, of Virginia, to whose late address on the subject of Slavey, we referred in our last number:

"We esteem it a sad, a humiliating fact, which should penetrate the heart of every Virginian, that from the year 1790 to this time, Virginia has lost more people by emigration, than all the old free states together. Up to 1840, when the last census was taken, she had lost more by nearly 300,000. She has sent—or we should rather say, she has driven from her soil—at least one-third of all the emigrants who have gone from the old States to the new. More than another third have gone from the other old slave States. Many of these multitudes who have left the slave State have shunned the regions of slavery, and settled in the free counties of the West. These were generally industrious and enterprising white men, who found, by sad experience, that a country for them. It is a truth, that slavery drives free labor—farmers, mechanics, and all, and some of the best of them, too—out of the country, and fills their places with negroes.

"What is it but slavery that makes Marylanders, Carolinians, and especially old Virginians and new Virginians, fly their country at such a rate? Some go because they dislike slavery, and desire to get away from it; others, because they have gloomy forebodings of what is to befall the slave States, and which to leave their families in a country of happier prospects; others, because they cannot get profitable employment among slaveholders; others, industrious and high-spirited working men, will not stay in a country where slavery degrades the working man; others go, because they see that their country, for some reason, does not prosper, and that other countries, not far off, are prospering, and will afford better hopes of prosperity to themselves; others, a numerous class, who are slaveholders, and cannot live without slaves, finding that they cannot live longer with them on their worn-out soils, go to seek better lands and more profitable crops, where slave labor may yet for a while enable them and their children to live."

Melancholy Accident.—On Monday, about twelve o'clock, a boy named Samuel Smith, fell from the fourth story of the Ledger Budding to the first, and died in a few minutes thereafter. He was taken immediately to the drug store of Dr. Jayne, in South Third Street, where. notwithstanding every effort was made to save him, he died. His mother lived in Ann street near Schuylkill & sixth. Inquest—Accidental Death. —Phil. Sat. Gleaner.

Shocking Accident.—On Monday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, a man about 50 years of age, named Timothy Hurley, employed at the manufactory fell into a large dye vat, and was dreadfully scalded from his feet to his head. He was conveyed to the Hospital, with faint hopes of his recovery.

A Horrible Murder.—A man named Beach was murdered on the 12th inst. near Lockland, Ohio. His body, with the lower extremeties nearly devoured by the hogs, and his face so mutilated by buzzards as to be scarcely recognized. Suspicion rests upon no one, but the authorities of the place were closely investigating the affair.

Another.—We observe, by a statemnt in the last Marietta Intelligencer, that Dr. Hildreth has a work, now in press, soon to be issued, entitled a "History of the First Settlement of Ohio."—The work is published under the superintendence of the Historical Society of Cincinnati. and will form the first volume of the society's transactions. The Intelligencer justly observes that the name of the author is a sufficient guarantee that the work will be interesting.—Zanesville Courier.

The New Planet.—Sir John Herschell, at Mr. Bishop's request, has called the planet last discovered by the name of Flora. The emblem is to be the "Rose of England," which is put under a very neat and convenient form of writing. The symbol adopted for the planet Iris is a semi-circle representing the rainbow, with an interior star and a base line for the horizon. This device is due to Prof. Schumaker.

Accident.—On Saturday afternoon, a man named John Fury had one of his feet smashed, at Camden, N. J., in consequence of a wheel of a railroad car passing over it. He was taken to the Hospital.

Choirs in Churches.—A clerical correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, speaking of choir singing in churches, says:—"I feel quite sure the Great God whom we worship does not approve of this manner of publicly conducting his praise, I am inclined to think that David understood what was the Divine mind on this subject. And when he exclaims so often in the very psalms which he composed for the public service of Jehovah, "Let the people praise Thee, O God, yea, let all the people praise Thee," he did not mean to say, "Let the choir praise Thee, O God, yea, let all the choir praise Thee."

Dimes and Half Dimes.—The New York Globe is calling the attention of Congress to the best means of getting the worn out Spanish sixpences and shillings out of circulation. It says, if we weigh a sixpence and an American half dime, we shall find that the half dime has more actual silver in it than the sixpence, consequently, the positive value is in the American coin.

Camden Mechanism.—Two iron towers have been constructed at Starr's factory, Camden, on the plan invented by E. S. Townsend, intended for the purpose of sustaining the wires of the new telegraph across the North river near the Palisades. Their height is 200 feet, four feet at the base tapering up to one foot, and made in the most beautiful manner of flat bar iron winding around in each direction, forming a column of spiral lattice work, combining lightness, durability and strength of no ordinary character.

The Westmoreland Guards.—A letter in the Greensburg papers, dated September 29, gives a return of this company; it left Pittsburgh ninety-three strong, and reached the 'Halls of the Montezumas' with forty-three, disease and battle having thus thinned their ranks. Capt. Johnston and fourteen men remained sick at Puebla, and the company was commanded by Lieut. Armstrong during the late conflicts.

Progress of the Telegraph.—On Friday evening last, Philadelphia and Vincennes, Ia., were in telegraphic connection, the whole thousand miles of line working to a charm. Vincennes is the most easterly office on the Louisville and St. Louis Line, which Mr. O'Rielly is now pushing forward with characteristic energy.—From the St. Louis New Era, we learn that the advanced posts of the Telegraph were within 60 miles of that city on the 16th, and that the last post would probably be planted before the end of November. We have also private advices from Mr. O'Rielly, which induce us to believe that the whole line will be working by the 15th of next month, or Christmas at the furthest.—Zanesville Courier.

Horrible Story of Shipwreck.

Captain Smith, of the South Carolina from Savannah for Boston, reported wrecked a few days ago, has arrived at Boston, and gives the particulars of the dreadful suffering of the crew. As we stated, they lived a week without water or food, when they drew lots to see who should suffer death to save the others. It fell to the lot of an Irishman, named Charles Brown, who had S. D. marked on his arm. He was a large athletic man, weighing about 175 or 180, had shipped at Savannah, and was unknown to the rest of the crew.

He alone was armed with a sheath knife, which he drew, and declared he would plunge it into the heart of the first who approached him to carry out the fatal chance. Upon this the captain retired to his cabin, saying he would have nothing more to do with the affair, thinking that they were all near their end.

At this moment a boy, named Hughie Rose, of Bangor, Wales, aged 19, spoke up, and said that the youngest should die first; this free-will offering was about to be accepted by Brown, as the captain with the boy went into the cabin. Captain Smith states that as he threw himself upon the berth his eye was attracted to a handle sticking up near, which he thought belonged to an adze. He told the boy to fetch it, and it proved to be an adze.

Thinking that something wrong was about to be enacted on deck, he followed the boy when he returned, and saw the boy seized round the waist by the now desperate Brown, with the intention of making him the victim. At this moment the captain states that he felt gifted with extraordinary strength, stepped forward and drove the adze twice into the head of Brown, and he fell dead upon the deck.

It is supposed by Captain Smith, from the fact that S. D. was marked upon the arm of Brown, that he shipped under a feigned name. He was about 35 years old.

After he was dead, the captain bled and dressed him. His flesh was partly cut up into thin strips, and laid upon the deck to dry. But the crew did not hunger for food, water being their chief desire. His blood was used for drink until the morning that they were taken off, when about a pint remained, which had turned black. —Bal. News.

We regret to announce (says the Camden (South Carolina) Journal,) the death of another distinguished member of the medical family of our town, Dr. A. De Leon, who expired on last Friday, after a sudden and brief illness. Dr. De Leon was the oldest practitioner in Camden, and has had a successful practice for the past thirty-two years.

Appalling Calamity.

Burning of the Steam Propeller Phœnix, on Lake Michigan—One Hundred and Seventy Passengers burned or drowned.

By Saturday's western mail, an Extra Statesman came to hand, containing the following most melancholy intelligence, which had been received by that journal in a despatch dated "Cleveland, Nov. 26, 8 o'clock, P. M.:"

"Editor Ohio Statesman:

On Sunday morning inst, about 4 o'clock, the Propeller Phœnix, bound up the Lakes, when within seventeen miles of Sheboygan, was discovered to be on fire under deck. There were more than 200 passengers on board; it was found impossible to extinguish the fire. Thirty of the passengers took the small boats, and were picked up by the steamer Delaware, which hove in sight soon after the fire was discovered, but not in time to save those on board, over one hundred and seventy in number, all of whom were either burned to death or drowned.

One hundred and fifty of the passengers were emigrant Hallanders, who were seeking a home in the west.

Capt. Sweet, of the Phœnix, was sick in his stateroom at the time of the disaster, and is among the few saved.

Every attention was paid to the survivors by the Captain and crew of the Delaware.

The Phœnix was owned by Messrs. Pease & Allen, of Cleveland.—Zanesville Courier.

Bank of Wooster.—The Wooster Democrat of the 26th says:—Another silly rumor has been set afloat at Cincinnati regarding the solvency of this institution. It is hardly necessary for us to say there is no ground for the panic, and that it is all news to our citizens. The Bank is pursuing "the even tenor of its ways;" and if any of the alarmists about Cincinnati feel any doubts regarding the safety of the institution, they have only to present their "pile" at the counter and receive the "rocks."—Zanesville Courier.

The tale---Who will list to it?

"The resources of the South are exhaustless." True. Yet, under Slavery, the probability of opening or expanding these resources, is yearly diminishing.—See, in proof the following tables!

Population of the South, 1845	8,250,000
Do. do. do. 1835	6,500,000
Increase in the decade	1,750,000

Now, this million, seven hundred and fifty thousand of increase ought to swell largely our means of support. This is the invariable result in the free States. Yet, with it Southern means of support are largely diminished. Mark our exports:

	1836.	1845
Unmanuf'd Cotton	$71.284.925	$51,739 643
Tobacco	10.494 104	8.008,319
Rice	2.548,750	2,160,456
Naval stores—Indigo	913,396	815 039
Total	$85,241,175,	$62,723.455
Decrease		$22,219,720.

Think of twenty-two millions and a half decrease in ten years, in our means of support!—We tell you friends of the South, that Slavery is impoverishing you yearly, and that you cannot long stand the losses it occasions. With exhaustless resources, this exhausting drain is rapidly sucking away our life, and will unless removed, leave us hopelessly poor and weak. Why not, then, look the evil in the face, and crush it, ere it crushes us?

Let the good and wise and money-loving look well to this!—Louisville Examiner.

Coins and Corner Stones.—The foolery of depositing coins in foundation stones has been illustrated of late, three or four having been opened, and found——empty. We will be bound that hundreds have been robbed by the laborers as soon as the possession for laying the stone had turned its back. The cold compeller argues that the money can do no good in a hole, so he sensibly takes it to get him out of one. The Romans did these things better.

Distressing Event.—We regret to learn from the Richmond, Va., papers, that Mrs. Daniel wife of Judge Peter V. Daniel, of the U. S. Supreme Court, died, on Sunday morning, from the effects of a nervous shock, produced by fire that occurred near his residence on Saturday night.—She was the youngest daughter of the late Edmund Randolph, Esq., formerly Attorney General of the United States.

Important cases in Maryland.

We extract the following from the Baltimore Correspondent of the National Era:

I learn from the Marlborough Gazette, that an important case, called the Townshend will case, involving the liberty of about fifty slaves, with their ownership of the lands of their late master, was the second time before the court of Prince George's county last week. The jury found a verdict for the caveators, thus setting aside the will, on the ground that the testators was incompetent to make a will. He had not only liberated all his slaves, and devised to them his lands and other property, but made provision that, in the event of any obstacle in the law to defeat this object, they should become the slaves of his nephew, Jeremiah Townshend, who should accept from them one cent a year for hire. Exceptions were taken, and it is supposed the case will be taken to the Court of Appeals. I sincerely hope it may be, in order that there may be a better chance for justice to these cruelly wronged creatures. It is likely that the very fact of a man, on whose conscience the power of the Anti-Slavery truth fell in his expiring hour, not only liberating his slaves, but parcelling his lands among them, would be taken as satisfactory evidence of insanity, by the slaveholders of that intensely pro-slavery county. "What!" I imagine I hear some of them exclaim in the jury room, "set niggers free who are not able to take care of themselves, and give them so much land besides! The man must have been stark mad!"

You well remember that I mentioned the arrest of a free colored man in Baltimore county, charged with aiding the escape of the slave of a member elect to our Legislature, and his commitment for a trial, and my prediction that he would be acquitted. The result has justified the prediction. He was acquited one day last week, by decision of the Judges of the county court, Judge Purviance presiding—the counsel having agreed to submit it to the bench. All the testimony the slaveholder (Samuel Worthington) presented was certain confessions extorted from the accused by threats! Such evidence was very properly rejected.

There is some talk of an action on the part of the acquitted man, whose name is Isaiah Shaw, for false imprisonment and damages; and it is said that he would be sustained in the step by the owner of the land on which he resides a tenant—himself a slaveholder. The case certainly is an exceedingly grievious one. It is said that the arrest, taking place where it did not only caused the loss of a portion of Shaw's hay and corn crop, but prevented the usual seeding process—thus affecting his prospects for the coming year, in the most serious manner.

Some of Slavery's Doings.—Rev. Mr. Forsyth, a Presbyterian minister of Kentucky, held as his slave, the wife of Mr. Penny of Ohio.—Mr. Penny went for his wife, obtained her, and started for home on Saturday evening, having with him also another woman and two men. On Sabbath morning, the minister Forsyth, discovering the loss of two of his slaves, rode two miles and started a man in pursuit, and went home to his pulpit labors. The pursuer overtook Penny at a ferry, where a fight ensued, with pistols and clubs, but the fugitives defended themselves and got clear. Mr. Forsythe, having preached and made his last prayer, started off in hot haste, Sabbath afternoon, but found on getting to the ferry, that his property had gone to Ohio. Mr. Forsyth consoled the man whom he had sent in pursuit, and who had got wounded in the scuffle, by saying that "we were not long for this world, and that there would be no negro stealing in the next.'

We condense the above facts from a long article in the Watchman of the Valley.—Liberty Standard.

Specie.—The banks in New York city have on hand $7.992.000 in specie, and the sub-treasury in that city has $2,500,000.

Notices.

Portsmouth circuit.—Bro. Clancy: our circuit was considerably disappointed in obtaining but one preacher from the conference. However the quarterly conference has employed one of the unstationed preachers of the circuit to fill the vacancy, and if there should be no difficulty in your way, request you to sanction the proceeding. The brother employed is W. B. Cremeans. W. W. TIPTON.

Mad River Mission, Ohio District.—Br. Young is informed that his meeting will be held in Russelvania, Dec. 4th.

We expect to hold a protracted meeting in Equality class, 2 miles east of Russelvania, commencing on Christmas Day. We invite Brs. Peat, Borton, Howe, and others who can come. L. Ensminger.

Washington Circuit, Ohio District.—Our first quarterly meeting will be held at Bethel meeting house, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in December. We invite as many of our brethren in the ministry as can come.

A. CHANNEL.

Newark Circuit—Muskingum Con.—We expect to hold a protracted meeting at Elizabethtown (Perryton,) commencing on the 11th of December, to which we invite our Conference Missionary; also, Br. Hoagland, and any others of our ministers who can come and assist us. We expect to continue several days.

W. H. MARSHALL.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Morgantown, Nov. 17, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will confer a favor on me, by publishing the following appointments, and I will fill them if God spares my life.

Pittsburgh st.,	Dec.	26,	1847.
Allegheny "	Jan.	2,	1848.
Sharpsburg ct.,	"	9,	"
Birmingham miss.,	"	16,	"
New Brighton st.,	"	23,	"
Manchester ct.,	"	30,	"

Will the Superintendents please to secure some help at each meeting?—My will is good, but I am not able to labor as much as in years gone by. I need help, from God and man, wherever I go, at all my meetings.

GEO. BROWN.

Steubenville, Ohio, August 27th, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, and should it please God to spare my life, I will try to fill them.

Waynesburg	Ct.,	November. 28th,	1847.
Washington	Station,	December 5th,	"
Home,	"	" 12th,	"
Ohio	Circuit,	" 19th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to Fairmont, Marion co., Va.; Weston, Lewis co., Va.; Pruntytown, Taylor co., Va.; Morgantown, Va.; Waynesburg, Green co., Pa., or Washington, Pa. Until the 20th of September, they may be sent to Steubenville, Ohio.

Yours, Truly, GEO. BROWN.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Darby	mission,	Nov. 27th,	1847.
Mad River	"	Dec. 4th,	"
Miami ct.,		" 11th,	"

I want early information from the Superintendents, where my visits will be expected. Direct letters to the Recorder, Xenia, Port William, or Spingfield.

Oct. 2, 1847. JOHN M. YOUNG.

Twin Creek	Ct.		Dec.	25 1847
Cincinnati	Miss.	Elm st.	Jan.	1
Cincinnati	St.	6 st.	"	8
Cincinnati	Ct.		"	15
New Richmond	Ct.		"	22
Lebanon	St.		"	29
Lebanon	Miss.		Feb.	5
Greenville	"		"	12

J. M. YOUNG.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	" "	"
Cambridge	"	4th	" "	"
Belmont	"	1st	" Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	" "	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	" "	"
Steubenville	"	4th	" "	"

GEO. CLANCY.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

White Lick	ct.	Nov. 27–28	1847.
White River	"	Dec. 4–5	"
Sugar Creek	"	" 11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W W. Tipton,	O.	H Beal,	Ia.
J. H. Hamilton, 2 subs.	"	C Jeffries,	"
T. Fairchild,	"	T Shipp,	"
T Hanna,	"	S W Widney,	"
J B Peat,	"	J B Jewel, 1 sub.	Mich.
T White,	"	G B M'Elroy,	Pa.
Wm. Tipton,	"	J Robison,	"
D C Carson,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	cts.
G Vandenbark,		9	52	2 00
W W Tipton,		9	52	1 00
H Beal,		8	52	1 00
J B Jewel,	H G Hemingway,	9	12	1 00
J H Hamilton,	W G Dean,	11	13	3 00
"	J Morris,	9	35	1 00
"	J G Smith,	9	13	50
T Fairchild,		9	52	2 00
T Shipp,	J J Amos,	9	52	2 00
"	A D Amos,	9	52	2 00
"	J D Downey,	9	52	2 00
"	C H Lines,	10	5	2 00
Wm. Tipton,		9	52	2 00
B W Widney,		8	52	1 00
D C Carson,	A M'Ginnis,	8	19	4 00
"	Himself,	9	52	1 00
J Robison,	A Wightman,	8	52	2 00

The P. M. at Pleasant Ridge, Ia., notifies us that the papers sent to K. Wantland, and Moode and Walker, are not taken from the office. Those subscribers have had the paper a year and a half—have paid for one volume, through Br. W. B. Evans. We had no notice of their wish to discontinue at the end of one year. Will our agent there please see to this matter? And if they wish us to stop sending, let them pay up.

The P. M. at Jamestown, Ia., notified us a few weeks ago that A. P. Williamson refuses to take his paper from the office, or to pay postage on it any longer, stating that the paper had been ordered to be sent him by his father Wm. Williamson living in Virginia. The paper has been sent to said A. P. W. for the two years past since we have had charge of the press, and we know not how much longer. We have received no pay for it—our claim is for two volumes. If the father is disposed to settle our claim, we shall be satisfied; otherwise the man who received the paper in Indiana, is responsible in law for the payment of our dues. He had better write to his father on the subject, as we desire to receive our pay. Will Br. Falkenburgh or Br Wright, please to see to this matter for us?

Br. G. B. M'Elroy, since our private letter to you, we have discovered our error in reference to the pamphlets we were to send you Please excuse us.

☞ Brs. Nicolds, Maynard, and Remsburg are informed that their packages of pamphlets have been ready at O. Whites for several weeks, waiting for the call of Judge Metcalf.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

DEATHS.

DIED—near Cincinnati, on the 21st ult., Mr. JOHN R. DODSON, aged 39 years. Mr. D. was a schoolmate of the Editor of this paper, both nearly of one age.

——At Urbana O. on the 16th ult., Mr. PETER R. COLWELL, coroner of Champaign Co. in the 56th year of his age.

——At Northhampton, Mass., Nov. 11, PROF. S. STODDARD, aged 47.

——At Sandwich, Mass., Mr. EBENEZER COVELL, aged 91; a soldier of the Revolution.

——At Fitchville Vt., Nov. 10th 1847. Rev. JERE MIAH JOHNSON, a soldier in the Revolution, in his 86th year Obituary, next week.

Advertisements.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle, & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Dean's.

A general assortment of SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday school Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of these connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe & Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe,	$
For one copy of the Appendix	2
For six copies of either, or part of both	10

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT,

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT WORCESTER, MASS.,

BY SAMUEL CHISM.

This publication is sent forth, with the specific object of disseminating evangelical truth. Its design is eminently 'practical,' not speculative. It will present those vital truths of christianity which are calculated to stimulate the church to her appropriate work in the evangelization of the world; and will urge the unconverted to an immediate surrender of their hearts to God, and the entire consecration of themselves to his service. It is not devoted to the interests of any particlar denomination, but aims at the present and eternal happiness of the whole human family.

Each monthly issue will contain 32 pages of matter, octavo, in new, bold, and clear type, cast expressly for this use. Two sermons will appear in each number; and the remaining pages will be filled with Skeletons of Sermons, Ministerial and Religious Miscellany, Criticisms, Biographical Sketches, etc.

The list of Contributors to the American Pulpit will embrace several of the ablest clergymen of the evangelical denominations in the United States.

TERMS.

1. $1 per annum, in advance. If not paid till after three months from the time of subscribing, $1,50 at which time all subscriptions will be considd due, and bills sent accordingly.

2. Any person obtaining three subscribers, with pay in advance, shall receive a fourth copy gratis.

3. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year. It is desirable that all subscriptions should commence with the first number of the volume.

4. Will not the friends of this work use their influence in extending its circulation? Certainly, by so doing, they will advance the interests of Christ's cause. A little exertion on the part of each individual will do much to make it one of the most extensively circulated periodicals in the United States.

5. Several special agents are wanted to procure subscribers in different parts of the United States. Superannuated clergymen will receive good encouragement on personal or written application.

6. Ministers of the gospel, of every denomination, and other responsible individuals, are authorised, and cordially invited to act as agents.

7. All communications connected with the editorial department should be addressed to Rev. J. D. Bridge, Worcester, Massachusetts. All communications on business should be directed, 'post paid,' to Samuel Chism, Worcester, Massachusetts.

Waynesburg, Green County, Pa

Rev. A. H. Bassett: My dear Brother, please say to the Brethren, that I have on hands, Clarks's Commentary, new and complete, do. upon the New Testament, do. Theology, Watson's Institutes, do. Dictionary, Common, medium, Revival Hymn Books, Disciplines, Snethen's Sermons, Harris' do. Williams' on the Lord's Supper. Rev. T. H. Stockton's Christian World, 3 vol. Social Spirit of Christianity, Whitehead's life of Rev'd. J. and C. Wesley. Large family Bibles, Pocket Polyget, do. Fletcher's address to seekers of salvation, Evan's Pamphlet, Christian Manuel. Life of Geo. Washinton, Columbus, and Flanklin, School books of various kinds.

Sears' Domestic Bible,	1000 engravings, 1,500 pages.
do.	History of the Bible, several hundred engravings
do.	Biography of the Bible. do.
do.	Sunday Book, do.
do.	Great Britain and Ireland, do.
do.	Sketches Europe, do.
do.	American Revolution, 160 engraving.

Hemmorrhage of the Lungs having returned upon me again it is doubtful whether I shall be able to travel much this winter, if ever. Should any of the Brethren want any of the above works and will inform me, I will try and send them as they may direct, Should my health admit I will bring them. Since Conference, I have visited, Alleghe

POET'S CORNER.

Written for the Western Recorder.

CHRIST STILLING THE TEMPEST.

BY BASIL.

A night of storms settled on Galilee,
Ere yet the morning sun had left the sky.

The hollow wind came moaning on, at first,
From Hermon, and the sparkling sea, far off,
On either hand curled up, in shining ripples;
Then the blast swept stronger over the waters,
Tossing th' ambitious waves high up in air,
Their spangled crests kissing the azure sky.

Suddenly the dread twang of the trumpet,
Which speaks from the grizzled north to southward,
Gave signal of th' approach, with all his train,
Of the dark storm-God. Still the winds howled on.
Above, th' approaching chariots wheeled onward,
Swift as the eagle, through the vast of space,—
Few at first, but dark'ning as they came,
And rolling southward with a dismal noise,
Soon came the God's dread chariot, and before,
Swept a wild, wheeling blast, its forerunner.
Then through the midnight gloom, which hung round,
Sharp, bickering flames shot forth, like adders' tongues
From the dread engines in the heavens arrayed,
And lighted up the dismal scene below,
With a pale, awful light.

Still from the deep
Rose Appennines and Ætnas, piled on high,
One on the other,—by the potent wind
Upheaved, from lurid gulphs, which gaped between,
Like Erebus. The wat'ry piles ascend,
And lash, deridingly, the troubled sky,
And then are dashed, by the next passing blast,
Into their graves, which open wide below.

A stag'ring bark plunged through the waste of waves,
Seen now amid the cloud, a high-throned speck
Upon some billow's top, and then again
Lost in the waves' dark shadow; soon again
To mount another, and descend anon.
Now she rose, and now the yeasty foam
Swept o'er her, while the resistless waves
Hurried her down the rough, sloping descent,
And plunged her in the soundless depths below.

Still the mad tempest reveled, and the clouds
Blackened, and grew thicker in the ether,
Pushing onward heedlessly and wildly,
They, chariots of Æolus, and their steeds
The swift-winged thunderbolts of Jove;
Red lightnings flashing from their eyes the while.
The storm-God howled more direfully and loud,
And the deep caves, between the billows' sides,
Re-echoed back his thunders, adding strength,
And dolefulness, and horror, to the voice.
The waves, too, bellowed awfully and loud,
Whilst with each other battling to and fro.
From every hollow cavern came a voice
Freighted with horror; and the dark profound
Was one tumultuous uproar, waste and dire.

[still!"—
Hark! Through the howling tempest!—"Peace! Be
As when swift rays burst from the throne of God,
Obedient to these words;—"Let there be light!"—
And swift through space illimitable, vast,
Touching its farthest line, simultaneous
Both with the words and with their issuing;—
So quick, and so obedient, burst those clouds,
Parting asunder, in mid-heav'n, and then
Rolling to East and West, with scarce a sound.

The uprising billows, at those words recoiled,
And fell to silence and a calm serene.
The thunderbolt stopped midway in the heav'ns,
The waters sparkled to the sun's warm rays,
Which now came flowing from the source of heat.—
Earth smiled, and heaven smiled, and all was calm.

Steubenville, Ohio, Oct. 16th, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

GENESEE CONFERENCE: Vindication.

A communication bearing date May 5th, 1847, purporting to be an address from Daniel W. Marvin, of Mt. Morris to the "Methodist Protestant Church; Genesee Conference," was published in the True Wesleyan vol. 5th No. 20th May 15th 1847. In it statements were made entirely variant from truth and facts, and aspersions thrown upon the Conference highly derogatory to the integrity and christian character of its members. The accompanying communication from "A Member," &c. was prepared and sent on immediately to the True Wesleyan in reply to D. W. M. But the editor of the True Wesleyan refused to give it a place in his columns, unless "A Member's" proper name was allowed to accompany it; notwithstanding the writer's real name and residence were given him with a pledge that he would hold himself responsible for all that he had said respecting the address and its author. This "A Member" regarded an unreasonable demand, inasmuch as the address was "To the M. P. Church; Genesee Conference," and not to him as an individual.

His communication was returned by the editor of the True Wesleyan. The reply of "A Member" to Daniel W. Marvin was read before the Genesee Conference at its late session in Lindon, & it was unanimously, "Resolved, That a copy of the reply by "A Member," &c., to Daniel W. Marvin's article published in the True Wesleyan, May 15th, 1847, be furnished to the Methodist Protestant, and Western Recorder for publication." The following is a copy.

For the True Wesleyan.

MR. EDITOR: The 20th No. of the 5th vol. of the True Wesleyan contains an article addressed "To the M. P. Church; Genesee Conference." by DANIEL W. MARVIN, of Mt. Morris. As a member of that body I consider myself addressed, and shall therefore take the liberty of penning a few remarks, for the purpose of correcting some of the false impressions which that article is designed to make upon the minds of your readers.

Mr. Marvin, intimates great friendship & concern for the M. P. Church, and would no doubt have us believe that his desire is for her perpetuity and prosperity. But if we may be permitted to judge, we fear that other feelings pervaded his breast, and other motives dictated his pen, when writing that address, than those of friendship or regard for the members of the Genesee Conference. It reminds us of a story recorded in 2. Samuel, 20th chap. 9 and 10 verses, which we recommend Mr. M. to read for his instruction. Permit me to make through the Wesleyan a few statements in reference to Mr. Marvin's withdrawal from the M. P. Church.

That he was once a member of the Genesee Conference, I readily admit. That he left without a letter I also admit. And that he united with the Wesleyan Methodist Church, is another fact that should not be forgotten. But that his withdrawal created the sensations which he has so glowingly described, I think, needs more proof than his bare assertion, to be believed by those acquainted with the circumstances. I have no knowledge of any one feeling excited on the occasion. It was a matter about which as little was felt as said, and that was no more than what was necessary to have the business properly done.

Again; Mr. Marvin would have his readers to understand that the cause of his leaving the M. P. Church, was the Pro-Slavery character of its Discipline. At this, I confess my astonishment. That he should have forgotten, so soon, what he had himself written at the time of his withdrawal, is singularly strange. Then he seems to have had no compunctions of conscience respecting the fearful evils of connection with the Methodist Prot. Church on account of its Pro-Slavery character.

But the mighty motive which impelled him forward in that step so "reluctantly taken" was a consideration of dollars and cents, only. No other subject agitated his throbbing bosom. And when about taking that step, he frankly and deliberately declared in the letter to which he refers, addressed to the President, that he believed the M. P. Church to be "based not only upon the broad principles of civil, but also of Bible Republicanism." This being the case he cannot regard the Constitution and Discipline of the church as being Pro-Slavery, unless he considers the Bible to be the same. For the M. P. Church, he allows, is based upon Bible principles.

We will introduce Mr. Marvin and let him speak for himself and in his own language. His letter bears date Mt. Morris, April 12th, 1844, in which, after his introduction, he says, "It has been my happy lot for a few by gone years, to be a member of the Meth. P. Church; a church based not only upon the broad principles of civil, but also of Bible Republicanism." * * * * * * "But the time has come when duty to God, to myself and family calls me away from the bosom of the church I love. The time has come when I must take a formal, though reluctant leave of the M. P. Church, for the following reasons:

First, I have preached two years upon two different circuits, and have not received one hundred dollars for the two years service.

Second: While upon Holly circuit, I was under the necessity of contracting a debt of 22 dollars to aid me in travelling upon the circuit; and at the close of the year the note became due, and having not received enough from the circuit to pay it, I was obliged to give up the best part of my Library which cost me more than 40 dollars, to my creditor to secure him; and was afterwards informed that those books were afterwards sold for fifteen dollars.

Third: While upon Portage circuit my store bill amounted to 15 dollars; and some few debts besides were necessarily contracted, and I have not received enough from the circuit to liquidate those debts, and they yet stand against me.

Fourth: I have been subjected to the disgrace of a legal prosecution which throws a darkening shade upon my character; and when the character of a minister begins to fail, that of his people must necessarily decline with it. Hence, duty to the M. P. Church, in view of its respectability and reputation demands my immediate withdrawal from said church.

Fifth: There is a point beyond which "forbearance ceases to be a virtue."

Here are frankly and fully given all the reasons which induced his withdrawal at the time in which it took place. And no intimation that any others lurked in the distant recesses of his heart. The point to which he refers, beyond which he says, "forberance ceases to be a virtue" all must see to be that of continuing to preach for the M. P. Church without receiving an adequate support; and has nothing to do with the Pro, or Anti-Slavery character of the church. If Mr. M. wishes to lecture the M. P. Church through the public press upon the subject of supporting her ministers, why does he not now state things as he did before, when they were fresh in his memory, and scold them for not paying him enough to induce him to stay with them? It does appear not a little strange that they should have felt so deeply grieved at his leaving, when they manifested so little concern in taking care of him while with them. The members of the Genesee Conference are not apt to allow their ministers, when faithful, to go uncared for. Mr. Marvin, admits that we talk against slavery, but says that does not alter the Discipline. Very true. Nor do we wish it altered, if he is correct in his opinion that it is "based on the broad grounds of civil and Bible Republicanism." I would ask, does Mr. M. wish us to be Anti-Bible, and Anti-Republican, lest we agree with the South?!

Mr. Marvin appears to be very familiar with the doings of Conference for the two years past, and notifies the world that for that length of time its acts have amounted to a "positive nothing towards effecting any reform." As he does not specify, I suppose he refers to all subjects within the proper circle of christian influence and effort. But is Mr. M. prepared to prove his assertion true? Has the ministry and membership of the Genesee Conference of the M. P. Church done nothing to aid in the Temperance Reform? The cause of moral purity? And the better observance of the christian Sabbath: Have no backsliders been reclaimed, or reformed among them? Have no sinners been led to the Saviour, and reformed from a life of sin and impurity, to a life of holy obedience to God? How is this, Mr. M.? Are you prepared to make good your most unkind and uncharitable, not to say incorrect statement? Again: He says that our resolutions passed upon the subject of Slavery, are "conservative and unmeaning." What a pity that he did not give his readers a copy of those resolutions, that they might have judged of their character for themselves. Did he fear they would falsify his own version of the matter? He verily had good reason so to fear. He informs us farther that we may continue to pass resolutions as we have "and the crushing system of American Slavery will continue to grow under the benign and fostering care of such resolutions down to the end of time." Would Mr. M. be understood to teach that the passing of resolutions against Slavery is doing a "positive nothing" against it? And extending to it a "benign and fostering care?" I would ask what more has Mr. M. done?

And what more can the Wesleyan Church do to oppose this evil? Verily, nothing. We wish it distinctly understood that we have no fears of the resolutions of the Genesee Conference on that subject, suffering by a comparison with those of any other body of christians in their expression of disapprobation of the evil of Slavery. If Mr. Marvin flatters himself that he now occupies a position to do more for the slave than the members of the M. P. Church, let him remember that while we have done as much as any Annual or General Conference of the Church of which he is a member and minister can do—we have gone still farther.

By our worthy delegation we have met those connected with it, face to face, and urged upon them their duty in reference to the slave.

The consideration drawn from his reference to the "cool and deliberate withdrawal of Rev. A. Pennell," I regard as being too imbecile to require even a passing notice. And as for Rev. S. M. Short, for the safety of whose meekness he intimates so much concern, we inform Mr. M. that he is a man who loves the path of duty, and has no desire to shun it, to avoid its unpleasant requirements. He is no coward. However, if Mr. M. wishes a chapter upon these subjects refered to, he can be accommodated. Once more: Mr. M. intimates a knowledge of some ministers in the Genesee Conference, who have once been "strong Anti-Slavery men" that "for a trifling consideration have given their vote to a Pro-Slavery party, and a locofoco candidate for office," Where he obtained this information, I do not pretend to say. But I regard it a disingenuous insinuation, having no existence in fact: ☞ And fearlessly challenge the proof in facts and particulars

With these passing reflections I will close, after consoling Mr. Marvin with the information that our fears are but very little excited for the safety of the M. P. Church, even should other "pillars" like himself be removed from the fabric. If we had them, we could spare them without tears or terror. And like the mountain oak when the wind has disburthened it of its mossy dangles, feel no alarm. And as for the alteration of the Discipline, if we may abide his judgment, that it is "based upon the broad principles of civil and Bible Republicanism," we doubt whether it can be bettered. At any rate, we have no desire to abandon the Bible, even if the South should contend for it, in contending for the Discipline as it is.

A MEMBER OF THE GENESEE CONF. OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

June, 18, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: The above is hereby transmitted to you for publication, by order and in behalf of the Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

E. A. WHEAT, Secretary.

Elba, Nov. 5th, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Answer to "A Virginian."

NO. II.

Our excellent exhorter from Virginia exclaims to us very triumphantly, "1st, I ask my brother what injury the North receives from our connection with Slavery, where they have it not in their power, to abolish that relation?" We answer—"much every way, but chiefly because" of its odious and sinful character in the eyes of God, angels, and all christendom. But this answer may not be satisfactory to the enquiring brother, therefore, we answer more at length. Slavery—Our connection with slavery, and the injury the North receives therefrom, is the substance of the enquiry.

We will examine these three items of the question, as briefly as possible.

What is Slavery? Political disabilities, are often confounded with Slavery; so are many relations indispensable to the social state. Some of which are privations of suffrage, ineligibility to office,—taxation without representation—privation of trial by Jury—supporting a particular religion—apprenticeship—claims of government on subjects—bondage for crime—restraints upon freedom—involuntary service, &c. Neither of these nor all them together constitute the intrinsic, and unchanging element of Slavery. They are appendages of Slavery but not Slavery.—"Slavery is reducing men to articles of property—making free agents chattels—converting persons into things sinking immortality into merchandize. "A Slave is one who can do nothing, possess nothing nor acquire anything, but what must belong to his Master," (Civ. Code of Louis. art. 35.) If he says my hand, my body, my soul, myself, they are figures of speech. To use himself for his own good is crime, and to keep what he earns, is stealing. To take his body into his own keeping is insurrection. Men, women and children bartered, leased, mortgaged, bequeathed, envoiced, shiped in cargoes, stored as goods, taken on execution, and knocked off at public auction.

"Their (the slaves) rights on other's convenience; their interests, wares on sale; their happiness, a household utensil, their person inalienable ownership, a serviceable article, or a plaything, as best suits the humor of the hour, their deathless nature, conscience, social affections sympathies, hopes—marketable commodities." This is American Slavery. (See Bible against Slavery pages 6, 7, 8, & 9.) Is Slavery right? The universal mass of mind, the sighs, tears, groans of the oppressed, the disturbed consciences of the oppressors, the ignorance of the free population of Slave States, and the withering, and blighting aspect of the slave territory, all unite with the holy fiery law of God, in giving the answer no to the question. Every commandment of the decalogue, is violated by Slavery. "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me." The slave laws set up the master in the place of God, over the slave. "The slave is entirely subject to the will of his master," (Civil Code of Louis. Art. 237) yes these laws exhalt the master "above all that is called God," for God never reduces his own image to chattels, and offers his own offspring for sale, at public auction. "The second commandment requireth the receiving observing, and keeping house, and entire all such religious worship, and ordinances as God hath appointed in his word." (West. Shorter Catechism) What opportunities have the slaves, to learn and keep here the worship God has established in his holy word?

3rd, "thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain." Do not the supporters of Slavery, blaspheme the name of God, and scandalize him, by asserting that the Bible, his holy word, sanctions Slavery? It is the fruitful source of blasphemies.

4th, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." The slaves have but few, if any opportunities for keeping the Sabbath day holy. They are almost wholly compelled to attend to their own wants, on the Sabbath by working all the week for their masters without pay.

5th, "Honor thy father, and thy mother." Slavery comes in contact with this commandment, and says to the slave, honor thy master, and only serve him—how futile is that command to parents to train up their children in the nurture, and admonition of the Lord, among the slaves of the South.

6th, "Thou shalt not kill." Is not Slavery a legalized system of murder, of both body, and soul. There are thousands crushed to death, in our own land annually by the slave system.

7th, "Thou shalt not commit adultry." Slavery annihilates marriage, and compels the slaves to violate the seventh commandment.

8th, "Thou shalt not steal." The slave system, is the most stupendous system of robbery, and theft ever known amongst men. It robs, or steals all the earnings of the slaves, and then steals them from themselves, and their God.

9th, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Slavery bears witness that man, is a brute or chattel, God's image a thing. It bears false witness against the colored man, by denying his manhood, and his right to freedom, by saying it would be unsafe to grant him his freedom, for he would "cut his master's throat, overrun the country and make things worse," &c. There, is no end to the falsehoods of Slavery against the Bible, christianity, human nature, and the character of God.

10th, "Thou shalt not covet." The slave system covets the slave neighbor, his property, all his earnings; also the woman he regards as his wife, his children, and his all. And how any person with common sense can look upon Slavery, as being right, is a problem we are not able to solve. We now come to consider, our connection with Slavery. What an appaling thought—we have connection with Slavery—the hot bed of all manner of crimes commited under the heavens. My heart sickens at the very thought of such a connection, and would that we had no connection with it pro, or con, and that the system was banished to hell from whence it come, and that all slave holders were soundly converted to God, and then they would give up their hold upon Slavery.

Is it not a fact that there are, in the bosom of the M. P. Church, ministers of high standing, Elders, Deacons, Class Leaders, Stewards, and hundreds, if not thousands of members who are slave holders, and are supporting the system of Slavery? And has not the General Conference of our church, refused to pass its condemnation upon the Slavery system? I believe there is but one Annual Conference of the M. P. Ch., in all the slave states, which has spoken out against Slavery. The Maryland, and all of the Annual Conferences in the free states have spoken against the system of Slavery, and had the Gen. Conference done the same it might be said, that the voice of the M. P. Church., (be her practice what it may) is against Slavery. Without further remarks we proceed to the third item of the question,—"what injury does the North receive by this connection with Slavery." As our sheet is nearly full, we will give the outlines without the illustration, and facts which we might give. In the history and place our connection with Slavery disheartens, and discourages many of the good brethren of the North who look upon Slavery as a sin against God and man, when they see it entwining itself around the church, and demanding her protection.

2nd, It has, and is driving many good members, and ministers from the church of their choice, and that too after they have made no small sacrifice to sustain the interests of the church.

3rd, Our connection with slavery, prevents many valuable young converts from joining our church, and those too who have experienced religion through our instrumentality.

4th, It gives other churches, which are not thus connected with Slavery, an opportunity of throwing their influence against us on that account, and that too greatly to our injury.

5th, Our connection with Slavery has injured our advancement greatly in the North, by preventing the late seceders from the Methodist E. Church, from joining with us, and compelling them to organize for themselves.

6th, We are greatly injured by said connection with Slavery, because of the divisions, and contentions it creates.

7th, Because of the aggressions it (Slavery,) is making both in the church and the state.

8th, Our church at the North is injured by our connection with Slavery by obtaining the disapprobation of the haters of Slavery, & also of the Great God as far as we lend our influence for its promotion.

Yours in favor of universal freedom,

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Nov. 8th, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Sketches by Rev. A. McGuire.

NO. XVI.

Having received my appointment to Youngstown near three hundred miles from home, and my companion confined to her bed with the Inflammatory Rheumatism, not able to rise without help, I had a great struggle in my mind whether or not it was my duty to go, and had not my wife been willing, I should not have gone, but she has always urged me to attend my appointments, and now especially since I had so resolutely volunteered as it were all alone in the cause of reform, she wanted me to do all I could to advance the good cause, so, on the 24th of September 1830, we united in humble prayer with our children and committed each other to the care of our heavenly Father, and I bid them farewell, not knowing that I should ever see them all again. I have frequetly thought how few of our brethren take any account of the privations of the travelling Preachers. But to return, on the 27th I reached Zanesville, and quarterly meeting there being appointed for the following Saturday and Sunday, I was prevailed on to stay. I preached three times, Br. Springer labored hard, also, and, glory to God, we had a precious season, five souls professed to obtain pardoning grace. Br. Springer had been elected President this year, and on the second of October we set off together for Youngstown. Having heard that Br. Hatton—stationed preacher in Steubenville, had seceded from the M. E. Church with about one hundred members, we concluded to go by that place,—reached there on Friday evening—preached there on Sunday, and on Monday 8th rode twenty-one miles up the river to Wellsville, to fill an appointment for Br. Hatton. Br. Springer and he continued the meeting in Steubenville,—Tuesday rested, until Brs. Springer and Hatton came on. Wednesday 10th, rode 14 miles to New Lisbon,—thence 18 miles to Canfield; held a meeeting there at night. Friday 13th, got to Youngstown, and held a two days meeting, and the Lord was with us—two souls were converted to God on Sunday night, and three joined by letter from the M. E. Church, and on Saturday following the two new converts joined,—I will now just state that the condition of my family required my presence at home. I therefore used all industry I could, the five weeks I remained, and during that time I formed a two weeks circuit, organized one class at East Boardman of ten respectable members, and had some precious seasons, but great opposition, and persecution. I would have stayed longer on this Mission, but receiving a letter from home requesting me to come, I thonght it my duty to go,—reached home 18th November, and found my wife able to walk a little with the help of a cane.—Thanks be to God for all his benefits and great mercies.

Thus I have been enabled through divine grace, to forsake wife and children house and home for Christ's sake and the Gospel, and though I have some times been in debt, and scarcely knew how I was to pay, yet the good Lord has always provided for me.

The Budget.

What then?

Attempt to make all smooth and pleasant without, and you thereby create the most corroding of anxieties, & stimulate the most insatiable of appetites within—let no clamors of self drown the voice which is entitled to authority there,—let us set forth on the mission of duty, resolved to live for it alone, to close with every resistance which obstructs it; and march through every peril that awaits it; and in the consciousness of immortal power, the sense of mortal ill will vanish, and the peace of God well-nigh extinguishes the sufferings of the man.

How little of ourselves we know,
Before a grief the heart has felt.
The lessons that we learn of woe
May brace the mind as well as melt,
The energies too stern for mirth,
The reach of thought, the strength of will,
'Mid cloud and tempest have their birth,—
Through blight and blast their course fulfil;
And yet, 'tis when it mourns and fears,
The loaded spirit feels forgiven,
And through the mist of falling tears,
We catch the earliest glimpse of heaven.

MAN.—A leaf shaken by the wind,—a reed swayed by the water—a bubble on the stream of life—a billow on the ocean of eternity—headstrong as the tempest in its fury, yet changeful as a breeze before a calm: such is mortal man. Therefore, the spiritual enlightenment of even a single human being is of such vast and enduring consequence, both in its immediate and relative influence, that it can bear no comparision with "themselves of gold and silver." "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

MAY I NOT DO WHAT I WILL WITH MY OWN?—No, you may not, unless your liking and your duty are in happy accordance. Morally, you are as much bound to distribute your own wealth wisely, as to abstain from touching another man's wealth.

Counterfeits.

Among the brass coin of society, a writer has picked out the following as fit only to be nailed to the Counter:—A Young man must sow his wild oats. A good fellow, nobody's enemy but his own; [if he ruins others, they only are in fault.] We must do as others do—better be out of the world than out of the fashion—[though the fashion is, to love the world only.] He that spareth the rod spoileth the child—[never reflecting that the child must receive many counted or uncounted stripes as the parent or master prompted by passion to inflict.] Children should not ask questions—[A certain learned man of the olden time, exclaimed againt the evil practice of allowing children to be inquisitive. 'A child cometh up to me now-a-days, and asketh me the diameter of the moon, and I don't like to be asked such questions.' Children should not inquire of any one who does not know the diameter of the moon.] Marriage is a lottery. You cannot put an old head upon young shoulders. A little learning is a dangerous thing. I will retire from business and prepare for another world. It is only a white lie. Nail them to the counter: they are base counterfeits.

Advertisements.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞ TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS. ☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders a agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept. 16, 1847. [3m.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,
146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,
AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES, ILLUSTRATIONS, BIOGRAPHIES, DOMESTIC DUTIES, PARENTAL RELATIONS, MISSIONS, BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES, TEMPERANCE, DUTIES OF CHILDREN, PRAYER, NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary, Bible Geography, Teacher taught, Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols, Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols, Union Questions, 12 vols. &c.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums, from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $ 90; Including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $ 92,50; and the whole in a neat case, $ 97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $ 33; without a case $ 30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $ 10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools. With case $ 25—without case, $ 22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $ 2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered. $ 5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-		$ 1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	- 3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	- 5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st With 25 catalogues and case, $ 20; without case, $ 17, Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.
General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.
NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.
LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bilkley, Agent.

Mar. '31 '47

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 10. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, DECEMBER 9, 1847. WHOLE NO. 426.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE EARLY DEAD.

In memory of LUCY FRANCES HAYNES, who departed this life, at Richwood, Union county, Ohio, on the 17th inst., aged seven years and six months.

Thou hast gone to the regions of glory away,
How transient thy being, how fleeting thy stay!
I gazed on thy beauty, too fair for the earth,
Where sorrow abounds and disease has its birth.

In my garden there grew a soft-tinted rose,
With rapture I watched its rich colors disclose;
But a rude hand, alas! once broke the frail stem,
And I wept to behold my beautiful gem.

Like the rose bud thus blooming in lovely array,
Sweet child! thou has passed in thy beauty away;
The smile of thy face, the rich tones of thy voice,
With gladness no longer shall make us rejeice.

'Tis thus in this world of affliction and care,
Death breathes on the lovely, and withers the fair;
The fondest and best descend first to the tomb,
Ere time hath revealed their full beauty and bloom.

Yet there is a clime where the beautiful rest—
Where tears never flow, and the weary are blest;
Where scenes of bright glory enrapture the sight,
And Lucy is there, a sweet seraph of light.

Richwood, Nov. 1847. J. B. P.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SERMON,

PREACHED AT ELDERSVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA;

BY REV. WM. REEVES.

[Published by request of a public meeting.]

Philippians iv: 3. And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which laboured with me in the gospel.

(Continued.)

Prop. VIII. Female ministers are honored in the Scriptures, with the same distinctive appellations, as the male ministers, and were saluted as such.

1. This fact affords further confirmation of their regular official standing in the church,—that they were bona fide accredited ministers of the gospel, to perform the regular functions belonging to the sacred office. But here plain and positive declarations of Scripture have been frequently met by our opponents, and disposed of with a sneer. And sometimes even low and scurrilous verbiage has been placed in opposition to a sacred appellation! Such opposition, however, so far from convincing us that we are in error, confirms us in the belief of fact, that the Holy Scriptures do fully authorize female preaching. And, as a great man once said, "The mouths which lack argument, are filled with abuse." Now in all seriousness and candor, we ask, if the language employed in the following text, if spoken in reference to man, would it not be understood by all to mean, that those persons had been employed with the apostle, in the proclamation of Gospel truth? And I entreat thee also, true yoke fellow, help those women which labored with me in the gospel. What but prejudice in the mind against the ministrations of women, would lead any person to seek for a foreign interpretation of these plain words? And even learned Commentators, it is quite observable, when they come to such passages as the one before us, appear to be puzzled respecting a plan to do justice to the words of the Holy Spirit, and retain their own peculiar sentiments. Hence they say this passage cannot mean that those women had been employed in preaching, because, as they think, the apostle elsewhere positively prohibits it. So that, evidently, it is not that the words do not signify the sentiment that another exposition is given, but to retain a consistent "analogy of [their] faith." It is readily granted, and cordially believed, that any plan of interpretation which is inconsistent with itself, or which leads us to view the Scriptures as inconsistent, cannot be the true plan. As the Holy Spirit is consistent with himself, so must our principles of Biblical exegesis be self-consistent, to be true. But interpreters may sometimes do injustice to a passage, that there may be no discord in their divinity. What we insist upon here is, that the same words, when they refer to one sex, have the same signification when they refer to the other. And will any person dispute it? If not the point is gained. But, if they do, will they please shew us by what authority they do these things? We do not profess to be extensively skilled in lexicography, but we know of no philological authority to justify a departure from this rule, in the interpretation of words. Words are signs of ideas: and of ideas of mind generally, and not sexually. Have we two classes of Dictionaries, one for man, and the other for woman? If man should deem this necessary, to support the consistency of his creed, still we have but one Bible! Women, it is true, may be educated separately, there are Female Academies, &c.; but do they not use the very same kind of books, that men use? Have they other elementary sounds, distict and different from men? Have they a language peculiar to women? They use the general language when conversing with men and also among themselves. Well, if they have not, how comes it to pass, that when a man 'prophesies,' he preaches, and when he labors in the gospel, he proclams the truths of the gospel; but when a woman 'propesies,' she sings, and when she 'labors in the gospel,' we must understand that she 'knits stockings!' It has frequently been said, "O consistency, thou art a jewel!" And may we not with equal propriety exclaim, 'O candor, thou too art a jewel!'

The authors of the "Cottage Bible and Family exposition," admit that these "two Christian females," Euodias and Syntyche, "perhaps" were "deaconesses." And what were "deaconesses?" According to learned men who probably will not be considered peculiarly partial to Methodists, they were help-mates indeed 'in the Gospel,' says Schleusner, as cited by Revs. George D'Oyly, B. D., and Richard Mant, D. D., "The deaconesses were women 'employed in the primitive church, originally widows, the wives of one husband, although in process of time it appears that virgins also were made deaconesses. Their business was to baptise women, to teach the female catachumens, to visit, and attend upon the sick, to administer to martyrs, and to perform other inferior services of the church." In the estimation of these learned men, were they not a kind of harbingers to the apostles,—filling John Baptist's office for the male ministers? Honorable and praiseworthy in them indeed! That is ascribing something far more ministerial, than many of our opponents have been willing to grant. And according to other learned men, they not only "baptised women," but preached the gospel to themselves. And this is what St. Paul evidently meant, when he distinguished them in the text thus;—"which labored with me in the gospel." Rev. Manton Eastburn, D. D., in his "Lectures on the Epistle of St. Paul to the Philippians, "thus discourses upon the text before us:—It appears, from the testimony of St. Paul in the place before us, that these two women had been remarkable for their activity in the cause of the Redeemer; and that, in the face of persecution and danger, they had strengthened the hands, and assisted the efforts, of those ministersing servants of Jesus, who had preached the gospel at Philippi." And further, and more to the point, he says, "the Apostle counsels him, [that is the person meant by the term "true yoke-fellow,"] to use his best efforts in bringing Euodias and Syntyche to a settlement of their differences; and also to encourage them in their excellent labors for the diffusion of the knowledge of Christ." Is not this plain enough that the Dr. meant preaching? And that the apostilic counsel to his true yokefellow was to encourage or help them? And this Dr. Eastburn, (as well as those two authors above mentioned,) is an eminent Divine in the Protestant Episcopalian Church. But let us hear the plain and pointed comment of Dr. Clarke on the text. On the phrase—"Help those women which labored with me," the Dr. remarks that, "Both in the Grecian and Asiatic countries, women were kept much secluded; and it was not likely that even the apostles had much opportunity of conversing with them: it was therefore necessary that they should have some experienced Christian women with them, who could have access to families, and Preach Jesus to the female part of them. The apostle tells us that certain women labored with him in the gospel; and were assistants to others also who had assisted him." In a word, is it not undeniable, that whatever exercise was meant by 'laboring in the gospel,' which those devoted women did, the apostle did the same; for he says plainly, "labored with me!!!" So that, if the apostle preached the gospel, those women did the same also. And on the other hand, of those pious and zealous women, in all their labor—if they only 'knit stockings' and sang, the Apostle Paul did the same, and no more! For they evidently labored at the same kind of work. And, all prejudice apart, is it not manifest that the labors of the apostle, 'in the Gospel,' in the language of Dr. Eastburn, were efforts put forth for the "diffusion of the knowledge of Christ?" And consequently, that those 'women' who 'labored with him,' as Dr. Clarke says, "Preached Jesus to the female part" of those families whom they had access. And then, as such his zealous 'fellow laborers,' he by the Spirit, made this honorable mention of them, and of their labors of love.

In Rom. chap. xvi, we have ample proof of the position assumed. The greater part of the chapter is devoted to personal salutations. And in these apostolical salutations, the difference between those which refer to private, and those which refer to public characters, is very notable. Instance the following: verse 5. "Salute my well beloved Epenetus, who is the first fruits of Achaia," &c. Here the affectionate epithet 'well beloved,' is used as "Epenetus" was doubtless a good man and brother in the Lord, but nothing is said about his laboring in the gospel, &c. Verse 8. "Greet Amphas my beloved in the Lord." But not his beloved "helper in Christ," &c. Verse 11. "Greet them that be of the household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord." Probably some in that household were not "in the Lord;"* and none, it seems, in the ministry. Now notice some verses where ministers are mentioned, how careful the apostle Paul is to salute them as such. Verse 1. "Phebe, a servant of the church," &c. Not a (child of God, or beloved, in the Lord, &c.) for that a private christian is, but a "servant of the church!" Or as the Greek word "diakonon" evidently means, a "deaconess." In a parallel passage, Col. iv: 12. where a minister of the Gospel salutes the Church of his charge, he is there styled a "servant of Christ." And in 1 Thess. iii: 2. the word in the original is the same as in Rom. xvi: 1, 'diakonon;' —in the latter passage, it is translated, 'servant' of the church, while in the former, it is rendered, 'minister' of God.

To Timothy is also given another epithet of similar import, in the same verse; 'our fellow laborer in the Gospel.' Titus too, is similarly named, II Cor. viii: 23. 'my partner and fellow-helper concerning you.' Verse 3 'Greet Priscilla and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus.' Observe here that both the wife and her husband were 'helpers' of the apostle 'in Christ Jesus!' Laborers in the vineyard of the Lord—ministers of the word. Or, in the paraphrase of that profound metaphysician, and divine Mr. Locke. 'my fellow laborar in the Gospel!' Verse 12. 'salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labor in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which labored much in the Lord.' Here are three women ministers mentioned in one verse! And saluted as such; as the ministerial appelatives employed in the salutations evidently imply. The too first named Sisters were, doubtless, zealous 'fellow laborers in the Gospel;' and the latter, it seems, even excelled them, for it is said of her, that she 'labored much in the Lord.' And in Verse 9. two persons are saluted one of a private, and the other a public character; and how carefully does the inspired apostle discriminate between the laity and the ministry. 'Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.' He calls the former 'our helper,' and our helper 'in Christ,' as he was evidently a 'fellow-laborer with the apostles;' while he simply styles his 'friend' Stachys, 'my beloved!' Servants of the church, and laborers in the Gospel, are among the most common and noted appelations employed by the Holy Spirit, to designate the ministers of the Gospel. But these distinctive appelations are applied to female teachers of Christianity. Therefore the Holy Ghost not only approves of their preaching the gospel, but also is pleased to honor them as ministers.

Let us close these remarks on this proposition, with a quotation from the celebroted Dr. John Brown, of Haddington, Scotland, author of a Bible Dictionary, &c., &c. In his work entitled 'Sacred Tropology,' chap. ix. headed 'of metaphors respecting faithful ministers.' No. xix. founded upon Matt. ix: 39. he makes the following observations: 'They are represented as Servants and Laborers. Solemnly engaged to, and hired of Jesus, to occupy in his church; it is theirs, by every proper method, however base, or difficult to the carnal eye, to promote his glory, and the spiritual edification of men. Always, and in all places, they are to be very diligent, humble, obedient, single, and faithful, in their work. Always are they to exert their whole power and skill; and seize every opportunity, that, by the public or private dispensation of the gospel, they may be instrumental, in plowing up the fallow-ground of men's hearts; in plucking them as brands out the burning; in hewing them off from their old covenant root; in gathering them to Jesus; and promoting their heavenly course. Patiently they are to bear whatever burden of wark, of trouble, or persecution, God may lay upon them. So doing, however unsuccessful their labors on earth, glorious and lasting shall be their heavenly reward!' Dr. Brown was a strong Calvinist in doctrinal sentiment, and the candid reader will make due allowance for his strong language, when he speaks of the duty of faithful ministers, to bear patiently, not only 'whatever burden of work, and of trouble,' but of 'persecution' also, which 'God may lay upon them!' In general, both male and female ministers may be benefited by his forcible pointed observations.

Prop. IX. Female preachers were noticed by the apostle Paul, and were admonished and instructed by him as such. This fact is not only clearly sustainable by the Scriptures, but assists in the completion of the demonstration that are women authorised to preach the Gospel.—1. We remark, that the apostle Paul recognises the authority of women to preach the gospel, or to minister in holy things. In 1 Cor. xi: 5. 6. he says, 'But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonereth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven. For if the woman be not covered, let her be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.' Now here it is observable that the apostle did not say, that by 'praying or prophesying,' she 'dishonored her head;' or that it was 'a shame' for her thus to exercise. But 'every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head;' and it seems, it was considered 'a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven.' Here then, it is obvious that the right or authority of the sex to 'prophesy' and 'pray' is acknowledge. And we have before proved that to 'prophesy' is to preach. And of this, the apostle's own definition of the word in this epistle is irrefragable proof. In chap. xiv: 3. he asserts that, 'he that prophesieth, speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.' These words comprehend every class of preaching. And, as Dr. Clarke remarks on the passage first cited,—'But every woman that prayeth,' &c. 'Whatever may be the meaning of praying and prophesying, in respect to the man, they have precisely the same meaning in respect to the woman. So that some women, at least, as well as some men, might speak to others to edification, and exhortation, and comfort. And this kind of prophesying, or teaching, was predicted by Joel, ii: 28. and referred to by Peter, Acts, ii: 27. And had there not been such gifts bestowed on woman, the prophecy could not have had its fulfilment.' Finally, upon this point, if the authority of women to preach under proper regulations, is not plainly recognized by the apostle, in the Scriptures before us, then is not the authority of men recognized by him, and that for the same reason? For, in verse 4. the apostle says: 'Every man praying, or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonereth his head. Here we see that the dishonor in the man is not because of his prophesying, but if he did thus officiate with his 'head covered.' Has not man a right to prophesy? If he has, woman has also, and that for the self-same reason, because it is authorized by the Scriptures. And if in these passages of St. Paul, we behold the obvious recognition of the right of man to prophesy or preach, with equal clearness may be seen his recognition of the rights of women under proper regulations, to officiate in the same way.

The authority of women to preach the gospel, was not only plainly recognized by St. Paul; but he also proceeded to give direction how she should appear in public, when she did thus officiate. This he does at length, from the 4th, to 15th, verse of the chapter. Exposing the folly of fantasy in dress, particularly in ministers of the Gospel, and especially when they appear in public. The head being so important and prominent a member of the body, particularly of a public speaker, that the instruction is chiefly given in reference to it. And the hair receives a considerable share of attention in these apostolic advices. And here it is worthy of observation that a total silence prevails in regard to the 'position' of the hair. If, as some excellent and good meaning christian friends 'conscientiously' believe, that the hair on a man's head should be constrained to hang down his 'forehead,' and neither be turned 'back,' nor brushed 'aside,' pity the apostle omitted instruction on that important point. But for our part, as the God of 'nature' has not caused any to 'grow' on the forehead, nor the God of grace directed that it should be brushed or combed that way, we 'conscientiously' reject the dogma which demands it. The single instruction on the subject of the 'hair' is, that man ought not to 'have long hair,' nor the woman to have hair 'shorn' short, or be 'shaven,' For a woman to have 'long hair,' it 'is a glory to her;' but for man to have long hair, 'it is a shame unto him.' 'The Author of our being has given a larger proportion of hair to the head of women than to that of men: and to them it is an especial ornament; and may, in various cases, serve as a veil.——It is a certain fact, that a man's long hair renders him contemptible; and woman's long hair renders her more amiable. Nature and the apostle speak the same language; we may account for it as we please," Dr. Clarke.

But here is an evident reference to the oriental custom, which considered a covering on the head as a badge of inferiority or subjection. And not to wear a 'covering' on the head, signified superiority or dominion. Hence for a man to appear with his 'cap' or 'turban' on, as he is the representative of Christ, the 'head' of the church, he would 'dishonor his head.' And for a woman to appear in public without her 'covering,' as she is the representative or 'glory' of her husband, she would 'dishonor her head.'—The apostle is extremely careful that those who prophesied should avoid all improprieties in their personal appearance, that the cause of Christ should not be scandalized. 'The sexes should not affect to change places,' says Matthew Henry on the place. And especially when they officiate in public should such a course be reprehended. But it appears they did so at Corinth; and, as Dr. Dodd observes, 'These disorderly practices, the false teacher, it seems, had encouraged,—v. 16. 'No marvel, therefore, that St. Paul should endeavor to rectify such irregularities in the church of Christ. But in all this the woman is no more forbidden to prophesy than the man. So far from it, that the apostle is delivering directions how both men and women shall appear in public when they do prophesy!' What clearer evidence can any candid person require, of the fact, that women as well as men, may proclaim the truth of God, in an orderly manner! Again we quote from Dr. Clarke. He declares that 'The only difference marked by the apostle was, the man had his head uncovered, because he was the representative of Christ: the woman had hers covered, because she was placed by the order of God, in a state of subjection to the man; and because it was a custom, both among the Greeks and Romans, and among the Jews an express law, that no woman should be seen abroad without a veil.'

3. The apostle also administers sharp and salutary correction for their disorder in their public assemblies.—1 Cor. xiv: 34, 35. 'Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.' Now here we remark, (1.) That those women had exercised their gifts in a disorderly way, and consequently, the apostle very properly administers this suitable correction, 'Let your women keep silence in the churches.' For in such irregularity and confusion, it was not permitted unto them to speak.' And when they threw off the veil, the token of their subjection to their husbands, St. Paul reminds them that, 'they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law.' And for them, not only to lay aside their veil—throw off the badge of subjection, but to proceed to dispute with the men, thereby usurping authority over their 'head,' how salutary is the lesson,—'if they would learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home.' And if, as Drs. Dodd and Coke explain the matter, 'that some of the Corinthian women, on pretence of being inspired, had prayed and prophesied in the Christian assemblies as teachers: and while performing these offices had cast off their veils, after the manner of the heathen priestesses in their heathen extacies,' such conduct merited the rebuke of the Apostle; 'for it is a shame for women to speak [thus] in the churches.' And with all our heart, we say such improper conduct in Christian females, in public too, was shameful!

That such disorder did exist, to be thus corrected, is manifest by the following verses. In verse 23, it existed among them speaking with tongues. 'If therefore the whole church be come together in one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say ye are mad?' This gift of tongues was imparted for the particular purpose of convincing unbelievers. 'Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not.'—v. 22. But what sort of a 'sign' would it be to an 'unbeliever,' should he attend their public ministrations and find the 'whole church' engaged—'all speaking with tongues?' Would it not be a 'sign' of their confusion and fanaticism? Or in the language of the apostle, 'would he not say that they were mad?' 'So they well might,' says Dr. Clarke, 'finding the whole assembly of people talking languages, which those who had most need of instruction could not understand.' Says Matthew Henry, 'they would conclude them to be mad, to be no better than a parcel of wild fanatics.'—And in verse 26, it was apparent in their prophesyings. 'How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation.—Let all things be done unto edifying.' This gift was designed, it seems, for the edifying of the church, the body of Christ, for in verse 22, it is added, 'but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.' But could 'the church,' any better than 'unbelievers,' profit or be 'edified,' by confusion? 'It seems probable, that some of these Christians were so full of themselves, and so desirous of exercising their respective gifts, that, without waiting for the permission and direction of him who presided in the assembly (which in the synagogues the apostles themselves seem to have done.—See Acts, xiii: 15.) several began speaking or singing in the same minute, and some began while others were speaking.'—Drs. Dodd and Coke. And similar are the sentiments of Dr. Clarke, who, after giving an exposition, as Dr. Lightfoot 'understands' the passage, remarks, 'It seems more likely that, when the whole church came together, among whom there were many persons with extraordinary gifts, each of whom wishes to put himself forward, and occupy the time and attention of the congregation: hence confusion must necessarily take place; and perhaps, not a little contention. This was contrary to that edifying, which was the intention of those gifts.' And how vain was the plea for this confusion and irregularity, that one 'had a psalm,' another 'a doctrine,' a third, 'a tongue,' a fourth, 'a revelation,' and a fifth, 'an interpretation,' and all by the movings of the 'Spirit.'—Since, as the apostle adds, verse 32, 'And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.' As one author (frequently cited, in this discourse,) says, 'God grants no ungovernable gifts.'

(2.) We remark, that amidst the whole of this correction of this confusion, which improperly prevailed in the church at Corinth, not one word is uttered against the exercise of the various gifts conferred upon individuals of either sex, in an orderly way. So far from it, that the apostle again actually gives directions for their proper and profitable use. In verse 27, he directs, 'If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.' Here the direction is for the profitable speaking with tongues. He limits the number of speakers at a meeting, to 'two' or at the most, to 'three.' And those one at a time, or as he says, 'and that by course.' And what is said by them, to be explained, that the audience may be edified, 'and let one interpret.' The apostle also gives directions to those who prophesied. He says, verse 29, 'Let the prophets speak two or three, and let another judge.' Now here observe that, so far from forbidding the exercise of prophesying, St. Paul says plainly, 'Let the prophets speak.'—He also limits the number, as before, in speaking with tongues, to 'two or three.' It is said that, 'As prophesying implied psalmody, teaching, and exhortation, Dr. Lightfoot thinks, that the meaning of the place is this: Let one sing who has a psalm; let another teach who has a doctrine; and let a third exhort or comfort, who has a gift of that kind.' And then 'let the other prophets or qualified persons, 'judge' of the agreement of what was spoken with the Scriptures. And in verse 31, he even unequivocally and positively declares, that, 'ye may all prophesy, one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted!!' Not confining the exercise of the gifts of prophesying to 'two or three' persons in the church, but at a meeting.—And here positively asserts that 'all' the members of the church, who had those gifts, 'may prophesy,' or exercise them!! But among them were some women who had those gifts: therefore some women may prophesy, or preach. So that, this so-thought proof passage against us, is for us! And actually furnishes one of the strongest proofs that one could desire, of the fact, that women, as well as men, in an orderly and proper manner, may preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. For to correct the disorderly use of gifts and talents, and to give formal directions and instructions, how their possessors shall officiate when they exercise them, are among the strongest confirmations of their authority to exercise them, which could be given. The correction of the irregularities, when the proper exercise is not forbidden, (and nowhere does the apostle forbid, a woman to prophesy!) is of itself a strong proof of authority to exercise in an orderly manner. It is similar to the maxim * in other respects—'The exception confirms the rule.' And when added to this, then, we have positive directions now they 'may prophesy,' it amounts to a proof equal to a demonstration. A positive precept could not be more certain and unanswerable. But more on this passage, when we come to answer objections.

To close our remarks upon this disputed passage of the apostle Paul, we propose to transcribe a few verses of a poem, entitled "The Female Preacher's Plea," written by a lady of exalted piety, and useful pulpit talents; and who has two or three daughters, eminent preachers, with one of whom, the writer has the pleasure of a personal acquaintance, and who in his judgment, is qualified to fill any pulpit in the land, with credit to herself and the cause of our common Christianity. The husbands of both mother and daughter, are also eminently useful ministers of the Gospel. The first few verses of the poem are evidently founded upon the passage before us.

"'Tis wrong, in females, (as we find,)
"To stop, for questions, or dispute,
"He who is preaching to mankind,
"That 's sowing seed, or bringing fruit.

"But women, having much forgiven,
"And feeling grace so full and free,
"Are led to praise the God of heaven,
"And cry to sinne.s, "Come and see!"

"Come, O thou guilty sinner, come,
"And hear what Christ for thee can do;
"His bleeding side shall make thee room,
"And thou shalt find the Savior too.

"I feel no fear, nor shame, to tell,
"(Although the weaker vessel still,)
"Jesus has saved my soul from hell,
"And kindly turn'd my headstrong will.

"I see it written in His word,
"On all he doth his Spirit pour;
"Servants and handmaids, from their Lord,
"Are ALL to feel the gracious shower.

"Believing then his Word secure
"And every jot to stand entire,
"No harm can be in women, sure,
"Sinners to pluck out of the fire."

4. Having clearly shewn from the 1st Epistle to the Corinthian church, the apostolic recognition of the authority of women to prophesy or preach, direction or instruction in reference to the proper exercise of their ministerial gifts and talents, and the correction in consequence of the disorder and improprieties in their public assemblies at Corinth; let us now—fourthly and finally, upon this proposition, remark that, in those ministerial epistles of St. Paul—to Timothy and Titus, wherein the qualifications of bishops and deacons are treated of at length; and admonitions, and exhortations to holiness of life, and exemplariness of deportment, &c.—even there also honorable mention is made of the female portion of the ministry; and positive directions given in regard to their support, &c.!

And, surprising as this may sound to some, we find ourselves amply sustained in this sentiment by learned critics and commentators; and of the Calvinian, as well as Arminian, school of theology. (1.) The first passage we refer to is 1 Tim. iii: 11. 'Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.' Upon this passage Dr. Clarke comment thus: 'I believe the apostle does not mean here the wives either of the bishops or deacons in particular; but the Christian women in general. The original is simply. [Gunaikas osantos semnas.] Let the women likewise be grave. Whatever is spoken here becomes women in general; but if the apostle had those termed deaconesses in his eye, which is quite possible, the words are peculiarly suitable to them. That there was such an order in the apostolic and primitive church, and that they were appointed to their office by the imposition of hands, has already been noticed on Rom. xvi: 1. Possibly, therefore, the apostle may have had this order of deaconesses in view, to whom it was necessary to give counsels and cautions, as to the deacons themselves: and to prescribe their qualifications, lest improper persons should insinuate themselves into that office.'—Dr. Macknight also, after preliminary remarks, translates similarly to Dr. Clarke. He remarks that, 'As the manner of the Greeks did not permit men to have much intercourse with women of character, unless they were their relations, and as the Asiatics were under still greater restraints, (See Rom. xvi: 1, note 3,) it was proper that an order of female teachers should be instituted in the church, for instructing the young of their own sex. Of these I think the apostle writes in his epistle to Titus, chapter ii: 3, 4, where he gives an account of their office, &c.:—It is believed that they are the persons called widows, of whose maintainance by the church the apostle speaks, 1 Tim. v: 2, and whose character and state he there describes, verses 9, 10. See the note on verse 15 of that chapter.' He then quotes Father Clement, of Alexandria, who he says, 'reckons widows among ecclesiastical persons;' and gives his words. Grotius, too, he observes, 'tells us these female presbyters or elders were ordained by the imposition of hands,' &c.—The Dr. next speaks of Euodias and Syntyche, Phil. iv: 3, as probably being 'female presbyters.' And adds, 'Perhaps also Priscilla, Tryphena and Tryphosa, were of the same order, with some others, whom in his epistle to the Romans he salutes.—Rom. xvi: 3, 12. as 'laboring in the Lord.'' He then translates, not Deacon's wives, but 'The women' in like manner.—In the Cottage Bible and Family Expositor, by Thomas Williams, of England, author of several religious works of importance: and Rev. William Patton, of America, (it is believed to be the benevolent Dr. Patton, of the Presbyterian Church, New York,) on the passage before us, (1 Tim. iii: 11,) is the following critical note. 'Even so must their wives be grave.'—So the passage is generally understood; Macknight, however, renders it after the vulgate—'The Women in like manner must be grave'—referring to the deaconesses, or female presbyters, who were employed in visiting and instructing their own sex: and so he tells us it was understood by Chrysostom, and other Greek. as well as Latin fathers; and it is certain the same Greek word is used indifferently for both 'wives' and 'women.''

TO BE CONTINUED.

* "Exceptio firmat regulam."

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missinary Herald.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

A letter of Mr. Goodell, written in July last, shows the increase of the church at Constantinople, during the first twelve months of its history: "On the 1st instant was the anniversary of the organization of the Protestant Church at Constantinople. The chapel was full on the occasion, and the services were solemn. Many were the tears which the tender recollections of the past year caused to gush forth. The church was organized with forty members, and forty-eight have since been added by profession. Four having been removed by death, it now numbers eighty-four, twenty-eight of whom are females."

BROOSA.

A letter from Mr. Schneider, dated July 4, represents the state of things at Broosa as quite unpromising. 'The effects of the persecution,' he says, 'are still deeply felt, in the hatred and general opposition which it has awakened on the one hand, and in the fear and the standing aloof which it has occasioned on the other. However favorable, in the overruling providence of God, its final results may have been in other places, the effect has been truly disastrous here. It has been a more secret opposition than in most cases, but perhaps on that very account more injurious.'

CEYLON.

Mr. Hoisington, under date of July 2, writes in relation to the seminary as follows: 'The term has commenced, and all are again at their posts. While I would look for success in all that is good, I feel particularly solicitous for the spiritual interests of the classes. There are eighty-six lads in the normal department, and among them are only 4 church members.—Most of the boys are well inclined, and several are seriousy disposed. But we need the regenerating influences of the Holy Spirit. Why should not the churches make such institutions, which are in some sense their charge, special subjects of prayer?' Mr. Hoisington also says that 'Gautier, one of the lads dismissed last term, has been restored on trial.' Horace Bushnell, formerly a member of the seminary, but now in the service of the Madras mission, has taken the second prize (of one hundred dollars) offered by the Madras University for the best scholarship; the first premium not having been awarded to any one. The examination continued through four days.

CHOCTAWS.

The blessing of God has attended the labors of the missionaries among the Choctaws during the past year. Mr. Wright who is stationed at Wheelock, reports the addition of twenty-eight persons to the church under his care by profession; while there are twelve or fifteen more who are expected to be admitted at the next communion. At Good Water, where Mr. Hotchkin is stationed, thirty-nine have been received into the church since January, 1847. Mr. Hotchkin says there are about as many more who have commenced a life of prayer, and who wish to make a trial of their faith in private, before they make a public avowal of their attachment to Christ and his cause. At Mount Pleasant ten persons were admitted to the church on examination in May last. It is not known how many have made a profession of religion at the other stations.

OJIBWAS.

Mr. Ayer, in a letter dated at Red Lake, July 27, says that the only native adult male member of the little church at that place has dishonored his profession. He joined a large war party last summer; and, though he declares himself to be without any peace or happiness, he does not return to the true fold. The Red Lake Indians appear to be making some progress in agriculture. 'I presume,' writes Mr. Ayer, 'that more corn will be raised by this band this season, than by all the other bands in the nation united; several families will probably have one or two hundred bushels of potatoes.'

NEW YORK INDIANS.

This mission has received some tokens of the divine favor during the past year. Forty-six persons have been admitted to church fellowship at the different stations, making the present number of church members three hundred and six. Of those who have been received into the church within the last twelve months, three were admitted at Tuscarora, twelve at Cattaraugus upper station, twenty-two at Cattaraugus lower station, and nine at Allegheny.

ABENAQUIS.

From a letter of Mr. Osunkhirhine, dated September 13, it appears that sixty-nine persons have been received into the church under his care since its formation, eight of whom have died, while twenty-five have either been suspended or have withdrawn from the ordinances of Christ's house, leaving thirty-six in good standing. The opposition of the Roman Catholics is constant and vigorous, and many are drawn away through their wiles. A school of thirteen children is still sustained. The teacher has charge of the Sabbath school; and he also attends a Bible class which has been established for the benefit of persons of all ages.

Conference Proceedings.

From the Methodist Protestant.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.

The eighteenth Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, for the Georgia District, commenced its session at Oothcalogu camp ground, Cass County, on Friday, the 22d of October, 1847, and was opened with appropriate religious services by brother Tucker, the President.

STANDING DISTRICT COMMITTEE.—Brothers Griffin, Biggers, Masters, Lavinder, Hardman and Bass.

Brothers Y. Mann, J. Hudsell, W. Norton, D. Hooten and J. Smith were elected to deacon's orders; and the four first named being present, were ordained.

Brothers Y. Mann, J. Hudsell, W. Norton, D. Hooten, J. Smith, L. P. McCutchen and R. C. Biggers, received into the itinerancy.

NUMBERS IN SOCIETY.—Randolph Ct, 249; preaching places, 11; church property, $800; Henry Ct, 530; preaching places, 14; church property, $850; Cherokee Ct, 186; preaching places, 7; church property, $400; Hall Ct, 141; preaching places, —; church property, $100; Newton Ct 285; preaching places. 8; church property, $1125; Meriwether Ct, 135; preaching places, 5: church property, $350; Columbia Ct, no report of members; number last year, 390; preaching places, 16; value of church property, $400; Savannah Mission, 51; preaching places, —; church property, $200. Itinerants, 37; —total, 2004.

APPOINTMENTS.

MCKENDREE TUCKER,—PRESIDENT.

Columbia ct, S. Moore. J. W. Davis, and J. Shields. Newton ct. L. Bates, H. Baker. Henry ct, W. M. Biggers, J. G. Mitchell, A. W. Mitchell. S. Robinson, W. Griffin, J. Thurman, J. Smith, and T. Thweatt. Meriwether ct, I. C. Wallace, P. Ogletree, and W. W. McCutchen. Randolph ct. W. Myers, J. R. Swain, E. Smith, W. Haisten, and D. Hooten. Cherokee ct, P. Lingo, B. R. Bray, W. Norton, J. Hudsell, and A. Smith. Hall ct, L. P. McCutchen. Twiggs ct, W. M. Edwards, R. A. Blount. Savannah Mission, R. C. Biggers. Madison Mission, J. O'Kelley. Rome Mission, Y. Mann. Walker Mission, W. Mitchell. G. Harlan elected Conference Missionary. G. Wilson superannuated: J. Stokes deceased. J. Rosser left in the hands of the President.

UNSTATIONED MINISTERS AND PREACHERS.—S. C. Masters, H. Griggs, A. Trail, J. C. Thurman, T. Gardner, S. Hixson, W. Fowler, T. Jordan, Jesse George.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

We view with regret the manner in which our ministers and preachers are neglected; we believe the obligations of the ministry and laity are reciprocal, and that while the one imparts the bread of life, the other is morally bound to furnish him a fair equivalent for the services rendered; we therefore recommend the passage of the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1, That a committee of twelve be appointed by this Conference, to apportion the President's salary between the respective circuits and missions in proportion to the number of members and their ability to pay.

Resolved, 2, That the sums raised under the provisions of the preceding resolution, be paid over to the President, by some member of the circuit appointed for that purpose by the circuit, quarterly, or at any time funds may come into his hands: Provided, that no circuit shall be required to pay over as aforesaid, unless the President shall have visited said circuit in his official character, and it shall be his duty to report to the next annual Conference the amount so received by him.

Resolved, 3, That the members of each church in the circuits, respectively, be requested at as early a day as practicable, to elect one member of their church as delegate, whose duty it shall be to meet the delegates from the various churches in the circuit, at the first quarterly Conference in their respective circuits, and there apportion the salary of their preachers as allowed by discipline, together with the amount apportioned to said circuit for the President's salary, to the several churches in the circuits in proportion to the number of members and their ability to pay.

Resolved, 4, That the several sums collected under the provisions of the third resolution, be sent up to the quarterly Conference, whose duty it shall be to pay to the claimants, in proportion to the services rendered their quarterage and take a receipt for the same; and in case there is a surplus left, it shall be retained in the hands of the Conference, as aforesaid, for the next quarter.

Resolved, 5, That where any church in the different circuits or stations becomes vacant by the removal of the members, or otherwise, the same be sold, and the funds arising therefrom, be under the direction of the quarterly Conference of said circuit.

Resolved, 6, That it shall be the duty of the publishing committee to send in this report to the "Methodist Protestant," for publication; and that it be the duty of each superintendent to bring these resolutions to the notice of the churches at their first appointments on their circuits.

All of which was unanimously agreed to.

Resolved, That the itinerant preachers carry out the Discipline in making their reports to the President, quarterly, either by letter or through the Methodist Protestant.

Resolved, That the first Friday in May, 1848, be set apart, to be observed by our membership throughout the Georgia District, as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer to Almighty God, imploring his blessings upon our efforts to advance the interests of the Reedeemer's kingdom and the infant branch of the church to which we belong.

Conference appointed Brs. M. Tucker, G. Harlan, and J. C. Wallace to visit our brethren of Alabama during the next session of its annual Conference.

Resolved, That the next Conference be held at La Grange church, Newton county, twelve miles south-east from Covington, on the mail route from Covington to Monticello, commencing on the Friday before the fourth Sabbath in October next, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

President's address—Starrsville Newton Co., Georgia.

In accordance with an invitation, among others our venerable brother Eppes Tucker, formerly of the Georgia, but now of the Alabama Conference, took his seat with us, as an honorary member, aiding us by his experience in our deliberations.

The editor will perceive that the publication of the the value of church property, is not called for by the Discipline, but is herein added for the benefit of the publisher of the Annual Register.

Conference adjourned on Tuesday evening, October 26th, after a harmonious session of four days, and it may be truly added that our prospects as a church were never so flattering as at the present. Our borders are enlarging, peace and harmony prevail, & as our principles are spread and become known, our infant Zion is prized for her devotion to those principles which cost so much blood and treasure in the revolutionary struggle. May God grant that our success may be commensurate with the importance and correctness of our principles.

JOHN BASS, Pub. Com.

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 1st, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: As the interests of the church ever lie very near the heart of every true christian, it may not be uninteresting, at least to the friends of our beloved Zion, to hear that we are favered with some degree of prosperity in this field of labor. We entered upon the duties of this station, (we trust,) in the fear of God, and in humble dependence on his grace to crown our efforts; and we rejoice that we have been permitted to see the goings forth of the Lord in our midst, showing that the work of our hands has not been altogether in vain; but establishing it upon us in displays of divine power, and mercy, so that our membership is much revived, and we think in general are increasing in the graces & enjoyments of religion.

Our first quarterly meeting commenced on the 13th of November, and was protracted twelve days; and we may truly say that it was a precious season of grace,—it was indeed a time of joy, and rejoicing to believers, of salvation to penitents, and of trembling amongst sinners; all appeared to realize an aweing sense of the divine presence. Some were brought to tremble beneath the power of truth, and to weep over their past follies, while others rejoiced in the consolations, of the great, and precious promises of the gospel.

Br. Clawson was with us during the first five days of our meeting, his labors were not only zealous, but faithful; and we believe were made the instrument of much good, congregations were large, and all minds appeared to be impressed with the importance of religion; and the unusual solemnity indicated a general moving, and waking up amongst the people. On Thursday evening several persons came forward to the altar of prayer, anxiously seeking for redemption, and soliciting an interest in the prayers of the church, the interest now increased, and the work continued to spread for several days, till it broke out in the M. E. Church; this divided, and drew off a part of our congregation, as they commenced a protracted meeting immediately, and the work is still going on—our own meetings also are still lively, and interesting. In this station we have some valiant souls, who are not ashamed to exert themselves, to promote the cause of Christ, and advance the interests of his kingdom. Since our meeting commenced, 10 have united with us on probation, and 1 by certificate. May their names be among the saved at the last day. Others we expect to unite with us shortly,—may the great Head of the church carry on his work.

N. WATSON.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Bourneville, O., Dec. 1st, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: We closed our first quarterly meeting for Bourneville Circuit on last night. It commenced on Saturday last at the Indian Creek appointment, and lasted till Tuesday night. Father Hughey and Br. M'Ginnis were with us till Monday morning and labored faithfully. On Monday night Br. Kezerta came to my assistance, and labored with zeal and to profit. Several souls were happily converted, many backsliders were reclaimed, and seventeen persons joined the church—most of them, promising young men, who will doubtless be an ornament to the church—Our prospects on this circuit are flattering and I am well pleased with this kind hearted people.—They support their Minister—attend their meetings and seem encouraged all round the circuit. On Monday last we opened a subscription for raising means to erect a meeting house for the Indian Creek Class, and with very little effort we received subscriptions to the amount of one hundred and ten dollars, all to be paid in cash. Our next quarterly meeting is to be held at Mt. Olivo Meeting House.

Yours as ever,

C. H. WILLIAMS.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO, THURSDAY, DEC. 9, 1847.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL,—PRINTER.

☞ Having yielded an unusual amount of space, this week, in our inside form, to original matter, in the way of communications from our friends, we cheerfully excuse ourself from furnishing much in the way of editorial.

☞ The article headed "Good News," on our fourth page, should have been credited to the Golden Rule.

"CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS."—Br. Hoagland, by his note given in this number, thinks that Brs. S. and B. do not differ de facto, in their views respecting the matter in hand. This is a pleasant discovery, and we are sure that the brethren will not willingly have any misunderstanding in the case. We love to have the brethren write, but are better accommodated when we can see them "be of one mind."

ALL MISTAKE —A statement lately went the rounds of the papers, ours amongst the rest, that Dr. Thompson of Columbus, and Dr. Kreider of Lancaster, removed from Mrs. Lytle of Etna a large tumor weighing 29½ pounds, which proved to be the entire diseased liver of the patient, and that for several days after the operation, she continued to do well. We see that Dr. Thompson publishes a card in the Ohio Statesman setting forth that a post mortem examination, twelve days subsequent to the operation, disclosed the fact that the morbid mass removed was not the liver, but an ovarian tumor, which had occupied the greatly increased concavity of the diaphragm, carrying the liver before it.

THE OHIO LEGISLATURE convened on Monday last.

In the Senate, C. B. Goddard was elected speaker. On assuming his duties he addressed the Senate appropriately. Albert Galloway was chosen Clerk, and C. Downing Sergeant at Arms.

In the House, Joseph H. Hawkins of Preble was elected Speaker, Henry A. Swift was chosen Clerk, and A. Scatterday, Sergeant at Arms.

COLUMBUS, IA.—We see it stated that this village has been mostly destroyed by fire. The particulars have not reached us. Bad enough.

STATEMENT OF AN ENGLISH MINISTER.—The recent Triennial Convention of the Free Will Baptists of the United States, was visited by Rev. Dr. Burns, a Delegate from the General Baptists of England. During the session a meeting was held of their Foreign Mission Society. The thrilling eloquence of Dr. B. added much to the interest of the occasion. In the course of a speech, he remarked as follows:

I have seen much to admire and love in America. But I have seen some things that I could not admire. In many things you are in advance of us, and I shall want to learn all I can to carry back with me. And I want America, on the other hand, should conform to all that is good in England. Now I never saw in England, in all my life, a minister that was in the habit of chewing tobacco. Smoking is bad enough; and we have that; but chewing is infinitely worse. Now I will agree to pay into your missionary society a dollar a head to buy up smokers and chewers, to the amount of $10. [Applause.]

D. B. Lewis. I have felt convicted in reference to using tobacco a great many times; and I now give it up. But instead of accepting the offer of brother Burns, I think I can afford to pay a dollar towards making him a Life member of this society.

The ten dollars were now made up, and Dr. Burns was declared a Life member of the Free-will Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,—The Baltimore Sun says that petitions to Congress are in circulation in the District of Columbia, praying for the establishment of a territorial government, within that 'ten miles square.'

SESSION PAPERS.—As the Legislature of our State has again convened, many of our readers will be desirous to obtain full reports of its deliberations and proceedings. We have before us the prospectuses of the two great political papers published at Columbus, the Ohio State Journal, of the Whig party, and the Ohio Statesman, of the Democratic party. We here give a statement of their terms for the information of our readers.

OHIO STATE JOURNAL.—Daily during the session, $3. Tri-Weekly during the session $1,50. Weekly during the session, 50 cents.

Daily during the year, $7,00; Tri-Weekly, $4: Weekly $2. Wm. B. Thrall, Editor and proprietor.

OHIO STATESMAN.—Terms for the Session. Daily $2,50. Tri-Weekly, $1. Weekly 50 cents.

Terms of the Yearly Statesman.—Daily, $7,00. Tri-Weekly, $4,00. Weekly, $2,00. S. Medary, Editor and proprietor.

ITALY.—An enthusiastic meeting was lately held at the Tabernacle, New York, to give demonstration of acknowledgments to Pope Pius IX. Ex-President Van Buren, Ex-Gov. Seward, and Honorables G. M. Dallas, J. Buchanon, R. Johnson, T. H. Benton, J. C. Spencer, Edw. Everett, and the venerable Albert Gallatin, were present. A complimentary Address to his Holiness was adopted by the meeting, and resolutions were passed presenting hearty and respectful salutations to the Sovereign Pontiff for the noble part he has taken in behalf of his people, and in promotion of free institutions in Italy. The meeting say "We unite in this tribute, not as Catholics, which some of us are, while the greater number are not."

"INCREASE OF PATRONAGE."—The article given below on this subject, is from an intelligent brother of the laity, in the city of Pittsburgh. It comes to us unsolicited and unpected. We are therefore of course, the more grateful to our brother for it. We trust that our friends will read it, but especially that they will heed it. Br. J. S. Thrap, of Frederic Circuit, sends us a new subscriber this week, and expresses a hope that he will have eight or ten more to send soon. He says, 'There ought to be fifty more copies of the Recorder taken on this circuit than there are, and I will try how many of that number I can get.' That's right, brother, success to you. The preachers have now had time to become acquainted with the people in their new fields of labor since Conference, and they are just beginning to send us the names. Br. Burns, too, who is never behind the "very chiefest" of our agents, sends three more names this week.—No circuit we believe does more than old Mt. Pleasant circuit, to support the Western Recorder. And our subscribers there are such sure pay, that we like to have a few more of the same sort. We shall be very grateful to every brother who will act efficiently in behalf of our paper. ☞ How many new subscribers shall we have from all our agents, to commence with the new year, 1848?

Written for the Western Recorder.

Proposed Increase of Subscribers.

From the perusal of a late number of the Western Recorder we conclude, that the Editor of that paper is very desirous to add, in the course of a few months, to his subscription list, the names of a thousand "good men and true." His earnestness of manner merits commendation; and it is sincerely hoped that his stirring appeal to the patrons and friends of the periodical under his control, will be promptly and cheerfully responded to. Should persons feel curious to know, why the writer manifests so much interest in the extended circulation of the Recorder, the following reasons will, perhaps, be deemed satisfactory.

That the Recorder exerts a most salutary influence, in sustaining & defending the principles of Methodist Protestantism in this region of country will be readily admitted by all who have given the subject due reflection. Believing as we do that the Polity and Doctrines, of the denomination in question, are Scriptural, liberal and just, we, therefore, place the reason thus given, on the foreground, to which, in our judgment, it is clearly entitled.

The Recorder, it may be remarked, in the next place, is printed on a large sheet, of fair quality paper, with excellent new type. Though these particulars, which relate exclusively to what is usually termed the mechanical department of the paper, are worthy of consideration; yet they dwindle into comparative insignificance when compared with the intellectual aliment, supplied by its Editor and others, who desire to promote its usefulness, or literary reputation. The matter, in our opinion, should be regarded as of much greater consequence, than the manner of correspondents. Great and comprehensive thoughts, or commanding original conceptions, will appear to advantage in almost any garb; while, on the contrary, grovelling or common-place ideas cannot be rendered attractive, by external decoration. We would not be understood as commending, an indifference or inattention to style. On the contrary, we conceive it should be studied and cultivated, to a proper extent. The most important qualities, however, of good writing, so far as we are competent to decide, are perspicuity and vigor. We do not, let it be understood set up our fallible judgment, as a standard in matters of taste, which, like almost every thing else, must be regulated, in a great degree, by public opinion.

If the views submitted are correct—the Western Recorder may be confidently pronounced an excellent periodical. Its matter and manner are far above mediocrity, and well calculated to make it popular, wherever it finds access. Not an unchristian, undignified, or improper word or thought, have we noticed in its columns, at any time—nor even an allusion, having a tendency to excite, in the bosom of purity itself, a painful or unpleasant emotion.

Furthermore, we consider the Western Recorder a very cheap religious periodical. It will, in this respect, compare favorably, with any weekly or family paper, within the circle of our knowledge. Let any one qualified to form an opinion upon the subject, reflect for a moment upon the amount of mental and manual labor, which is necessarily called into requisition, in preparing such a paper for the press, and he will irresistably come to the conclusion, at which we have arrived, in reference to the extremely moderate price of the periodical in question.

That the 'laborer is worthy of his hire,' is a sentiment we have always cherished, and, on every fitting occasion, zealously defended. We hold, however, that the wear and tear of intellect are quite as trying on the constitution as the unremitting employment of the hands. The literary or professional man, on this principle, is as justly entitled to a fair compensation for his services as the agriculturist or the mechanic. Of all the vocations with which we are either intimately or remotely acquainted, we have no hesitation in saying, that the business of an Editor is the most troublesome and annoying. We are solicitous, therefore, that numerous additions be made to the subscription list of the Western Recorder, that its Editor may be adequately remunerated for his active and efficient services.

It may be observed, in conclusion, for the purpose of preventing mistakes that the author of this communication is not an editor, though he has—probably without good or sufficient reason—acquired the habit of using the plural, instead of the singular pronoun. For this offence, however,—if such it may be deemed—he has no objection to make the party aggrieved, a suitable or satisfactory apology.

THEOPHILUS.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 30th, 1847.

GREAT SCHEME OF BENEVOLENCE.—A late number of the Presbyterian of the West, gives account of a very important and interesting movement in Cincinnati. An association has been formed, comprizing members of the different evangelical denominations, in prosecution of a "Plan for supplying the destitute thousands of Cincinnati with the means of grace," A view is taken of the religious destitution of a great portion of community, especially the watermen upon the river and canals, the foreign population and temporary residents, and of the alarming increase of immorality. The organization is called "The Monthly Tract Visiters Association." We give below a statement of its plan of operations, which is signed by numerous gentlemen of eight denominational branches of the church.

"The entire city is divided into wards, of which one or more members take the superintendence. The wards are divided into districts, embracing 30 to 50 families, and these districts are to be supplied with visiters who call upon every family monthly. It is designed that these visiters shall be men and women of devoted piety and sound discretion, and the special object of their visit to be christian conversation and prayer, as opportunity may be afforded—accompanied with the presentation of a small religious Tract. The visiters will be expected to make the acquaintance and secure the confidence of the several families in his district, and seek to do them good both temporally and spiritually by such appropriate means as christian love and prudence, and christian self-denial and human sympathy, would dictate.

They will invite to the house of God those not accustomed to attend—supply the destitute with the Bible—direct the attention of parents and children to the Sabbath and common schools—encourage the practice of Temperance—comfort the afflicted—administer to the wants of the sick—counsel and assist the poor, and hold social meetings for religious conference and prayer.

These visiters will meet together with their ward superintendents monthly, for mutual counsel—to seek the divine blessing, and to receive a new supply of Tracts.

The ward superintendants will also meet together monthly with the general superintendent, to review the labors of the month—to devise plans for the future, and unite in prayer for the assistance and approbation of the Master of the Vineyard.

Once in three months a public meeting will be held under the direction of the General Agent, at which our plans and labors, and successes will be fully presented.

Advantages of this Plan.

The peculiar and prominent features of this plan, we think, are its simplicity, economy and efficiency. It proposes a concentration of effort, by a union of all who love the Saviour and the souls of men, not to build up a party, or a sect, or a particular church, but for the common and equal good of all. Its power consists in the systematic direction of personal Christian effort, and human sympathy to the good of particular individuals, aided by the Christian press.

While it comes to all who wish to share the benefits of its labors—and it recognises no improper intrusion into families or upon the attention of individuals—yet the destitute, the neglected, the needy, and the perishing, are peculiarly its object. In short, we regard our organization as a practical Christian alliance, designed and adapted to meet the pressing necessities of our own community.

General Superintendent.

To give stability and efficiency to this plan, experience has fully shown the necessity of a general Superintendent, who shall have supervision of the whole field. Such a work requires the whole time and strength, and the whole mind and heart of a whole man: one that shall secure the confidence and co-operation of all the churches, and their pastors, as well as the Board itself; and awaken a sense of individual responsibility and of personal interest, among our Christian brethren of all denominations. With these views, the Board tendered an appointment to the Rev. James C. White, well known in his successful efforts in gathering and sustaining the Tabernacle Church in this city, and who has been particularly interested in our object, from the first.

Guided, we trust, by the great Head of the Church, the appointment has been accepted, with the concurrence of his beloved people, but not without much self-denial and sacrifice on the part of each.

His Work.

It is our intention to have a central office for the General Agent, and the meetings of the Board; a place where the visiters and friends of the cause, the needy, afflicted, and the anxious enquirer, may be free to call for aid and counsel, or prayer.

The General Superintendent will expect to meet the visiters, from time to time, at their monthly meetings with the ward Superintendent, attend upon the sick, the poor, at funerals, and to any such cases of interest where it may be desirable, in any part of the city. It is our wish, and his, that he be a minister at large—the shepherd of all the ungathered or neglected flock.

The Means.

In sustaining this general enterprise, we shall make no public appeal for aid, except at our Quarterly Meetings, and then only for means to purchase the Tracts. Provision has been made for the salary of the General Superintendent.—But to give increased efficiency, and a wider range to our operations, we solicit contributions from individuals who may desire to make us the almoners of their bounty, for the spiritual or temporal good of their fellow citizens. It will be seen, that our object and plan furnishes a medium for Christian effort and disinterested benevolence, to an almost unlimited extent. We commend it to the friends of religion, of morality and of humanity. We ask for it, the confidence and hearty co-operation of the Pastors and lay members of all denominations.

May the blessing of Almighty God be upon us. May His wisdom guide, His love constrain, and His spirit give success. And may our fidelity and prosperity and perseverance, stimulate the brethren of other cities and large towns in the valley of the West, to go and do likewise."

Amen! so say we, and so pray we. We shall be solicitious to learn of the progress and success of this interesting, and highly important benevolent enterprise.

PRICES.—Wheat is still freely bought in Putnam and Zanesville, at 90 cents per bushel. Flour sells at $5,00 per barrel. Pork brings from $2,50, to 2,75. In New York, flour sells at $6,25 @ 6,50. In Pittsburgh at $5,00 @5,12½. At Cincinnati, at $5,00. Hogs at the Queen City $3,00 @3,25, by our latest dates.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Reply to C. S. on "Conference Collections. No. I."

MR. EDITOR: I suppose it will be expected, that I defend myself against the allegations made by Br. Springer, in your last No. I regret the severity of No. 1. as I think it probable, that the brother would have been satisfied with my assurance, of no intention, to commit such an error as he charges me with, or to corrupt the journals of the Conference. What we did, we did in good faith, supposing we had correctly recorded the action of the Conference, upon the subject of Conference Collections, and so we believe still, notwithstanding, Brs. S. & H. to the contrary.

And now for my explanations &c., whether they shall be creditable to myself or otherwise. And first, I take the privilege of stating, that I took quite an active part at two Conferences previous to the last, in trying to secure attention, to the subject of Conference Collections, but at the late Conference, I took no part in the debate on that subject, being otherwise engaged, and believing the matter safe in the hands of my worthy Br. Springer. So I presume, I am not intended, as one of those, 'who interpose their influence to shield delinquents.'

The ground occupied in the late Conference, by those opposed to Br. S.'s resolution, was, as I understood them, that the General Conference had made it the duty of Station and Circuit Stewards, to see to the taking up of the Annual Conference Collection; and therefore, it was not in the power of our Annual Conference, to remove that obligation off of the Stewards and place it upon the superintendents.

Believing the object aimed at, could be secured in a way that would obviate all difficulty, I offered, what I called an amendment to Br. S.'s resolution, not by way of addition, as seems to be supposed, without intending any offence.

Br. S. came to the table, and I shewed him my amendment; he observed he did not care as the object would be secured.

Br. S. says, I said nothing about striking out &c. I believe that is correct, but what I did say amounted to the same thing. 'I moved to amend the resolution, so as to read as follows.'—at least that is what I intended to say, and what I think I did say: but if brethren are confident that I did not use that form of words, let it be so, but so the assistant sect'y. understood me according to his record.

Br. S. rebukes me, for either wilfully, or ignorantly corrupting the journals, i. e. making a record different from the action of the Conference.

In reply to this uncharitable allegation, I have to say, that I made what I understood to be a true record of the action of the Conference upon the subject,—that I read the same to the Conference upon the ensuing morning, & on motion the minutes were adopted as read, the same as published at the call of Br. Springer. Now may not I enquire, am I guilty of corrupting the journals?

That Br. S. understood the matter as he says, I doubt not, for I think him incapable of even dissimulation.

The good Brother has a very contemptable opinion of my amendment, which he thinks, by some hocus pocus manoeuver floored the original, and took possession of the sod. It is certainly a pity that a thing so nonsensical, tyranical, & oppressive, should supplant so much common sense, business like document, as that, that came from the hand of my worthy brother.

But the talented brother must pardon me, if I should not be able to see as he sees, for my optic nerve may not be so vigorous as his. But wherein is the amendment nonsensical? In that I suppose, it seeks to respect Annual Conference action. Wherein tyranical and oppressive? In that it instructs superintendents that they will be held responsible to the Annual Conference for the discharge of duty imposed by General Conference. Ah! I guess it would pass for a common sense resolution, if it were able to claim parentage in a certain quarter that might be named.

What is the difference between the original resolution, and the resolution as amended? The one makes it the duty of superintendents to take up or cause to be taken up the Conference Collection. The other requires, that sup. see that the stewards, whose duty it is, according to Discipline, attend to the matter.

This is our understanding of the difference, between what is said to be sense and nonsense.

I will hold on a little, and if No. 2. requires attention, you will hear from me again.

JOHN BURNS.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Conference Collections.

NO. III.

The rule on page 70 of the Discipline, which makes it the duty of Circuit Stewards to raise Conference Collections, proves to be worse than useless. It is not only inefficient for the object it proposes, but, it seems, it has become a bone of contention, and stands in the way of a more practical rule. I do not recollect ever to have seen a Conference Collection made by a circuit steward since the organization of the church. Whatever has been done in that way under my notice, has been done by the superintendents or not done at all. Indeed, for my part, I cannot see how any man, acquainted with the condition of the circuit stewards, in our incipient organization, could expect them, in the aggregate, to do any thing efficient in the way of Conference Collections. From the necessity of the case, a large number of them, tho' good men, have comparatively little experience; are not in the habit of public speaking, or in any way appearing before the public. Besides, as they are to be annually elected (See Dis. pa. 28.) the stewardship is perpetually changing hands, consequently they have not an opportunity of becoming trained in the duties of their office. Again, there are many societies, or classes, which have no stewards. And, as the number is limited to seven (See Dis. pa. 29.) where a circuit has over that many societies the surplus is prevented by law from having any stewards. From this state of facts, how can circuit stewards be relied on to raise funds for Conference purposes?

I am somewhat surprized that ever such a weak provision, as the one I am reviewing, ever found its way into the Discipline of the church. But it may possibly be accounted for from the following facts—a majority of the committee appointed to draft a constitution and book of discipline, for the M. P. Church, were citizens of Baltimore. It is generally known that the Baltimore Society could command many men, who were able to appear before the public, for any purpose, to as much advantage as any superintendent who might be sent amongst them. From the specimen before them, the committee were probably led to misjudge the character of the work on a general scale, hence, no doubt, this exceptionable provision. It may also be offered, in apology for the committee, that they were actuated by the worthy consideration, of making such provisions, as would relieve the ministry, far as possible, from the necessity of attending to money matters. The convention, to whom the committee's report was made for final action, had so many exciting questions to examine, and settle, that this was overlooked. And it remained for the quibbling character of some of the leading Stars of the Muskingum Annual Conference, to disclose the weakness of this rule. We will, however, add, in justice to the committee, that they gave to the world an admirable document. It, in our judgment, far exceeds, for the wisdom and liberality of its provisions, any ecclesiastical constitution of which we have any knowledge. And the case before us, only proves the fact, that great minds, through inattention, frequently produce little things.

We stated, in a former article, that the secretary's resolution, making it the duty of superintendents to arraign, before the Quarterly Conference, those stewards who neglected or refused to take Conference collections, was "tyranical and oppressive" in "spirit." And wherefore? Because the General Conference rule is more at fault than the stewards, in enjoining a duty on those who are incompetent to the task. The rule, itself, being oppressive, any attempt to force it into practice must be oppressive also. Instead of going to the stewards, in the spirit of the gospel, taking them by the hand, and teaching them their duty, and aiding them in the performance of it, to come at them, as the Secretary does, in the too frequent manner of the priesthood, with a flourish of authority, is to a sensible mind, rather nauseating. This spirit is what exposes the ministry to the rediculе and scorn of infidels. The stewards are generally honest but unpretending men. The stewardship has been mostly forced upon them at the instance of the Quarterly Conference, or preacher in charge. Tho' conscious of their inadequacy to the duty, yet, out of respect to the urgent solicitations of these functionaries, they have yielded a reluctant consent to their appointment. Now, it is an absolute shame, for any one, to approach a set of men, thus circumstanced, in the spirit of the Secretary's resolution. If he has no blush for the occasion we will try and raise one for him. Yours respectfully, &c.,

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, O., Dec. 4th, 1847.

Br. Bassett: I have been not a little surprised to see two of our leading ministers so much at variance on a subject on which they both agree.

Now Br. Bassett, I am well acquainted with these two brethren and know them both to be the fast friends of this "Conference Collection" enterprize. And I can only account for all this controversy on the score of misunderstanding which might have been avoided. Had the writer of Conference 'Collections No. 1,' taken pains to inform himself, I apprehend he would not have imputed igrorance or willfulness to the secretary of the Conference. The means and the opportunity of the necessary information have been within his reach both at Conference and since, by which he might have understood the true position of the secretary in relation to this matter. But in as much as he seems not to know and has made this want of information public, to the prejudice of the secretrry's true position, I hope that your readers will not consider me an intermeddling volunteer for stating a few things which I know to be facts, and which modesty on the part of the secretary would prevent him from making public.

And here suffer me to state as an eye and ear witness of Br. Burns' administration on Mt. Pleasant circuit of which he has been the superintendent for two years past, that he has been the warm advocate of Conference Collections and has prompted his assistant minister and the stewards to action, and has acted himself, and that too, not without success, but has carried up to Conference perhaps larger collections than any other brother. And I have no doubt will continue to do so notwithstanding the hasty and severe remarks of an elder brother. I would just say before I close, however, that to strip Br. Springer's articles from their acrimonious personalities, they are all I could wish as far as they go. And after all, while his mistake is to be regretted his sentiments should be appreciated.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

Brownsville, O., Dec. 3d, 1847.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

DEATH OF THE REV. JEREMIAH JOHNSON.

ANOTHER REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIER GONE.

Died, of a lingering illness, November the 10th, in Feltchville, Vt. the patriarchal man of God, whose eventful life forms the subject of this imperfect notice.

Receiving his primary education and first impressions from a pious mother, he early cherished a love for truth and virtue. At the tender age of seventeen he was induced to enter the army and stand shoulder to shoulder with those who struggled for freedom in the war of the Revolution. After having acted the part of a brave young soldier for three years or more, he received, at the close of the war, an honorable discharge—without having received any other personal injury than the suffering, and hunger, incident to the fortunes of that war.

On returning home he found the retired condition of private life, bore a striking contrast to that of the camp. Although the army had not corrupted his morals—strange indeed, yet, mingling with men from different states and nations, he found an uncontrolable propensity to see different parts of the world. He therefore went to sea, with the intention to spend considerable time of his "life on the ocean wave," but to rise as a seaman, he must come home and improve his education.—At the expiration of some two years he was again assisting his father in subduing the rugged soil. About the age of twenty-five, he offered himself in a happy marriage to Miss Thomazine Blanchard, an amiable young lady, who was descended from an honorable and highly respectable parentage, and ancestry. She united to a kind and cheerful heart those other graces, and modest demeanor, which grow from early piety. Mr. J. chose for his home of domestic bliss, a romantic location among the Green Mountains of Vermont, where he acted his part among the hardy mountaineers in driving back the forest trees of a new country, while his quiet wife and little ones made home the choicest place on earth.

As to religion, Mr. Johnson, in breaking away from his earliest notions, which were mainly embodied in the Catechism, he became a skeptic or rather an infidel! But the loveliness of his devoted companion prevented him from presenting those sharp corners peculiar to an unbeliever.—When the country was new and thinly settled, the Methodist preachers had large circuits which, they went round either monthly, or semi-monthly. Once, upon a time, when a young man, by the name of Martin Ruter, not out of his teens, was to be the preacher. Mr. J. yielded to the persuasions of his wife, and went with her to hear him. The power of truth was not only presented to his understanding, but reached his heart. It was like David killing Goliah. After wandering for a time in the maze of doubt—and struggling in the "slough of despond," he fell in self-despair into the arms of a sin-pardoning Savior and became a child of God!—and with his rejoicing partner henceforth walked in the commandments of the Lord blameless. Their house became a home for the friends of Christ, and they both became eminently active and useful. After seeing the children brought into the kingdom of God, Mrs. Johnson died, in the year 1825. [A memoir of her life was prepared by one of her sons and published some twelve years since, two editions of which have been widely circulated.]

Mr. J. had toiled for the liberty of his country in the war of the Revolution—he had also been a sailor. When the impressment of seamen and other causes, which occasioned the last war with Eng. came before him, it awakened his sympathies, and he no sooner learned that hostilities were begun, than he left his mountain home, and, strange as it may seem, went with the volunteers of his state to join the army. Serving nearly all through the war as Surgeon's Steward, he embalmed his memory on the grateful recollections of many a suffering and wounded soldier—and pointed many a dying man, to the Savior of sinners, as he wiped the death-sweats from his face. On returning to the bosom of his family, it appeared to his brethren that his gifts and usefulness as a licensed local preacher, had increased, and he was in due time ordained, and set apart to all the duties of the Christian ministry. Drawing a pension for his services in the Revolution, and a son-in-law, also, for services and wounds received in the war of 1812—placed them in easy circumstances. Relieved by those who loved him from all pecuniary care, he devoted himself for a time entirely to the work of an evangelist. Although not brilliant as a speaker, his eminent piety, extended intelligence, and prolific mind, rendered him most emphatically an interesting and useful man. Until the death of his wife they travelled much together, strengthening and edifying the brethren, and the little churches gathered here and there among the hills and vallies of Vermont.

As a husband, Mr. Johnson was always kind—as a father, he required obedience to a high standard of moral conduct, always making himself understood, in the most familiar manner; thus gaining the assent of their understanding for the reason of the most self-denying requirements. That he exerted a good influence in his family, it is sufficient to say, that he lived to see his children grow up to fill stations of usefulness in society, and in the church of Christ. Nor will the influence of his character die with him, or his children; for many of his numerous grandchildren are following in his footsteps, in piety and usefulness. As a neighbor, he was loved and venerated as a patriarch. His second wife, many years younger than himself, watched over him with the tender care he needed in his extreme old age—but scarcely more so than the community around him—some of whom actually took their seats as mourners, and followed his lifeless remains, as such, to the grave.

As a Christian, he had an enlarged philanthropy, more strongly urging men to what they should be rather than to what they should believe, holding those in much higher estimation who were in his opinion, heterodox in doctrine, if they were followers of Christ in spirit, than if they were orthodox in sentiment, but unlike Christ in example. He believed in unity without uniformity—making character rather than the coincidence of one creed, the test of fellowship. Yet he was by no means indifferent, to correct opinions.—His love of equal rights, and the largest liberty, led him to leave the brethren he loved, and go with the seceders from the old church into a new organization called Reformed Methodists. In this connection he died. He had his senses to the last. Just before the close of his life, he said "I am now going to die. Perhaps I may not live to another day," and in all the simplicity of childhood asked, if he had said a word, at any time inadvertenty, that he might be forgiven. On being told that no one had aught against him, he added, "I do not wish to be praised for any goodness in myself." He selected the minister to preach his funeral sermon, and the following hymn which he would have read on the occasion.

"No more my God, I boast no more,
Of all the duties I have done—
I quit the hopes I had before,
To trust the merits of thy Son."

All things being thus arranged, the good old man, ripe for a better life, ceased to speak, and calmly, the bright sun of this life went down in the eighty-sixth year of his age.

May the golden rays reflected from such an example, illumine the pathway of his numerous descendants to the same peaceful end. He now sleeps beside the venerated partner of his early years in the spot which he selected at the time of her burial—where their repose will not be disturbed until we shall all be summoned by the resistless call of God to the final Judgment!

L. D. J.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 27, 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

OBITUARY.

Oh! the ravages of death. Even the young, are not exempt from the monster. Upon the wings of time he comes, and in a moment unexpected, grasps in his cold embrace, the subject for which he was sent. And from earth he calls them, no more to mingle their voice with those in the flesh. Alma Sophia, daughter of the Rev. P. and A. R. Kinsley, of Vienna, Trumbull co., Ohio, departed this life October the 17th, in the 14th year of her age, after a short illness of twenty-four hours. Her disease was that insidious foe of man, the acute Bronchitis. She has left a circle of friends to mourn her loss. But, blessed be God, they mourn not as those who have no hope. A more triumphant death is seldom witnessed. Not a cloud, no not a doubt: she had her senses to the last moment, and from the time that death was apparent, she to the utmost of her strength exhorted the family in the most pathetic manner to meet her in heaven.—Then she turned her intreaties to those of her associates that were in the room, and entreated them to meet her in the land of rest: and while exhorting, her spirit left the body, and ascended on high.

A. R. BROWN.

Vienna, O., Nov. 26, 1847.

Most mountains present their precipitous faces to the sea and their slopes to the land.

News of the Week.

Steamboat Disaster.

Early last week information was received of the wreck of the Talisman, and for a day or two much anxiety was felt for the safety of our respected fellow citizen, Mr John S. Potwin, but the subjoined extracts, which we have been kindly permitted to make from a letter to one of his family, report his safety; while they show how narrowly he escaped the lot that befel so many. An attempt is made to represent the loss of life as less than is stated by Mr. Potwin, but we fear there is too much truth in his statement.

Cape Girardeau. Nov. 19th—9 A. M.

Dear.———:—I wrote you from Cincinnati that I should embark on the Talisman for St. Louis, and lest you should learn the fate of that boat, and be anxious on my account, I hasten to relieve your mind.

On Wednesday night, when a little below Smithfield, Ky., we encountered a violent, storm and came near being capsized, but the boat righted, with the loss of her chimneys, and we floated down to Cairo, where we lay yesterday undergoing repairs. At eight in the evening we left and proceeded up the Mississippi to within four miles of this place, when about three o'clock in the morning we encountered the steamer Tempest which took our boat midships, & in three minutes she went down, breaking in the middle. I pray the Lord to grant that I may never witness such another scene. We had from two hundred to two hundred and fifty passengers, and from sixty to one hundred and fifty of them perished. I left my berth without stockings, shoes, or hat, and escaped to the hurrican deck, while the crushing of the boat, and the screams of distress, no language can describe.

The Tempest got along side as soon as possible, when a general rush was made. I came very near being lost in aiding the ladies under my charge, but, thank God, I am spared. I afterwards, through the daring exertions of a young man on board, recovered my hat, boots, &c., but lost my watch case and some other things. Mrs Curtis who was under my charge obtained her trunk and watch, by their cutting through the upper deck.

I finish this on board the Lucy Bertram, on which we have embarked. We expect to reach St. Louis before noon tomorrow. I am exhausted and nearly sick from exposure and excitement. I had two or three plunges in the water in the cabin, in saving Mrs. Curtis and a lady put under my care at Cincinnati. The latter lost all her money and most of her baggage.

Yours Affectionately,
JOHN S. POTWIN.

P. S.—In a second letter, written by Mr. P. after reaching St. Louis, he says, "I find I am pretty sadly bruised, and have, as yet, enjoyed no calm sleep. The crashing of the sinking boat, with the despair and wailing of the perishing multitude, haunt me every moment. I conversed as we were coming up, with one of the surviving deck passengers. He stated that he was sure that from eighty to one hundred and fifty of the deck passengers perished. How many of the cabin passengers were lost, is not known. A newly married couple were seen to leap into the water and perish in each others arms. I talked with one man who lost fourteen of his family.—Those passengers who were saved, escaped by clinging to the hurricane deck. I can give you no adequate conception of the horror of the scene."—Z. Gazette.

Loss from Shipwreck.

Total Loss of the Ship Alabama of Boston.—The ship Alabama, of Boston, commanded by Capt. Wise, from Liverpool, Oct. 19th, with a general cargo for Boston, was lost on Friday morning with her entire cargo on Minot's Ledge.

The ship swung off, head to the wind, and it was found that she was in a sinking condition.—It was attempted to run her on again, but it was ascertained that she was entirely unmanageable. Three of the boats were then got out and took in her crew and the two cabin passengers, Rev. B. Conner, of Miltown, Ireland, and Mr. John H. Cowan of Liverpool.

At 4 o'clock, A. M., they got on board the ship Bombay, from Manilla to Boston, and were at last safe. Capt. Wise came up to the city in a pilot boat. The ship now lies 1½ miles northeast from Minot's Ledge in 16 fathoms water with her foremast gone. Nothing can be saved but her main and mizen topsails.

The officers, crew and passengers saved nothing but what they stood in. The Alabama was owned by Mr. Theodore Chase of Boston and others. She was insured. The cargo was an assorted Liverpool cargo, consisting of railroad iron to the value of $25,000, crockery ware, dry goods, &c.—all or most of which is probably insured. The value of the cargo is estimated at $100,000.

Shocking Occurrence.

Another Fatal Railroad Accident at the East.—We are forced to record another fatal Railroad accident. About 7½ o'clock, on Wednesday morning on the Concord, N. H. Railroad, near Manchester, two dirt trains came in colision and the consequences were very serious. There was a dense fog at the time, and the trains being before the engines respectively are cited in extenuation of the happening of the accident. The train from Manchester up was proceeding rapidly while the down train was coming slowly.—The cars of the former train were injured the most. Some of the passengers jumped off, but others remained, not being aware of the cause of the difficulty.

Wm. Mace, the overseer of one of the trains, jumped off and escaped with only slight bruises. Those more seriously injured were as follows, 18 in all: Daniel Murphy, John McGary, dead; Patrick McGary, slightly; Michael Donovan, severely; John Reardin, slightly; Dennis Flintin, do.; Dennis Collins, seriously; Joseph Hagmy, slighily; John Sullivan, do.; Patrick Judge, severely; Michael Tumy, slightly; Patrick Ray, seriously; Michael Murray, do.; James Danan, slighily; Daniel Donahue, do.; James Garland, seriously; Jere Shed, do.; Philip Manan, do.—Four or five of these must die of their wounds.

When is there an end to be put to these accidents? Never, we fear, until those who have charge of the lives of passengers, and carelessly put then in jeopardy or at an end, are indicated and punished for manslaughter or murder, as the case may be.—Boston Times, Saturday.

The Boston Water Works, the corner-stone of the reservoir of which was laid last week, at Boston, is an undertaking important to that city. The water is to be brought in an oval aqueduct over six feet in height, about fourteen and a half miles from Cochituate Lake, to Brookline, where it discharges itself into the reservoir of more then twenty acres in extent. From Brookline the water is forced by its own presure, through pipes of fifty and fifty-five inches in diameter, to the two reservoirs in the city, the one on Mount Washington, at South Boston, which, will contain superfices of 79,000, and the one on Beacon Hill 28,000 feet. The latter, to be raised on arches sixty feet above the level, is to support a pound of the depth of fifteen feet, and will contain, when full three millions of gallons. The object of the two reservoirs in the city is to render a large supply always ready, and keep an equable presure on the pipes, so as to insure the regular supply of water at the highest and remotest points of the city. The works will deliver to the city of Boston ten millions of gallons a day of the purest and best water. The length of brick aqueduct is a little more than fourteen miles—of this nearly seven are finished. The line of pipes between Boston and Brookline, and in the city, will amount to a little over sixty miles.—The waters of Lake Cochituate will be delivered in the city of Boston within twelve months. The work is one half completed. The Lake Cochituate has been bought—great part of the land damages have been paid—the expenditure has already ben 1,500,000 dollars. The whole expense is estimated at three millions of dollars.—Dol. Newspaper.

Claim for Damages.

In the trial which is now going on to recover from the county of Philadelphia, the value of St. Augustine's Church and of the parsonage house, destroyed in the famous or rather infamous riot in 1844, various curious and interesting particulars relative to both have been brought forward, for the Ledger. There was a largelibrary in the parsonage house, composed of theological, controversial, polemical, and historical books, many of which were very rare and valuable. A copy of the Bible, printed in 1480, was among them; also a Bible in forty volumes, written in six different languages, and five hundred other Bibles. There was a complete collection of the works of the Fathers of the Church, from the third century down. The complete works of Luther were in the collections, as also Protestant, Catholic and Infidel works. The library was of the choicest works, and valued at $12,500. The books were thrown into the street and destroyed by bonfires. the church contained many fine paintings, and a full length representation of the crucifixion, sculptured in wood, and esteemed the master-peice of the Philadelphia artist, Wm. Rush.

The history of the latter building was given in the opening of plaintiff's counsel; it was erected in 1802, the funds being raised by subscription. General Washington headed the list with $50; Governor McKean and others subscribed, but the greater amount was raised by the contributions of the poorer portion of the Catholic poulation. During the last war the clergymen connected with the congregation, repaired to the trenches below the city, and aided in throwing up beastworks against threatened attacks by the British. In 1832 the parsonage house was opened as a cholera hospital, and the attendance of the clergymen given to the victims of disease. No distinction was made on that occasion as to religion; of 460 patients there, 402 were Protestants, and only 58 Catholics.

In 1836, a cupola was erected at an expense of $3,000, in which were placed the clock and bell which were in the State House steeple during the Revolutionary War. The damages claimed of the County were in all eighty thousand dollars, forty of which were for the church; but the amount awarded was only forty seven thousand. The church was quite a large building, seventy feet front by one hundred and twenty-four deep. We were present at the conflagation and while we felt overwhelmed with sadness at the madness of the people, we could not but acknowledge that it was one of the most awful splendid sights we ever beheld. The fire raged in unchecked fury—not a drop of water being put udon it, though the engines were busily employed in preventing the adjoining buildings from being consumed. It would astonish a stranger, who was ignorant of the ease with which a torrent of water can be thrown upon a fire in this city, to mark with what safety the largest class of buildidgs can be burnt up in our midst. In this instance, one fierce broad sheet of flame curled and quivered around and above the devoted building, springing occasionally as something more combustible than common came into its way, and scattering its glittering load of sparks high in the heavens.—The wild light of the conflagration fell upon a hundred thousand upturned faces, on the most of which were painted exultation and triumph.—Occasionally a fierce shot would roll over the scene like thunder, as the flames burst forth at some new opening, or as some heavy piece of timper fell into the body of the building. Truly it was a most painful, terrific and yet sublime sight, and one which will ever live in the recollection of all who saw it.—S. E. Post.

Robison Crusoe's Island.—The following is the account of this famous island, furnished by Rev. Mr. West, who has lately gone as a missionary to California:

Early yesterday morning we saw Juan Fernandez in the distance. We had concluded to stop there for provisions; but were uncertain whether anything could be obtained. Toward noon the wind died away, and it was thought best to send a boat ahead to see what could be had.—Eight of us got in her, and, after rowing six mortal hours, landed safely in Cumberland Harbor, on the northeast side of the island. I have seldom seen anything so beautiful as this land appeared in the distance. It is composed of innumerable high peaks, covered with green herbage to the top, the residence of wild asses and goats, several of which we saw on the steep sides of the cliffs before we landed.

It was nearly sun down when, with weary limbs and blistered hands, we pulled our boat ashore on the beach. The first man we met was an American who two days before had run away from a whale ship. Soon after we saw two other Americans, four Spaniards, two women and four children; thirteen persons in all constituted the population of the island. The soil is rich, and although the surface is very uneven, there are many acres of tillable land. But everything bore the marks of squalid poverty and detestable idleness.

Their huts, or cabins, were poles and grass, thatched, without windows, chimneys, beds or chairs. There are quite a number of peach trees growing wild, amid weeds and bushes, in indiscriminate confusion. But the peaches were green. The strawberries were gone, and, excepting three goats, we could obtain nothing like provision for the ship. As for ourselves, altho' we were the subjects of sensations with which wolves are said to be familiar, not one morsel of food could be had. There are several large fig trees here, said to have been planted by Lord Anson, who refitted his shattered squadron at this place, after the stormy passage of Cape Horn.

We saw the remains of an old fort, which was once manned by a Spanish garrison, when the island was used as a place of confinement for convicts by the Chilian Government, to which it now belongs. Earthquakes are said to be frequent, and sometimes of great violence. But in the hands of skilful industry, this spot would be a very paradise. The climate is delightful, and the soil rich. Vessels stop very frequently for water and fresh provisions, and would gladly pay any reasonable price for them. There is a fine harbor on the northeast side. After spending an hour on the shore, we hauled off our boat a few yards from the shore, caught some fine fish, and, at nine o'clock, were safely on board the ship.

The Best News of the Season.

THE SMOKE PREVENTIVE.

It gives us great pleasure to state that Messrs. Blackstock, Bell & Co. have made trial of the Smoke Preventive Apparatus, in their Cotton Factory in Allegany city. The experiment has proved completely successful, and will save in this one factory twenty-five bushels of coal a day while the chimneys of the neighboring factories were yesterday vomiting forth clouds of black smoke, that darkened the atmosphere of one of the finest Indian Summer days we have seen, the Smoke Preventive in the cotton factory we have named, consumed all the particles of smoke that dropped almost like rain from other points around us.

The plan adopted is that of Mr. Williams, of England, of which we have said so much in the Gazette. It costs but a trifle and will save, as we said, in this one establishment, 25 bu. of coal a day,—enough to save the expense twenty times in one season. We do hope now, that the good work has commenced, that it will be prosecuted with vigor. Pittsburgh may, and will be a clean city. Think of that, and rejoice. All thanks to the gentlemen of Allegheny city for commencing the work, and public thanks to those who will follow their footsteps.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Frightful Accident.—The Memphis appeal of the 11th says that, "during the storm of Sunday night last, a large gum tree was blown upon the house of Mr. Rowe, living near the Wolf river bridge, three miles from Memphis, causing a fearful crash, and, sad to relate, instantly killing two little boys, his only children, as they lay with their mother, and dangerously injuring her also by breaking her thigh bone. Mr. Rowe did not escape entirely, being slightly wounded in one of his feet. Another man, who slept with him, was the only one of the five inmates who escaped uninjured. The mother, we learn, cannot possibly survive her wounds. We have not recorded so sad a bereavement for many a day."

Sandy and Beaver Canal.—The Carroll Free Press states that the Western division of this work is now completed, and that a boat has arrived at Waynesburgh from Boliver. It is expected the entire work will be completed this fall.

Wheeling, Nov. 18, 2 P. M

Passengers from New Orleans, who left on the 12th, state that a report was prevalant there that the steamer Fashion with two companies of mounted men, on board, had been wrecked and all lost.

Lewis S. Briest, one of the Philadelphia Rangers, has returned home from Perote. He furnishes the names of 700 soldiers, who have died at that place since June last. Many Pennsylvanian included in the list.—Pitts. Gaz.

Change of bed in the Great Miami.—The late freshet has made quite a change in the bed of the Great Miami near its mouth. The river, after approaching within about a mile of the point at which it empties into the Ohio, makes a detour or bend of some four or five miles through the rich bottom land adjacent to it, and returns to within three-fourths of a mile of the place where the bend commences. During the recent high water, the river cut a new channel across the neck or narrowest part of this intervening land. This new cut is some 20 rods wide, three quarters of a mile long, and made through rich alluvial land, which has for years been cultivated in corn. The quantity of land carried away must be 40 or 50 acres.

As this curve is the only part of the Great Miami which passed through the State of Indiana, this change of channel will have the singular effect of withdrawing the river entirely from the soil of that commonwealth, and placing it altogether within the State of Ohio.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Installation.—On the 23d. the Rev Ebenezer Buckingham was duly installed Pastor of the Presbyterian Church in this town. The services on the occasion were very interesting and solemn—the sermon by Mr. Kingsbury was among the best we have ever heard.—Canton Repository.

Notices.

Newark Circuit—Muskingum Con.—We expect to hold a protracted meeting at Elizabethtown (Perryton,) commencing on the 11th of December, to which we invite our Conference Missionary; also, Br. Hoagland, and any others of our ministers who can come and assist us. We expect to continue several days.

W. H. MARSHALL.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Morgantown, Nov. 17, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will confer a favor on me, by publishing the following appointments, and I will fill them if God spares my life.

Pittsburgh st.,	Dec.	26,	1847.
Allegheny "	Jan.	2,	1848.
Sharpsburg ct.,	"	9,	"
Birmingham miss.,	"	16,	"
New Brighton st.,	"	23,	"
Manchester ct.,	"	30,	"

Will the Superintendents please to secure some help at each meeting?—My will is good, but I am not able to labor as much as in years gone by. I need help, from God and man, wherever I go, at all my meetings.

GEO. BROWN.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Twin Creek	Ct.		Dec.	25 1847
Cincinnati	Miss.	Elm st.	Jan.	1
Cincinnati	St.	6 st.	"	8
Cincinnati	Ct.		"	15
New Richmond	Ct.		"	22
Lebanon	St.		"	29
Lebanon	Miss.		Feb.	5
Greenville	"		"	12

J. M. YOUNG.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of	December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	"	"	"
Cambridge	"	4th	"	"	"
Belmont	"	1st	"	Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	"	"	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	"	"	"
Steubenville	"	4th	"	"	"

GEO. CLANCY.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

By divine permission, I will fill the following app'ts:

White Lick ct.	Nov.	27–28	1847.
White River "	Dec.	4–5	"
Sugar Creek "	"	11–12	"

THOS. SHIPP.

DEATHS.

DIED—At Springfield, Ohio, on the 23d ult., Mr. John M. Gallagher, Editor of the Springfield Republic, and late Speaker of the House of Representatives.

———At Upper Sandusky, on the 14th ult., Mr. John Hamlin, in his 54th year.

———At Covington, Ia., Nov. 5th, Rev. Jeremiah Earley, of the North Indiana Conference, M. E. Church.

———At Allegheny City, Pa., Nov. 27, James Ross, Esq., in his 86th year. He was a lawyer of celebrity, and the senior of the Pennsylvania bar.

———In New Kent County, Va., on the 14th ult. Rev. G. M. Keeber, of the Virginia Conference, M. E. Church, South.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

L D Johnson,	Mass.	John Burns, 3 subs.	O.
W Reeves,	Pa.	Wm. M'Pherson,	"
J M'Caskey,	"	G W Thornburg, 1 sub,	"
N Watson,	"	A K Earl, 1 sub.	"
W. S. Stockton,	"	J B Peat, 2.	"
J H Myers,	Ill.	H Matson,	"
H Grover,	"	W H Marshall,	"
J C Wright,	Ia.	A R Brown	"
P Moore,	"	C H Williams, 1 sub.	"
J Gay,	"	A M'Guire,	"
G G Collins,	Va.	N Linder,	"
Jacob Aid,	O	O V Warren, 1 sub.	"
J W Case,	"	J S Thrap, 1 sub.	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$	cts.
W Reeves,	Geo. Howarth,	9	52	2	00
"	H Wightman,	9	52	2	00
Wm M'Pharson		9	52	2	00
G W Thornburg,	A Hough,	9	15	1	00
John Burns,	T Chambers,	10	7	2	00
John Brown,		9	35	5	00
A K Earl,	P Nichols,	9	34	1	00
"	Himself,	9	52	1	00
Dr I Matthews, Putnam,		9	52	2	00
W H Marshall,	S Preston,	9	52	2	00
C H Williams,	S Lytle,	10	8	2	00
E S Hoagland,	R Crazen,	10	12	2	00
"	A W Skinner,	10	21	2	00
N Linder,	J Robinson,	8	26	3	00
O V Warren,	D Patterson,	9	31	2	00
"	T Little,	9	52	2	00
J S Thrap,	J Presley,	9	34	1	60
"	L Cook,	9	52	2	00
"	T C Thompson,	9	23	1	00
Jacob Aid,		9	52	2	00
J W Case,	John Smith,	9	52	2	00

Br. P. Moore, Ia., will take notice that he was credited for his remittance by Br. Wright, one volume and a quarter.

Br. Case, the oversight enquired of, was not in Br. R. nor in us, but in Br. K. The money was credited in our paper of Aug. 12, last.

☞ Will some one inform Br. G. G. Collins of Va., that we have twice written to him since Conference and also regularly send the Western Recorder. He writes us that he has not heard from us in any way. This is amazingly strange, and we would like to know how it is to be accounted for.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If the subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them till all cash charges are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bill, and order their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

Liabilities of those who take Periodicals.

Thes law declare that any person, to whom a periodical is sent, is responsible for payment, if he receives the paper, or makes use of it, even if he has never subscribed for it, or has ordered it to be stopped. His duty in such a case is not to take the paper from the office or persons with whom the paper is left, but to notify the publisher that he does not wish for it.

If papers are sent to a Post Office, Store, or any other place of deposite,, and are not taken by the person to whom they are sent, the Postmaster, Storekeeper, &c., are responsible for the payment, until he returns the paper, or informs the publisher that they are lying dead in the office.

Advertisements.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once a tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle, & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT,

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT WORCESTER, MASS.,

BY SAMUEL CHISM.

This publication is sent forth, with the specific object of disseminating evangelical truth. Its design is eminently 'practical,' not speculative. It will present those vital truths of christianity which are calculated to stimulate the church to her appropriate work in the evangelization of the world; and will urge the unconverted to an immediate surrender of their hearts to God, and the entire consecration of themselves to his service. It is not devoted to the interests of any particlar denomination, but aims at the present and eternal happiness of the whole human family.

Each monthly issue will contain 32 pages of matter, octavo, in new, bold, and clear type, cast expressly for this use. Two sermons will appear in each number; and the remaining pages will be filled with Skeletons of Sermons, Ministerial and Religious Miscellany, Criticisms, Biographical Sketches, etc.

The list of Contributors to the American Pulpit will embrace several of the ablest clergymen of the evangelical denominations in the United States.

TERMS.

1. $1 per annum, in advance. If not paid till after three months from the time of subscribing, $1,50 at which time all subscriptions will be consided due, and bills sent accordingly.

2. Any person obtaining three subscribers, with pay in advance, shall receive a fourth copy gratis.

3. No subscriptions received for a less term than one year. It is desirable that all subscriptions should commence with the first number of the volume.

4. Will not the friends of this work use their influence in extending its circulation? Certainly, by so doing, they will advance the interests of Christ's cause. A little exertion on the part of each individual will do much to make it one of the most extensively circulated periodicals in the United States.

5. Several special agents are wanted to procure subscribers in different parts of the United States. Superannuated clergymen will receive good encouragement on personal or written application.

6. Ministers of the gospel, of every denomination, and other responsible individuals, are authorised, and cordially invited to act as agents.

7. All communications connected with the editorial department should be addressed to Rev. J. D. Bridge, Worcester, Massachusetts. All communications on business should be directed, 'post paid,' to Samuel Chism, Worcester, Massachusetts.

A general assortment of SUNDAY-SCHOOL BOOKS, embracing the recent publications of the American Sunday-school Union, for sale at the Sunday-school Depository. J. METCALF,

Putnam, April 22, 1847. Depositary.

POET'S CORNER.

From the National Era.

A PSALM OF THANKSGIVING.

Lift high your heads, ye grand old hills,
And show your corn-crown'd tops;
Flutter your skirts, ye laughing rills,
Festooned with yellow crops!
Spread forth your boughs, ye stately trees,
And let your pride be shown;
Through meadows and in dappled leas,
Be Earths great gladness known!

For, lo! His love hath deck'd the plains
With April's jewel drops;
Abroad His royal bounty reigns,
In Autum's golden crops!
His mighty spirit rode the sky,
On March's coursing clouds,
Nor any humble heart pass'd by,
Of all His human crowds

Oh! never will He, heedless, slight
The sun-burnt sheperd swain,
Nor to the sweating tiller's right
Deny His browning grain;
For ready, ay! and ample, is
His dole-dispensing hand,
And various victual ever His,
To feed His fasting land.

The breath that moves a thousand mills
By him abroad is blown;
"The cattle on a thousand hills,"
Are they not all His own!
His whisper from its Winter sleep
The "Indian Summer" woke;
Their life the slum'bring seedlings keep,
Couch'd in His snowy cloak.

He homes the harvest: His the wealth
The groaning wagons bear,
And His the ruddy hue of health
That Stalwart rustics wear.
In teeming towns, high places where
The mighty hath his seat,
He cometh with all kindly care
To scatter at His feet.

Then to the Lord lift up your lays,
Glad creatures of his hand—
To-day His grace demands the praise
Of all your fatt'ning land,
From mountain side and meadow green
From lake and prairie broad—
Where'er her Eagle's flight is seen—
COLUMBIA GREETS THE LORD!

KAPA.

Narrative.

Circumstancial Evidence.

The following narrative, while it strikingly exhibits the fallible and uncertain nature of circumstancial evidence, affords also a convincing proof of the indispensible necessity of procuring medical testimony of the highest order in all criminal cases relating to injuries of the person. The narrator, Mr. Pefect, is a surgeon, of Hammersmith England:—Cin. Chron.

It is now thirty years ago that, accidentaliy passing the Pack-Horse, Turnham-green, my attention was attracted by a mob of persons of the lower order, assembled around the door of the inn, who were very loud in their execrations against some person who was suspected of having murdered his brother, in corroboration of which I was told that his bones were found near the premises where he formerly resided, upon view of which a jury was then sitting, after an adjournment from the day preceeding. I found that two surgeons had been subpœnæed to inspect the remains, and I had no doubt but that every information as to their character had been obtained; curiosity alone, therefore, induced me to make my way into the room, where I found the coroner, and, I believe, a double jury were sitting for the second day, and engaged in an investigation which tended to show that a farmer and a market gardener at Sutton-court Farm had, a few years before, a brother living with him, who was engaged in the farm, but whose conduct was dissolute and irregular to a degree that often provoked the anger of the elder brother, and sometimes begat strife and violence between them; that the temper of the elder brother was as little under control as the conduct of the younger; and, in fine, that they lived very uncomfortably together.

One winter's night, when the ground was covered with snow, the younger brother absconded from the house (for they both lived together,) by letting himself down from his chamber window; and when he was missed the ensuing morning, his foot-steps were clearly tracked in the snow to a considerable distance; nor were there any other foot-stops but his own. Time passed on, and after a lapse of some years, no tidings were heard of his retreat, nor perhaps have there ever been since. Some alterations in the ground surrounding the house having been undertaken by a subsequent tenant (for the elder brother had left the farm) a skeletion was dug up, and the circumstances appeared so conclusive that one brother had murdered the other, that the popular clamor was raised to the utmost. and a jury empaneled to investigate the case.

After listening attentively to these details, I ventured to request of the coroner to be allowed to examine the bones, which I found were contained in a hamper basket at the further end of the room, and I felt much flattered by his immediate compliance, for he desired the parish beadle, who was in attendance, to place them on a table: and having myself disposed them in their natural order, I found that they represented a person of short stature, and from the obliteration of the skull and worn down state of the teeth, must have belonged to an aged person. But what was my surprise, when I reconstructed the bones of the skeleton, and found the lower bones of the trunk to be those of a female. I communicated the fact to the jury and requested that the two medical men who had before given their opion, might be sent for, one of whom immediately attended, and without a moment's hesitation corroborated my report,

I need not add that the proceedings were instantly at an end, and the innocent man received the amende honorable, in the shape of an apology from all present, in which the coroner heartily joined. It has since been proved, beyond all doubt, that the spot where the bones were found, was formery the site of a large gravel pit, in which hordes of gipsies not only assembled, but occasionally buried their dead, and perhaps more skeletons are yet to be found in that vicinity.

Not so fortunate in its issue was the case we subjoin to this, and which occurred in England previous to the reign of Charles II. The narrative is given in one of the early volumes of the Gentlemen's Magazine.

A gentleman died, possessed of a very considerable fortune, which he left to his only child, a daughter, appointing his brother to be her guardian and executor of his will. The young lady was then about eighteen; and if she happened to die unmarried, or if married without children, her fortune was left to his heirs. As the interest of the uncle was now incompatible with the life of the niece, several other relatives hinted that it would not be proper for them to live together. Whether they were willing to prevent any occasional slander against the uncle, in case of the young lady's death; whether they had any apprehensions of her being in danger; or whether they were only discontented with the father's disposition of his fortune, and therefore propagated rumor to the prejudice of those who possessed it, annot be known; the uncle however took his niece to his house, near Epping Forest, and soon afterwards she disappeared.

Great inquiry was made, and it appearing that on the day she was missing she went out with her uncle into the forest, and that he returned without her, he was taken into custody. A few days afterwards, he went through a long examination, in which he acknowledged that he went out with her, and pretended that she found means to loiter behind him as they were returning home, that he sought her in the forest, as soon as he missed her, and that he knew not where she was or what had become of her.—This account was thought improbable, and his apparent interest in the death of his ward, and perhaps the petulent zeal of other relations concurred to raise and strengthen suspicions against him, and he was detained in custody. Some new circumstances were every day rising against him. It was found that the young lady had been addressed by a neighboring gentleman, who had set out on a journey to the north, and that she declared she would marry him after he returned, that her uncle had frequently expressed his disapprobation of the match in very strong terms, that she had often wept and reproached him with unkindness and an abuse of his power. A woman was also produced, who swore that on the day the young lady was missing, about 11 o'clock in the forenoon, she was coming through the forest, and heard a woman's voice expostulating with great eagerness; upon which she drew nearer the place and before she saw any person, heard the same voice say: "Don't kill me uncle; don't kill me!" upon which she was greatly terrified, and immediately hearing the report of a firearm, very near she made all haste she could from the spot, but could not rest her mind until she had told what had happened.

Such was the general impatience to punish a man who had murdered his niece to inherit her fortune, that upon this evidence, he was condemned and executed.

About ten day after the execution, the young lady came home. It appeared, however, that what all the witnesses had sworn was true, and the fact was found to be thus circumstanced;

The young lady declared that having previously agreed to go off with the gentleman that court her, he had given out that he was going a journey to the north, but that he waited concealed at a little house near the skirts of the forest till the day appointed, which was the day she departed. That he had horses ready for himself and her, and was attended by two servants on horseback. That as she was walking with her uncle, he reproached her with persisting in her resolution to marry a man whom he disapproved, and after much altercation she said with some heat, "I have set my heart upon it: if I do not marry him it will be my death; and don't kill me, uncle, don't kill me;" that just as she had pronounced these words, she heard a firearm discharge very near her, at which she started, and immediately afterwards saw a man come forward from among the trees, with a wood pigeon in his hand that he had just shot. That coming near the place appointed for their rendezvous, she formed a pretence to let her uncle go on before her, and her suitor being waiting for her with a horse, she mounted, and immediately rode off. That instead of going to the north, they retired to a house in which he had taken lodgings near Windsor, where they were married the same day, and in about a week, went a journey to France, and when they returned they first heard of the misfortune which they had inadvertantly brought upon their unfortunate uncle.

So uncertain is human testimony, even when the witnesses are sincere, and so necessary is a cool and dispassionate inquiry and determination, with respect to crimes that are enormous in the highest degree and committed with every possible aggravation.

Miscellaneous.

From the Presbyterian of the West.

Emancipation Movements in Virginia.

Rev. Dr. Ruffner of Lexington Va., has recently in a public address, which has been published in pamphlet form called the attention of Western Virginia to the injurious affects of slavery upon their especial interests.

He shows that the interests of that State, East and West are not coincident.

There is a growing disposition in the old slave States to act on this subject—we rejoice to see any movement in this matter. which promises a successful issue. The following extracts from Dr. Ruffner's address, and his scheme for the removal of slavery, are candid, argumentive, and we think not impracticable:

"And then, fellow citizens, when you have suffered your country to be filled with negro slaves instead of white freemen; when its population shall be as motley as Joseph's coat of many colors,—as ring-streaked and speckled as father Jacab's flock was in Padan Aram;—what will the white basis of representation avail you, if you obtain it? Whether you obtain it or not, East Virginia will have triumphed; or rather slavery will have triumphed, and all Virginia will have become the land of darkness and of the shadow of death.

Then by a forbearance which has no merit, and a supineness which has no excuse, you will have given to your children for their inheritance, this lovely land blackened with a negro population—the offscourings of Eastern Virginia,—the fag end of slavery—the loathsome dregs of that cup of abomination which has already sickened to death the Eastern half of our commonwealth.

Delay not then, we beseech you, to raise a barrier against this Stygian inundation,—to stand at the Blue Ridge, and with sovereign energy to say to this black sea of misery, "Hitherto shalt thou come and no farther."

'To show that the extinction of slavery among us is practicable without justice or injury to any man, we present you the following:

Outlines of a Scheme for the removal of Slavery.

1. Let the farther importation of slaves into West Virginia be prohibited by law.

The expediency of this measure is obvious.

2. Let the exportation of slaves be freely permitted, as heretofore; but with this restriction, that children and slaves, born after a certain day shall not be exported at all after they are five years old, nor those under that age unless the slaves of the same negro family be exported with them.

When the emancipation of the after born children of slaves shall be decreed, many slaves will be exported, from various motives. The restriction is intended to prevent slaveholders from defeating the benevolent intentions of the law by selling into slavery those entitled to freedom and old enough to appreciate the privilege designed for them. Young children are allowed to be taken away with their parents and older brothers and sisters, but not to be sold off separately to evade the law.

3. Let the exising generation of slaves remain in their present condition, but let their offspring, born after a certain day, be emancipated at an age not exceeding 25 years.

By this measure slavery will be slowly but surely abolished, without detriment or inconvenience of slaveholders. No pecuniary loss can be sustained, except at the option of the slaveholders, who, if they think that the measure will diminish the value of their slaves in West Virginia, can sell them for exportation, or take them away, with the certainty of making more out of them in that way, than they could by keeping them and their children as slaves in West Virginia. If they choose to stay and submit to the operation of the emancipation law, they have the certainty of gaining more by the rise of the value of their lands, than they will loose in all the market value te their slaves, in consequence of the emancipation law.

Undoubtedly such a law would immediately attract emigrants by thousands from the north—farmers, manufacturers and laborers; who would bring their capital, their skill and their industry, to enrich the country,—to improve its agriculture draw out the wealth of its mines, and make its idle waterfalls and coal beds work up its abundant materials of manufacture. Before the law would emancipate a single negro, it would already have added more to the value of the lands and town property of West Virginia than all her slaves are worth. If any men among us have many slaves and little or no land, he can easily profit by the law as well as others; let him sell negroes and buy land.

Will any may argue, that the rights of slave holders will be violated, because those rights extended to the offspring of their slaves?

Now the slaveholder's right of property extends to the offspring of his slaves, so far as this, that when the offspring comes into existence, the law at present allows him to claim it as his.—But when the law of the land shall in this particular be changed, his right is at an end; for it is founded solely on human law. By nature all men are free and equal; and human laws can suspend this law of nature, only so long as the public welfare requires it; that is so long as more evil than good would result from emancipation. When the law of slavery is changed for the public good, all that the slaveholder can claim, is that in some way he shall be compensated for the property acquired by sanction of law, and taken away by a change of the law. By our scheme nothing is absolutely taken from the slaveholder. It gives him an option, to remove without loss a nuisance which he holds in the country, or to submit, with a very small loss of value, to another mode of abating that nuisance. We say that the people have a right to remove this pest; and that our scheme gives slaveholders double compensa- for what they will suffer by the measure. We have no doubt that before ten years, nearly every slaveholder would acknowledge himself doubly compensated.

4. Let masters be required to have the heirs of emancipation taught reading, writing and arithmetic: and let churches and benevolent people attend to their religious instruction. Thus an improved class of free negroes would be raised up. No objection could be made to their literary education, after emancipation was decreed.

5. Let the emancipated be colonized. This would be best for all parties. Supposing that by exportation, our slave population should in twenty-two years be reduced to 40,000. Then about 1000 would go out free the first year, and a gradually smaller number each successive year. The 1000 could furnish their own outfit, by laboring a year or two as hirelings; and their transportation to Liberia would cost the people of West Virginia $25,000: which, as the population would by that time have probably reached a million, would be an average contribution of two and a half cents a head. This would be less and less every year. So easy would it be to remove the bugaboo of a free negro population, so often held up to deter us from emancipation. Easy would it be, though our calculations were not fully realized.

Finally, in order to hasten the extinction of slavery, where the people desired it, in counties containing few slaves: the law might authorize the people of any county, by some very large majority, or by consent of a majority of the slaveholders to decree the removal or emancipation of all the slaves of the county, within a certain term of years, seven, ten or fifteen, according to the number of slaves.

This as an auxilliary measure, would be safe and salutary; because the only question then in a county,, would be the question of time, which would not be very exciting. But it would be inexpedient as the chief or only measure; for then the people of the same county, or of neighboring counties, might be kept embroiled on the subject for years, and the influence, of East Virginia, operating on counties here and there, might defeat the whole measuse, by a repeal of the law. Let us move as a body first, and determine the main point. Then the counties might decide the minor point for themselves. Let West Virginia determine to be free on a general principle.—Then let the counties, if they will, modify the principle, for more speedy relief.

Mad River and Lake Erie Railroads.

From the annual Report of this company, presented by Hon. E. Lane, President we obtain the following statement.

The amount of receipts from stocks subscription is	$1,377,700 00
Receipts of Road from 1843 to 1847	291,070 20
Proceeds of sales of bonds	578,000 00
Receipts for sale of lands.	54,067 60
	$2,200,837 80
Deduct estimated loss on real estate at Sandusky City, and discount on the late sale of stock	420,000 00
Aggregate amount of receipts	$1,780,837 00
EXPENDATURES.
For construction, repairs, locomotives, instruments, &c.	$1.481.573 93
Balance on hand	299,263 87
To which add real estate of company, excepting the depot grounds	60.000 00
Bills receivable, and county bonds	39.000 00
Stock in Little Miami R. R. Co.	25,000 00
	$423,263 87
Deduct, floating debt, about	100,000 00
Leaving, for prosecuting the work	$323,262 87

The length of the road is 134½ miles, of which there is in operation 102. The curves and grades are favorable for rapid and heavy transit. The minimum radius of curvature is 2000 feet, and the maximum grade 40 feet to the mile.

The cost of the road as far as completed, viz: from Sandusky City to Bellefontaine, is $709.-263 96. The superstructure is completed, and the iron is now being laid between Bellefontaine and West Liberty, a distance of 8 miles, which will soon be ready for use.

It is expected that the road will be opened between West Liberty and Urbana, by the 1st of January, 1848. The iron is provided for the whole line as far as Urbana. The remaining portion between Urbana and Springfield, is to be completed by the commencement of the ensuing summer.

The statement exhibits a very gratifiying state of affairs; as the available means of the actual disposal of the company are estimated amply sufficient to complete the whole line between this place and Cincinnati.

The present equipment of the road, consists of 10 effective locomotives, 1 in shop for repairs, 5 passenger cars, and 3 baggage cars, and 145 freight cars; with material on hand, except wheels and axels, for 100 four-wheel freight cars, for 20 of which springs and axels are provided.

The buildings at Sandusky City, are: machine shop, blacksmith shop, and wood shop, under roof. Engine or locomotive nouse and blacksmith shop. Paint shop. The shops are supplied with lathes, drills, bolt and screw-cutting machine, buzz saw, and and planing machine, are propelled by a stationary engine.

The number of passengers transported from October 16, 1846, to October 16, 1847, is 22,035 and the amount received therefor, $38,180 63. The amount of freight, $79,667 28. Total $117,-848 61. There were 849.897 bushels wheat transported over the road during the same period. Cost of the transportations, for twelve months $30,048 48.

During the year, it is stated that "upwards of 22,000 passengers have passed over the road, without the slightest injury to any," which is evidence of great care and attention on the part of the superintendants anr those connected with the road.—Sandnsky Clarion.

The Power of Truth.

How simply and beautifully has Abd-ell-Ka-dir, of Gihon, impressed us with the love of truth in his childhood! After describing the vision which made him entreat of his mother to go to Bagdad, and devote himself to God, he thus proceeds:—

"I informed her of what I had seen, and she wept; then taking out eighty dinars, she told me I had a brother; half of that was all my inheritance; she made me swear, when she gave it to me, never to tell a lie, and afterwards bade me farewell, exclaiming—

"Go, my son, I consign thee to God; we shall not meet until the day of judgment.

"I went on well until I came near Hamandnia, when our Kefillah was plundered by sixty horsemen. One fellow asked me 'what I had got?"

"Forty dinars, said I, 'are sewed under my garments.'

"The fellow laughed, thinking no doubt I was joking with him.

"What have you got?' said another; I gave him the same answer. When they were dividing the spoils, I was called to an eminence, where the chief stood.

'What property have you got, my little fellow?' said he.

"I have told two of your people alreody,' I replied; 'I have forty dinars sewed in my garments.'

"He ordered them to be ripped open, and found my money.

"And how came you,, said he, in suprise, 'to declare so openly, what had been so carefully concealed?'

"Because,' I replied, 'I will not be false to my mother, to whom I have promised I will never tell a lie?'

"Child,' said the robber, 'hast thou such a sense of duty to thy mother, at thy years, and am I insensible at my age of the duty I owe my God? Give me thy hand, innocent boy,' he continued, 'that I may swear repentance by it!'

"He did so. His followers were all alike struck with the scene.

'You have been our leader in guilt,' said they to their chief; 'be the same in the path of virtue.' And they instantly, at his order, made restitution of their spoil, and vowed repentance upon his hand."

Forwardness in Young Men.

Nothing is more unbecoming. Nothing will so soon repel the attentions of sensible persons. While modesty and diffidence win upon all who come within their influence, the opposite characteristics cannot fail to awaken disgust.

Many very young men fill prominent places in societies, in Church meetings, in the ministry, who are nevertheless becomingly diffident. It is not the thing done, so much as the manner in which it is done, that offends. We have known a number of youths, of promising abilities, who might have been useful to the Church and to society, who have nevertheless literally killed themselves off, as the saying is, with their officious forwardness.

Young man!—half-grown boy! would you be useful to your fellows? Would you be respected by your superiors? would you exert an influence upon those of less pretensions? Avoid forwardness! Do not not obtrude your opinions boisterously upon those who are older but wait until they are asked for. Do not speak with too much positiveness. When you enter a church, do not push your way to the upper most seat, and struggle to make your voice heard in singing above every one else; your motives may be questioned. At prayer in church, join heartily in the devotions, but do not ejaculate so loudly as to disturb those near you, and almost drown the voice of the preacher; persons, whose good opinions you desire, may think you are more noisy than sincere. Consent to be a private in the ranks, before you seek to wear epaulettes or flourish a broadsword.

We know it is a much easier thing to find fault and to recommend methods of of improvement, than it is to practice all one preaches. But we cannot forbear noting things of this kind occasionally. They are so common. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.—Methodist Protestant.

READ, LADY, READ.—Read, lady, read; and "with such jewels as the exploring mind brings from the cave of knowledge," seek to build for yourself a character, not of literary lore alone, but of such as will serve to heighten you in the estimation of your God, as well as in that of your fellow creatures. Do not, however, receive all that you read thoughtlessly; but ponder over it well; weigh each point nicely; nouce the relation that one part of the subject matter bears with another, reserve the good and cast aside the bad, and your labors will meet with that reward that justice ever metes out to praise-worthy perseverance.

Ten Plain Rules for observetion in Practical Life.

Never put off till tomorrow, what you can do to day.

2. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

3. Never spend your money before you have it.

4. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap.

5. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold.

6. We never repent having eaten too little.

7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

8. How much pain have those evils cost us which never happened.

9. Take things always by their smooth handle.

10. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred: or rather the Lord's prayer.

Valuable Hints.

1. Keep regular hours. Rise early, retire early.

2. Be regular at your meals: make conscience of this. Let the precise house, yes, the very minute be fixed. Then adhere to it rigidly.

3. Be regular, rigidly and preservingly so, in private and family devotions.

4. Be simple in diet. Regulate on the principles of strict temperance both the quality and quantity of food taken. On this regulation depent greatly, health, cheerfulness and spirituality.

5. Abstain from the use of tea and coffee.

6. Abandon entirely and forever, tobacco, in every form chewing, smoking and snuffing. The violation of the laws of our being, any one of them, grieves the Holy Spirit, hinders prayer, darkens the mind, sears the conscience.

7. Avoid luncheons, especially on retiring to rest.

8. Ventilate churches, thoroughly, school rooms and especially sleeping rooms. Few things are more deletrious than impure atmosphere.

9. Use the bath very frequently. Be sure and keep the skin clean.

10. Exercise freely in the open air.

11. Finally, be temperate in all things.—Golden Rule.

Good News.

We have the happiness to know that several of our readers, who, for years, have been slaves to this monster of monsters, tobacco, have, as they assure us, abandoned it forever. Bless the Lord! What chains are more galling. Another of our patrons, bound to this Nero, said to us recently. "Sir, you are pretty severe upon us." "Are we too much so?" was the reply. "Not at all. I have been trying and trying, and keep trying; and still I can't give it up." To all such, we say Cease from trying, and act. I will, God helping must be the motto, and the work is done. Need we fear danger or death? not at all. Will God suffer us to die in the path of duty? Glorious death!

The inmates of our State Penitentiaries, on their admision, are compelled to abandon the use of tobacco immeditely. What are the results? injuries? Nay, the most beneficial: from the very fact of this immediate and total abstinence from the prison, their health improves rapidly.

Says Dr. Mussey, in his valuable Essay: "The use of tobacco, like that of alcoholic liquor, should be abandoned totally forever. The plan of taking less and less, daily, is seldom successful." This is what is called, "trying to leave off."

HEATHEN SUBSCRIBERS.—A Sandwich Island paper, says for a whole year it has had but one delinquent subscriber. What other paper in the world can say the like? Shame on Christians every where—they are not half as honest!!

The Spaniards have a proverb that drinking water neither makes a man sick nor in debt, nor his wife a widow.

Advertisements.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with thom from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number nontaining sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the APPENDIX. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The APPENDIX is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe, - -	$2 00
For one copy of the Appendix - - - -	2 00
For six copies of either, or part of both - -	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

SCRIPTURE STORIES,	BIBLE GEOGRAPHY AND ANTIQUITIES,
ILLUSTRATIONS,	TEMPERANCE,
BIOGRAPHIES,	DUTIES OF CHILDREN,
DOMESTIC DUTIES,	PRAYER,
PARENTAL RELATIONS,	NARRATIVES OF REAL LIFE
MISSIONS,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids to Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &c.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $90; Including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $33; without case $30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools, With case $25—without case, $22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered, $5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	-	3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st With 25 catalogues and case, $20; without case, $17,50 Philadelphia.

Treasurer—HERMAN COPE, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

FREDERICK W. PORTER, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

FREDERICK A. PACKARD, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞ Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States, and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their orders a list of the books in their libraries to avoid having duplicates forwarded. More than 1000 books can be furnished, if requested.

American Sunday School Union.

General Depository, Philad., 146 Chestnut street

Branch Depositories.

BOSTON, No. 5 Cornhill.—William B. Tappan, Agent.

NEW YORK, No. 152 Nassau St.—James C. Meeks, Agent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky Fourth st.—W. H. Bulkley, Agent.

Mar. '47

Road Notice.—Notice is hereby given that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio, at their December session, praying for the location of a county road, commencing at a white-oak tree, near the east end of George M'Crooks' barn, on the county road leading from the falls of Licking to Crooks Bridge, known by the name of the "Dillon Road," running from thence a South-East direction, passing over lands owned by Robert Allen and George W. Rankin, to intersect the Zanesville and Maysville Turnpike near the Presbyterian Meeting House, known by the name of the Newton Church; the said Road to be laid on the same ground where there is now a Township road in use or as near as good ground can be had.

Newton Township, Oct. 30th, 1847.

PLEASE TO READ THIS.

☞ TO COUNTRY MERCHANTS. ☜

POSTMASTERS, BOOKSELLERS, &c.—BOOKS OF UNIVERSAL UTILITY—SEARS' POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, the most splendidly illustrated volumes for families ever issued on the American continent, containing more than

TWO THOUSAND BEAUTIFUL ENGRAVINGS,

designed and executed by the most eminent Artists of England and America.

The extraordinary popularity of the above volumes in every section of the Union, renders an agency desirable by all business men, in each one of our principal towns and villages.

MERCHANTS, and others visiting the City of New York, are requested to call at No. 128 Nassau street, and examine them.

Our most successful agents are those who advertise the works in all the papers published in their neighborhood, and secure good sub-agents to assist them in selling the different volumes. In this way, every family has an opportunity of publishing the works. It is a well-known fact that there is a large class of persons who will purchase books at their fire-sides when brought and examined there, who would never visit a book-store.

Full particulars of the principles and profits of the business, will be given to all who desire them, by addressing post paid, ROBERT SEARS,

No. 128 Nassau street, N. Y.

Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it eight insertions, shall receive any of the bound volumes which retails at from $2,50, to $3 per vol Send only one paper directed as above.

Sept 16, 1847. [3m.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, AND DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.	Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY REV. J. DALBY & J. B. PEAT To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

Waynesburg, Green County, Pa

REV. A. H. BASSETT: My dear Brother, please say to the Brethren, that I have on hands, Clarks's Commentary, new and complete, do. upon the New Testament, do. Theology, Watson's Institutes, do. Dictionary, Common, medium, Revival Hymn Books, Disciplines, Snethen's Sermons, Harris' do. Williams' on the Lord's Supper. Rev. T. H. Stockton's Christian World, 3 vol. Social Spirit of Christianity, Whitehead's life of Rev'd. J. and C. Wesley. Large family Bibles, Pocket Polygot, do. Fletcher's address to seekers of solvation, Evan's Pamphlet, Christian Manuel. Life of Geo. Washinton, Columbus, and Flanklin, School books of various kinds.

Sears' Domestic Bible, 1000 engravings, 1,500 pages.
do.	History of the Bible, several hundred engravings
do.	Biography of the Bible.	do.
do.	Sunday Book,	do.
do.	Great Britain and Ireland,	do.
do.	Sketches Europe,	do.
do.	American Revolution, 160 engraving.

Hemmorrhage of the Lungs having returned upon me again it is doubtful whether I shall be able to travel much this winter, if ever. Should any of the Brethren want any of the above works and will inform me, I will try and send them as they may direct, Should my heal h admit I will bring them. Since Conference, I have visited, Allegheny, Pittsburgh, and the Brownsville circuit. Permit me Brother Bassett, to tender my thanks to the Ministers of those fields of labor for the active part they took in selling my books for me, and the membership, for their liberality in buying. Respectfully yours,

W. A. PORTER.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 11. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, DECEMBER 16, 1847. WHOLE NO. 427.

By Special Express for the Zanesville Courier.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Gentlemen of the Senate
and House of Representatives:

The annual meeting of Congress is always an interesting event. The representatives of the States and of the people come fresh from their constituents, to take counsel together for the common good. After an existence of near three quarters of a century, as a free and independent republic, the problem no longer remains to be solved, whether man is capable of self-government. The success of our admirable system is a conclusive refutation of the theories of those, in other countries, who maintain that a few are born to rule, and that the mass of mankind must be governed by force. Subject to no arbitrary or hereditary authority, the people are the only sovereigns recognised by our constitution

Numerous emigrants, of every lineage and language, attracted by the civil and religious freedom we enjoy, and by our happy condition, annually crowd to our shores, and transfer their hearts, not .ess than their allegiance, to the country. whose dominion belongs alone to the people.

No country has been so much favored, or should acknowledge, with deeper reverence, the manifestation of the Divine protection. An all wise Creator directed and guarded us, in our infant struggle for freedom; and has constantly watched over our surprising progress, until we have become one of the great Nations of the earth.

It is in a country thus favored, and under a government in which the Executive and Legislative branches hold their authority, for limited periods. alike from the people, and where all are responsible to their respective constituencies, that it is again my duty to communicate with Congress upon the state of the Union, and the present condition ot public affairs.

During the past year the most gratifying proofs are presented that our country has been blessed with a wide spread and universal prosperity:—There has been no period since the government was founded, when all the industrial pursuits of our people have been more successful, or when labor in all branches of business, has received a fairer or better reward. From our abundance, we have been enabled to perform the pleasing duty of furnishing food for the starving millions of less favored countries.

In the enjoyment of the bounties of Providence at home, such as have rarely fallen to the lot of any people, it is cause of congratulation, that our intercourse with all the powers of the earth except Mexico, continues to be of an amicable character.

It has ever been our cherished policy to cultivate peace and good will with all nations,—and this policy has been steadily pursued by me.

No change has taken place in our relations with Mexico, since the adjournment of the last Congress. The war in which the United States were forced to engage with the government of that country, still continues.

I deem it unnecessary, after the full exposition of them contained in my message of the 11th of May, 1846, and my annual message at the commencement of the session of Congress, in December last, to reiterate the serious causes of complaint which we had against Mexico, before the commencement of hostilities.

It is sufficient on the present occazion, to say, that the wanton violation of the rights of persons and property of our citizens, committed by Mexico, her repeated acts of bad faith, through a long series of years, and her disregard of solemn treaties, stipulating for indemnity to our injured citizens, not only constituted ample cause of war on our part, but were of such an aggravated character as would have justified us. before the whole world, in resorting to this extreme remedy.

With an anxious desire to avoid a rupture between the two countries, we forbore, for years, to assert our clear rights by force; and continued to seek redress for the wrongs we had suffered, by amicable negotiations, in hopes that Mexico might yield to pacific counsels and the demands of justice. In this hope we were disappointed.—Our Minister of peace sent to Mexico, was insultingly rejected. The Mexican Government refused even to hear the terms of adjustment which he was authorized to propose;and finally, under wholly unjustifiable pretexts, involved the two countries in war, by invading the territory of the State of Texas, striking the first blow, and shedding the blood of our citizens on our own soil.

Though the United States were the aggrieved nation, Mexico commenced the war; and we were compelled, in self defence,to repel the invader, and vindicate the national honor and interests, by prosecuting it with vigor until we could obtain a just and honorable peace.

On learning that hostilities had been commenced by Mexico, I promptly communicated that fact, accompanied with a succinct statement of our other causes of complaint against Mexico, to Congress, and that body, by the act of the 13th of May, 1846, declared that by act of the Republic of Mexico, a state of war existed between that Government and the United States. This act, declaring the war to exist, "by the act of the Republic of Mexico," and making provision for its prosecution to a speedy and successful termination, was passed with great unanimity by Congress; there being but two two negative votes in the Senate, and but fourteen in the House of Representatives.

The existence of the war having thus been declared by Congress, it became my duty, under the Constitution and the laws, to conduct and prosecute it. This duty has been performed; and though at every state of its progress, I have manifested a willingness to terminate it by a just peace, Mexico has refused to accede to any terms which could be accepted by the United States, consistently with the national honor and interests:

The rapid and brilliant successes of our arms, and the vast extent of the enemy's territory which had been overrun & conquered, before the close of the last session of Congress, were fully known to that body. Since that time, the war has been prosecu ted with increased energy; and I am gratified to state, with a success which commands universal admiration. History presents no parallel of so many glorious victories achieved by any nation within so short a period.

Our army, regulars and volunteer, have covered themselves with imperishable honors.—Wherever and whenever our forces have encountered the enemy, though he was in vastly superior numbers, and often entrenched in fortified positions of his own selection, and of great strength, he has been defeated. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon our officers and men, regulars and volunteers, and their gallantry, discipline, indomitable courage and perseverance;—all seeking the posts of danger, and vieing with each other in deeds of noble daring.

While every patriot's heart must exult, and a just national pride animate every bosom, in beholding the high proofs of courage, consummate military skill, steady discipline, and humanity to the vanquished enemy exhibited by our gallant army, the nation is called to mourn over the loss of many brave officers and soldiers who have fallen in defence of their country's honor and interests. The brave dead met their melancholy fate in a foreign land, nobly discharging their duty, and with their country's flag waving triumphantly in the face of the foe.

Their patriotic deeds are justly appreciated, & will long be remembered by their grateful country men. The parental care of the government they loved and served should be extended to their surviving families.

Shortly after the adjournment of the last session of Congress, the gratifying intelligence was received of the battle of Buena Vista, and of the fall of the city of Vera Cruz, and with it the strong Castle of San Juan de Ulloa, by which it was defended. Believing that after these, and other successes so honorable to our arms, and so disastrous to Mexico,the period was propitious to afford her another opportunity, if she thought proper to embrace it, to enter into negotiations for peace, a commissioner was appointed to proceed to the head quarters of our army, with full power to enter on negotiations, and to conclude a just and honorable treaty of peace. He was not directed to make auy new overtures of peace but was the bearer of a dispatch, from the Secretary of State of the United States, to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico, in reply to one received from the latter, of the 22d of February, 1847, in which the Mexican government was informed of his appointment, and of his presence at the head quarters of our army, and that he was invested with full powers to conclude a definitive treaty of peace, whenever the Mexican government might signify a desire to do so While I was unwilling to subject the United States to another indignant refusal. I was yet resolved that the evils of the war should not be protracted a day longer than might be rendered absolutely necessary by the Mexican government. Care was taken to give no instructions to the commissioner which could in any way interfere with our military operations, or relax our energies in the prosecution of the war. He possessed no authority in any manner to control these operations. He was authorized to exhibit his instructions to the General in command of the army, and, in the event of a treaty being concluded and ratified on the part of Mexico, he was directed to give him notice of that fact. On the happening of such contingency, and on receiving notice thereof, the General in command was instructed, by the Secretary of War, to suspend further active militay operations until further ordered. These instructions were given with a view to intermit hostilities until the treaty thus ratified by Mexico could be transmitted to Washington, and receive the action of the government of the United States.

The Commissioner was also directed, on reaching the army, to deliver to the General in command, the despatch which he bore from the Secretary of State to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico; and on receiving it, the General was instructed, by the Secretary of War, to cause it to be transmitted to the commander of the Mexican forces, with a request that it might be communicated to his government.

The Commissioner did not reach the head quarters of the army until another brilliant victory had crowned our arms at Cerro Gordo.

The despatch which he bore from the Secretary of War to the General in command of the army, was received by that officer, then at Jalapa, on the 7th day of May, 1847, together with the despatch of the Secretary of State to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico; having been transmitted to him from Vera Cruz. The Commissioner arrived at the head quarters of the army a few days afterwards. His presence with the army, and his diplomatic character, were made known to the Mexican government from Puebla, on the 12th of June, 1847, by the transmission of the despatch from the Secretary of State to the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexico. Many weeks elapsed after its receipt, and no overtures were made, nor was any desire expressed by the government of Mexico to enter into negotiations for peace.

Our army pursued its march upon the capital, and as it approached, it was met by a formidable resistance. Our forces encountered the enemy and achieved signal victories, in the severely contested battles of Contreras and Churubusco. It was not until after these actions had resulted in decisive victories, and the capital of the enemy was within our power, that the Mexican Government manifested any disposition to enter into any negotiations for peace, and even then, events have proved, there is too much reason to believe, they were insincere: and that in agreeing to go through the forms ot negotiation, the object was to gain time to strengthen the defences of the Capital, and prepare for fresh resistance. The General in command of the army deemed it expedient to suspend hostilitics temporarily, by entering into an armistice, with a view to the opening of negotiations. Commissioners were appointed on the part of Mexico to meet the Commissioners on the part of the United States. The result of the conferences which took place between these functionaries of the two governments was a failure to conclude a treaty of peace. The Commissioner of the United States took with him the project of the treaty already prepared, by the terms of which, the indemnity required by the United States was a cession of territory.

It is well known that the only indemnity which it is in the power of Mexico to make, in satisfaction for the just and long deferred claims of our citizens against her, and the only means by which she can reimburse the United States for the expenses of the war, is a cession to the United States of a portion of her territory. Mexico has no money to pay, and no other means of making the required indemnity. If we refuse it, we can obtain nothing else. To reject indemnity by refusing to accept a cession of territory, would be to abandon all our just demands, and to wage the war, bearing all its expenses, without a purpose, or definite object.

A state of war abrogates treaties previously existing between the belligerents; and a treaty of peace puts an end to all claims for indemnity for tortuous acts committed under the authority of one government against the citizens and subjects of another, unless they are provided for in its stipulations. A treaty of peace which would terminate the existing war, without providing for indemnity, would enable Mexico, an acknowledged debtor, and herself the aggressor in the war, to relieve herself from her just liabilities. By such a treaty our citizens who hold just demands against her, would have no remedy for them, either against Mexico or their own government. Our duty to these citizens must forever prevent such a peace; and no treaty which does not provide ample means of discharging these demands, can receive my sanction.

A treaty of peace should settle all existing differences between the two countries. If an adequate cession of territory be made by such a treaty, the United States should release Mexico from all her liabilities, and assume their payment to our own citizens. If instead of this, the United States were to consent to a treaty by which Mexico should engage to pay the heavy amount of such indebtedness which a just indemnity to our government and citizens would impose on her, it is notorious that she does not possess the means to meet such an undertaking. From such a treaty no result could be anticipated, but the same irritating disappointments which have heretofore attended the violations of similar treaty stipulations on the part of Mexico. Such a treaty would be but a temporary cessation of hostilities without the restoration of the friendship and good understanding which should characterize the intercourse between the two countries.

That Congress contemplated the acceptance of territorial indemnity, when that body made provision for the prosecution of the war, is obvious. Congress could not have meant, when in May, 1846, they appropriated ten millions of dollars, and authorised the President to employ the militia and naval and military forces of the United States' and to accept the services of fifty thousand volunteers, to enable him to prosecute the war, and when at their last session, and after our army had invaded Mexico, they made additional appropriations, and authorized the raising of additional troops for the same purpose, that no indemnity was to be obtained from Mexico at the conclusion of the war: and yet it was certain that if no Mexican territory was acquired, that no indemnity could be obtained.

It is further manifest that Congress contemplated territorial indemnity, from the fact that at their last session an act was passed upon the executive recommendation, appropriating three millions of dollars with that express object. The appropriation was made to enable the President to conclude a treaty of peace, limits, and boundaries with the Republic of Mexico, to be used by him in the event that said treaty, when signed by the authorised agents of the two governments, and duly ratified by Mexico, shall call for the expenditures of the same, or any part thereof. The object asking this appropriation was distinctly stated in the several messages on that subject, which I communicated.

Similar appropriations, made in 1803, and 1806, which were referred to, were intended to be applied in part consideration for the cession of Louisiana and the Floridas. In like manner it was anticipated that in settling the terms of a treaty of limits and boundaries with Mexico, a cession of territory, estimated to be of greater value than the amount of our demands against her. might be obtained; and that the prompt payment of this sum, in part consideration for the territory ceded, on the conclusion of a treaty, and its ratification on her part, might be an inducement with her to make such a cession of territory as would be satisfactory to the United States. And although the failure to conclude such a treaty has rendered it unnecessary to use any of the three millions appropriated by that act, and the entire sum still remains in the treasury, it is still applicable to that object, should the contingency occur making such appropriation proper.

The doctrine of "no territory," is the doctrine of no indemnity; and, if sanctioned, would be a public aaknowledgment that our country was wrong, and that the war declared by Congress with extraordinary unanimity, was unjust, and should be abandoned; an admission unfounded in fact, and degrading to the national character. The terms of the treaty proposed by the United States, were not only just to Mexico, but, considering the character, and amount of our claims—the unjustifiable and unprovoked commencement of hostilities, by her, the expenses of the war to which we have been subjected, and the success which had attended our arms, were deemed to be of a most liberal character.

The Commissioner of the United States was authorized to agree to the establishment of the Rio Grande as the boundary; from its entrance into the Gulf to its intersection with the southern boundary of New Mexico, in the north latitude about thirty-two degrees; and to obtain a cession. to the United States of the provinces of New Mexico and the Californias, and the privilege of the right of way across the Isthmus of Tchuantepec.

The boundary of the Rio Grande, and the cession to the United States of New Mexico and Upper California constitute an ultimatum, which our Commissioner was, under no circumstances, to yield. That it might be manifest. not only to Mexico, but to all other nations, that the United States were not disposed to take advantege of a feeble power, by insisting upon wresting from her all her other provinces, including many of her principal towns and cities which we had conquered, and held in our military occupation, but were willing to conclude the treaty in the spirit of liberality, our Commissioner was authorized to stipulate for the restoration to Mexico of all other conquests.

As the territory to be acquired by the boundary proposed might be estimated to be of greater value than a fair equivalent for our just demands our Commissioner was authorized to stipulate for the payment of such additional pecuniary consideration as was deemed reasonable.

The terms of the treaty proposed by the Mexican Government's Commissioners were wholly inadmissible. They negotiated as if Mexico were the victorious, and not the vanquished party, or they must have known their ultimatum could never have been accepted. It required the United States to dismember Texas, by surrendering to Mexico that part of the territory of that State lying between the Nueces and the Rio Grande, included within her limits by her laws' when she was an independent Republic, and when she was annexed to the United States, and admitted by Congress as one of the States of our Union.

It contained no provision for the payment, by Mexico, of the just claims of our citizens. It required indemnity to Mexican citizens for injuries they may have sustained by our troops, in the prosecution of the war. It demanded the right for Mexico to levy and collect the Mexican duties levied on goods imported into her ports, while in our military occupation: and the owners of which had paid to officers of the United Stated, the contributions which had been levied upon them. And it offered to cede to the United States, as a pecuniary consideration, that part of Upper California lying north of latitude thirty-seven degrees. Such were the unreasonable terms proposed by the Mexican Commissioners.

The cession to the United States. by Mexico, of the provinces of New Mexico and the Californias, proposed by the Commissioner of the United States, it was believed, would be more in accordance with the convenience and interests of both nations, than any other cession of territory which it was probable Mexico could be induced to make.

It is manifest to all who have observed the actual condition of the Mexican government, for some years past and at the present, that if these provinces should be retained by her, she could not long continue to hold and govern them. Mexico is too feeble a power to govern these provinces, lying as they do, at a distance of more than a thousand miles from her capital; and if attempted to be retained by her, they would constitute, but for a short time, even nominally a part of her dominions.

This would be especialy the case with Upper California. The sagacity of powerful European nations has long since directed them to the commercial importance of these provinces; and there can be little doubt that the moment the United States shall relinquish their present occupation of it as indemnity, an effort will be made by some foreign power to possess it, either by conquest or purchase. If no foreign power should acquire it by either of these modes, an independent revolutionary government would probably be established by the inhabitants, and such foreigners as may remain in, or remove to, the country, as soon as it shall be known that the United States have abandoned it. Such a government would be too feeble long to retain its separate independent existence, and would finally become annexed to, or a dependent colony of, some more powerful state.

Should any foreign government attempt to possess it as a colouy, or otherwise to incorporate it with itself, the principle evolved by President Monroe, in 1824. and re-affirmed in my first annual message, that no foreign power shall with our consent, be permitted to plant or establish, any new colony or dominion on the North American continent, must be maintained. In maintaining this principle, and in resisting its invasion by any foreign power, we might become involved in other wars more expensive and more difficult than that in which we are now engaged. The provinces of New Mexico and the Californias are contiguous to the territories of the United States; and if brought under the government of our laws, their resources, mineral, agricultural, manufacturing and commercial, would soon be developed.

Upper California is bounded on the north by our Oregon possessions, and if held by the U. States, would soon be settled by an enterprising and intelligent portion of our population.—The Bay of San Francisco, and other harbors along the California coast, would afford shelter for our navy, our numerous whale ships, and other merchant vessels employed in the Pacific ocean; and would, in a short period, become a mart of an extensive and profitable commerce with China, and other countries of the East.

These advantages, in which the whole commercial world would participate, would at once be secured to the United States, by the cession of this territory; while it is certain that as long as it remains a part of the Mexican dominions, they can be enjoyed neither by Mexico herself, nor by any other nation.

New Mexico is a frontier, and has never been of any considerable value to Mexico.—From its locality, it is naturally connected with our Western settlements. The territorial limits of the State of Texas too, as defined by her laws, before her admission into our Union, embraces all that portion of New Mexico lying east of the Rio Grande; while Mexico still claims to hold this territory, as a part of her dominions.

The adjustment of this question of boundary, then, is another consideration which induced the belief that the Mexican government, might even desire to place this province under the protection of the government of the United States. Numerous bands of fierce, war-like savages wander over it, and upon its borders. Mexico has been, and must continue to be, too feeble to restrain them from committing depredations, robberies and murders; not only upon the inhabitants of New Mexico itself, but upon those of the other northern States of Mexico. It would be a blessing to all those Northern States to have their citizens protected against them, by the power of the U. States.—At this moment many Mexicans, principally females and children, are in captivity among them. If New Mexico were held and governed by the United States we could effectually prevent these tribes committing such outrages, and compel them to release these captives, and restore them to their families and friends. In proposing to acquire New Mexico and the Californias, it was known that but an inconsiderable portion of the Mexican people would be transferred with them; the country embraced within those provinces being chiefly an uninhabited region.

These were the leading considerations which induced me to authorize the terms of peace which were proposed to Mexico. They were rejected; and negotiation being at an end, hostilities were renewed. An assault was made by our gallant army, upon the strongly fortified places near the gates of the city of Mexico, and upon the city itself. After several days of severe conflict, the Mexican forces, vastly superior in numbers to our own, were driven from the city, and it was occupied by our troops.

Immediately after information was received of the unfavorable result of negotiations, believing that his continued presence could be productive of no good, I determined to recall our Commissioner. A despatch to this effect was transmitted to him on the 6th of October last. The Mexican government will be informed of his recall, and that, in the existing state of things. I shall not deem it proper to make any further overture of peace, but shall be at all times ready to receive and consider any proposals which shall be made by Mexico.

Since the liberal proposition of the U. States was authorized to be made in April last, large expenditures have been incurred, and the precious blood of many of our patriotic fellow citizens has been shed in the prosecution of the war. This consideration, and the obstinate perseverance of Mexico in protracting the war, must influence the terms of peace which it may be deemed proper hereafter to accept.

Our arms having been everywhere victorious—having subjected to our military occupation a large portion of the enemy's country, including his capitol, and negotiations for peace having failed, the important question arose, in what manner the war ought to be prosecuted, and what should be our future policy. I cannot doubt that we should secure and render available the conquests we have already made and for this purpose, we should hold and occupy, by our naval and mtlitary forces, all the ports, towns, cities and provinces now in our occupation, or which may hereafter fall into our possession—that we should press forward our military operations, and levy such military contributions on the enemy, as may, as far as practicable, defray the future expenses of the war.

Had the government of Mexico acceded to the favorable and liberal terms proposed. that mode of adjustment would have been preferred. Mexco having declined to do this, and failed to offer any other terms which could be accepted by the United States, the national honor, no less than the public interests, requires that the war should be prosecuted with increased energy and power, until a just and satisfactory peace can be obtained.

In the mean time, as Mexico refuses all indemnity, we should adopt measures to indemnify ourselves, by appropriating permanently a portion of her territory.

Early after the commencement of the war New Mexico and the Californias were taken possession of by our forces. Our Military and Naval Commanders were ordered to conquer and hold them, subject to be disposed of by a treaty of peace.

These provinces are now in our undisputed occupation, and have been so for many months;—all resistance on the part of Mexico having ceased within their limits. I am satisfied that they should never be surrendered to Mexico. Should Congress concur with me in this opinion, and that they should be retained by the United States as indemnity, I can perceive no good reason why the civil jurisdiction and laws of the United States should not at once be extended over them,

To wait for a treaty of peace, such as we are willing to make, by which our relations to them would not be changed, cannot be good policy;—whilst our interests, and that of the people inhabiting them, require that a stable, responsible, and free government, under our authority, should be, as soon as possible, established over them,—Should Congress, therefore, determine to hold these provinces permanently, and that they shall hereafter, be considered constituent parts of our country, the early establishment of territorial governments over them will be important, for the more perfect protection of persons and property; and I recommend that such territorial governments be established. It will promote peace and tranquility among the inhabitants, by allaying all apprehensions that they may entertain, of being subjected again to the jurisdiction of Mexico. I invite the early and favorable consideration of Congress to this important subject.

Beside New Mexico and the Californias, there are other Mexican provinces which have been reduced to our possession by conquest. These other Mexican provinces are now governed by our naval and military commanders, under the general authority which is conferred upon a conqueror by the laws of war. They should continue to be held as a means of coercing Mexico to accede to just terms of peace. Civil as well as military officers are required to conduct such a government.

Adequate compensation, to be drawn from contributions levied upon the enemy, should be fixed by law, for such officers as may be thus employed. What further may become necessary, and what final disposition it may be proper to make of them. must depend on the future progress of the war, and the course Mexico may think proper hereafter to pursue.

With the views I entertain, I cannot favor the policy which has been suggested, either to withdraw our army altogether, or to retire to a designated line, and simply hold and defend it. To withdraw our army altogether from the conqests thay have made, by deeds of unparallelled bravery, and at the expense of so much blood and treasure, in a war just on our part, and one which, by the act of the enemy, we could not honorably have avoided, would be to degrade the nation in its own estimation, and in that of the world.

To retire to a line, and simply hold and defend it, would not terminate the war. On the contrary, it would encourage Mexico to persevere, and tend to protract it indefinitely.

It is not to be expected that Mexico, after refusing to establish such a line as a permanent boundary, when our victorious armies are in possession of her capital, and heart of her country, would permit us to hold it without resistance. That she would continue it, and that in the most harrassing and annoying forms, there can be no doubt. A border warfare, of a most savage character, extending over a long line, would be unceasingly waged. It would require a large army to be kept continually in the field, stationed at posts and garrisons along such a line, to protect and defend it. The enemy, relieved from the presence of our armies on his coasts, and in the populous parts of the interior, would direct, and selecting an isolated post for attack, would concentrate his forces upon it. This would be a condition of affairs which the Mexicans, pursuing their favorite system of guerrilla warfare, would probably prefer to any other.—Were we to assume a defensive attitude on such a line, all the advantages of such a state of war, would be on the side of enemy. We could levy no contributions upon him, or in any other way make him feel the pressure of the war; but must remain inactive, and await his approach, being in constant uncertainty at what point of the line, or what time he might make the assault.—He may assemble and organize an overwhelming force in the interior, on his own side of the line; and, concealing his purpose, make a sudden assault upon some one of our posts, so distant from any other as to prevent the possibility of timely succor or reinforcement; and, in this way, our gallant army would be exposed to the danger of being cut off in detail, or if, by their unrivalled bravery and prowess, every where exhibited during this war. they should repel the enemy, their numbers, stationed at any one point, may be too small to pursue him. If the enemy be repulsed in an attack, he will have nothing else to do but retreat to his own side of the line, and, being in no fear of a pursuing enemy, may reinforce himself at leisure for another attack on the same, or some other point. He may, too, cross the line between our posts, make incursions into the country which we hold, murder the inhabitants thereof, and then retreat to the interior, before a sufficient force can be concentrated to pursue him. Such would, probably, be the harrassing character of a mere defensive war on our part If our forces, when attacked, or threatened with attack, be permitted to cross the line, drive back the enemy, and conquer him, this would be again to invade the enemy's country, after having lost all the advantages of the conquests we have already made, by having voluntarily abandoned them. To hold such a line successfully, and in security. it is far from being certain that it would not require as large an army as would be necessary to hold all the conquests we have already made, and to continue the prosecution of the war in the heart of the enemy's country. It is also far from being certain that the expenses of the war would be diminished by such a policy.

I am persuaded that the best means of vindicating the national honor and interests, and of bringing the war to an honorable close, will be to prosecute it, with increased energy and power, in the vital part of the enemy's country. In my annual message to Congress I declared, that the war had not been waged with a view to conquest; but having been commenced by Mexico, it has been carried into the enemy's country, and will be vigorously prosecuted there, with a view to obtain an honorable peace; and thereby secure ample indemnity for the expense of the war, as well as to our much injured citizens, who hold a large pecuniary demand against Mexico. Such, in my judgment, continues to be our true policy;—indeed the only policy which will probably secure a permanent peace.

It has never been contemplated by me, as an object of the war, to make a permanent conquest of the Republic of Mexico; or to annihilate her separate existence as an independent nation. On the contrary, it has ever been my desire that she should maintain her nationality; and under a good government, adapted to her condition, be a prosperous and free republic.—The United States were the first, among the nations, to recognize her independence; and has always desired to be on terms of amity and good neighborhood with her. This she would not suffer. By her own conduct we have been compelled to engage in the present war;—and in its prosecution we seek not her overthrow as a nation; but in vindicating our national honor, we seek to obtain redress for the wrongs she has done us, and indemnity for our just demands against her. We demand an honorable peace; and that peace must bring with it indemnity for the past, and security for the future. Hitherto Mexico has refused all accommodation by which such a peace could be obtained.

Whilst our armies have advanced from victory to victory, from the commencement of the war, it has always been with the olive branch of peace in their hands;—and it has been in the power of Mexico, at every step, to arrest hostilities by accepting it.

One great objection to the obtainment of peace has undoubtedly arisen from the fact that Mexico has been so long held in subjection by one faction of military usurpers after another; and such has been the condition of insecurity in which their successive governments have been placed, that each has been deterred from making peace, lest from that very cause, a rival faction might expel it from power.

Such was the fate of President Herrera's administration in 1845, for being disposed even to listen to the overtures of the United States, to prevent the war: as is fully confirmed by an official correspondence, which took place in the month of August last, between him and his government, a copy of which is herewith communicated. For this cause alone, a revolution which displaced him from power was set on foot by General Paredes. Such may be the condition of insecurity of the present government.

There can be no doubt that the peaceable and well disposed inhabitants of Mexico are convinced that it is the true interest of their country to conclude an honorable peace with the United States; but the apprehension of becoming the victims of some military faction or usurper, may have prevented them from manifesting their feelings by any public act.

The removal of any such apprehension would probably cause them to speak their sentiments, and to adopt the means necessary for the restoration of peace. With a people distracted and divided by contending factions,—and a government subject to constant changes,—by successive revolutions, the continued success of our arms may fail to secure a satisfactory peace. In such event, it may become proper for our commanding generals in the field to give encouragement, and assurance of protection to the friends of peace in Mexico, in the establishing and maintenance of a free Republican Government of their own choice; always willing to conclude a peace, which would be just to them, and secure to us the indemnity we demand.

This may become the only mode of obtaining such a peace. Should such be the result of this war which Mexico has forced upon us, it would thus be converted into an enduring blessing to herself. After finding her torn and distracted by factions, and ruled by military usurpers, we should then leave her, with a Republican Government, in the enjoyment of real independence, and domestic peace and prosperity; performing all her relative duties in the great family of nations, and promoting her own happiness by wise laws, and their faithful execution.

If, after affording this encouragement and protection,—after all the persevering and sincere efforts we have made, from the moment Mexico commenced the war, and prior to that time, to adjust our differences with her, we shall ultimately fail, then we shall have exhausted all honorable means in pursuit of peace, and must continue to occupy her territory with our troops, taking the full measure of indemnity with our own hands; and must enforce the terms which our honor demands.

To act otherwise, in the existing state of things in Mexico, and to withdraw our army without a peace, would not only leave all the wrongs of which we complain unredressed, but would be the signal for new and fierce civil dissensions, and new revolutions, all along hostile to peaceful relations with the United States. Besides, there is danger, if our troops should be withdrawn before the peace should be concluded, that the Mexican people, wearied with successive revolutions, and deprived of protection for their persons and property, might be inclined to yield to foreign influence, and to cast themselves upon some European Monarcy for protection from the anarchy and suffering which would ensue.—This, for our own safety, and in pursuance of established policy, we should be compelled to resist.

We could never consent that Mexico should thus be converted into a monarchy, governed by a foreign prince.

Mexico is our next neighbor, and her boundaries are coterminous with our own, through the whole extent across the North American continent, from ocean to ocean. Both politically and commercially, we have the deepest interest in her regenerntion and prosperity; indeed it is impossible, that, with a just regard to our own safety, we can become indifferent to her fate. It may be that the Mexican government and people have misconceived or misconstrued our forbearance and our objects, in desiring to conclude an amicable adjustment of the existing difficulties between the two countries. She may have supposed that we would submit to terms degrading to the nation; or they may draw false inferences from the supposed division of opinion in the United States on the subject of the war: and may have calculated to gain much by protracting it and indeed, that we might ultimately abandon it altogether, without any indemnity, territorial or otherwise. Whatever may be the false impressions under which they have acted; the adoption and prosecution of the energetic policy must undeceive them.

In the future prosecution of the war, the enemy must be made to feel its pressure more than they have done. At its commencement it was deemed proper to conduct it in a spirit of forbearance and liberality. With this end in view early measures were adopted to conciliate, as far as a state of war would permit, the mass of the Mexican population: to convince them that the war was waged not against the peaceful inhabitants of Mexico, but against their faithless government, which had commenced hostilities:—to remove from their minds false impressions, which their interested rulers had attempted to make, that the war on our part was one of conquest—that it was a war against their religion and their churches, which were to be destroyed and overthrown—and that the rights of persons and private property would be violated. To remove these false impressions, our commanders in the field were directed scrupulously to resespect their religion, their churches and their church property, which were in no manner to be violated. They were directed also to respect the rights of persons and property, of all who should not take up arms against us.

Assurances to this effect were given to the Mexicans by Major General Taylor, in a proclamation issued in pursuance of instructions from the Secretary of War, in the month of June, 1846, and again by Major General Scott, who acted upon his own convictions of propriety of issuing it, in a proclamation of the 11th of May, 1847.

In this spirit of liberty and conciliation, and with a view to prevent the body of the Mexican population from taking up arms against us, was the war conducted on our part. Provisions and other supplies furnished to our army by Mexican citzens, were paid for at fair and liberal prices, agreed upon by the parties. After the lapse of a few months, it became apparent that these assurances, and this mild treatment have failed to produce the desired effect upon the Mexican population. The war has been conducted, upon our part, according to the most humane and liberal principles, observed by civilized nations. It was waged in a far different spirit on the part of Mexico Not appreciating our forbearance, the Mexican people generally became hostile to the United States, and availed themselves of the opportunity to commit the most savage excesses upon our troops. Large numbers of the population took up arms, and, engaging in guerrilla warfare, robbed and murdered, in the most cruel manner, individual soldiers, or small parties, whom accident or otherwise seperated from the main body of our army. Bands of the guerillas, and robbers infested the roads, harrassed our trains, and whenever it was in their power, cut off our supplies.

The Mexicans having thus shown themselves to be wholly incapable of appreciating our forbearance and liberality, it was deemed proper to change the manner of conducting the war, making them feel its pressure according to the usages observed under similar circumstances, in all civilized nations.

Accordingly, as early as the 23 of September, 1846, instructions were given, by the Secretary of War, to Maj. Gen. Taylor, to draw supplies for our army from the enemy, paying for them; and to require contributions for its support, if in that way he was satisfied he could get abundant supplies for his forces. In directing the execution of these instructions much was necessarily left to the discretion of the commanding officer, who was best acquainted with the circumstances by which he was surrounded,—the wants of the army,—and the practicability of enforcing the measure.

General Taylor, on the 26th of October, 1846, replied from Monterey, that it would have been impossible, hitherto, and is so now, to sustain the army by forced contributions or supplies.

For reasons assigned by him, he did not adopt the policy of his instructions, but declared his readiness to do so, should the army, in its future operations, reach a portion of the country which may be made to supply the troops with advantage.

He continued to pay for the articles of supply which were drawn from the enemy's country.

Similar instructions were issued to Major General Scott, on the 2d of April, 1847; who replied from Jalapa. on the 20th of May, 1847, that if it be expected that the army is to support itself by forced contributions levied upon the countsy, we may ruin and exasperate the inhabitants, and starve ourselves. The same discretion was given to him that had been to General Taylor, in this respect. General Scott, for the reason assigned by him, still continued to pay for articles of supply for the army, which were drawn from the enemy.

After the army had reached the heart of the most wealthy portion of Mexico, it was supposed that the obstacles which had before that time, prevented, would not be such as to render impracticable the levy of force contributions for its support; and on the 1st of September, and on the 6th of October, 1847. the order was repeated in despatches, addressed by the Secretary of War to General Scott; and his attention was again called to the importance of making the enemy bear the burdens of th war, by requiring them to furnish the means of supporting our army; and he was directed to adopt this policy, unless by doing so there was danger of depriving the army of necessary supplies. Copies of these despatches were forwarded to Gen. Taylor, for his government.

On the 31st of March last, I caused an order to be issued to our Military and Naval Commanders, to levy and collect a military contribution upon all vessels and merchandize which might enter any of the ports of Mexico in our military occupation; and to apply such contributions towards defraying the expenses of the war. By virtue of the right of conquest, and the laws of war, the conqueror, consulting his own safety or convenience, may either exclude foreign commerce altogether from all such ports, or permit it upon such terms and conditions as he may prescribe. Before the principal ports of Mexico were blockaded by our Navy, the revenues derived from import duties, under the laws of Mexico, were paid into the Mexican treasury. After these ports had fallen into our military possession, the blockade was raised, and commerce with them permitted, upon prescribed terms and conditions.—They were open to the trade of all nations, upon the payment of duties, more moderate in their amount, than those which had been previously levied by Mexico; and the revenue which was formerly paid into the Mexican treasury, was directed to be collected by our Military and Naval officers and applied to the use of our army and navy.—Care was taken that the officers, soldiers, and sailors of our army and navy, should be exempted from the operations of this order, and as the merchandize imported, upon which the order operated, must be consumed by Mexican citizens, the contributions were, in effect, the seizure of the public revennes of Mexico, and the application of them to our own use. In directing this measure, the object was to compel the enemy to contribute, as far as practicable, toward the expenses of the war.

For the amount of contributions which have been levied in this form, I refer you to the accompanying reports of the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy, by which it appears that a sum exceeding half a million of dollars has been collected.

This amount would undoubtedly have been much larger but for the difficulty of keeping open communication between the coast and the iuterior, so as to enable the owners of the merchandize imported to transport and vend it to the inhabitants of the country.

It is confidently expected that this difficulty will, to a great extent, be soon removed, by our increased forces which have been sent to the field.

Measures have recently been adopted, by which internal as well as external revenues, in all places, in our military possession, will be received, and appropriated to the use of our army and navy. The policy of the leving upon the enemy contributions in evary form consistent with the laws of nations, which it may be practicable for our military commanders to adopt, should be rigidly enforced, and orders to this effect have accordingly been given. By such a policy at the same time that our own treasury will be relieved from a heavy drain, the Mexican people will be made to feel the burthens of the war; and consulting their own interests, may be induced, the more readily to require their rulers to accede to a just peace.

After the adjournment af the last session of Congress, events transpired, in the prosecution of the war, which, in my judgment, required a greater number of troops in the field than had been anticipated. The strength of the army was accordingly increased, by accepting the services of all the Volunteer forces authorized by the act of the 13th of May, 1846; without putting a construction on that act, the correctness of which was seriously questioned. The volunteer forces now in the field, with those which had been accepted, to serve twlve months, and were discharged at the end of their terms of service, exhausts the fifty thousand men authorized by that act. Had it been clear that a proper construction of the act warranted the service of an additional number, thsy would have been called, and accepted; but doubts exising upon this point, the power was not exercised.

It is deemed important that Congress should, at an early period of their session, confer authority to raise an additional regular force to serve during the war with Mexico, and to be discharged upon the conclusion and ratification of a treaty of peace. I invite the attention of Congress to the views presented by the Secretary of War, in his report upon this subject. I recommend that authority be given, by law, to call for and accept an additional number of volunteers, to be exercised at such times, and to such an extent, as the emergency may require.

In prosecutihg the war with Mexico, whilst the utmost care has been taken to avoid every just cause of complaint, on the part of neutral nations, and none has been given, liberal privileges have been granted to their commerce in the ports of the enemy to our military occcupation.

The difficulty with the Brazilian government, which, at that time, threatened to interrupt the friendly relations between the two countries will, I trust, be speedily adjusted. I have received information that a minister extraordinary and plenipotentiary has been appointed by his Imperial Majesty; and it is hoped he will come prepared to adjust all remaining differences and difficulties between the two governments in a manner acceptable and honor able to both. In the meantime I have every reason to believe that nothing will occur to interrupt our amicable relations with Brazil.

It has been my constant effort to maintain and cultivate the most intimate relations of friendship with all the independent powers of South America; and this policy has been attended with the happiest results. It is true that the settlement and payment of many just claims against these nations has long been delayed.—The peculiar position in which they have been placed, and the desire on the part of my predecessor, as myself, to grant them the utmost indulgence, has hitherto prevented these claims from being urged in a manner strict justice demands. The time has arrived when they ought to be finally adjusted, liquidated, and enforced; and efforts are now making for that purpose.

It is proper to inform you that the government of Peru has in good faith paid the first instalments of the indemnity of thirty thousand dollars each,—and the greater portion of the interest due thereon,—in execution of

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Concluded.

ments of honor, individual or national, than haughtiness, pride, coveteousness and revenge, however displayed in brilliant and heroic deeds of courage. Let Congress, therefore, in the name of virtue, Christianity, and peace at home and abroad, declare to the civilized world, that we ask not the dismemberment of Mexico and will have none of her territory, except by fair purchase, when the Republics are at peace. To which I beg leave to add, as the unequivocal voice of Ohio, should further territory be annexed to the Union by conquest, by purchase or by any other mode, that she, the eldest of the tree-born daughters of the Ordinance of 1847 will spurn from her bosom any recreant son of hers who shall in the hour of trial, desert or surrender her first great charter of liberty, or fail in any constitutional effort to consecrate that territory to freedom and the inalienable rights of man.

Whilst upon this kindred subject, I cannot forget that the "black laws" still disgrace our statute books. All I can do, is earnestly to reiterate the recommendation for their unqualified repeal.

Beseeching you to unite with me in fervent supplication to the throne of our Father in Heaven, that in this eventful crisis he will preside over all our deliberations, State & National, and direct us in the way we should go. I again commend our beloved State, with all her concerns to your guardianship and protection.

WILLIAM BEBB.

Columbus, December 6, 1847.

Conference Proceedings.

From the Methodist Protestant.

VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

The 20th Annual Conference of the Virginia District of the Methodist Protestant Church, convened at Heathsville, Va., on the 4th of November, 1847.

D. Godwin was called to the chair, Conference opened in form. On motion M. J. Langhorne was appointed secretary, and T. C. Jennings assistant secretary.

The following brethren were elected to Elders' orders, and ordained: J. A. Snead, W. A. Crocker.

Elected to Deacon's orders: A. T. Shaver, G. W. Johnson. Br. Johnson was ordained.

Received into the itinerancy: Levi Hubble, J. M. Wood, B. C. Stratton.

Rev. Brs. E. Yeates Reese, Editor of the Methodist Protestant, and L. R. Reese were introduced to the Conference, and invited to take seats within the bar of Conference, as honorary members.

Brother L. R. Reese presented the proof-sheets of a work of which he is the author, requesting it to be referred to a committee to offer resolutions as regards their opinions of the work.—Whereupon the Conference very cheerfully acquiesced in Brother Reese's request; and appointed the following committee: W. McGwigan, J. G. Whitfield, Dr. J. Godwin, Dr. C. Finney, R. B. Thompson, J. J. Burroughs and H. F. Woodhouse.

THE REPORT OF SAID COMMITTEE.

The committee to whom was referred the proof-sheets of a work entitled 'Thoughts of an Itinerant,' about to be published by Rev. L. R. Reese, of the Maryland District of the M. P. Church, report that they regret that from other engagements they were unable to give this work greater attention; but from the cursory perusal they were enabled to give it, they feel no hesitancy in expressing a high opinion of its merits, and in recommending it to the perusal of all Christians, and more particularly to Methodist Protestants, the interests of whose economy and usages as a church, it peculiarly designs and is calculated to promote.

Conference expressed great pleasure in having our beloved brothers E. Y. and L. R. Reese with us during its session.

Number of members in the district, 3238.—Increase, 228.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas it is believed that class meetings are of great importance to the spirituality and success of our church, and whereas they have been greatly neglected in many parts of our district: therefore

Resolved, That we will use every effort to excite the membership upon the importance of this means of grace.

Resolved, That each itinerant minister and preacher be required to lead each class at least four times every year.

The committee to whom was referred Brother Alexander McCaine's letter, submitted the following report. That we think Br. McCaine's request of republication in the Methodist Protestant of his letters in question—published in the "Western Recorder," should under all the circumstances have been complied with; yet we believe the Editor of the M. P. was influenced in declining doing so, not from any disrespect to Br. McCaine; but was guided by the Book Committee. The reason why your committee thinks these letters should have appeared in the Protestant, according to Br. McCaine's request, is that the paper should not be closed to decent and right-spirited criticism on the acts of the General Conference.

We however differ from Br. McCaine in his views in said letters, on the nature and tendency of this action of the General Conference: which we believe was the best under the circumstances that could have been done.

J. G. WHITFIELD,
R. B. THOMPSON,
WM. McGEE.

APPOINTMENTS.

DR. C. FINNEY,—PRESIDENT.

Lynchburg Station, W. McGwigan. Abingdon, G. R. Barr. Norfolk, Wm. McGee. Goodhope Circuit, F. L. B. Shaver. Jonesville, I. Forkner, J. Marshall Woods. Campbell, T. L. Carter, W. H. Peerman. Bedford, A. Doniphan. Heathsville, R. B. Thompson, W. W. Walker, J. A. Snead. Matthews, I. Spangler. Hampton, W. A. Crocker. Greensville, S. H. Fisher. Sussex, Edgar Burroughs. Smithfield, M. J. Langhorne, J. G. Whitfield. New Kent, G. W. Johnston.—Princess Ann, T. C. Jennings. Cumberland, B. C. Stratton.

MISSIONS.—Lebanon, J. M. Woods. Holston, Levi Hubble. Charlottsville, W. Pinnell. Richmond City, unsupplied. Roanoake, unsupplied, Camden, J. D. Berryman.

Without appointments at their own request:—Dr. Godwin, B. G. Burgess, T. Butt, L. F. Cosby. Unstationed list: A. T. Shaver, A. J. Fleshman: J. M. Willis, H. E. Hall and B. Burgess, superannuated; J. J. Lansdel, under the direction of the President; J. W. Lackie, removed to another district; S. J. Atkins, withdrawn with certificate; R. H. Jones, transferred with certificate; W. M. Edwards, withdrawn.

Brother B. Burgess offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Conference, deeply impressed with a sense of the value of the Methodist Protestant, and pleased with the able manner in which it is edited, pledge themselves to use their efforts for the increase and extension of its circulation.

EDGAR BURROUGHS, Ch.
WILLIAM ANDERSON, } Pub. Com.
WILLIAM McGEE.

P. S. The next session of the Conference to be held at Hampton the second Thursday in November, 1848.

Northfield, Ia., Nov. 1847.

BR. BASSETT: You will please publish the following correction of the Conference Steward's Report as published in the Minutes of the Wabash Annual Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, in the Recorder, No. 5, Vol. 9. W. Williams stands published as being on the St. Joseph circuit, but was on Deerfield with F. Outcalt, (no report.) G. Williams and M. H. Mott were on the St. Joseph circuit. G. Williams received $150,00 his full claim from the St. Joseph circuit, and $35,00 from Columbia mission being $15,00 less than his claim. Mississinewa circuit I. C. Wright, claim $100,00, paid $58,00, deficit $42,00, St. Marys mission, Z. Garrison, no report. J. C. WRIGHT.

Religious Intelligence.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Upper Sandusky, Wyandote co., O., December 6, 1847.

BROTHER CLANCY: Common courtesy, as well as personal esteem, and the dictate of the Discipline, require, that I should address this communication to you as President of the Muskingum Annual Conference, under whose direction I am appointed to labor as Conference Missionary.—Availing myself of your permission (until further instructed) to go when, where, and as, I might choose, I preached but little two months after Conference; being compelled to occupy much of that time in the transaction of my secular affairs, and filling up the interstices with writing out my manuscript, for the Press. About four weeks ago, I left home, in compliance with a pressing request, to visit Sandusky Circuit, for the purpose of holding a series of protracted meetings. On my way up to Tiffin, I preached on the Frederic, and Bucyrus Circuits. The officiary of Sandusky Circuit not having yet met in Quarterly Conference at the time of my arrival in Tiffin,—I had to await their official action before I could proceed on the plan proposed in the invitation; and not liking to lounge away the two weeks which had to elapse before the meeting of the officiary, I started out for the proper missionary ground to attend to a very urgent call that I found in a letter, handed to me by Brother I. Thrap. I set off for, and travelled on to this place with many misgivings, not knowing what should befall me there; but I knew (and this blessed fact cheered me on) "that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city" to the truth as it is Jesus:—what hath God wrought?—There is indeed "no small stir about this way," in Upper Sandusky, at the present time!—At first, a mere handful of people were all that seemed willing to hear my message from God. The congregation however soon began to increase, and has continued on increasing till last night, when the house was literally crammed. I labored on, day after day, for sixteen days consecutively,—when ready to sink, overpowered with fatigue in body and mind, welcome help came,—first in the person of Brother Sauder, of Sandusky Circuit, who did good service for three days,—and then by the arrival of Brother Hatfield, of Delaware Circuit, whom the friends here sent for by an express-courier and who labored with all his heart and soul and strength for nearly a week, like a workman that needs not to be ashamed. About twenty souls,—including reclaimed back-sliders, as well as new converts,—were brought out of darkness into the marvellous light. Numbers more are under deep conviction, who have not yet obtained the consent of their reluctant hearts to be saved by grace divine. In several of our meetings there have been outbreaks of hallowed joy, that would perfectly have scared these placid preachers, who never feel, except when they feel horror at religious excitement;—nevertheless the happy souls thought, they only fulfilled the word of the Lord, as written by David,—"Clap your hands all ye people; shout with the voice of triumph!"—Yesterday we organizing a class of ten persons, who elected their class-leader and set out in good earnest to live for God and for the prosperity of his cause. If they be but faithful, every-day Christians, their numbers will rapidly increase, and they will obtain help for the erection of a meeting-house, at no distant day.—Our meetings have been held in the council-house of the Wyandot Indians, who were removed hence into "the far west" by the Government, four years ago;—a roomy place, capable of seating a considerable congregation, and still containing the very benches on which the Red Men of the Forest were wont to sit in their nation deliberations: and you may easily conceive of the feeling excited by the contrast presented before me every night, with the scene, in the self-same place, when these children of Nature here met in council, and poured forth their rude eloquence, and exhibited their wild gestures, and appeared in their fantastic habilaments, and cried out "waugh! waugh!" expressive of their cordial approval!—Indeed the entire locality is very interesting. The town-plot covers the scite of the old Indian Town, and some of the Indian houses still remain. Traces of the Fort, built by General Harrison, are yet to be seen. On the north outskirt of the Town is the Indian Church, built by Government,—a good stone building, capable of seating three or four hundred persons, where a goodly company of Wyandot Indians obtained joy and peace in the Holy Ghost, and often had "a little heaven below:"—being at too great a distance from the Town,—this good church is now deserted. To the north-east, just without the Town-limits, is the Mission Farm, Where J. B. Finley, and others lived, and,—entered into the apostolic labors of that extraordinary colored man, Stewart, who left Marietta under an impulse, that seemed almost supernatural, and, with his life in his hand, first lifted up the standard of the Cross among these wild Sons of the Wilderness. His mortal remains repose in the Indian burying ground, adjoining the Indian's Church; and the Wyandots, whom he was the means of converting to Christianity, have erected a neat tomb-stone, to mark the grave of the Missionary, whom they loved in life, and whom they still venerate in sacred memory. Near to his, are the graves of these celebrated Christian Wyandots, Between-the-Logs, Mononcue, Summunde-wat, and others; over each of which, the Indians, ere they left, raised a memorial stone, "their bones from insult to protect."—About three miles on the road to Tiffin, which is directly north, a clump of large oaks, in the midst of a far-spreading prairie, marks the spot where the unfortunate Crawford was attacked and taken by the Indians, by whom he was afterwards burnt alive;—the bark of the trees, on the side of the attack, are all spotted over with holes, from which bullets have been extracted, to be preserved as curiosities. The new town of Upper Sandusky,—laid out only three years ago,—contains already a number of streets, avenues, and alleys, regularly filled up with good houses. The situation of the town is charming,—high, dry, and healthful,—with the stream of the Sandusky winding around from the south, and along the east side, at a respectful distance. The surrounding country, almost all of which is in a state of nature, is rich in its soil, and beautiful in its aspect. On the west side of the river, an immense level plain,—dotted here and there with little clusters of trees, exhibits a landscape fit for a painting; and, in spring and summer, when covered with "living green," must completely deserve the name, it bears,—"The Indian's Paradise." The east side of the river is finely timbered with large, and straight white oak, with some hickory. The adjoining plains furnish cranberries in such abundance as to be an article of commerce.—The inhabitants generally are a respectable and intelligent people, and treated me with marked kindness and hospitality;—moreover, though involved in the common embarrassment of new settlers, they gave me substantial proof, that they thought "the laborer was worthy of his hire."—It is expected, and desired, that this town shall become the centre of a new circuit. There is sufficient unoccupied territory immediately around. Several towns and villages are convenient to this place—northward Oceola, Benton, Crawfordsville;—southward Cary, Bowserville, Little Sandusky, Marion, &c.—My previous engagements, together with the claims of my family, alone prevent me from remaining to cultivate a field of labor so promising.—If you, Dear Br. President, know a Br. minister, that can afford to labor a few months with little, or no pecuniary remuneration, in the almost certain prospect of forming a large, and good, and permanent circuit, that would ultimately sustain him well;—If he be a "workman," send him to form Wyandot ct., and his labor will not be in vain in the Lord!—I go to Tiffin to-morrow to hold a protracted meeting. On Christmas day I shall be on Zanesville circuit, where I shall remain 6 weeks to superintend the printing of my volume of sermons. February I have promised to spend in Youngstown. Through the month of March I shall be in Pittsburgh, by request of Brother Reeves.—These previous engagements will explain to my kind brethren, who have called for my assistance, the only reason of my non compliance. THOMAS POTTER.

Townsend, Ohio, Dec. 2, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: I wish to inform Br. Clancy and the friends in general that I am endeavoring to cultivate the field assigned me. It is known to all that my name was published in the minutes, left in the hands of the President. But I received a letter from Br. Clancy appointing me to the Beliview Circuit. I obeyed the voice of authority so soon as my health would admit, (as it pleased the good Lord to afflict me and my family with sore and heavy affliction,) and have been enabled to fill all the appointments up to this date, with the exception of two. And having been so reduced by the ague and fever that I was compelled to lay by, I am persuaded, dear Br. that you are prepared to sympathise with a fellow laborer thus situated.

We have held our first quarterly meeting, which took place on the 9th of Nov. at the North Ridge Class, at which meeting we had the highly appreciated labors of Brs. Thrap and Rice from the Sandusky circuit.

Our Quarterly Conference was one of interest, and I am glad to say to you, brother Clancy, that I am agreeably disappointed in my charge.—There are some as noble hearted souls on Bellview circuit as can be found in the M. P. Church. We have succeeded in organizing one new class, and increasing the number of appointments to ten in two weeks. Thus far I have found a hearty reception by all, both professor and non professor I would be glad to see the cause of my Master advance in this region, but O, how sin doth abound, and the love of Christians waxing cold.

I remain, Yours sincerely A. S. ROBINSON.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Union Circuit Dec, 7, 1847.

BR. BASSETT:—I commenced my labors on this circuit, the second sabbath after the adjournment of Conference; and after I had visited the brethren at the different appointments, I was glad to find that brotherly love generally prevailed. This state of things, has caused us to look for a general revival on old Union: and I am now happy to have it in my power to say, that our expectations are beginning to be realized. Our first Quarterly Meeting commenced on the 20th of November in conjunction with the appointment of Br. Young, our President. It was held at Catawba; and all things considered, was a most excellent meeting. The Church was revived, some ten, or more, were powerfully converted to God, and six members were added to he Church on probation.

Our next Quarterly Meeting will be held at Middleburg, commencing on the 30th day of January 1848. Brethren from the adjoining circuits are invited to attend.

Yours, &c., O. P. STEPHENS.

Bainbridge Circuit, Dec. 9, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: Our first quarterly meeting having closed I sit down to give the friends of Zion some account of Bainbridge circuit, tho' we have but little to report. I arrived on my field of labor in due time after Conference, found the circuit in a good state, and the friends in good spirits. I was highly pleased with Brother Carson's Sabbath School at Cove-Spring meeting-house, it was large and interesting. It has been kept up by this untiring brother through the summer seasons for many years. It has proved very useful to this neighborhood, and highly beneficial to the youth.—The example is worthy of imitation. He is about to commence a Bible class for the winter. May God bless the effort. This brother rides ten miles every Sunday to attend to his school. (A hint to the wise is sufficient.)—May the Lord bless the brother in his labor of love. We had a refreshing time at Covespring. Our meeting continued until Monday morning. We had four accessions to the church. Because of the rain and high water the brethren did not get out so as to hold a quarterly Conference, so we appointed the quarterly meeting in three weeks at Rocky Fork meeting-house, where the brethren met, and we had a pleasant Conference. Our meeting continued until Tuesday night. We had a revival among believers. Brother Jester came to our help.—May the Lord bless the seed sown at this meeting.

We have a Christmas meeting commencing Christmas eve and continue over Sunday at Covespring meeting-house; also a New Years meeting at Rainsborough commencing New Years eve, and to continue over Sabbath. We invite our brethren from the adjoining circuits and other friends without distinction. Come brethren, come over and help us. This from your fellow laborer in the Gospel,

S. P. KEZERTA.

[We give place to the following, from the Western Christian Advocate, not only because of the good news it contains, but because we are so well pleased to see the liberality manifested by the editor of the Advocate, in inserting a letter from a brother across the river, belonging now to the M. E. Church, South.—ED.]

Covington sta., Ky. con., Nov. 27, 1847.

Brother Elliott,—The Lord of hosts is with us—we are in the midst of a mighty work in this place. Within a few days we have received fifty-one on trial, thirty-seven have professed peace, and four have publicly professed the blessing of a "clean heart," and, thank God, this work is increasing. Among the thirty-seven converted, are found the two young volunteers, who, by a premature discharge of a cannon at our wharf in June last, had their arms blown off narrowly escaping with their lives. As one of these dear young men recovered from the dreadful shock, beholding his mangled, bleeding limbs, he besought the weeping bystanders to "please kill" him, not wishing to live in that condition: but he manfully bore the necessary amputation, and lives to feel and boldly acknowledge the mercy of God! When he came forward to join the Church, having no hand to offer, he approached the sacred place with expressive countenance and streaming eyes, enlisting once more, with a full soul though mangled body, in a life-time service; but under the "Captain of his salvation." The preacher threw his arms around the young soldier's neck, both bathed in tears, when more than martial fire filled every bounding heart, and joy angelic rang, while devils from the field of action flew, and praise from every christian's mouth was heard! Never will brother William Grigg's conversion be forgotten here. This work of God has also commenced in the society of adherents to the Methodist Epis. Church in this city, under the care of my beloved brother, J. A. Bruner of the Ohio conference, a man of God, from whom, I hope, you will hear soon.—Through your widely circulating paper, I beseech every pious reader to pray that this sin-consuming love of God may spread its cheerful flames from the rivers to the ends of the earth!

J. J. HILL.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO, THURSDAY, DEC. 16, 1847.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL,—PRINTER.

CONGRESSIONAL AND LEGISLATIVE.—We design giving an abstract of the proceedings of Congress and of the General Assembly of Ohio. As yet however, but little of interest has been reported, beyond the organization of the respective houses, and preliminary business.

FRESHET.—Continued rains for several days and nights within a week past have swelled the Muskingum river to a remarkable height. At the time our paper goes to press, it is higher at this point than it has been at any time since the flood of 1832. We understand that Marietta is inundated, and apprehensions are entertained that much damage will be done along the Muskingum Valley.

THE MESSAGES.—As many of our patrons receive no other newspaper but the Western Recorder, we furnish this week the Messages of the President and of the Governor of Ohio. This is done however, to the exclusion of our usual variety. Our poetry and various communications, not to say editorial matters also, have to give place. The Message however comes but once a year.

DEATH OF A PATRIARCH.—The last number of the Western Christian Advocate announces the death of Rev. James Quinn. He died at his residence near Hillsborough, O. on the 1st inst., of hemorrhage at the lungs. Father Q. has been reverenced as one of the oldest of Methodist ministers, a member of the Ohio Conference, M. E. Church, we believe from its organization.—He was a pioneer of the West. His dying testimony was, "All is peace."

MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH—WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENT.—The utility and faithfulness of the Telegraphic wires and apparatus can no longer be questioned. We regard the transmission of the entire message of the President by Telegraph to the western cities, as one of the most astonishing achievements of the present age. Had it entered the head of any one to predict such a thing ten years, or five, or perhaps one year ago, he would have been considered a candidate for the Lunatic Asylum. But the stubborn fact is now before the world. A wonderful era has thus opened upon us. The Pittsburgh Commercial Journal states that the President's Message contains about nineteen thousand words, yet this entire document was transmitted verbatim (not the document, but the words and ideas) by the telegraphic wires, and noted down simultaneously at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville and Vincennes, which last named place is full 900 miles from Washington City. What is still further remarkable, printers of Zanesville and Columbus, finding the expense too great to obtain the Message by despatch at their respective stations made arrangements to obtain early copies by express from Cincinnati after it had been copied off, put in type, and put to press in that city, 160 miles west of this point. And yet our neighbor Lyman received his copies about a day and a half in advance of the copies by eastern mail, notwithstanding the utmost speed of steam and horse power were used in its conveyance. The Baltimore Sun states that the Message was conveyed to that city 40 miles, in one hour and three minutes. The Pittsburgh Journal further states that the Telegraphic apparatus delivered the matter quite as fast as the most rapid penman could commit it to paper. And what next? Will not the men of St. Louis soon be listening to a speech of Mr. Corwin or Mr. Calhoun, or some one else in Congress, noting down at that distant point the speaker's language an hour earlier than the time it is delivered at the capitol?!!

AWFUL SHIPWRECK.—The Pittsburgh Com. Journal has intelligence from Philadelphia that the Packet Ship Stephen Whitney was totally lost on the 10th ult, off Clear Island. She was dashed to pieces upon rocks. Out of one hundred passengers and crew, only eighteen were saved. These escaped upon the rocks. Of the ninety-two persons that perished, Mr. M'Cheyne of Ohio was among the number.

DECK PASSENGERS.—The accounts given of recent melancholy steamboat disasters, represent with seeming gratulation, that all the cabin passengers were saved, that those who perished were only deck passengers, with perhaps a few individuals of the crew. This is in accordance with the usual description of such scenes. The number of the lost in the case of the Talisman recently sunk in the Mississisipi, is variously set down, at from 50 to 100 persons. The fact is, we apprehend, the number never will be known. And if the names of any should be ascertained and given, it will be as it were by accident.

We seriously object to the usual order of things on board our steamboats. There is too much caste. Let a man have money, and take cabin passage on any one of our steamers, though he may be the veriest nabob, or fop or fool, and he is regarded as a gentleman, and has his name registered in the great book kept by the proper officer of the boat; and should he receive injury by an unfortunate disaster, his name is announced in the public prints as one of the "unfortunate sufferers." But should a man through honest poverty or commendable economy, take a deck passage, (and there are thousands of such, persons the greater part of travelling community,) why, he is only a deck passenger, and let him be a saint or a soldier as the case may be, he is treated with perhaps less attention than would be a brute, too often subject to the rude insults of some heartless under-officer of the boat. The only care over this class of passengers seems to be to obtain their passage money. We have sometimes seen them drawn up like a lot of swine to be inspected or enumerated whilst the pay is demanded in rotation, and no entry is made of the name of each. In case then of the accidental sinking or burning of the vessel or the bursting of its boilers, whilst the deck passengers are most exposed to danger, there is no record of their names to show who have perished or are among the missing.

Now we do not undertake to say that this is the case on board all our steamboats, but we believe it is too generally the case. We know also that from the extremely low charge that is made for deck passage, it cannot be expected that passengers of that class should be furnished with accommodations, or be treated with much attention. But we insist that the proper clerk should be instructed to keep an entry during each voyage of the names of deck passengers, as he receives their pay, that in case of disaster effecting human life, surviving friends even of deck passengers, may have access to some record that will show who were on board, and of course determine who are missing. We think that the friends of philanthropy should join in calling for a reform in this particular.

The subjoined extract of a letter from our friend J. H. Myers, son of Rev. Jacob Myers, both of whom recently went from this place to the west, will be read with interest by the friends of both. Father Myers, it seems, is sojourning with his children at Rushville.—Many will be gratified to know his whereabouts.

Rushville, Ill., Nov. 22, 1847.

BR. BASSETT: As requested by you to write after my arrival in this country I hasten to fulfil the promise to do so. We had a delightful trip out, and arrived here in nine days from the time we left Putnam. We found the Ohio river in fine boating stage, we came over the Falls of Ohio for the first time, although I had passed up and down the river several times before. I should think we went the two and a half miles in about as many minutes. The fall I believe is some thirty feet to the mile.—If you have never been over them yourself, you can form some idea of the velocity of the water. We found our friends all well. Father looks much better than when he was in Putnam; the trip here appears to have given him new life, and he has more here to employ his mind with than he had there for the last few years. He is at this time out visiting Br. John Clark's. Yours, respectfully.

J. H. MYERS.

ERROR—CORRECTION—ACKNOWLEDGEMENT—RESTITUTION.—Several weeks ago we committed an oversight which has caused us many regrets, and has brought upon us (we think) punishment to the full amount of our desert. We stated in our paper of Nov. 11, that the P. M. at Morgantown, Va., in the discharge of his duty, (for which we are grateful to him,) had notified us to discontinue the paper sent to J. Vandevert, adding, "We have had no information that V. wishes to stop taking the paper, and if he does, he is responsible for another volume, since six numbers of Vol. 9 have been sent him." We then politely as we knew how, requested either one of two brethren of that vicinity to report to us on the case. We have since been reminded by each of them, that at the Pittsburgh Conference we were instructed to discontinue the paper of J. V. at the end of volume 8. We were at once fully satisfied that the error was with us. And a word or a breath from either of them would have satisfied us. We had made a minute of the case, with hundreds of other memorandums taken at the three Conferences which we attended, and should have stopped sending to Brother V. at the end of volume 8; but through some unaccountable oversight in the great multiplicity of our engagements and cares, we omitted to do so, and losing sight also of our memorandum, we did unintentional injustice to Brother V. and the agent who reported his wishes to us at Conference, by saying that we had not been notified in time to discontinue, and that he was now responsible for another volume. So soon as we received word from a Brother on the subject, we wrote him a private letter requesting him to make our apology to Brother V. stating that he owed us nothing, and that he was welcome to the numbers sent of volume 9. And we here add that if he feels agrieved in the case, if acceptable, we will cheerfully give him a years subscription for the paper. For we are determined to do all that is fair, and whenever we err, to make haste to make correction, and if necessary, restitution. We have confessed our fault, hoping that it is not unpardonable, and we have made the correction. Our summary punishment, however, has already been meted out to us, in that we have lost one or two good agents, valuable and influential brethren, who have announced to us that they act in that capacity no more. We shall now soon find whether they have in their hearts mercy and forgiveness.

Whilst on the subject of errors and corrections, we wish here to state our intention to take great pains to avoid errors in our business, but whenever we are so unfortunate as to commit an oversight or mistake, we shall use all diligence to make every thing right. With this assurance, we shall expect every good Brother hereafter, should such a misfortune ever again occur, (always excepting such brethren as have never erred themselves,) to exercise forbearance till they have advised us of what is amiss, and give us a chance of making the amende honorable.

COLUMBIAN MAGAZINE.—The December number of this elegant monthly is received, completing its 8th volume. The embellishments, are, as usual, very fine: The Omen, The Hawking Party at rest, Fashions and Music. The contents are entirely original, and furnished mostly by female writers, amongst whom are Mrs. Sigourney, Mrs. Osgood, Mrs. Ellet &c. Messrs John Inman & R. A. West are editors of the Columbian; Ormsby & Hacket publishers, New York, $3 per year, in advance, two copies for $5.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—This is the first Monthly for Jan. 1848, which has reached us. We think it as fine a specimen of the arts of engraving and printing as we have seen. The title page for the new volume is a charming plate or rather four plates in one representing the four seasons, beautifully embellished. The other engravings are; Happy Hours, Fashions, Music, Model Cottages, Ladies' Dresses, Head Dresses, and Ladies' Work Department. Among the contributors, are T. S. Arthur, Mrs. Ellet, Mrs Hale, Miss Leslie &c. The "Book" is edited by Mrs. S. J. Hale, published by Lous A. Godey, Philadelphia. $3 per year in advance. We regret that by an error of the binder, the January number sent us is defective, lacking a considerable portion of its contents.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Conference Collections.

Reply to C. No. II.

MR. EDITOR; I wish to trouble you with No. 2. upon the subject of Conference Collections, &c. I think Br. Springer has misapprehended my position, in reference to the matter; and also the law, bearing upon the question.

The object of this communication is to relieve myself from the odium attempted to be cast on me, for caring not for my brethren who travel poor circuits. I have no doubt but the readers of the Western Recordor, will almost universally conclude, from the connection in which Br. S. has introduced me to their notice, that I am one at least, that has interposed my influence to 'shield delinquents,' and that I cared not, so I could appropriate some good appointment to myself, &c.

Now I wish, reader, to bear in mind the following facts:—up to the last Conference, no one took a more active part, to secure attention to the lifting of Conference Collections, than myself, as many will bear me witness. At the Coshocton Conference I offered a resolution making the superintendents responsible for the Collection; at the succeeding Conference I stood up for the same resolution. I have never neglected the Collections on any appointment I have had: and yet with these facts within the reach of Br. S. he attempts to fix upon me, with others, the disgrace, of an anarchist, the tendency of whose conduct, is the distruction of a 'well ordered government.'

I suppose, however, that Br. S. took his impression from the amendment, I offered to his resolution at the last Conference. I offered that amendment, because I thought it more in accordance with the law; and as likely to secure the object, as the resolution in its original form. This I will attempt to show, in noticing what I regard, as an error in Br. Springer's communications. If I understand the position assumed by our worthy logician, it amounts to this. That in virtue of the powers granted to an Annual Conference by the Constitution, upon the subject of finance; that the legislation of the General Conference may be disregarded.

Now if this be not, at least the drift of his argument, I confess, I do not know what he would be at, for the controversy is not upon the subject of finance in general, but upon a single item, the Conference Collections, as directed by the Gen. Conference.

Now may I not enquire, if I understand the brother correctly, is there another brother in the Conference that would underwrite him. I think not.

It is not necessary now, that we enquire, whether the General Conference has transcended its boundaries or not. The question is; what is the relative position of an Annual, to a Gen. Conference. A General Conference is a legislative body, an Annual Conference an executive. It is true that an Annual Conference is clothed with legislative power, upon certain questions, or subjects; but it has not power to annul a single act of the General Conference. If it is supposed that the General Conference has travelled beyond its proper bounds, a competent jury is provided for in the Constitution, but that is not the Annual Conference. This subject has doubtless come up in the mind of many sup. in reference to class meetings. The Constitution makes that, only, a test of membership in the Methodist Protestant Church, which is either enjoined or prohibited by the Word of God.

Yet the General Conference has made class meetings a test of membership. Is attendance on class meetings according to Discipline, therefore, made a test of membership? Certainly, and no power beneath that of a General Conference can make it otherwise. Although some of us do not think, the peculiarities of a Methodist class meeting to be enjoined by the Bible.

We were a member of a committee of the Gen. Conference of '42 who recommended, the that Constitution and Discipline be made to harmonize upon this subject, by making class meetings to be regarded, merely, as a prudential regulation of the church, and enforced by their acknowledged utility, to promote the spirituality of her membership, and not as a term of membership: but nothing could be accomplished at that time, as was supposed, without injury to some portions of the church. Now may it not be argued with as much propriety, in view of the Constitution that the Annual Conference has power to act upon this matter and strike out class meetings from the list of duties; as to set aside the order of the General Conference on the subject of Conference Collections.

We do not question the right of the Annual Conference to order as many collections, as she may please in addition to the one in question, but in reference to that one, her business is to see, as the amendment directs, that the order of the General Conference is duly respected.

I wish now to say in conclusion, that no one appreciates Br. S.'s motives or zeal upon this subject of the church's welfare higher than I do, as he must be wholly disinterested in the matter of her finances; nor should I have been induced, to attempt a correction of what I regarded as an error in his communications, but for the manner in which he arraigned me before the public. I believe I am now done with the subject at least for the present, unless self defence should again make it necessary to resume my pen.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN BURNS.

Mt. Pleasant, O., Dec. 9th, 1847.

P. S. The quotation, from the Scottish Poet, with which Br. S. closes his No. 2. I would most respectfully, recommend for his consideration, remembering the old story of the man, who put his own sins and those of his neighbors in a bag, placing it upon his shoulder, the end of the bag on his back, contained his own sins, the end before him his neighbors'. J. B.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Reply to Rev. J. Paris.

Br. Bassett: I crave a small place in the excellent Recorder; to answer some of the singular and grave charges, which the Rev. J. Parish, (or Paris) of Enfield N. C. makes against me, in your paper of Nov. 4th. In that article, he charges me with "having nothing to write upon, and writing more particularly about nothing than any thing else," when I wrote my short comments upon his assertions against the Abolitionists, as published in the Rec. As I "wrote about, & upon his articles, and upon nothing else," one of the following positions must be true; and the gentleman may take his choice of the two. 1st. If his two articles "upon, and about" which I wrote, are any thing, aside from "nothing," then the charge is an untruth. 2nd. If the charge is not an untruth then said articles of his, are "nothing," according to his own showing. And I should think the latter position would be true after deducting the untrue assertions from his articles, and that "a complete dish of nonsense" would remain. The second charge is, that I "supported resolutions at Cincinnati declaring Rev. C. Torrey, who was guilty of felony a martyr to liberty." Yes, Mr. T., told some of the poor slaves, about the land of freedom, and how they might get, and enjoy their fredom, &c. And lo! he is felon, & I am—(he did not say what) because I think that Rev. T. died a victim to the unrighteous laws of slavery!! 3d. Another charge is, "that I have been engaged in an ungodly work, a work, my Bible never taugh me to do, a work more befitting Apolyon than a minister of the Gospel." And then for fear I should lose my soul, for the crime, he exclaims with all the pathos of his soul,—"for God's sake, for Christ's sake, for your own soul's sake, quit your vain delusion, 'tis fanaticism, and come back to the ground on which the Bible defines a minister's place to be." But what is the specification upon which this awful charge, is founded, which puts my soul in jeopardy? He answers that I have been circulating abolition pamphlets, or at least I handed on e to him, and I dare not deny it." No. No. I "dare not deny it." I did on the steps of the 6th street, M. P. C., in Cincinnati, on the free soil of good Ohio, give the Rev. J. Paris a pamphlet on slavery, telling him it might give him some light on slavery. But my Lord, if my soul, is in jeopardy for this awful crime, hear, O! hear my plea for pardon. First: Some one of the Methodist Brethren in Cincinnati gave me said pamphlet, with others on the same subject, and I did not think he was "engaged in an ungodly work," any more than the Agent of the American Sabbath School Union was, when he gave me, and other members of the General Conference, some of his pamphlets. Secondly: I never did read the pamphlet I gave the Rev. Brother, and I told him so at the time, but thought from the title page, that it might afford him a little light; and as he wanted it, I freely gave it to him without hesitation. Thirdly: I did not at that time think that there was so much of the Sanctum Sanctorum, or mystic holiness, about the Rev. J. P., as to jeopardize my soul, in giving him said pamphlet. But! But!! how wofully I was mistaken! Fourthly: I thought no more harm in giving Rev. J. Paris, a pamphlet on the subject of slavery, than I did in giving one to the Rev. Eli Henkle, and other brethren in the south, on the same subject, when they asked me for some works on that subject. Did Br. Henkle, think I was engaged in an "ungodly work, a work more befitting Apolyon, than a minister of the gospel" when I gave him said pamphlet? No. That enlightened, and generous mind, which resides beneath those gray locks, and governs his affectionate heart, soars too high for that. Those thoughts, and charges are left for a more contracted mind, to bring forth. And as for my calling a convention to leave, or get others to leave the church, requires proof, and until the Rev. J. Paris produces the proof I shall hold him as a false accuser. And as for your advice, for me to leave the Methodist P. Church and join the Radical Church, Br. Paris, is uncalled for. To conclude, sir, your charges, or allegations remind me of the fable of the "mountain in labor to bring forth a mouse." But how very brotherly, you did close your communication, embracing so many famous accusations. "Respectfully yours in Christ." Were you really sincere, Brother? How can any one be "in Christ," without having the spirit of Christ, which is truth, mercy, love, and humility? And how could you in truth give your readers to understand that I had "plead forgotten, & forgetfulness" in my article in the Recorder of July 15th when in fact neither words nor any synonymous words can be found in said article? I will close this communication by requesting you to read the fifteenth Psalm.

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Ia., Nov. 23d, 1847.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

ELIZABETH BROOK,

Widow of the late Dr. William Lee Brook, was born on the 27th day of February, 1797, and died on the 25th of November, 1847. At about the age of eleven years, she embraced religion, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Columbia, Pa., of which she remained a faithful and consistent member, until death released her from the church below, to join the church triumphant in heaven. Of Sister Brook, it may truly be said, she "walked in the fear of the Lord all the days of her life." A spirit of deep and ardent devotion characterised all her efforts to serve the Lord. In the midst of affliction and sorrow, she could rejoice in the Lord her Saviour and Redeemer. In his "law she took delight," her meditations thereon were sweet," and she was glad when the Sabbath came on, and she was enabled to go "to the house of the Lord," for in the sanctuary her seat was seldom vacant.

But she is gone! Her last disease was painful and somewhat protracted, (being a malignant attack of Erysipelas) for the greater part of the time, she was unable to speak, but her last audible words were,—"Glory! glory!! glory!!!—She has left a large number of relatives and friends behind to mourn her departure, but their loss is her eternal gain. O, may they all strive to meet her in heaven. W. C. FILLER.

Frazeysburg, Musk. co., O.

Zanesville Gazette, please copy.

News of the Week.

Dreadful Explosion at Cincinnati--Loss of Life.

At about three o'clock yesterday afternoon, a dreadful explosion occurred at Reynold's foundry on Front street near John—killing, probably two persons outright, and wounding several others.

The Engineer, Mr. Michael Keyser, was badly scalded, his ribs broken, and crushed in the side, causing internal hemorrhage, which produced death in about one hour. We were present at the time of his death, and never witnessed a more heart-rending scene. The poor fellow was sensible to the last, and those who stood around and offered him refreshment, he said, "O let me go! I need nothing," and died. His physicians were Drs. Mulford and Star, who did all that was possible for man to do.

In company with Dr. Ashton, after the death of poor Keyser, we visited the place where John Bowers, another of the unfortunate men, lay.—His skull was broken, producing compression of the brain, of which the physicians informed us, he could not possibly survive. His attending physicians were Drs. Norton and Wm. Judkins.

Thomas Keely was severely wounded, being struck in the cheek by a brick, which severed it, and fractured the bone.

There were two or three other persons employed in the foundry who received slight injury, and it is a matter of wonder to all that many were not killed. The walls of the building were blown out, and some of the bricks driven to the distance of a square and a half. One of the rafters was thrown into a yard at the distance of at least 600 feet, and the safety-valve, with a portion of the boiler, was blown to the river. The wall of the machine shop was much damaged.

By the fragments cast out by this extraordinary explosion, two persons at work in McGregor's distillery, some distance off, were badly hurt. One of them, Patrick Sherder, had his face horribly torn, and probably lost an eye!

A laboring man employed in the foundry, Michael———, had his leg broken.

The foreman of in the foundry, informs us that the explosion was not occasioned by a want of water, as there were some persons scalded, and the houses opposite drenched.—Cin. Com.

Railroad Accident.—The Indiana Journal of Friday says, we have had to record a great many accidents on this railroad of ours, during the time it has been in operation to this city.

On last Tuesday morning, the beautiful locomotive lately shipped from Cincinnati, fresh from the hands of the mechanic, and on its first downward trip, ran against a tree which had fallen across the rails, below Greenwood, almost demolishing it. The damage, with what injury it did to the road, is estimated at a thousand dollars by some who had witnessed the wreck.

The accident happened before daylight. The engineer discovered the tree in time to reserve the steam. The brakes were forgotten in the eagerness to save life, and the locomotive with their train were left to their fate—the hands making good their escape. The locomotive to the upward freight train ran off the track the same morning, below. When the hindmost train came up they found it entirely deserted. Before proceeding the conductor had to procure hands, to get on the track again, and start it ahead, which occasioned no little delay.

Tuesday was consumed in repairiug the road at the first terrible tear up. The cars came through on Wednesday morning.

From the Zanesville Gazette.

WHEELING BRIDGE.

We promised last week to give a further notice of Mr. Ellet's Report in the matter of the bridge across the Ohio at Wheeling. We then remarked that the cables of wire were formed by stretching the wires as uniformly as possible, and wrapping the bundle with wire by coiling it as closely as possible from end to end. The wire to be used at Wheeling will be No. 10, which is the size often used for bucket bails. Twelve of these cables, each about four inches in diameter, and 1380 feet in length, will be used to sustain the bridge. Each cable will be composed of 550 wires, of the length above stated; and hence the whole bridge will be sustained by 6600 strands or wires, 1380 feet in length. On each bank of the river a tower of stone will be erected, of great strength, and that on the eastern shore will be 153½ feet above low water; while that on the western shore will be 131⅔ feet in height.—Through these is an arched way for the travel to pass through; and over rollers on their summits will pass the twelve cables, which will be securely fastened to powerful irons that being imbedded in the masonry some distance back of the towers will prevent them sinking between the towers lower than is designed. They will be allowed however to sink as low as the floor or track of the bridge. The timbers used will be oak and white pine, of the strongest and best quality.

It may seem difficult to determine the number of wires necessary to sustain the bridge with the weight of travel; but as Mr. Ellet justly remarks, the strength of one wire of any length, is easily tested, and if one wire will sustain its own weight and one hundred pounds, two will sustain themselves and two hundred pounds; and thus by increasing the wires any degree of strength may be obtained. Of the various expedients resorted to for securing the parts, equalizing the pressure, and making the whole secure, it is not necessary to speak in detail, since without a diagram they could scarcely be made intelligible.—But the utmost care is used to secure the requisite strength. In addition to the weight of the bridge, it is calculated to have strength to allow 32 heavy six horse teams, and 500 people to be on the bridge at once, which would cover it from end to end; and be much greater than any load ever to be put upon it. This would be about equivalent to 700 cattle, or 4000 men. But taking the strength of the cables at a fair average, it is considered that when the whole 32 loaded wagons, with their 192 horses, and 500 people are upon it, the cables are still strong enough to sustain the bridge though three times as heavy, and the weight though three times as great. Surely then the bridge must be safe for all ordinary travel.

One feature in this matter we especially like. The iron work, including the making of the wire, and every thing connected with it, will be of Wheeling manufacture. Though in a slave state, the people of Wheeling have thrown off the trammels, pnd are determined to succeed, therefore they will succeed.

The plan of the work contemplates the probability of untimately being required as a pass way for railroad cars. Most sincerely do we hope that the sufficiency of the structure may soon be tested. We in Ohio are not without interest in this matter. With a good bridge at Wheeling, our mails would be less frequently obstructed, and facilities of intercourse with the east would at all seasons be greatly increased.

The bridge, when completed, will be a beautiful specimen of human skill. With a span of a thousand and ten feet, and suspended near 100 feet above the stream, the steamers may run their course far below. The world cannot show its equal.

If any one, however, expects the rigidity of the old fashioned wooden structures, he will be disappointed; but though it yields with the load, it is only to assume positions of greater strength.—To construct a bridge of this kind requires science, as well as mere mechanical skill.

During a storm on the 11th ult., a large gum tree was blown upon the house of Mr. Rowe, living near the Wolf river bridge, three miles from Memphis, Tenn., causing a fearful crash, and, sad to relate, instantly killing two little boys—his only children—as they lay with their mother, and dangerously injuring her also, by breaking her thigh bone. Mr. R. was injured, but not seriously.

A son of Mr. F. Gage, of Waterloo, N. Y. about twelve years old, a few days since, in attempting to conceal a loaded pistol about his person, accidently discharged the same. He expired in a short time.

Miles J. Rockwood accidentally fell upon a circular saw, in his mill, in Brookline, N. H., on the 12th ult., and his body was cut in a horrible manner, so that he survived but four hours. He was married only three weeks before.

A Death from Joy.—The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer records the following result of sudden and unexpected joy.

A poor German emigrant who left the home of his fathers, and all the associations of a long life, to seek the new world with a view of bettering his fortune, actually was unable to bear the shock of seeing a well beloved brother. The moment his eyes fell on his frame was convulsed—he swooned with joy—sunk and died. The found and devoted heart has ceased to beat, and its possessor has at last found quietude in that that place where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest.

Notices.

Xenia Circuit—Ohio District.—We expect to hold a protracted meeting at Bellbrook, commencing December 25th, to continue, (Providence permitting,) over New Years Day. Brethren of the ministry and laity, from adjoining circuits are especially invited to attend.

JOSEPH WHITE.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Morgantown, Nov. 17, 1847.

Br. Bassett: You will confer a favor on me, by publishing the following appointments, and I will fill them if God spares my life.

Pittsburgh st.,	Dec.	26,	1847.
Allegheny "	Jan.	2,	1848.
Sharpsburg ct.,	"	9,	"
Birmingham miss.,	"	16,	"
New Brighton st.,	"	23,	"
Manchester ct.,	"	30,	"

Will the Superintendents please to secure some help at each meeting?—My will is good, but I am not able to labor as much as in years gone by. I need help, from God and man, wherever I go, at all my meetings.

GEO. BROWN.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Twin Creek	Ct.		Dec.	25 1847
Cincinnati	Miss.	Elm st.	Jan.	1
Cincinnati	St.	6 st.	"	8
Cincinnati	Ct.		"	15
New Richmond	Ct.		"	22
Lebanon	St.		"	29
Lebanon	Miss.		Feb.	5
Greenville	"		"	12

J. M. YOUNG.

MUSKINGUM CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please insert the following list of appointments, to wit:

Pisgah	ct.	2d.	Sunday of December,	1847.
Pennville	"	3d	" "	"
Cambridge	"	4th	" "	"
Belmont	"	1st	" Jan.	1848.
Georgetown	"	2d	" "	"
Mt. Pleasant	"	3d	" "	"
Steubenville	"	4th	" "	"

GEO. CLANCY.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—At Washington, Pa. on the 2nd inst. Mr. Alex. Redman, to Miss Elizabeth Forster, all of the above named place.

———In Blackford county, Indiana, Nov. 11th, 1847, Rev. Geo. Evans, of the Wabash Conference, to Mrs. Louisa Clouse, both of said county.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

P. T. Laishley,	Pa.	Jos. White,	O
G. B. M'Elroy,	"	J. S. Thrap,	"
W. Reeves,	"	J. Jack, 1 sub.,	"
Robt Sears,	N. Y.	R. T. Johnston,	"
G. Evans,	Ia.	A S Robinson 5 sub (good!)	"
J. C. Hazlett,	Pa.	T. Potter,	"
W. C. Filler,	O.	L. J. White,	"
J. F. Bane,	"	O. P. Stephens,	"
J M Young 4 sub (fine!)	"	M. Moore,	"
S. P. Kerzerta, 1 sub.,	"	P. M.—Lebanon,	"
Wm. Browning,	"	T. Hanna,	"
John Burns,	"	W. Remsburgh, 2 sub.,	"
C. T. Kingsbury, 1 sub.	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	cts.
P T Laishley,			9	52	1 00
Jer Jack,	Wm Cox,		10	9	2 00
"	J Johnson,		9	48	2 00
R T Johnson,	R Reed,		9	52	2 00
W Reeves,	C Avery,		9	52	2 00
A S Robinson,	H Blackman,		10	9	2 00
"	S Franklin,		10	9	2 00
O P Stephens,	A M'Conkey,		9	52	2 00
"	J L Mowder,		9	52	2 00
Maurice Moore,			10	5	2 00
T Hanna,	H Huskill,		9	52	2 00
W Remsburgh,	W Gardiner,		10	26	2 00
"	J Gracey,		10	9	2 00
"	R Gracey,		10	9	1 00
C T Kingsbury,	J F Dorland,		8	52	2 00
"	J Wyatt,		9	52	2 00
J C Hazlett,	P Potter,		10	14	2 00
J M Young,	A Laybourn,		9	52	2 00
"	D M'Conkey,		10	9	2 00

Br. Clancy, we regret that we had not opportunity to send the books and pamphlets as requested, nor yet to meet you in Pisgah circuit. Can you come this way? Please do so.

☞We have received information that a certain brother minister sold his copy of our paper the past year for $1,50, and yet he has not paid us one cent, nor done us any agency for that year. This is truly a business transaction, but we do not see how there can be any conscience about it. We don't give the brother's name just now.

The P. M. at Lebanon, O., notifies us that L. Peckenpaugh does not take his paper from the office. Will Br. Evans do us the favor to enquire into this matter? Br. P. does not owe for his paper.

Br. Browning, in answer to your enquiry, R. has paid, but H. has not as yet. Furthermore, our only subscriber at your present location, owes for the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th volumes of our paper. Wonder we did not stop sending before this time. Please attend to that case.

Br. C. T. Kingbury, please tell Br. M. we had rather not.

Advertisements.

A NEW AND IMPROVED VOLUME FOR 1848!

SEARS' PICTORIAL FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Established for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge:

A Monthly Miscellany of moral and instructive information, embellished with numerous ENGRAVINGS of the various subjects treated of in the course of the year. Published monthly, in parts of 48 large octavo pages each.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE FIFTH VOLUME.

For four years the Pictorial Family Magazine has been before the American public, and it is peculiarly gratifying to the Publisher to know, that his efforts to do good through its medium, have met with the universal approbation of the public & the public prints, wherever it has found its way. It is now too firmly established upon the broad foundation of public confidence, to require a great flourish of trumpets to proclaim its continued existence, or the tricks of 'puffery' to allure the people to its support.

To those who are acquainted with the Magazine, it is unnecessary to speak of its design & merits; to those who are not, we will make a brief statement of both. The original design of this work was a noble one, and worthy of all praise. It was intended as a vehicle for conveying solid information to that class of citizens whose circumstances denied them the privilege of drinking abundantly at the fountain of useful knowledghe; & it has been the constant aim of the present publisher to carry out fully the above laudable designs. Its price, compared to the amount of its reading matter, and the number and quality of its Engravings, is exceedingly low; and we think we hazard nothing in saying, that it is by far the cheapest periodical published in America.

Natural History, Biography, Travels, History, Science, Useful Arts, Fine Arts, Agriculture and Rural Economy, Sketches of American Scenery, Political Economy, Essays, & Miscellaneous Reading, all receive a due share of attention, and all bear, as far as practicable, a decidedly American character. We aim, also, to preserve a high tone of morals, in the conduct of the Magazine, and to blend useful information with correct moral instruction, in order that it may, in every respect, be a useful and agreeable teacher in the domestic circle.

☞Price two dollars per annum—three copies for five dollars, or ten copies for fifteen dollars—invariably in advance, as no Numbers are sent out until the subscription is paid.

☞Thus far we have gone on steadily advancing in public favor, the sure indication of which has been a healthy increase in our subscription list. That we shall double our present number of subscribers in 1848, we have little doubt, for we intend doubling our efforts and increasing very greatly the value of the Magizine. We shall engage the very best engravers to be found. We have now some plates, illustrating a great variety of subjects, in progress for our new volume, that will be equal to anything that has appeared in the country.

☞EVERY MAN HIS OWN AGENT.—All remittances of money for this Magazine must be sent to us free of postage. Those wishing to take our Magazine, will please write direct to us, enclosing a year's subscription ($2,) or the price of a club (ten copies for $15,) in funds current in the State where they reside. This simplifies the whole matter of subscription, perfectly, and makes the communication, between publisher and subscribers, as it should be, direct.

Agents Wanted in every town and county thro'out the Union, to sell SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL WORKS, universally acknowledged to be the best and cheapest ever published, as they certainly are the most saleable. Any active Agent may clear FIVE HUNDRED or a THOUSAND DOLLARS a year. A cash capital of at least $25 or $30 will be necessary. Full particulars of the principles and profits of the Agency will be given on application, either personally or by letter. The postage must in all cases be paid.

Please address, ROBERT SEASS, Publisher.
128 Nassau Street, New York.

☞Newspapers copying the above (including this notice,) and giving it two or three insertions, shall receive a copy of the Magazine for one year. Send only one copy of each paper, marked.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK

SHALL BE THE MOST POPULAR MAGAZINE FOR 1848! Enterprise and capital are employed upon it, and it is, as it always has been, under the superintendence of the subscriber.

At home we have received the united commendations of the Press. In London our Book has been highly praised, as our subscribers may have seen from the notices that we have published from time to time of

OUR INCOMPARABLE WORK.

TERMS, &c.

One copy (One year,) (Including LADY'S DOLLAR NEWSPAPER,)	$ 3 00
Two copies (One year,(	5 00
One copy (Two years,)	5 00
Five copies (One year,)	10 00
Eight copies " "	15 00
Twelve copies " "	20 00
Godey's Lady's Book and Graham's Magazine, (One year,)	5 00
Godey's Lady's Book and Songs for the People, (One year,)	5 00

The subscriber making the largest remittance during the time ending the 31st of March, and the person sending the largest club will each be constituted a life subscriber to the work.

A Remittance of THREE DOLLARS, in advance, entitles the subscriber to the LADY'S DOLLAR NEWSPAPER one year.

Any old subscriber paying up arrear, and Three dollars in advance for 1848, will also be entitled to the LADY'S DOLLAR NEWSPAPER one year.

Any Postmaster, or Editor of a newspaper, sending us TWO DOLLARS for the Lady's Book alone, with the name of a subscriber, will be entitled to the other dollar as a commission.

☞A specimen number will be sent to any person ordering it, postage paid. Address

L. A. GODEY,

Philadelphia, Pa.

Sunday School Books--New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday School Libraries, comprising recent publications of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume.

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, Agent.

Putnam, Dec. 13, 1847.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

Author of the Discourse delivered at Mr. Wesley's Funeral.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E. Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

ON HAND, AND FOR SALE.

LATEST EDITION.

HYMN BOOKS, and DISCIPLINES, OF THE METHODIST P. CHURCH. For sale at this office, by the dozen, or single.

Sacred Melodeon, A new & choice collection of Spiritul Songs, BY Rev. J. Dalby & J. B. Peat To be obtained at the office of the Western Recorder.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT,

PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT WORCESTER, MASS.,

BY SAMUEL CHISM.

This publication is sent forth, with the specific object of disseminating evangelical truth. Its design is eminently 'practical,' not speculative. It will present those vital truths of christianity which are calculated to stimulate the chnrch to her appropriate work in the evangelization of the world; and will urge the unconverted to an immediate surrender of their hearts to God, and the entire consecration of themselves to his service. It is not devoted to the interests of any particlar denomination, but aims at the present and eternal happiness of the whole human family.

Each monthly issue will contain 32 pages of matter, octavo, in new, bold, and clear type, cast expressly for this use. Two sermons will appear in each number; and the remaining pages will be filled with Skeletons of Sermons, Ministerial and Religious Miscellany, Criticisms, Biographical Sketches, etc.

The list of Contributors to the American Pulpit will embrace several of the ablest clergymen of the evangelical denominations in the United States.

TERMS.

1. $1 per annum, in advance. If not paid till after three months from the time of subscribing, $1,50 at which time all subscriptions will be consided due, and bills sent accordingly.

2. Any person obtaining three subscribers, with pay in advance, shall receive a fourth copy gratis.

3. No subscriptions received for a less term than a year. It is desirable that all subscriptions should commence with the first number of the volume.

4. Will not the friends of this work use their influence in extending its circulation? Certainly, by so doing, they will advance the interests of Christ's cause. A little exertion on the part of each individual will do much to make it one of the most extensively circulated periodicals in the United States.

5. Several special agents are wanted to procure subscribers in different parts of the United States. Superannuated clergymen will receive good encouragement on personal or written application.

6. Ministers of the gospel, of every denomination, and other responsible individuals, are authorised, and cordially invited to act as agents.

7. All communications connected with the editorial department should be addressed to Rev. J. D. Bridge, Worcester, Massachusetts. All communications as business should be directed, 'post paid,' to Samuel Chism, Worcester, Massachusetts.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisnness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle, & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Dean's.

PROSPECTUS

For the Congressional Globe and Appendix

WE issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfilment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capital of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe & Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, & all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressionhl Globe, and usually makes about the same No. of pages during the session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three Nos. of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original supscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congression Globe,	[illegible]
For one copy of the Appendix	[illegible]
For six copies of either, or part of both	10 00

Proprietors of newspapers who copy this prospectus before the first day of December, and send us one copy of their paper containing it, marked around with a pen to direct our attention to it, shall have their names entered on our books for one copy of the Congressional Globe and Appendix during the session.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out. Therefore, no person need consume time in writing for them, unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847. BLAIR & RIVES.

1000 VARIETIES OF BOOKS, MAPS, CARDS, &c.

PUBLISHED BY THE

American Sunday School Union,

146 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia,

AND OVER

500 SUNDAY SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS,

On good paper and type, with numerous plates and engravings, and substantially bound,

EMBRACING

Scripture Stories,	Bible Geography and Antiquities,
Illustrations,	Temperance,
Biographies,	Duties of Children,
Domestic Duties,	Prayer,
Parental Relations,	Narratives of Real Life
Missions,

Eminently practical and instructive; suitable also for families and individual reading.

Aids in Sabbath School Teachers,

Union Bible Dictionary,	Biblical Antiquities, 2 vols,
Bible Geography,	Teacher's Assistant, 2 vols,
Teacher taught,	Union Questions, 12 vols. &c.

MAPS of Palestine, Jerusalem, Journeyings of the Children of Israel, and St. Paul's Travels.

All the requisites for conducting a Sabbath School.

A large assortment of SMALL BOOKS for Premiums. from 50 cents per hundred and upwards.

LIBRARIES.

I.—436 VOLUMES,

Being a full set of the Society's Publications, exclusive of Maps, Question Books, &c., each book numbered on the back, with 100 catalogue of the same, without a case $ 90; Including Maps of the Ancient World and Palestine, $ 92,-50; and the whole in a neat case, $ 97,50.

II.—121 VOLUMES,

Designed especially for common schools and families, with 50 catalogues, and in a plain case, $ 33; without a case $ 30

III.—80 VOLUMES,

IV.—40 VOLUMES, $ 10.

V.—100 VOLUMES, Selected for Sunday Schools. With case $ 25—without case, $ 22,50.

VI.—CHILD'S LIBRARY, 18 volumes, $ 2,25.

PERIODICALS.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL JOURNAL,

Published twice a month, at twenty-five cents per year, in advance—a valuable Family Newspaper and Sabbath School Teacher's Guide; in a form suitable for binding. Not less than four copies sent to one address.

THE YOUTH'S FRIEND,

Published once a month. 16 pages, 18 mo. with cuts, at 5 cents a year. The 20 volumes uniformly bound and numbered. $ 5,40.

YOUTH'S PENNY GAZETTE,

A valuable paper for Sunday School Scholars & Families published every other week, with five or six embellishments in each number.

6 copies one year, to one address,	-	$ 1 00
20 copies	do.	do.	-	3 00
40 copies	do.	do.	-	5 00

which is exactly at the rate of twelve and a half cents a year, in advance. Not less than six copies sent to one address.

OFFICERS.

President—ALEXANDER HENRY, 146 Chestnut st With 25 catalogues and case, $ 20; without case, $ 17,50 Philadelphia.

Treasurer—Herman Cope, 146 Chestnut street. Philad.

Frederick W. Porter, Corresponding Secretary, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Ferderick A. Packard, Editor of the Society's Publications, 146 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

☞Documents, Reports, Hints, Descriptive Catalogues, &c., replete with information, are furnished gratuitously on application. Orders from any part of the United States and British Provinces, will receive immediate attention.

Sunday Schools are advised to send with their order list of the books in their libraries to avoid [illegible] forwarded. More than 1000 books can [illegible] requested.

$2,498,335,20- and from incidental and miscellaneous sources, $100,570,51. The last fiscal year, during which this amount was received, emb aced five months under the tariff act of 1842, and seven months during which the tariff act of 1846 was in force. During the five months under the operation of the tariff act of 1842, the amount received from customs was $7.842,306,90, and during the seven months under the act of 1846, the amount received was $15,905,557,76.

The nett revenue from customs in the year ending on the 1st December, 1846, being the last year of the tariff act of 1842, was $22,971,403 10; and the nett revenue from customs, during the year ending December 1st 1847, being the first year under the operation of the tariff act of 1846, of more than $8,500,000 over that of the last year of the tariff of 1842.

The expenditures during the fiscal year ending on the 30th June last, are $59,451,177 65; of which which $3,5228,02 37 was on account of payments of principal and interest of the public debt, including treasury notes redeemed and not funded. The expenditures, exclusive of the payment of public debt, were $55,929,095 28.

It is estimated that the receipts into the treasury for the fiscal year ending the 30th June, 1848, including balance in the treasury on the 1st of July last will amount to $42,886, 545 80; of which $31,000,-000, it is estimated, will be derived from customs; $3,500,000 from the sale of the public lands;—$100, 000 from incidental sources, including sales made by the Solicitor of the treasury,—and $6,285,294 95 from loans already authorized by law; which, with the balance in the treasury, on the 1st day of July last, make the sum estimated.

The expenditures for the same period, if pence with Mexico shall not be concluded, and the army shall be increased as proposed, will amount, including the necessary payments, on account of principal and interest of the public debt, and treasury notes to $58,615,660 07.

On the 1st of the present month the amount of the public debt actually incurred, including treasury notes, was $45,659,659 40. The public debt due on the 4th March 1845, including treasury notes, was $17,738,799 62; and consequently the addition made to the public debt, since that time, is $27,870,859,78. Of the loan of $23,000.000 authorized by the act of January, 1847, the sum of $5000,-000 was paid out to the public creditors, or exchanged at par for specie. The remaining $18, 000,000 was offered for specie to the highest bidder, not below par, by an advertisement issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, and published from the 9th of February to the 10th of April, 1847, when it was awarded to the several highest bidders, at a premium ranging from one-eighth of one per cent. to two per cent. above par. The premium has been paid into the treasury, and the sums awarded, deposited in specie in the treasury, as fast as it was needed by the wants of the government.

To meet the expenditures for the remainder of the present, and for the next fiscal year, ending on the 30th of June, 1849, a further loan, in aid of the ordinary revenue, will be necessary. Retaining a sufficient surplus in the treasury, the loan required for the remainder of the present fiscal year will be about $18,500,000. If the duty on tea and coffee be imposed, and the graduation of the public land shall be made at an early period of your session, as recommended, the loans for the fiscal year may be reduced to $17,000,000. They may be further reduced, whatever amount of expenitures can be saved by the military contributions collected in Mexico. The most vigorous measures for the augmentation of these contributions have been directed; and a very considerable sum is expected from that source. Its amount cannot, however, be calculated with any certainty. It is recommended that the loans to be made be authorized upon the same terms, which was authorized under the provisions of the act of the 28th of January, 1847.

Should the war with Mexico be continued till the 30th of June, 1849, it is estimated that a further loan of $20,500,000 will be reqired, for the fiscal year ending on that day, in case no duty be imposed on tea and coffee, and the public lands be not reduced and graduated in price, and no military contributions shall be collected in Mexico. If the duty on tea and coffee be imposed, and the lands reduced and graduated, in price, as proposed, the loan may be reduced to $17,000,000; and will be subject to be still further reduced by the amount of the military contributions which may be collected in Mexico. It is not proposed, however to ask Congress for authority to negotiate the loans for the next fiscal year; as it is hoped that the loans asked for the remainder of the present fiscal year, aided by military contributions, which may be collected in Mexico, may be sufficient. If, contrary to my expectations, there shall be a necessity for it, the fact will be communicated to Congress it time, for their action, during the present session. In no event will a sum exceeding $6,000,000 of this amount be needed before the meeting of the session of Congress, of 1848.

The act of July, 1846, reducing the duties on imports, has been in force since the 1st of December last; and I am gratified to state that all the beneficial effects which were anticipated from its operations have been fully realized. The public revenue derived from customs during the year ending 1st of December, 1846, exceeds, by more than $8,000,000, the amount received in the preceeding year, under the act of 1742, and which was superceded by it.—Its effects are visible in the great and almost unexampled prosperity which prevails in almost every branch of business.

While the repeal of the prohibitory and restrictive duties of the act of 1842, and the substitution, in their place, of reasonable revenue rates, levied on articles imported, according to their actual value, has increased the revenue, and augmented our foreign trade. All the great interests have been advanced and promoted; the great and important interests which had been not only too much neglected, but actually taxed by the protective policy, for the benefit of other interests, have been relieved of the burdens which that policy imposed upon them; and our farmers and planters, under the more just and liberal commercial policy, are finding new and profitable markets abroad for their augmented products. Our commerce is rapidly increased, and is extending more widely the circle of international exchanges. Great as has been the increase of our imports of the past year, our exports of domestic products sold at foreign markets, have been still greater.

Our navigation interests is eminently prosperous the number of vessels built in the United states is greater than during any period of equal length.—Large profits have been derived by those who have constructed, as well as by those who have navigated them. Should the ratio of increase, in the number of our Merchant vessels, be progressive, and be as great for the future as during the past year, the time is not distant when our tonage and commercial marine will be larger than that of any other Nation in the world. Whilst the interests of agriculture, of commerce, and of navigation have been enlarged, it is highly gratifying to observe that our manufactures are also in a prosperous condition.

None of the ruinous effects upon these interests, which were apprehended by some, as the result of the operation of the revenue system established by the act of 1847, have been experienced. On the contrary, the number of manufactories, and of the amount of capital invested in them, is rapidly increasing; affording gratifying proof that American enterprise and skill, employed in this branch of domestic industry, with no other advantage than those fairly and incidental accruing from a just system of revenue duties, are abundantly able to meet successfully all competition from abroad, and still derive fair and remunerating profits.

While capital invested in manufactures is yielding adequate and fair profits, under the new system, the wages of labor, whether employed in manufactures, agriculture or navigation, have been augmented.

The toiling millions, whose daily labor furnishes the supplies of food and raiment, for all the necessaries and comforts of life, are receiving wages, and more steady and permanent employment, than in any other country; or in any previous period of our own history.

So successful have been all the branches of our industry that a foreign war, which generally diminishes the resources of a nation, has in no essential degee retarded our onward progress or checked our general prosperity.

With such gratifying evidence of prosperity, and of the successful operation of the revenue act of 1846. every consideration of public policy recommends that it shall remain unchanged. It is hoped that the system of impost duties which it established may be regarded as the permanent policy; and the great interests affected by it may not be again subjected to be injuriously disturbed as they have heretofore been, by frequent and sometimes, sudden changes.

For the purpose of increasing the revenue, and without changing or modifying the rates imposed by the act of 1846 or the dutiable articles embraced in it previous, I again recommend to your favorable consideration, the expediency of levying a revenue duty on tea and coffee. The policy which exempted these articles from duty, during peace, ceases to exist when the country is engaged in war, and requires the use of all its available resources.

It is a tax which would be so generally diffused, that it would be felt oppressively by none; and be complained of by none. It is believed that there is not in the list of imported articles, any which are more properly, the subjects of the war duties.

It is estimated that three millions of dollars would be derived annually from a tax imposed on these articles.

Should Congress avail itself of this additional source of revenue, not only would the amount of public loans, rendered necessary by the war with Mexico, be diminished to that extent, but the public credit and the public confidence, in the ability and determination of the government, to meet all its engagements promptly would be more permanently established; and the reduced amount of the loans which it may be necessary to negotiate, could be obtained at cheaper rates.

Congress, is therefore, called upon to determine whether it is wiser to impose the war duties recommended, or by omitting to do so, increase the public debt annually, three millions of dollars, so long as loans shall be required to prosecute the war, and afterwards provide, in some other form, to pay the semi-annual interest upon, and ultimately to extinguish the principal. If in addition to these duties, Congresss should graduate & reduce the prices of such of the public lands as experience has proved will not command the price placed upon them. by the Government, an additional annual income to the treasury of between half a million and a million of dollars, it is estimated, would be derived from this source. Should both measures receive the sanction of Congress, the annual amount of public debt necessary to be contracted during the continuance of the war would be reduced near four millions of dollars. The duties recommended to be levied on tea and coffee, it is proposed shall be limited in their duration to the end of the war, and until the public debt rendered necessary to be contracted by it shall be discharged. The amount of the public debt to be contracted should be limited to the lowest practicable sum; and should be extinguished as early after the conclusion of the war as the means of the treasury will permit.

With this view, it is recommended that as soon as the war shall be over, all the surplus in the treasury, not needed for other indispensable objects, shall constitute a sinking fund, and be applied to the purchase of the funded debt, and that authority be conferred by law for that purpose.

The act of the 6th of August, 1846, "to establish a warehousing system," has been in operation more than a year, and has proved to be an important auxiliary to the tariff act of 1846, in augmenting the revenue and extending the commerce of the country. Whilst it has tended to enlarge commerce, it has been beneficial to our manufactures, by diminishing forced sales at auction of foreign goods at low prices to raise the duties to be advanced on them, and by checking fluctuations in the market. The system, although sanctioned by the experience of other countries, was entirely new in the United States, and is susceptible of improvement in some of its provisions. The Secretary of the Treasury, upon whom was devolved large discretionary powers in carrying this measure into effect, has collected and is now collecting the practical results of the system in other countries, where it has long been established, and will report at an early period of your session such other regulations suggested by the investigation as may render it still more effective and beneficial.

By the act to "provide for the better organization of the treasury, and for the collection, safe keeping, and disbursement of the public revenue," all banks were discontinued as fiscal agents of the Government, and the paper currency issued by them was no longer permitted to be received in payment of dues.

The Constitutional Treasury created by this act went into operation on the first of January last.—Under the system established by it, the public moneys have been collected, safely kept, and disbursed by the direct agency of officers of the Government in gold and silver, and transfers of large amounts have been made from points of collection to points of disbursement, without loss to the treasury, or injury or inconvenience to the trade of the country.

While the fiscal operations of the Government have been conducted with regularity and ease under this system, it has had a salutary effect in checking and preventing an undue inflation of the paper currency issued by the banks which exist under State charters. Requiring, as it does, all dues to the Government to be paid in gold and silver, its effect is to restrain excessive issues of bank paper by the banks disproportioned to the specie in their vaults, for the reason that they are at all times liable to be called on by the holders of their notes for their redemption, in order to obtain specie for the payment of duties and other public dues. The banks, therefore, must keep their business within prudent limits, and be always in a condition to meet such calls, or run the hazard of being compelled to suspend specie payments, and be thereby discredited. The amount of specie imported into the United States during the last fiscal year was twenty-four million one hundred and twenty-one thousand two hundred and eighty-nine dollars; of which there was retained in the country twenty-two million two hundred and seventy-six thousand one hundred and seventy dollars. Had the former financial system prevailed, and the public moneys been placed on deposite in banks, nearly the whole of this amount would have gone into their vaults, not to be thrown into circulation by them, but to be withheld from the hands of the people as a currency, and made the basis of new and enormous issues of bank paper. A large proportion of the specie imported has been paid into the Treasury for public dues; and after having been, to a great extent, recoined at the mint, has been paid out to the public creditors, and has gone into circulation as a currency among the people. The amount of gold and silver coin now in circulation in the country is larger than at any former period.

The financial system established by the Constitutional Treasury has been, thus far, eminently successful in its operations; and I recommend an adherenee to all its provisions, and especially to that vital provision which wholly separates the Government from all connection with banks, and excludes bank paper from all revenue receipts.

In some of its details, not involving its general principles, the system is defective, and will require modification. These defects, and such amendments as are deemed important, were set forth in the last annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury. These amendments are again recommended to the early and favorable consideration of Congress.

During the past year the coinings of the mint and its branches has exceeded twenty millions of dollars. This has consisted chiefly in converting the coins of foreign countries into American coin.

The largest amount of foreign coin imported has been received at New York; and if a branch mint was established at that city, all the foreign coin received at that port could at once be converted into our own coin, without the expense, risk, and delay of transporting to the mint for that purpose, and the amount recoined would be much larger.

Experience has proved that foreign coin, and especially foreign gold coin, will not circulate extensively as as a currency among the people. The important measures of extending our specie circulation, both of gold and silver, and of diffusing it among the people, can only be effected by converting such foreign coin into American coin. I repeat the recommendation contained in my last annual message for the establishment of a branch of the mint of the United States at the city of New York.

All the public lands which had been surveyed and were ready for market have been proclaimed for sale during the past year. The quantity offered and to be offered for sale, under proclamations issued since the first of January last, amounts to nine million one hundred and thirty-eight thousand five hundred and thirty-one acres. The prosperity of the Western States and Territories in which these lands lie will be advanced by their speedy sale.

By withholding them from market, their growth and increase of population would be retarded, while thousands of our enterprising and meritorious frontier population would be deprived of the opportunity of securing freeholds for themselves and their families. But, in addition to the general considerations which rendered the early sale of these lands proper, it was a leading object at this time to derive as large a sum as possible from this source, and thus diminish, by that amount, the public loan rendered necessary by the existence of a foreign war.

It is estimated that not less than ten millions of acres of the public lands will be surveyed and be in a condition to be proclaimed for sale in 1848.

In my last annual message I presented the reasons which in my judgment, rendered it proper to graduate and reduce the price of such of the public lands as have remained unsold for long periods after they had been offered for sale at public auction.

Many millions of acres of public lands lying within the limits of several of the Western States, have been offered in the market, and been subject to sale at private entry for more than twenty years, and large quantities for more than thirty years, at the lowest price prescribed by the existing laws, and it has been found that they will not command that price. They must remain unsold and uncultivated for an indefinite period, unless the price demanded for them by the Government shall be reduced. No satisfactory reason is perceived why they should be longer held at rates above their real value. At the present period an additional reason exists for adopting the measure recommended. When the country is engaged in a foreign war, and we must necessarily resort to loans, it would seem to be the dictate of wisdom that we should avail ourselves of all our resources, and thus limit the amount of the public indebtedness to the lowest possible sum.

I recommend that the existing laws on the subject of pre-emption rights be amended and modified so as to operate prospectively, and to embrace all who may settle upon the public and make improvements upon them before they are surveyed, as well as afterwards, in all cases where such settlement may be made after the Indian title shall have been extinguished.

If the right of pre-emption be thus extended, it will embrace a large and meritorious class of our citizens. It will increase the number of small freeholders upon our borders, who will be enabled thereby to educate their children and otherwise improve their condition, while they will be found at all times, as they have ever proved themselves to be, in the hour of danger to their country, among our hardiest and best volunteer soldiers, ever ready to tender their services in cases of emergency, and among the last to leave the field as long as an enemy remains to be oncountered. Such a policy will also impress these patriotic pioneer emigrants with deeper feelings of gratitude for the paternal care of their government, when they find their dearest interests secured to them by the permanent laws of the land, and that they are no longer in danger of losing their homes and hard-earned improvements by being brought into competition with a more wealthy class of purchasers at the land sales.

The attention of Congress was invited, at their last and the preceding session, to the importance of establishing a Territorial Government over our possessions in Oregon; and it is to be regretted that there was no legislation on the subject. Our citizens who inhabit that distant region of country are still left without the protection of our laws, or any regularly organized government Before the question of limits and boundaries of the Territory of Oregon was definitely settled, from the necessity of their condition, the inhabitants had established a temporary government of their own. Besides the want of legal authority for continuing such a government, it is wholly inadequate to protect them in their person and property, or to secure to them the enjoyment of the privileges of other citizens, to which they are entitled under the Constitution of the United States. They should have the right of suffrage, be represented in a Territorial Legislature, and by a Delegate in Congress; and possess all the rights and privileges which citizens of other portions of the Territories of the United States have heretofore enjoyed, or may now enjoy.

Our judicial system, revenue laws, laws regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, and the protection of our laws generally, should be extended over them.

In addition to the inhabitants in that Territory who had previously emigrated to it, large numbers of our citizens have followed them during the present year, and it is not doubted that during the next and subsequent years their numbers will be greatly increased.

Congress, at its last session, established post-routes leading to Oregon, and between different points within that Territory, and authorized the establishment of post offices at "Astoria and such other places on the coasts of the Pacific within the territory of the United States, as the public interests may require." Post offices have accordingly been established, deputy postmasters appointed, and provision made for the transportation of the mails.

The preservation of peace with the Indian tribes residing west of the Rocky mountains will render it proper that authority should be given by law for the appointment of an adequate number of Indian agents to reside among them.

I recommend that a surveyor general's office be established in that Territory, and that the public lands be surveyed and brought into market at an early period.

I recommend also that grants, upon liberal terms, of limited quantities of the public lands be made to all citizens of the United States who have emigrated, or may hereafter, within a prescribed period, emigrate, to Oregon and settle upon them. These hardy and adventurous citizens who have encountered the dangers and privations of a long and toilsome journey, and have at length found an abiding-place for themselves and their families upon the utmost verge of our western limits, should be secured in the homes which they have improved by their labor.

I refer you to the accompanying report of the Secretary of War for a detailed account of the operations of the various branches of the public service connected with the Department under his charge. The duties devolving on this Department have been unusually onerous and responsible during the past year, and have been discharged with ability and success.

Pacific relations continue to exist with the various Indian tribes, and most of them manifest a strong friendship for the United States. Some depredations were committed during the past year upon our trains transporting supplies for the army, on the road between the western border of Missouri and Santa Fe. These depredations, which are supposed to have been committed by bands from the region of New Mexico, have been arrested by the presence of a military force ordered out for that purpose. Some outrages have been perpetrated by a portion of the northwestern bands upon the weaker and comparatively defenceless neigboring tribes. Prompt measures were taken to prevent such occurrences in future.

Between one and two thousand Indians, belonging to several tribes, have been removed during the year from the east of the Mississippi to the country allotted to them west of that river, as their permanent home, and arrangements have been made for others to follow.

Since the treaty of 1846 with the Cherokees, the feuds among them appear to have subsided, and they have become more united and contented than they have been for many years past. The commissioners, appointed in pursuance of the act of June twenty-seventh, 1346, to settle claims arising under the treaty of 1835'36 with that tribe, have executed their duties; and, after a patient investigation and a full and fair examination of all the cases brought before them, closed their labors in the month of July last. This is the fourth board of commissioners which has been organized under this treaty. Ample opportunity has been afforded to all those interested to bring forward their claims. No doubt is entertained that impartial justice has been by the late board, and that all valid claims embraced by the treaty have been considered and allowed. This result, and the final settlement to be made with this tribe, under the treaty of 1846, which will be completed and laid before you during your session, will adjust all questions of controversy between them and the United States, and produce a state of relations with them, simple, well-defined and satisfactory.

Under the discretionary authority conferred by the act of the 3d of March last, the annuities due to the various tribes have been paid during the present year to heads of families instead of to their chiefs, or such persons as they might designate, as required by the laws previously existing. This mode of papment has given general satisfaction to the great body of the Indians. Justice has been done to them and they are grateful to the Government for it. A few chiefs and interested persons may object to this mode of payment, but it is believed to be the only mode of preventing fraud and imposition from being practiced upon the great body of common Indians, constituting a majority of all the tribes.

It is gratifying to perceive that a number of the tribes have recently manifested an increased interest in the establishment of schools among them, and are making rapid advances in agriculture—some of them producing a sufficient quantity of food for their support, and in some cases a surplus to dispose of to their neighbors. The comforts by which those who have received even a very limited education, and have engaged in agriculture, are surrounded, tend generally to draw off their less civilized brethren from the precarious means of subsistence by the chase to habits of labor and civization.

The accompanying report of the Secretary of the Navy presents a satisfactory and gratifying account of the condition and operations of the naval service during the past year. Our commerce has been pursued with increased activity, and with safely and success, in every quarter of the globe, under the protection of our flag, which the navy has caused to be respected in the most distant seas.

In the Gulf of Mexico and in the Pacific the officers and men of our squadrons have displayed distinguished gallantry and performed valuable services. In the early stages of the war with Mexico her ports and both coasts were blockaded, and more recently many of them have been captured and held by the navy. When acting in co-operation with the land forces the naval officers and men have performed gallant and distinguished services on land as well as on water and deserve the high commendation of the country.

While other maritime powers are adding to their navies large numbers of war steamers, it was a wise policy on our part to make similar additions to our navy. The four war steamers authorized by the act of the third of March, 1847 are in the course of construction.

In addition to the four war steamers authorized by this act the Secretary of the Navy, has in pursuance of its provisions, entered into contracts for the construction of five steamers, to be employed in the transportation of the United States mail "from New York to New Orleans, touching at Charleston, Savannah and Havana, and from Havana to Chagres;" for three steamers to be employed in like manner from Panama to Oregon "so as to connect with the mail from Havana to Chagres across the isthmus;" and for five steamers to be employed in like manner from New York to Liverpool. These steamers will be the property of the contractors, but are to be built "under the superintendence and direction of a naval constructor in the employ of the Navy department, and to be so constructed as to render them convertible at the least possible expense into war steamers of the first class."

A prescribed number of naval officers, as well as a post office agent, are to be on board of them and authority is reserved to the Navy Department at all times to exercise control over said steamships, "to have the right to take them for the exclusive use and service of the United States upon making proper compensation to the contractors therefor.

Whilst these steamships will be employed in transporting the mails of the United States coastwise and to foreign countries, upon an annual compensation to be paid to the owners, they will be always ready, upon an emergency requiring it, to be converted into war steamers; and the right reserved to take them for the public use will add greatly to the efficiency and strength of this description of our naval force. To the steamers thus authorized under contracts made by the Secretary of the Navy, should be addod five other steamers authorized under contracts made in pursuance of law by the Postmaster General, making an addition, in the whole, of eighteen war steamers, subject to be taken for public use. As further contracts for the transportion of the mail to foreign countries may be authorized by Congress the number may be enlarged indefinitely.

The enlightened policy by which rapid communication with the various distant parts of the globe is established, by means of American-built sea steamers, would find an ample reward in the increase of our commerce, and in making our country and its resources more favorably known abroad; but the national advantage is still greater of having our naval officers made familiar with steam navigation; and of having the privilege of taking the ships already equipped for immediate service at a moment's notice, and will be cheaply purchased by the compensation to be paid for the transportation of the mail in them, over and above the postage received.

A just national pride, no less than our commercial interests, would seem to favor the policy of augmenting the number of this description of vessels. They can be built in our country cheaper and in greater numbers than in any other in the world.

I refer you to the accompanying report of the Postmaster General for a detailed and satisfactory account of the condition and operations of that Department during the past year. It is gratifying to find that, within so short a period after the reduction in the rates of postage, and notwithstanding the great increase of mail service, the revenue received for the year will be sufficient to defray all the expenses, and that no further aid will be required from the Treasury for that purpose.

The first of the American mail steamers authorised by the act of the third of March, 1845, was completed and entered upon the service on the first of June last, and is now on her third voyage to Bremen and other intermediate ports. The other vessels authorised under the provisions of that act are in course of construction, and will be put upon the line as soon as completed. Contracts have also been made for the transportation of the mail in a steamer from Charleston to Havana.

A reciprocal and satisfactory postal arrangement has been made by the Postmaster General with the authorities of Bremen, and no difficulty is apprehended in making similar arrangements with all other Powers with which we may have communications by mail steamers, except with Great Britain

On the arrival of the first of the American steamers, bound to Bremen, at Southampton, in the month of June last, the British post office directed the collection of discriminating postages on all letters and other mailable matter which she took out to Great Britain, or which went into the British post office on their way to France, and other parts of Europe. The effect of the order of the British post office is to subject all letters and other matter transported by American steamers to double postage, one postage having been previously paid on them to the United States, while letters transported in British steamers are subject to pay a single postage. This measure was adopted with the avowed object of pretecting the British line of mail steamers now running between Boston and Liverpool, and, if permitted to continue, must speedily put an end to the transportation of all letters and other matter by American steamers, and give to British steamers a monopoly of the business. A just and fair reciprocity is all that we desire, and on this we must insist. By our laws, no such discrimination is made against British steamers bringing letters into our ports, but all letters arriving in the United States are subject to the same rate of postage, whether brought in British or American vessels. I refer you to the report of the Postmaster General for a full statement of the fact of the case, and of the steps taken by him to correct this inequality. He has exerted all the power conferred upon him by the existing laws.

The Minister of the United States at London has brought the subject to the attention of the British Government, and is now engaged in negotiation for the purpose of adjusting reciprocal postal arrangements which shall be equally just to both countries. Should he fail in concluding such arragements, and should Great Britain insist on entering the unequal and unjust measure she has adopted, it will become necessary to confer additional powers on the Postmaster General, in order to enable him to meet the emergency, and to put our own steamers on an equal footing with British steamers engaged in transporting the mail between the two countries; and I recommend that such powers be conferred.

In view of the existing state of our country, I trust it may not be inappropriate, in closing this communication, to call to mind the words of wisdom and admonition of the first and most illustrious of my predecessors, in his farewell address to his countrymen.

The greatest and best of men, who served his country so long, and loved it so much, foresaw, with 'serious concern,' the danger to our Union "of characterizing parties by geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern, Atlantic and Western—whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views," and warned his countrymen against it.

So deep and solemn was a conviction of the importance of the Union, and of preserving harmony between its different parts, that he declared to his countrymen in that address, "It is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of national union to your collective and individual happiness; that you should cherish a cordial, habitual, and immoveable attachment to it; accustoming yourselves to think and to speak of it as a palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned; and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the various parts."

After the lapse of half a century these admonitions of Washington fall upon us with all the force of truth. It is difficult to estimate the "immense value" of our glorious Union of confederated States, to which we are so much indebted for our growth in population and wealth, and for all that constitutes us a great and a happy nation. How unimportant are all our differences of opinion upon minor questions of public policy, compared with its preservation?—and how scrupulously should we avoid all agitating topics which may tend to distract and divide us into contending parties, separated by geographical lines, whereby it may be weakened or endangered.

Invoking the blessing of the Almighty Ruler of the Universe upon your deliberations, it will be my highest duty, no less than my sincere pleasure, to co-operate with you in all measures, which may tend to promote the honor and enduring welfare of our common country.

JAMES K. POLK.

WASHINGTON, Dec., 1847.

Horse radish may be kept during the winter by grating it while green and corking it up tight in bottles filled with vinegar.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Gentlemen of the Senate
and House of Representatives:

I rejoice that our domestic affairs afford, at our present meeting, so much cause of mutual congratulation and profound gratitude to the great Author of all Good. Whilst pestilence and famine have wasted the Eastern Hemisphere, health and plenty have smiled in all our borders. Labor, throughout its manifold departments, has prospered and brought a rich reward. Learning, benevolence and religion, have thrown their roots wider and deeper into the foundations of the social system. Temperance has extended, still more, her besign influence over the erring & the lost; and as a consequence, general good order has prevailed, and crimes have diminished thro'out the State.

During the year that is past, the several deparments of the State Government have discharged their respective duties with faithfulness and success, as will, in due time, appear from their reports.

As the very circumstancial and able communication of the Auditor will immediately be laid before you, showing our revenues to be in a highly prosperous condition, I shall content myself with the following brief statement of the receipts and disbursements of the fiscal year ending on the 15th day of November, 1847.

RECEIPTS.

General revenue received from taxes levied on grand list, and incidental items during the fiscal year 1847,	$1,202,528 47
Tolls and dividends received upon canals, turnpikes and public works of State	827,641 85
Tax upon Banks, Iusurance and Bridge Componies	41,648 52
Surplus revenue principal repaid by the counties	101,835 48
Interest on Surplus revenue paid by counties to common school found	86,379 06
Receipts for canal lands sold, and other items	53,942 40
Total payments into the treasury applicable to the annual expenses of the State Government and Institutions, repairs of Public works, payment of interest on the State Debt, and to the sinking fund	$2,314,075,78

DISBURSEMENTS.

Paid upon appropriations for support of State Government and State Institutions, during the year 1847	$210,250 42
Paid for support of common schools	201,319 31
Interest upon state debt, foreign and domestic, including exchange & expenses paid	1,175,117 51
Repairs and contingent expenses upon public works	317,568 13
Amount of payments for the ordinary annual expeditures of the State during the year	$1,904,255 37
Balance, being surplus applicable to payment of the temporary and funded debt of the State	$409,820 41
In addition to the above, there has been paid into the treasury, on account of shool lands and other trust funds and proceeds of loans and bonds issued, the sum of	$237,145 26
Payments have been made from these funds to the amount of	118,341 01
Leaving the balance of receipts of the trust funds over the disbursements,	$118,804 25

Domestic Bonds to the amount of $119,883 73 have been redeemed during the year 1847, at the treasury.

The total amount of the balances of the several funds in the treasury at the fiscal year, on the 15th day of November, 1847, was $484,281 70.

This cheering epitome of the fiscal affairs of the State, and the highly prosperous condition of all her industrial interests, indicates the present as the long-looked for and auspicious period to begin efficiently the payment of her debts. And I accordingly earnestly recommend, that the Sinking Fund be increased from twenty-five thousand to not less than two hundred thousand dollars per annum.

Our new Revenue Law, so much for a time misunderstood, commending itself by its wisdom, fairness and efficacy, to the deliberate judgement and integrity of the determined, faith-sustaining, and debt-paying people of Ohio, has at length fairly lived down all opposition. It has equalized our burdens, filled our treasury, and sustained our credit on a proud eminance amongst the States and nations of the earth.

The act to incorporate the State Bank of Ohio and other Banking Institutions, has thus far, realized the expectations of its framers, It has gone very generally into operation, dispensing throughout every district of the State, those facilities which the exigencies of modern commerce demands, affording to the people a convenient, sound and convertible currency, and paying more than its equal share of the taxes of the State.

The amount received from sales of Canal lands during the year proves the wisdom of the law recommended and passed last winter, making a deduction of one-third in favor of actual settlers, and limiting the sales to not more than one hundred and sixty acres to any one individual.

The Legislature of Virginia promptly met the proposition of the last General Assembly of the state of Ohio for the settlement, by compact, of the questions of boundary, and also of the use, navigation, and jurisdiction of, and over the Ohio river, by the passage of joint resolutions corresponding with ours. In pursance of these resolutions, the Governor of Virginia has appointed William C. Rives, William Green, and G. W. Thompson, commissioners one the part of Virginia, who are to meet Thomas Ewing, Alfred Kelley, and John Brough, commissioners by me named on the part of Ohio, at Washington city, on the first Monday in January next. It is hoped that the Legislature of Kentucky may, at an early period of its present session, act on the subject, so that commissioners on behalf of that State and this may meet at the same time and place.

In organizing the three Regiments of Volunteers for the Mexican War last year, the State incurred a liability of more than thirty thousand dollars, a considerable portion of which remains as yet unpaid by the United States Government, as will more fully appear by the report of the Quartermaster General. Two other Regiments, being the fourth and fifth of Infantry, and one company of Calvary, have this year volunteered and are now in Mexico. In the organization of these latter troops, I did not consider myself either authorized or called upon to expend large sums of money, first, because Congress had made liberal appropriations for the support of the army, which were under the control of the President, and the Legislature of Ohio had not, for that purpose, placed funds at my disposal; and, secondly, because the requisition itself contained the following clause: "The proper officers of the Staff Departments will be immediately sent to the place of rendezvous, with funds to defray the necessary expenses, which may be incurred agreeably to law."

The Asylums for lunatics, for the blind, and for the deaf and dumb, have all been managed, by their respective superintendents and officers, with distinguished ability and success, every way worthy of the high character which they have attained, and of the lustre which they have shed on the good name of the State; I cheerfully commend them to your continued patronage.

The mild yet firm discipline administered by the Warden and officers of the Penitentiary, and the moral and religious instrumentalities brought into requisition, including the largely increased library for the use of the convicts, collected by the Rev. Mr. Finley, are exercising, I trust, a wholesome influence upon their character. No duty intrusted to government is more difficult of execution than that of the punishment of crime. The great object to be kept in view is, the protection of society, by the confinement and especially by the reformation of the criminals, in suchmanner as shall at once defray all expenses and train the convicts to habits of industry; not forgetting, though fallen, and they are yet men, with minds to be enlightened and hearts to be animated by the lessons of morality and religion. Is it not true that we have directed our attention too much to the financial view alone of this great governmental obligation? Having succeeded in making the Penitentiary defray its own expenses, aid in erecting other itstitutions, and pay a balance into the treasury, have we not overlooked the nature of the contracts by which the convicts have been hired out and transferred from hand to hand; and have we not, in some respects, forgotten what is due to their minds and bodies? May it not well be questioned whether unremitting and unrequitted toil, from early dawn till night, under the eye of the interested task-master, without an hour to read by day or light to read at night, constitutes the great road to moral reformation? Is it right to continue in the hands of one individual a monopoly of between two and three hundred laboring men, at only thirty-three cents per day, boarding, lodging, and workshops found? Is it just to keep up that monopoly at that price in competition with the honest mechanics of the State? Is it to be tolerated that such a contract is claimed to be perpetual.

I submit to your deliberate judgement whether the Warden of the Penitentiary had power, either by virtue of his office, or by any legal enactment to limit or control legislation, by any such perpetual contract, and whether the General Assembly has not undoubted right, in the exercise of its discretion, to abolish the penitentiary system entirely, or to adopt solitary confinement, either in whole or in part; or, if they find the present system detrimental to the industrial concerns of the State, whether, from the nature of government and the terms of the contracts themselves, they may not employ either the whole or a part of the convicts at the public buildings.

And I would further submit to the wisdom of the Legislature, whether the work on the State House ought not to be immediately and earnestly resumed; and whether convict labor ought not to be withdrawn from avocations injurious to mechanical pursuits & directed to this necessary object, taking care, in its gradual withdrawal, to work no injury to any just rights of contractors. And if by this direction to the labor of the prison, or a portion of it, appropriations become necessary to pay for the stone quarry purchased, and to support the institution, whether they should not be made. Is it not better to do that than either to hire out convicts at thirty-three cents per day, and employ other laborers to do the same work at one dollar and fifty cents per day; or to suffer the foundation laid, and materials provided for the State House, as well as all our archives, to go to ruin.

The National Government having for the time being at least, abandoned our lakes and rivers and directed all the energy and resources of the nation to a war of foreign conquest, it becomes the more important, especially as it is the settled policy of the State of Ohio not to increase her debt but to pay it off, that all proper encouragement should be given to such organizations as will bring the private enterprise of the country to bear on its physical improvement. The great lines of Railroads extending from Boston New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore towards Buffalo, Dunkirk, Pittsburg and Wheeling must all, in two or more concentrated chains, cross the State of Ohio, at right angles with our canals and railroads, from Toledo, Sandusky and Cleveland, to the Ohio river, and connect with other roads soon to be completed to the Mississippi river at Galena, Quincy, Alton and St. Louis. In all truly democratic governments where the policy of the law is to distribute, not to concentrate estates, and where there are, consequently, few rich men; associated wealth and effort become indispensible to the accomplishment of great enterprises. It is thus that corporations emanate from and exist as the efficient instrumentalities of Republican Institutions, and are multiplied in direct proportion to the enterprise and freedom of states and nations.

For these amongst many other reasons, I would recommend the passage of a more efficient general law incorporating manufacturing companies with proper limitations. To call into active use dormant capital, to build up manufactures, to aid young men of small means to begin business, create for the husbandman a market at his own deer to develop the resources of the State and to repress emigration from it, the tendency of such a law is not only obvious but sanctioned by the experience of Massachusetts and other states.

Permit me also to recommend, that the law regulating interest may be so modified as to permit parties to contract for any rate not exceeding a certain limit to be fixed by the Legislature, leaving the law as it now is, in all cases wherein no contract has been made in relation to interest. Capital now bears its equal burden of taxation reducing interest in some places below five per cent. It is necessary to the prosperity of a state as well as labor, and no wise legislator will make war upon it. Contracts as high as ten per cent, are made every day in defiance of the law as it stands. Honest men fulfill and others less scrupulous, retreat behind the law and disregard them.—Some reasonable modification, instead of banishing capital, as the present law does to other states tolerating a higher rate of interest, would invite it amongst us, and thus by competition diminish rather than increase the rate of interest.

It is matter of rejoicing to every lover of enlightenment and freedom, that the cause of education, in all its departments, was never more prosperous than during the past year. The common school system is firmly established in the habits and affections of the people, and though falling in many things short of the hopes of the patriot and philanthropist, fully partakes of the progressive spirit of the age, and will not, in the end, fall short of its high destiny, the universal diffusion of useful knowledge. It needs no recommendation of mine to command your cordial and continued support.

Next to the cause of universal education, the speedy and efficient administration of justice deserves your attention. The population and business of Hamilton, Cuyahoga, and perhaps other counties, are so rapidly increasing, and have indeed already grown so large, as to render it impossible for the existing courts of jutice to decide all the causes accumulating upon their dockets. Some additional courts such as the legislature may in the exercise of its constitutional powers see fit to organize, have become indispens able.

One of the most important duties necessarily devolving upon the present session of the General Assembly, is the quadrennial appointment of the State, and as no right is dearer to a freeman than that of equal representation, I rest assured that you will meet this fundamental trust with all that spirit of deliberation, candor and fairness toward all parties and every district of the State, which its delicacy and proper performance demand.

The people of Ohio are so largely interested in the easy transportation of her bulky agricultural products to market, that it becomes the duty of her executive and legislative departments to speak in language not to be misunderstood, as to the obligation of the general government to aid in the development of those great lines of internal communication which the inventive genius and irresistible energy of the age are giving to the world. If there be any one question in relation to which more than another the people of the whole Union are united as the voice of one man, it is as to the duty of Congress to improve our great lakes and rivers so as to afford safe and cheap inland navigation and transportation. Not intending thereby to exclude other equally important objects in our own State and elsewhere, let us direct our attention to certain local

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 12. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, DECEMBER 23, 1847. WHOLE NO. 428.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

WINTER.

The frost-crowned Monarch of the year has come,
And sways his icy sceptre o'er the land,
His freezing glance strikes all creation dumb,
From the huge mountain, to the smallest sand,
All Nature bows unto his stern command!
Even Old Erie, whose bright waters roll
As if in mockery, must tamely stand,
A crystal bridge on which he walks; no toll,
Nor tribute, does he pay—The world's at his control.

And men, nay, even Monarchs on their throne,
Tremble at his approach. They quake with fear
When they behold him, from the friged zone,
Mounted upon the northern blast appear.
But not for these, can fall the Poets tear,
While thousands, whom their tyranny oppress,
Are left, uncared for, in their hovels drear,
Till, in their madness, they are doom'd to bless
The tempest, & the storm, that ends their wretchedness.

'Tis thus," man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn"—Oh, Albion!
How can your Peers, without a shudder scan,
The dire effects of tyranny upon
The Sons of Ireland? O! is there not one
To lift his voice for the oppressed? In vain
We listen for reply—alas! there's none.
And yet each blast, that blows across the main,
Brings to our ears the cries of starving want again.

Hark! 'tis the cry of children in distress,
Or, lo! the strong man has become a child;
The infant still, sucks its dead mothers breast;
The Fairest daughter roams in madness wild!
The boldest brother met his fate, and smiled!
In the last moments of his life; for he
Had cherished though ts of death.—E'en from a child
His fondest wish to see his country free!
Despair, made death, more sweet than chains and infamy.

To see a noble heart, thus sear'd and broken,
Makes the warm current in my veins run chill!—
If there's a God above, (with awe 'tis spoken)
The cry of violence will reach his hill:
With indignation he will surely fill
His blasting vials; and will quickly rain
Destruction on oppression's head! He will
Not, very long see proud oppression reign;
Nor hear the widow, and the orphan, plead in vain.

America! my home! I turn to thee!
Here the rude blasts of winter cannot harm—
Each mountain, hill, rock and tall forest tree,
Serves as a shield to keep thy freemen warm.
Who heeds the frost, or rain, or winter's storm,
Through the vast length and breadth of thy domain?
Or who has seen lank famine's dismal form
With rapid strides pass o'er thy fertile plain?
Here Plenty spreads her lap—we feast and feast again!

Here the poor exile finds a safe retreat,
When driven from his own dear native land;
A kindred spirit, here, will always greet,
The weary Alien, with an outstretched had,
And he, may soon become, one of the band,
Or brotherhood, of his adopted home,
And, in his turn extend a helping hand,
To some poor wretch, like him compelled to roam,
And, lo! Europe has found it out--they come! they come!!

Putnam, Dec. 10, 1847. LOUIS.

Western Sketches.

Written for the Western Recorder.

HISTORICAL REMINISCENCES OF THE WAR OF 1812.

NO. I.

Mr. Editor: I feel much reluctance to appear again in your paper as a writer of historical notes, because of my deficiency in literary acquirements, but the attempts which have been made, and are now making, to give the public a history of Ohio, seems to call for all the information that it is possible to rescue from the oblivion which time must soon cast over many historical facts, unless those who were actors, or cognizant of the transactions, will in some way give them a record. My attention has ben called to this subject by seeing in the "History of Ohio," by Caleb Atwater, and "Historical Collections of Ohio," by Henry Howe, much of error in regard to the early history of the war of 1812, in the north-west part of Ohio; more especially some transactions of that part of the Militia under General E. W. Tupper, in which Brigade, I served my tour of duty: I have thought it best to give you my recollections, with a request that you will if you think best to publish it in your paper, forward to the Historical Society of Cincinnati, & to Mr. Howe a copy of the papers containing these notes, that they may use them as they think best. In Mr. Atwater's Book, pp. 197–8 and 9, is an account almost wholly erroneous.—In Nr. Howe's Collections the errors are almost wholly in those parts, extracted from some other writer. Under the head "Clinton County" in a notice of Capt. Hinkson: and other notices of the operations of the army in Wood county, &c., &c. I do not propose to point out all the errors, or give a history of all the transactions on our north-western frontier, but to give some historical facts, in a continuous narrative, of those things with which I was acquainted.

It will be recollected, that early in the summer of 1812, three regiments of volunteers were raised in Ohio, previous to the declaration of war: one commanded by General Findley of Cincinnati, a Major General in the Militia; one by Duncan McAuthur of Chilicothe, also a Major General; and one by Lewis Cass of Zanesville, a Brigadier General. These gentlemen took Colonel's commissions, under the law of the United States, holding on still to their commissions in Militia.—These regiments with the 4th regiment of United States troops, which had been out with Harrison at the batle of Tippecanoe, composed the principal part of General Hull's command, and were marched from Urbana, through the (then) wilderness, to the rapids of the Maumee of the lake; cutting as they went a road, afterwards known as "Hull's route"—from there to Detroit, a road was already defined, and made passable. After the declaration of war, Hull invaded Canada, with the view of taking the British fort of Malden, near the outlet of Detroit river. He was driven back by the British and Indians, and his communication with Ohio cut off. A company of volunteers from Chilicothe undertook to escort provisions to Detroit, for the army, which was hemmed in by the British and Indians.—They reached the river Raisen, where they were obliged to halt; and an attempt to open the communication by Hull, brought on the battle of Brownstown, by Colonel Miller. The manifest weakness of Hull's command, led the Government to call on Governor Meigs for Militia, and General Tupper was ordered, first to Chilicothe, and afterwards to Urbana to take the command of the forces, collecting, to re-enforce Hull.—General Tupper was the oldest Brigadier General in the State, and if he had reached Hull's army, would have been placed in command over the three Colonels from Ohio, already there.—Governor Meigs had been his intimate acquaintance, from the first settlement of Ohio, and well knew his energy and capacity for that station, so that duty & his individual preference were combined in the choice. While General Tupper with three companies from his own Brigade were on the march to Urbana, the news of Hull's surrender was received. This was in August. The three companies were two from Gallia; commanded by Captain Calvin Shephard, of Infantry; and Captain Isaac Buler, of Rifles; from Athens, a company under the command of Captain Gregory. When I joined General Tupper, about the 19th of August, (from Washington co. then a part of General Tupper's Brigade,) these were quartered in vacant houses in Urbana.—Governor Meigs was there, to superintend the organization. Not a tent, or any kind of camp equipage was to be had. The arms were such as the men had brought from home. The frontier settlements were alarmed;—the refugees from about the rapids of the Maumee were endeavoring to reach the settlements in Champaign county, then the border settlements. Many of the Indians in Ohio had joined the British, and the people were distrustful of those who remained friendly; so that Governor Meigs had a double duty; to protect, and re-ensure the border settlers, and to keep evil disposed persons from attacking or murdering the friendly Indians.—Great distrust, and jealousy, was manifested towards Governor Meigs, and all others who evinced a disposition to protect the Indians; and, one attempt was made to poison Governor Meigs; and several to slay Indians who visited Urbana, at his request. So that it was a time of great trial and difficulty. Governor Meigs met the emergency with firmness, seconded by General Tupper in his efforts.

Governor Meigs had with him at Urbana a part of a company of Horse from Zanesville under Captain Pierce, who had been ordered out as an escort, while he was holding a council at Piqua with the Indians, previously. This part of a company were kept constantly on duty on Hull's road, picking up, and helping in, those who were fleeing from the settlements on the Maumee; and in bringing such intelligence as they would glean from them, as to the British and Indians.—(Captain Pierce with his company was afterwards at the battle with the Indians at the Mississiniway towns—and the Captain commanding one of the guards was killed in the early part of the action.) The Indians soon after the surrender of Hull, besieged Fort Wayne. A mounted expedition was got up to relieve it, one company belonging to General Tupper's command (from Deer Creek on the Scioto,) were of the forces sent on that occasion; and this siege was the cause of the calling out of General Harrison to the command of the Kentucky Brigade. Three or four regiments had been called for from that State, and they hastened their march under the command of General Harrison, to relieve that place, but the mounted men effected the object before they reached Fort Wayne. A part of the Shawnee Indians under Captain Lewis, and Logan, were the first to reach the Fort; but the hostile Indians had fled on the approach of the mounted men, and no action took place. As the origin of the subsequent defeat of General Winchester, is to be found in transactions about this time, I will give a short history of it. General Winchester, an officer of the regular army, being in Kentucky, when the Kentucky quota was marching through Ohio repaired to Fort Wayne, and assumed the command over Harrison acting as a Brigadier General from Kentucky;—General Harrison threw up his commission in disgust, but the Governor of Kentucky appointed him a Major General, that he might outrank Winchester; and, the General Government learning the great preference, that the western troops had for General Harrison, appointed him a Brigadier General and gave him command of all the troops raised, or to be raised on this frontier. He now returned to his former command, but Winchester had in the meantime moved the Kentucky troops down the river to Fort Defiance, in the forks of the Maumee. His dissatisfaction at being placed under General Harrison, was manifested subsequently. General Tupper had gone on to the St. Mary's to procure some topsail duck, deposited there for the Indians, but they not having come in to receive their yearly presents, it remained there. General Tupper wished to get it to make tents for his men. He there met General Harrison, who having planned a secret, mounted expedition, designed to reach Detroit, concerted his plans with General Tupper, and ordered him to repair to Defiance to take command. General Tupper returned to Urbana, explained to Governor Meigs the necessity of his absence, made his arrangements, and taking with him but one man (Dr. Jewet of Athens, repaired to Defiance to meet General Harrison and receive his final instructions. The mounted volunteers collected rapidly, but it was found necessary to delay to obtain provisions and ammunition. General Harrison's duties requiring his presence elsewhere, gave in charge to General Winchester to supply General Tupper's command with provisions and ammunition, as early as possible and left there.

HORACE NYE.

Putnam, Ohio, Dec. 15, 1847.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Natural Bridge of Illinois.

The Natural Bridge of Illinois is situated in Jackson county, on the south side of muddy river about seven and a half miles south west of the new town of Murfreesborough. It is thrown across the bed of the rivulet from perfect buttresses of nearly equal size, worn out of the rock by the water, as smooth as if cut by a chisel. The bridge is a solid block of limestone, eighty-four feet in the span of the arch from buttress to buttress, twenty-two feet above the bed of the stream fifteen feet wide, seven feet thick in the centre, about twelve feet thick at the ends resting upon the two buttresses. The appearance of the whole is that of a modern stone bridge, except that the north end is a little lower than the other though the inclination is not more than two and a half feet in its length on the top. This is one hundred and twenty feet long, and firmly and conveniently set into the opposite banks, and over which is a good road for horses.

The bridge is only about forty feet from the ledge of rocks before named, runs paralel to its base, and both looked upon together reminds one of some ancient castle with its draw bridge. Large oaks and poplars are growing upon the bridge and on the top of the ledge, while the deep tangled undergrowth gives to the whole scene an air of strange mystery. The county is volcanic; the bed of the stream is several hundred feet above the bed of the Mississippi and has the appearance of--the river is lost at the base of the ledge, it is evident that once a river cut out and ran under that bridge, and that in a shock of nature, that the ledge was thrown up to intercept its channel while the whole country being elevated by the earthquake, took its present astonishing condition.—Prairie Argus.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Commentators vs. Anti-Commentators.

NO II.

Let us turn our attention more directly to those who, in their professed wisdom, repudiate the use of commentaries. Here we might inquire, are they more wise, less bigoted, possessed of more charity and peace in the Holy Ghost, than those who apply to such sources for wisdom? Are they less contentious, more liberal in their views of theology, less dogmatical and intolerant? Far from it. And yet these individuals, if you should be so unfortunate as to get into a controversy with them, as we have seen, will advance their own opinions—their comments—on the word of God, with far greater assurance than the most learned and pious men. However, it is the nature of ignorance to assume a brazen front. Many of them scarcely knowing "who was the father of Zebedee's children," set themselves up as correct expounders of the sacred oracles! Ignorant of the first rudiments of the English language, they will talk learnedly of certain Latin technicalities! O, yes; and yet they repudiate commentaries!

These individuals seldom become convinced by argument; still they are generally engaged in controversy. Meet them where you will—in the streets, by the fire-side, or at public gatherings, they are always primed for debates. It is the air they breathe—the pabulum of their existence as a sect. Without controversy they die. There is no inward life, no experimental christianity, no Holy Ghost, to give vitality to their system, and to cheer their hearts.

In our peregrinations through the country, however, we saw one of these individuals fairly driven from the field, and by a method that is worthy of adoption—the introduction of practical christianity. So soon as he had opened his battery, the Brother to whom he was addressing his remarks replied: "Yes, brother, that all may be true, but it is a point in controversy. But one thing we are assured of—that the love of God shed abroad in the heart, cheers the soul, purifies the affections, and elevates the man. It is sweet to obtain forgiveness of sin, enjoy the smiles of Heaven, and walk all the day long in the light of God's countenance. Here, I hope, we mutually agree?" And in this pleasant strain he continued for some time, when he was suddenly interrupted by the reply: "I don't believe in your doctrine of getting religion; I believe in doing religion;" yielding the controversy at the same time. Some of this class dread the subject of practical christianity as they do a rattlesnake.

In the destructive career of Millerism, which left spiritual ruin and desolation in its march, the above spirit was, also, abundantly manifested. The large majority became denunciators of commentaries, and works of learned men, except when they coincided with them in opinion! Generally, wherever this doctrine prevailed, the cry was: "Away with your opinions of men! Let us have the Word, the Word!" And yet the works of Miller, Storrs, Himes & Co., were anxiously purchased and their sentiments adopted, without any qualms of conscience about the opinions of men! We have heard men of but very ordinary minds giving their views of some of the most sublime passages of the Bible?—passages that have puzzled the wisest commentators. We have heard them, with the utmost familiarity, attempt to explain deep hidden prophesies, and unravel the mysteries of futurity. Well may the poet exclaim, that,

"Fools rush in Where angels dare not gaze!"

And what was the result of all this? They became intolerant in their bearings and opinions, wise in their own conceit, and presumptive. Assuming the prerogative of Heaven, they consigned to eternal misery every individual who could not believe in the second advent of Christ on the ——— of April. No difference however upright and godly; all but the followers of Miller & Co., were children of the Devil. What presumption and bigotry. Well would it have been for them if they had frequently thought of the words of Pope:

Let not this vain, presumptious hand
Presume thy bolts to throw;
And deal damnation round the land,
On each I judge thy foe!

We now present the reader with two specimens of self-interpretation, by men of the above opinions. Our apology for introducing them here is, notwithstanding their absurdity, they forcibly illustrate and prove the position we have assumed.

The writer once assisted in the organization of a Theological Debating Society. The majority were Second Adventists. At the commencement of the Society, each member was allowed the privilege of reading extracts from any work relative to the topic under discussion. But shortly our Adventist brethren found this would not answer. Their peculiar views were overwhelmed with the opinions of the learned; and therefore they excluded all such works. One evening a member, on M. D. by the way, warmed up by the idea of a speedy fulfilment of all prophecy, remarked, while addressing the Society on this subject, that he had observed the triumphant fulfillment of one of the most beautiful prophecies in the Old Testamen. He alluded to the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, where it is said, referring to the peaceable kingdom of Christ: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them." "Now, Mr. Chairman," he continued, "I was lately in a menagerie, and there, sir, to my astonishment I beheld the most ferocious animals subject to the will of man; and creatures, posessed of enirely opposite natures, dwelling together in peace and harmony. Surely this is an indication of the latter days."

The third and fourth verses of the second chapter of Nahum read thus: "The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir tree shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."

"It is astonishing, my hearers," said another Adventist from the pulpit, "how the keen vision of the prophet penetrated into the dim obscurity of coming centuries, and pencilled, by Divine inspiration, the deep and exciting scenes, and one of the most wonderful inventions of modern times. How accurate his description, how faithful his delineation! Here we have brought to view that fire eating monster, the locomotive, with the 'valiant men in scarlet,' the engineers and fire tenders, with the 'chariots,' or cars, that 'rage in the streets,' that 'justle one against the other in the broadways.' And as the mad, ripping, snorting locomotives streak it along their iron pathways, surely they seem like 'torches,' they 'run like the lightnings;' & the 'trees are mightly shaken by the woodman's axe, for fuel for the monsters!'

It is enough. Here we lay down our pen. Let us endeavor reader, to avoid such fallacious interpretations as the above; avoid dogmatism and bigotry; apply to the fountain of heavenly wisdom for knowledge; and never get so high in our own estimation, as to be above searching the records of the wise.

ANON.

Solitudinarian Cabin, Nov. 1847.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Scraps from my Port-Folio.

BY "PHILOM."

V.

Men speak familiarly of that which they term the course, or, constitution of nature—of the laws of nature; and of the latter as being, in some sense, which they cannot express, the efficient cause of those effects which they see invariously resulting from their presence and operation. Now, men may, and it is an undisputed fact that men often do, speak positively of things which they do not clearly understand,—of which they possess no distinctly and well-defined idea. We would ask, what is this course of nature of which skeptics speak so eloquently? What are those laws of which they discourse so proudly? By the term course, as used in this connexion, and by those with whom it is a favorite, we are to understand a regular, unbroken series of actions, events, or occurrences: either, necessarily connected with and dependent upon each other, thereby alternately assuming the relation of both effect and cause—effect to that which precedes—& cause to that which follows; or, having no other connexion than that of constant succession. The former is the theory of Spinoza—the latter the creed of Hume. By the term law we understand an expression of the will of a superior being; which expression may be direct, or, indirect: i. e. by positive revelation, or, by significant action. Now, a course of events, such as we observe in the world around us, admits, as we perceive from almost daily experience, of varied & multiplied contingencies, or, events resulting from the operation and agency of intelligent beings—but necessity and contingency are not reconcileable. If the connexion between events is one of more succession—then any thing may be the cause of any thing—silence may be the cause of sound—absence of presence—life of death—for all that is wanted, upon this theory, is mere succession. Nor is the difficulty at all relieved by a reference to laws as such. Laws, when they relate to morals, contain either an implied, or, expressed injunction or prohibition. In this character they are pronounced to moral agents—beings intelligent and capable of choice. But when they relate to physics, they assume an altogether different tone. They are then but the modes of action chosen by an intelligent being. Matter is dead, inert and devoid of intelligence, and, therefore, cannot be the subject of moral command, it is not susceptible of being influenced by motives of reward, or, punishment; it cannot yield obedience, in the proper sense of the term. Laws are, in themselves, inefficient; they possess no force, energy, or power; in them there is no principle of causation; and to attribute such a principle to them is the result, either, of a voluntary perversion—of language, or, of a gross and inexcusable ignorance of the signification of the terms employed. Laws, if moral, would for ever remain silent upon the pages of the statute book without avenging a single affront offered to their authority; without punishing a single act of vice, or rewarding a single act of virtue: if physical, eternity being given, they could not produce the slighiest effect—being considered in their abstract character. The very idea of a law pre-supposes, not only a law-giver, but an executor. Without the latter they could claim no higher authority than that extended to mere opinions; and as to producing aught, they would be merely idle breathings. There is an essential distinction between law and agency—between the mode of action of an intelligent being and the action itself. How absurd, then, is it to speak of the course of nature, or the laws of nature, as something distinct from, and independent of, an overruling, intelligent agent. The course of nature is simply the constant, uninterruped and unwearied interposition and exercise of the universal power and unerring wisdom of God upon and extending to every particle of matter. Do the planets roll in space, astonishing us by the mighty sweep of their revolutions? Do the fields smile in gladness—carpeted with green and wreathed with flowers? They do but exhibit the power and wisdom of God, mingled with the warm-breathings of his benevolence—and not the operation of abstract laws—or, laws without an executor. His power formed the spheres above; his hand guides them in their rounds; he paints the flower and tints the fruit: all things depend upon him; in the palm of his hand they rest; his eye with a single glance discerns every motion of the vast machinery of the universe! With this view before the mind, we may with feelings unutterable "look through nature, up to nature's God." And what a broad basis is thus laid for the cheering doctrine of a particular Providence. All things prove it—all things conspire to attest it. God is every where—and working every where and at all times. General laws do not forbid particular interpositions founden upon human contingencies. If these contingencies were not subjects of the divine presence, then they would not and could not be under the particular cognizance and government of God. But to the Deity all events are foreknown. And if God governs and directs the motions of every particular atom of matter, and supports it in being (for if a single atom is not thus governed, directed and supported, it must necessarily exist independent of God, which is absurd,) why should not the events of the lives of his rational creatures be under his particular care?

Missionary Intelligence.

CANTON---CHINA.

LETTER FROM MR. BRIDGMAN, MAY 3, 1847.

Baptism of a Chinese.

Yesterday was an interesting day to us. One of the members of the Bible class, who has been almost two years under Christian instruction, came forward and received baptism, and took his seat at the table of the Lord. His name is Yang Lanyen. He is forty-six years of age, and has a family comprising a wife, one son, one daughter, an aged mother, and a female reader. It has been our custom in China to have the sacrament of the Lord's supper on the first Sabbath evening in each month; and, as the disciples did when their Savior was with them, previously to his ascension, so we have always assembled "in an upper room." These services have been conducted in the plainest and most simple manner, being conformed to the account of the institution of the ordinance in the New Testament. Eighteen were present last evening.

Yang Lanyen holds a respectable standing in the middle class of society. His business, in the linguist's department of foreign commerce, brought him, many years ago, into connection with Dr. Morrison, from whom he gained his first knowledge of Christianity. In the early part of the late war, when Rev. Mr. Stanton was confined in one of the prisons of Canton, Lanyen was appointed, for a season, to be his overseer. The conduct of the prisoner made a favorable impression on his mind, and created in him a desire to know more of the gospel. Very soon after my return to Canton, nearly two years ago, he called to report himself as an "old friend," and was much pleased with the proposal of forming a Bible class. He was one of its first members, and has always been present, except when sick, or when visiting his family in the country. It was not long after he engaged in these exercises, that his heart seemed touched by the Holy Spirit, and he gave evidence of being a true believer in Jesus. From that time to the present, the evidence of his conversion has steadily become more and more clear and pleasing.

His general deportment has always been, without any exception, so far as I know, becoming one who professes godliness. He has appeared to be dilligent in business, punctual in his engagements, faithful in all his promises, and kind and courteous in all his intercourse with others.

His interest in Christian duties has been remarkable for a Chinese. Worldly enjoyments and occupations have held with him a very secondary place. In conversasion he loves to hear and speak of Christ and the things that belong to his kingdom; and he has maintained a close walk with God, by reading his word, and by prayer, every morning and every evening setting apart a season for these services in his closet and in his family when with them.

His desire to have others share in the blessings of the gospel is another characteristic. Very soon after he joined the Bible class, he brought along with him an old acquaintance who was residing in the city as a mechanic, a man whom he had been instructing, and who seemed to be a sincere inquirer after truth. The members of his own family were the special objects of his care, to whom he used to read and speak of the new religion; and, as I have before told you, he procured for them a reader, from whom they could daily gain instruction in the word of God.

Having often, and for a long time, expressed a desire to join the professed people of God, it seemed to me that I should be failing in my duty, were I any longer to deny him that privilege. Accordingly, after preaching yesterday, instead of the Bible class, we had the baptismal services. There were present Dr. Parker and Dr. Hopper, my cousin James, Mr. Bonney, Liang Afah and his son, a few other Chinese, with Mrs. Bridgman and our two little Chinese girls. The hour was occupied in reading and explaning appropriate portions of Scriptures, prayer and singing. Our new Christian brother seemed solemn and joyous. Immediately before receiving baptism, he repeated his hearty confession of faith in Jesus, and determination to live according to all the rules and ordinances of the Lord, as they are made known to us in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. Having been baptized, he came in the evening and sat down with us at the Lord's supper, and for the first time received the emblems of the crucified Redeemer.—Missionary Herald.

Temperance Department.

TEMPERANCE SONG.

We hail the glad day, the monster's dens are closing,
No more the slave his cup will crave,
O, come, come away:
Come, come, the temperance theme renew,
And each be to his honor true,
And heaven will welcome you.
O, come, come away.

No longer the glass though shining o'er so brightly,
Shall tempt our youth to stray from truth;
O, come, come away
From that dread foe, whose giant stride,
Has spread his ruin far and wide,
And hope and truth defied:
O, come, come away.

O let us be firm and ever persevering,
And while we live we'll warning give,
O, come, come away.
O come where hope will smile on thee,
And in thy hearts will gladness be,
And peace, joy, liberty:
O, come, come away.

The dark night is gone—a brighter day is dawning,
When sober peace brings sweet release,
O, come, come away.
Come to our arms ye suffering few,
We ever will prove kind to you,
If to yourselves you're true:
Then, come, come away.

The shame and the woes the inebriate's long been feeling,
All soon will flee if firm he'll be,
And, come, come away.
Come let the heavenly theme invite,
And in the war of temp'rance fight,
With all your heart and might:
O, come, come away.

And now we'll all join with the most ardent feeling,
And each pursue the song anew:
O, come, come away.
In tuneful songs of sympathy,
We'll chant the song of liberty,
And loud shout victory:
O, come, come away.

Destructive Hurricane at Tobago.

Tobago was visited by a hurricane on the night of Monday, the 11th of October, commencing at 9 o'clock, and continuing for nearly three hours, accompanied with heavy rain and vivid flashes of lightning. Scarcely a property in the island appears to have escaped the devastating effects, either in the dilapidation of the buildings or the overthrow of the growing crops. The Legislature had been called together and such steps adopted as were considered most likely to lead to a correct estimate of the damage sustained, and to the best means of providing for the future. From returns which had been received, it would appear that 26 estates' works, 30 manager's houses, and 456 settlor's houses, had been destroyed; and 33 works, 21 managers houses, and 176 settler's houses, severely injured; besides 122 houses, large and small, in the town of Scarborough, and its vicinity, totally destroyed, and 84 greatly injured; that scarcely any of the churches and public buildings had escaped; that the number of deaths, so far as yet ascertained, amounted to 17, chiefly females and children, besides other casualities of bruises, and broken legs; that the vessels wrecked are six, in number—five island doghers, and one American brigantine; and that almost all the canes, trees, and provision grounds, are either blown down or stripped—fully one-third of the whole being expected to be quite lost. The amount of loss, it is estimated, will fall little short of £150,000.—N. O. Delta of the 27*th*

All virtues are in agreement; all vices are at variance.

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Steubenville, Dec. 13, 1847.

Br. Bassett: I am once more at home, with my beloved family, am a little recruited by rest, and feel "a little moved," * to send one more communication to the Recorder, I shall sketch my tour, as events occurred.

On the last Sunday in September I met my appointment in Wheeling. Here we have a pleasant little station, a pleasant place to worship in—and we had a pleasant meeting—no special revival, or in-gathering. On Monday night, I presented the claims of the "Aid Society," and $52,50 were subscribed. I have been informed that these good brethren, are taking preparatory measures, to get up a new meeting-house. May the Lord prosper them in their undertaking.

Passing through Washington, Waynesburg, Morgantown, and Fairmont, I came to my appointment for the Fairmont circuit, in Prunty Town, October 3d, commenced on Saturday and continued until Tuesday night. The meeting was not well attended, by the members from the other portions of the circuit. The members present were benefitted, I trust, in their spiritual interests—no special revival—but in passing thro' the circuit, I presented the claims of the "Aid Society," in two different places, and $61,60 were subscribed. These brethren have good works—this is proof of some faith, purity, and brotherly love.—Our preachers on Fairmont circuit—Brothers Helmick and Simpson, by order of Quarterly Conference, are released for one quarter, from the regular work, that they may hold protracted meetings. I hope to hear a good account from that region before long. O for a revival of religion before the next election. We must have a revival, or politics will kill us.—Religion is tender, delicate refined,—Politics, coarse, rough, wasping—one spirit kills the other.—"My kingdom" says the Master, "is not of this world."

I next went to the camp-meeting, on the Buchanon circuit, which commenced October 8th. This meeting was of some interest, Christians were encouraged—sinners awakened, and converted to God. We had first rate order—a good communion season. The after fruit, was good.—Brother Walker has reported the case so fully that nothing more, need be added—save that by private efforts, I raised $17,60 for the "Aid Society"—I judged it best not to make a public effort as the public had been twice called on in view of other objects.—This circuit I think, is doing well.

Owing to circumstances explained by Brother William Betts in a letter, I had no appointment on Braxton circuit, and of course did not go, so I turned back, at the instance of Brother John Clarke, and met the Western Virginia mission appointment, at Phillippi, the county seat of Barbour county. Preached four times in their splendid new court house—had good congregations—good attention to the word. A class was expected to be formed there, soon—may be they will get the "jailor"—can't tell. Subscription here $10,59, for the "Aid Society."

My next appointment was on Lewis circuit, October 24th. Here I preached four times—prospects were quite good—members lively in religion—a good degree of awakening influence abroad among sinners, but the weather was unfavorable, and there being no stoves, the house was uncomfortably cold, so we had to close our meeting. I regretted this, for the signs of the times were very promising. $30,00 were subscribed for the "Aid Society" on Lewis circuit. No preacher need fear going to Lewis. The good brethren will help him to work, and help him to live. I speak thus of them, in good earnest—they deserve it all and more.

Clarksburg circuit came next. My meeting was at the Kyser meeting-house October 30th.—Here, and at other places on the circuit, I preached seven times, with little prospect of fruit—not many in attendance from a distance. Those that did come must needs go home on Monday morning. Our Sunday congregation was large and attentive—love feast pretty good. Here I met with Brother Callahan who preached once with great energy and acceptability. At his instance I hereby call on the President of the Muskingum district, Rev. G. Clancy, to send Brother Callahan's transfer, to me, in Steubenville, that it may be perfected in the usual way, and forwarded to him. On the above circuit, by public and private efforts, I obtained $23,20 subscribed to the "Aid Society." This is a strong circuit, and has but one preacher—it should have two by all means—it could support two better than one.

November 4th last day—preached in Prunty Town to a slim congregation. O how is this?—Had the world been consulted?—O yes. And it had said no!—and the people said amen, and to their work they went—so the holy solemnities of the occasion were neglected, yet, no Pope, Bishop, or Priest, had enjoined the fast.—A free representative Annual Conference had done it, and the people would not obey—so we go.

Evansville circuit November 6th, my meeting begun. Here we only have a common-sized school house, to hold meeting in. If the house had been large enough, we should, I think, have had a fine meeting. But we were crowded too much—we could do but little—some eight or ten persons on Monday in love-feast, rose up, to ask the prayers of the church, and they were prayed for, but at night the crowd rendered it impracticable to carry on a work. I drew up, and read to the people, a subscription paper, for the erection of a house of worship: upon liberal principles—it seemed to take, may be we shall get a house, after a while. Subscription for the "Aid Society" here was $15,00.

Morgantown ct. came next. At Stewartstown November 13th. Here I did my best, and did no good.—Such is my opinion. Here we have a good society, of some forty members—a large majority of them brought in last year. They have a good new house, and will yet be prosperous, if they have energy to heal, or remove, some members who once did well, but are not doing well now. I would rather hear that they were healed, than cast out. I go for saving, all that can be saved. On this circuit $11,25 were subscribed for the "Aid Society."

My meeting for Monongahela circuit was at Maple's Frame, November 20th. Rather a good time in some respects—some seekers—one conversion—members revived—not many from a distance, except on Sunday.—Had the world hold of our friends? How much better would a general turn-out make our meetings. However four were added to the church, and hopes were entertained of better times to come. Industry and perseverance, are being used, to enlarge this circuit; with good hopes of success. $5,00 were all I obtained for the "Aid Society." I am in hopes they will do more than this, for that good institution—we'll see.

After preaching twice on Waynsburg ct. and making some fruitless, private efforts, for the "Aid Society," I came to my main meeting for said circuit, in Waynesburg, November 27th, and held on until the 30th. Good was done, to some extent—there were several penitent seekers of the Savior—meeting well attended by the citizens—only a few from a distance, and there were four added to the church. Here nothing was done for the "Aid Society," most of the friends having contributed something, at the time of the Conference.

My meeting in Washington commenced December 3d and my labors closed on the 6th. We had a pleasant meeting throughout, but no special revival—no additions to the church, while I remained. The church was in peace, and prosperity, was the object of labor, and hope. I think it will come before long. Here $23¼ were subscribed for the "Aid Society"—making in all so far $250,15. Thank God for so much, but I have the heart to do better for our "superannuated ministers, their widows and orphans."—May the great God open my way.—Amen.

On Tuesday, December 7th after an absence of near 11 weeks, I reached home, and found my family in pretty good health, for which I feel thankful to the Giver of all good. I have averaged about six sermons per week, besides all my other toil, and the fatigues of travelling. I feel much worn down, but my general health is pretty good. So here I will thank God and take courage.

A few observations must close this communication. 1. All our ministers and preachers have gone to their assigned fields of labor, and are now faithfully performing the duties of their calling, with good hope of success, save one. Brother A. J. Waren did not go to Greenbrier ct.—He is now changed to Jackson circuit, and Brother J. P. Prickett, will take his place on Greenbrier circuit. Br. John Sexsmith is appointed to supply the vacancy on Tyler circuit. And Brother William Betts, of the Braxton circuit, if duly recommended to serve under the stationing authority, &c. is hereby requested, to labor to the end of the year, on the Brownsville circuit an assistant along with Brother R. T. Simonton.

2. What I have done for the "Aid Society," I regard as only the beginning. I have left each superintendent a little book, with the names and amount subscribed, &c. in it. These brethren will see all our members, and friends, and get all that can, to do something, in this good cause. Now brethren, who will do most? Will Virginia be more liberal than Pennsylvania?—We want a good amount from all, at Conference. Our brethren and friends are God's stewards, and must not vest all that he has put into their hands, in hogs, cattle, flour, land, and other speculations, for their own benefit, but must give a little into the superannuated fund. This will prove to be salt, & will save the rest of their wealth from knaves, and thieves. No man has a right to pledge all the means God has given him, away from God, and the poor, to the accomplishment of his own private, and selfish purposes—if he does, God will see to it, and reckon with him, as an unfaithful steward.

3. As to the superannuated preachers themselves: unless we get up the fund in contemplation, they will be worse off in our church than slaves. The slave gets food, raiment, and shelter, while he is able to work, and when he is old, and can work no longer, he is still taken care of by his master. But our preachers, with meagre salaries, can lay up nothing for old age. They are supposed to get food, raiment, and shelter, while they can work—but when they are old, and can work no longer, what then? Do our people provide for them? No! They are left to suffer in their old age, after spending their lives in the service of the church, unless strangers, like ravens, in the days of Elijah, shall be sent by the Lord, to feed them. An old horse, when he can work no longer, is, by some cruel masters, shot—by others turned out to die—but some, more humane, feed them, for the good they have done. Our people don't shoot their old preachers, nor feed them, they only turn them out to die! and so it most inevitably will be, unless the Aid Society shall come to their rescue. And to their rescue it never will come, unless our people, are liberal enough, to get up that fund. This state of things, tends to keep, valuable young men out of our itinerancy, and to drive our best ministers, in the prime of life, out of it, to provide for themselves. To fill up the itinerant ranks, we often have to receive, and employ, incompetent laborers, to the injury of the church. These things ought not so to be.

I now have on hand a supply of plain, medium, and fine Hymn Books, Disciplines, Clarke's Commentary, Polyglot Bibles and Diamond Testaments, and can supply our friends who may give me a call, if the cash be forthcoming.

My own opinion is, that all the churches, in the bounds where I have travelled; are rather in a low state. They are by far, too dull, in religion, and too full of worldly speculations.—Soon the Presidential election, will fill them all with politics—then what are we to do?—A revival of Scriptural Christianity, is the one thing needful, to meet this case. By all lawful and Scriptural means, then, let our branch of the church, at least, go for a revival of evangelical godliness. If we use the means, God will be in them, and bless them, and we shall not be disappointed—our expectation shall not fail. We have now pretty good order—our economy is well understood, and acted upon, but more of the holy flame of spiritual religion is wanted. This gained, we gain all—all else that is good, will follow.

Yours, truly. GEO. BROWN.

Washington, Pa., Dec. 16th, 1847.

Br. Bassett: As revival intelligence always meets with a welcome reception from the lovers of the Saviour, we feel disposed with others to contribute our mite. After a series of prayer meetings which a few of us, desiring to see the work of grace revived in our midst, kept up from night to night, and from house to house, for four weeks, we commenced our first quarterly meeting, and though disappointed in the ministerial help we had expected, the God in whom we trusted was pleased to meet with us in much mercy, and revive his work in the hearts of his people. Brothers Burkitt and Thompson, pastors of the M. E. and C. B. Churches came each of them one night to our assistance, and rendered good service. The Lord bless them for their labors of love.

The last night of the meeting, while commemorating the suffering and death of the dear Redeemer, we had a melting season. At the close of this supper we commenced our lovefeast, which proved a feast of love indeed to many. And at the close of this feast, we received two valuable accesstons to our Zion. Four weeks from this time, being the time appointed for holding our presidential meeting, we determined to hold another series of prayer meetings which we did, and in doing which were amply rewarded for our labor. At length the 3rd of December came and with it Br. Brown, cold and fatigued after a hard day's travel through the rain. But being a messenger of peace, as soon as he had met with a welcome reception and received a little refreshment from his old friends, where he has made his home for years, when in this place, he bent his course through the storm to the house of God, where with much zeal he preached to a small congregation. His stay with us was until Tuesday morning, during which time he preached five times. We were loath to let him go, having failed to procure other help. But determined to continue the meeting as long as circumstances would admit which we have done from night to night up to this time and have an appointment for this evening. The society has been much revived. Thirteen penitents have approached the altar of prayer. Ten have professed to find peace in believing and nine have given their names to the church. To God be all the glory, and our prayer is that he may revive his work more abundantly. Our prospect is now more flattering than it has been before since I have been here. Pray for us that we may live and prosper.

J. C. HAZLETT.

Swaga, Huntersville Ct. Nov. 25, '47.

